I say to you that there is an emergency that calls for the show of American strength and American determination. This is only one part of the picture. Just think of it. Over 3 years have gone and the people all over the world are living in hopeless confusion and disappointment due to the fact that the stability, the tranquillity, the peace, the opportunity that they thought would be theirs when the war ended, has not been real-That is the chaotic, uncertain, indefinite and hopeless situation that I believe American strength can furnish the leadership to terminate. We can, by our leadership, bring stability to the world. We can bring collective security to the world, but we cannot do it by drifting along like this. If you do not like this bill, for heaven's sake kill it, but do not try to smother it by worthless, useless amendments. That is exactly what is going on in this House today. Members have announced it in the Chamber and some have announced it in the press that they want to smother this bill; they want to kill the bill; they do not care how they do it, or what combination of devices is used. That is what disappoints and shocks me tremendously. To me it indicates a failure to look realistically at the world today. It seems to me to fail to grasp the serious challenge to peace and the strategic position of the United States to furnish the leadership for world peace.

This bill has the thought and all shades of political opinion behind it. It has the support of people of both parties. It has the support of the different agencies of government involved. It has the sunport of practically every prominently mentioned candidate for the Presidency. I say to you, if you think that we should take an affirmative stand for peace, I do hope that you will not further emasculate or try to kill this bill by amend-ments or delays.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, I have never been confronted with a more difficult vote than the one I am to cast at the conclusion of this debate. Our people have been traditionally opposed to any law drafting young men for military service in peacetime. In the early days of our history we were thousands of miles from any enemy. Surrounded by the oceans, our national security required only the ability to fight off an invader. Indeed, in Revolutionary days, a Paul Revere could ride horseback his local community and call the men and boys to arms. That was adequate national defense in those times.

We have gone a long way since 1776. National defense of that day would not be any more effective now than the ox team would be in meeting current problems of transportation. We won the Revolutionary War under that system.

Then came the Spanish-American War, and again methods of warfare had changed. The great World War I followed and we know that war could not have been successfully terminated had we used Spanish-American War technique. Then came World War II. Conditions were again entirely different and we could not have hoped to win World War II by relying upon the methods which were so successful in World War I.

Today we are living in still another era. Our geographical position is no longer a guaranty of safety. Our ships, our airplanes, and our military forces are everywhere in the civilized world. These are the circumstances that confront us in 1948.

Of necessity, our foreign policy has also changed. Whether we like it or not, we must accept conditions as they are and not as we wish they were. The superdreadnought, the submarine, the airplane, the atomic bomb, and all the developments and inventions that go with them, are realities. We find ourselves in the position of world leadership. must either abandon that leadership and our ideals, and supinely place our country at the mercy of communism and aggressor nations, or we must be sufficiently prepared to meet force with force.

We have provided for the greatest and most invulnerable air force in all history. The money has been authorized. The job we have before us today is to provide the personnel to carry out that policy; in short, to staff our military forces. Our air bases and our defense units are useless unless there are adequate men to man them. If these forces can be provided by the voluntary method, then that should be done. We are told by every student of the situation, who because of experience and responsibility should speak with accuracy, that the way the matter now stands we will not have the necessary number of voluntary enlistments.

The purpose of this bill is really to provide a second line of defense; that is, the draft will not function or call men to service unless the voluntary system fails. This bill sets up the machinery and gives notice as to what will happen in case of necessity. No one will be drafted if adequate volunteers enlist. The committees of Congress and the agencies of government charged with our national defense have been studying this problem ever since the shooting stopped in World War II. No Congress likes to pass a draft law but it seems clear that unless there is such an incentive to additional enlistments, the draft is the only way out.

I agree that world war III is not inevitable. I cannot agree that we are not faced at the moment with a potential war. There is a real emergency confronting us. War is at our gates and Congress is not measuring up to its responsibilities if it lives in a twilight zone between peace and war and does not prepare for all eventualities. Briefly, we are confronted with a condition and not with a theory, and with facts that we do not like. We will get nowhere by thinking entirely in retrospect. We must courageously face the future. No one wants war, and no one wants the draft. Stern reality must not yield to political expediency when the roll is called today.

Our form of government and the freedom and liberty of our constitutional guaranties are in the balance. Right or wrong, a bipartisan foreign policy has been approved overwhelmingly by the Senate and the House. This bill is a req-uisite step to implement that policy provided, of course, that voluntary enlistments do not measure up to requirements. This is not a Republican measure or a Democratic measure. It has the support of all candidates for the Presidency, with the exception of Henry Wallace. The American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Disabled American Veterans, and most other veteran groups are backing this draft bill. It will not be permanent law and terminates in 2 years. The fact that these veterans, who know that war is hell, and who have borne the brunt of battle in recent wars, are here demanding action by the Congress should have great weight.

We all want peace and I am persuaded that under world conditions we cannot have peace by appeasement. I believe in the United Nations, but realize its diffi-cult task. With the prevailing veto power, Russia can call the numbers and, especially so long as this condition obtains, our country must be on guard and prepared at all times, if our way of life is to continue.

Mr. Chairman, I have had numerous messages urging me to vote for the draft because it is accepted as a national security necessity at the moment. Many of the same people are opposed to universal military training. I have had very few messages in opposition to this bill. I have not promised my constituents to vote for or against a draft now. I have written to all-of them: "I shall give this matter the best consideration possible in the light of the information which is available to me at the time of the vote. After conscientious and prayerful consideration, I shall do that which I sincerely believe to be in the best interest of my country and I am sure that you would not want me to do otherwise."

In conformity with this promise and with full realization of what this law will mean, I am forced to the conclusion that our national security requires that this temporary draft law be on the statute books, ready for use if and when voluntary enlistments fail to meet requirements. I shall, therefore, vote for the Note.—The draft bill passed the Senate by a vote of 78 for to 10 against. and the House by 283 for to 130 against. The conference report passed the House by 259 for to 136 against.

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I recognize that we are living in a "twilight zone" between war and peace. The war clouds are still hovering over us and the sun of peace has not yet risen. It appears to me that in the condition in which we now find this world and particularly our great Nation we should give serious consideration and we should give prayerful consideration to what we are now about to do. We are in a period the like of which this Nation has never before passed through. If we are to preserve this democracy we must use statesmanship. We must throw away politics, we must throw away unfair reasoning, in order that we may arrive at a program that will preserve this democracy and that will preserve this Nation. Our national security is the paramount issue.

I, for one, with a great deal of misgivings, am going to support this bill. I hate to do it, but I think this is a duty of patriotism. I think this is the time, if you will consider the status in which we find ourselves today, compared to the other nations of the world, when you can conscientiously do but one thing, and that is, get this Nation prepared.

What is the situation? There is a nation that for 31/2 years has thrown every obstacle it can in the way of peace, in the way of getting back to normalcy, in the way of doing away with confusion and chaos and getting back to order and rehabilitation. She has thrown every obstacle in the way of the United Nations she could, using the veto power 23 times. Today that nation has a standing army of some 4,000,000 men, ready at any moment, if the occasion arises, to overrun Europe, yet this Nation, the leader of the world today, can do nothing. Why? We do not have even normal military strength to take care of our defense..

I deplore the fact that some gentlemen here refer to our military leaders as brass hats. God knows they contributed something to the winning of this last war. When they were over there on the battlefields they were great fellows. But now there are a number of men in this Congress who refer to them ironically as brass hats. It is not fair to them. If it comes to the matter of leadership in another war, will they be brass hats? If they have to lead us through another conflict, are these men who are here referring to them as brass hats going to volunteer? Are they going to say to these generals, "Here is my advice to you; I want to cooperate with you"? No; they are not going to do that, but they will criticize. That is the greatest contribution they can make.

These are serious times. The only thing you have heard argued here so far is the sacrifices our boys would be making, and they would be making sacrifices to go in the Army. But I think this is a step toward peace. It is not a step toward war. Unless we take this step we might get into war.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Chairman, I offer several committee amendments containing some clarifica-

Page 13, line 14, after the word "except".

Page 20, line 24, delete the words "between September 8, 1939, and September 2, 1945," appearing in lines 24 and 25.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I rise at this time as a matter of fairness to the Committee on Armed Services, as I try always to play the game upon the square.

I have lived with the defense of this Nation for many years. I have served under the Stars and Stripes for more than four decades-through two great wars and many times of national crisisand this Nation has been good to me and mine. I have studied the rise and fall of nations in connection with their military establishments and some years ago I reached the conclusion that compulsory military service in time of peace on a permanent basis has not been beneficial to any state, but rather has been instrumental in its downfall.

The strength of a nation in its struggle for self-preservation is dependent, in the end, more upon its industrial, financial, and moral strength than on its military might at the outbreak of hostilities. providing that it has sufficient force immediately available to withstand the first shock of war. We do not lack that strength now; in fact, with forces now in being and which will be presently available, we greatly exceed the minimum which will assure safety.

The whole history of the United States cries out the truth of these assertions. We, a Nation of free and unregimented people, time after time, have risen in the glory of our freedom, produced the sinews of war, called out our people, and gone on to victory. No other nation on earth has such a record of success on the fields of battle—on land, and sea, and in the air. And now we are asked to abandon freedom and accept conscription and regimentation-military domination-in time of peace. Why? Because of the aspirations of an everexpanding Military Establishment to expand even more? Because of the determination of certain political or industrial leaders to become lords of the earth? I do not know the answer but I do know that every grain of common sense I have cries out against this saddling permanently upon a free people of the very system which I believe has been instrumental in destroying those who have practiced it.

I have stood for every move to build up the national security of this Nation. I have and do support a large Army and a large Navy and a large Air Force. have intended to support the current bill on the basis of the temporary need of these measures due to the existence of an emergency or a crisis. I have intended to support it even though I told the people of my district and my State, prior to the election in 1946, that I was thoroughly opposed to the institution of conscription as a national policy. But now I learn that even the advocates of this measure do not claim that either an emergency or a crisis exists-merely that we are in a state of tension, which I conclude will continue indefinitely.

I conclude also that while the current bill limits this selective service to 2 years. this time limit means nothing, and that once fastened upon the American people, the tentacles of this destructive system will be fixed in our body politic far into the future-perhaps until we collapse in

Mr. Chairman, all history shows that heretofore the state which has controlled the seas has been able, in the end, to dominate the world. Now, a new factor has come into the scope of war: the power of ships of the air. Exactly how this will affect the status of sea power-exactly how sea power and air power will be combined in the future-no one of us can tell. But, Mr. Chairman, we now have the greatest Navy in the world by a vast margin and we shall have the world's best Air Force when our 70-group establishment is completed. I do not believe that the Army can prosper through becoming a reservoir of conscripts. I believe it can prosper by affording better conditions of service, by more liberal promotions into noncommissioned forces, by better efforts of recruiting, by recognizing that it is not going to get a draft and so must stand on its own feet through voluntary service-perhaps by emulating the Navy or Air Force in these matters. The difference of opportunity between the enlisted men of the Army and enlisted men of the Navy has been notorious for years. From what I understand, the Air Force is at least equaling the Navy in this respect and I suggest the Army do like-

Mr. Chairman, I have searched my conscience in the matter of this legislation. I have deeply considered my duty to my constituents and to the people of the United States and I have concluded that I cannot support this bill, that I cannot have any part in making conscription an established part of the American way of life.

Mr. GAVIN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which is at the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. GAVIN: On page 21, line 6, after section 5, insert the following new sections, to be numbered 6 and 7. respectively, and renumbering the existing sections 6 through 23 accordingly.

"SEC. 6. (a) Under policies established by the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of the Army, the Secretary of the Navy, and the Secretary of the Air Force are authorized to accept original enlistments in the Regular Army, the United States Navy (including the Marine Corps), and the United States Air Force from among qualified aliens not less than 18 years of age for enlistment periods of not less than 3 years: Provided, That the total number of aliens who may be enlisted pursuant to this section shall not exceed 100,000 at any one time.

"SEC. 7. So much of section 2 of the act approved August 1, 1894 (28 Stat., ch. 179, 216; 10 U. S. C. 625) as amended, as reads ; and in time of peace no person (except an Indian) who is not a citizen of the United States, or who has not made legal declaration of his intention to become a citizen of the United States, shall be enlisted for the first enlistment in the Army', is hereby re-

Mr. KILDAY. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the amendment that it is not germane to the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman care to state in what particular the amendment is regarded as not germane?

Mr. KILDAY. The bill is the Selective Service Act of 1948, and does not contain any provisions similar to those contained in the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready

The Chair calls attention to the fact that the bill is entitled "A bill to provide for the common defense by increasing the strength of the armed forces of the United States, and for other purposes." The bill carries sections relating to enlistments and other means of increasing the strength of the armed forces of the United States.

The Chair has examined the amendment and believes that the amendment is clearly within the scope of the bill.

The Chair therefore overrules the point of order.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Gavin] is recognized for 5 minutes in support of his amendment.

Mr. GAVIN. Mr. Chairman, it might be said that the idea for this amendment was originated by the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts, Senator LODGE. However, I had been thinking of introducing a similar amendment as part of the Selective Service Act, so I anxiously awaited the action that would be taken by the Senate on the Lodge amendment.

The Lodge amendment was carefully debated in the Senate and many suggestions were made on the Senate floor to change the amendment. However, it was, with but little change, passed and the debate appears in the RECORD for Tuesday, June 8, pages 7294 to 7302.

During the debate Senator Lucas stated, and I quote:

I wish to say, before concluding, that it seems to me this amendment is highly meritorious. Like the Senator from Maryland [Mr. Typings], I sincerely hope the amendment may be taken to conference, where serious study can be given with a view to attempting to incorporate in the bill something along the line of the amendment the Senator from Massachusetts has sug-

Therefore, in the preparation of my amendment I conferred with all interested executives in an effort to carefully prepare this amendment, which, if accepted, even though modified. I trust will meet with the approval of both Houses when the bill goes to conference.

Another reason why I offer this amendment is that during the years 1941 to 1945 we had 117,000 aliens in the services of the armed forces. This amendment is designed to authorize the enlistment of a limited number of aliens in the armed forces of the United States.

The act of 1894 prohibits the enlistment of aliens, other than those who have taken out first papers, in time of peace. This is suspended during the continuance of the present technical state of war, but the Secretary of the Army has declined to utilize this technicality as a basis for embarking upon any extended project without congressional sanction. In addition, there are certain provisions of appropriations acts limiting payment of salaries, and so forth, to aliens. Most of these have been suspended during the war, but may be revived at any time.

Now as far as availability of aliens is concerned for enlistment, it might be said there are a considerable number of Polish ex-servicemen; and in Britain alone it is estimated there are about 110,-000 of these men. How many are in the United States and British zones of Germany who could be enlisted in our armed forces, I am unable to say. But I understand there are thousands of these stateless men and that a great many are being used by our forces for civilian guard duty.

There are also a great number of males from the Baltic States-Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania-and some from Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia, who are most and are potential soldiers. Many of these men have basic military training and are well qualified to serve in our Army.

Senator Gurney, in the debate on the Selective Service bill in the Senate, said and I quote:

All students of our military policy have been seriously disturbed over the fact that our forces are scattered thinly all over the globe with only a pitifully small number of reserves available in the United States to support the overseas forces.

It is evident the need is apparent.

I might explain that the Lodge amendment would authorize only the Secretary of the Army until June 30, 1950, to accept not to exceed 25,000 enlistments in the Regular Army whereas my amendment would authorize the Secretary of the Army, the Secretary of the Navy, and the Secretary of the Air Force, under policies established by the Secretary of Defense, indefinitely to accept enlistments in the Regular Army, the United States Navy, and the Regular Air Force provided the total number of aliens who may be enlisted shall not exceed 100,000 at any one time.

The Lodge amendment would establish a maximum age of 35 years, whereas my amendment would contain no such restriction.

The Lodge amendment would set a minimum enlistment of 5 years, whereas my amendment sets one of 3 years.

The Lodge amendment makes no mention of naturalization, whereas my amendment spells it out and insures an alien after completion of 3 years' honorable service of becoming eligible for naturalization.

The Lodge amendment would suspend until June 30, 1950, the present prohibition on original enlistment of aliens which is now effective in time of peace, whereas my amendment would repeal the prohibition.

These are the basic facts of my amendment and I regret that I had to modify my original amendment on the naturalization section so that it could be considered.

Now in order to foster Americanization and build citizenship, the aliens enlisted would be assigned generally to regularly established units of the Army, Navy, and Air Force rather than creating special battalions or regiments, and so forth of any national groups.

Last Friday, June 11, we passed a bill to take into this country some 200,000 displaced persons who will enter this country without making any contribution to its welfare and without much consideration except for a preliminary examination and a screening.

It is evident, Mr. Chairman, in this debate that is taking place on the floor of the House, that there is a need to supplement our overseas forces with enlistments. Everyone here seems to be talking about a training bill rather than selective service to build up our armed forces. Here we have a potential group of men who are stateless, who are anxious to enlist in the service of the United States, who understand the characteristics and the language of the countries they would serve in; who are potential soldiers and would do a fine job for us; in fact, we are using them right now in a civilian status. I think this amendment bears sufficient importance for us to have the opportunity to tap this reservoir of manpower which is available immediately to supplement our forces wherever the need may be, and I sincerely hope that the Members of the House will give it very serious consideration and support.

I am sorry I had to modify my original amendment because of the fact I felt that if a man was willing to serve for the United States for a period of 3 years that he would be eligible for citizenship and these men are all prospective citizens.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has ex-

Mr. GAVIN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for one additional minute.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. GAVIN. Mr. Chairman, I still feel that we should be able to enlist aliens in the armed forces, particularly for service in other countries, and who, after a 3-year period of service and honorably discharged, and who are found qualified for citizenship, would be admitted as

This would give these prospective citizens something to work for; and during the 3-year period we would indoctrinate them with the fundamentals of our American way of life and citizenship. If after rendering this honorable service, they are found qualified, they would be in far better physical and mental condition than any dispaced person who is now to be admitted.

Certainly there is no better way to demonstrate a right to United States citizenship than for these stateless enlistees to render such a service to the United States and earn this right.

I sincerely hope it will have the wholehearted support of the entire membership of this House.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pending amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I merely want to read a letter which came to me a few days after adoption of the Senate amendment. This letter is written by an American citizen whom I do not know. He states:

History is replete with examples of the hiring of foreign mercenaries. I do not know of one instance where this policy was attended with success, but I do know that it has often been a typical move of decadent governments.

The defense of the United States should rest exclusively upon the people of this country—people who have been reared in American surroundings and who, if called upon to fight, will be fighting for their own homes in the United States. To sprinkle aliens at the squad level among the troops of the Regular Army would be to introduce a policy that can lead only to disaster. National pride alone, I would think, would call for the defeat of this particular provision of the pending bill.

Mr. DORN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pending amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I deplore the fact that during the last few days I have observed there are many who would destroy this bill. I am in favor of the bill. I am not too far removed myself from the draft age. I think any young American who believes in America, who believes in his country, should be willing to serve for 2 years in the armed services of this Nation, particularly to preserve the peace of this world.

Mr. Chairman, I listened with interest a few moments ago to the gentleman from California [Mr. Bradley], and I also listened with a great deal of interest to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Short] yesterday and again today. These gentlemen stated that nations like Germany, Japan, Italy, and France that depended upon military conscription went down in defeat. But they did not tell you that these nations had military conscription for lust, for aggression, to keep Hitler and Mussolini in power personally. That is what they had conscription for—to rape the world, to loot the world, for conquest.

Mr. Chairman, let us draw this distinction. We are proposing this conscription in peacetime to protect the peace of the world. Air power is peace power, United States naval power is peace power, a good American Army is a peace force.

Mrs. ST. GEORGE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DORN. I yield to the gentlewoman from New York.

Mrs. ST. GEORGE. I am sure the gentleman realizes that conscription in Europe came after the French Revolution and had nothing whatever to do with Hitler, Mussolini, or any other dictator of the modern era.

Mr. DORN. I thank the kind lady; but nevertheless the fact remains that these men did maintain large armies for conquest, for lust, to rape the world.

Mr. Chairman, we are proposing this measure for peace.

I listened the other day with a great deal of interest to the gentleman representing the Twenty-fourth District of New York, the Bronx, and also the gentleman from New York [Mr. MARCAN-TONIO]. I thought as they spoke that on that very night in their districts you would find policemen on duty, with uniforms on, wearing a pistol, if you please, not to shoot down people, not to commit murder, but to protect the peace of the homes in that community, to protect the wives and children of that district while they were serving in the Congress down here. So it is with adequate American preparedness. This bill is not for war, conquest, or aggression, but it is for happiness, peace, and tranquil relations among men and nations. Let us this day fight for peace in a time of peace. That is a better policy than fighting for victory in a time of war.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman,

will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DORN. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. The gentleman has seen fit to point out the fact that the police officers in my district wear pistols. What do they wear in the gentleman's district? Powder puffs or what?

Mr. DORN. They also wear pistols. And I would like to say also that in New York you have a State highway patrol, you have a State police system, you have the Federal Bureau of Investigation, you have units of the National Guard, all to protect the people of your community in New York City and preserve peace. And it is further a fact that in nearly every State of this Union the sheriffs are authorized to deputize citizens, if necessary, to protect the people in the communities; in other words, a draft.

Mr. BUFFETT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DORN. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. BUFFETT. Are any of those men drafted, or does the community pay them?

Mr. DORN. I just answered the gentleman's question, that if necessary, in time of an emergency, they can deputize every able-bodied citizen to protect the people in that community. Yes; they are paid.

Mr. BUFFETT. The Committee on Armed Services voted unanimously that there was no emergency, did they not?

Mr. DORN. I do not know about that; I do not think they did. But this is a time of uncertainty. All of us would admit that Russia has a 4,000,000 standing army.

Mr. BUFFETT. And they have had that for 20 years, too, have they not?

Mr. DORN. Yes; but not as strong as it is today. They are increasing their strength daily, while this Nation is becoming impotent, just as the gentleman's party helped it to become impotent after the last war.

Mr. BUFFETT. What would the gentleman rather have, 4,000,000 men or the atomic bomb?

Mr. DORN. That question is beside the point.

Mr. BUFFETT. No; it is not.

Mr. DORN. Yes; it is. What we need is to implement the delivery of the atomic bomb with modern types of aircraft, and you have to have some men in order to do that.

Mr. BUFFETT. We heard this morning that the Air Corps was turning men down all the time.

Mr. DORN. The Air Corps is not all that is necessary. You need all the components of the Army at full strength. What we need is a peace force today. I hope we will give it to our Nation and to the world.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, it is with a good deal of regret that I find myself in disagreement with my friend from Pennsylvania. With the possible exception of this one particular item he and I think very much alike on the question of national defense.

I do not think I can add very much to what has been said by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Andrews], the chairman of the Committee on Armed Services, on this question. But here it is proposed that we employ 100,000 foreigners, aliens, to help defend the United States. I confess that I cannot enthuse over such a proposal, first, from the practical standpoint, which is of the less importance. From a practical standpoint I can imagine the babel of tongues that would prevail in the armed forces of the United States and practically every unit stationed abroad if we had foreigners added to it, speaking four, five, and six different languages. I can visualize the captain of a company of infantry in Germany having to employ interpreters in order to transmit his orders to the enlisted men.

But, more important than that, have we come to the point when we must employ 100,000 foreigners to defend us? Are we to establish a precedent here that will prevail and perhaps become more and more influential as the years go by that the easy way to defend America is to hire defenders, no matter where they come from? It does not present a pretty picture. If you will read history you will remember the utter contempt that was suffered by the British Government, the Lord North ministry under George III, when they hired Hessians. It left a scar that still is visible.

I hope this House will not start any such system as this. To my mind it is un-American.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment close in 15 minutes.

Mr. GAVIN. I object, Mr. Chairman. Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this amendment close in 15 minutes.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Michigan

[Mr. DINGELL].

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Chairman, I had not intended to take any time on this bill, for I am supporting the bill, and I am going to vote for it. It may be that in this instance I may be voting for more than is immediately necessary for my country's safety, but I would rather be safe than sorry. I would rather err on the side of safety. I was put to the same test on the Selective Service Act shortly before Pearl Harbor. For a time I was the only one from our entire Michigan delegation favoring its passage. Later, upon my entreaty, I was joined by my colleague the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. LESINSKI], while 15 Members from my State opposed the bill and made a grave error. You remember that at that time the same people who opposed peacetime conscription before Pearl Harbor asked the same question you heard yesterday in this well, "Who is going to attack the United States?" Within a few months thereafter the Japs attacked us. I am not speculating on who might be foolhardy enough to attack us. I am going to vote to stack our buckshot and be ready. I must vote thus, Mr. Chairman, as long as there are pyromaniacs abroad playing with matches. I had one son in the service as a result of my vote prior to World War II. If need be, I will put into uniform another lad now nearing his seventeenth birthday. The safety of my country demands this of me. I have no choice in the matter. I trust, Mr. Chairman, I may contribute something to this bill which is pertinent and proper in respect to the proposal of my friend, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GAVIN]. I think it would be well to permit many of these individuals who served in the Polish Army, for example, to enlist in our armed forces and after such service to become citizens of our beloved country. There are other groups and nationalities, of course, who are worthy. But I want to deal with the valiant Polish soldiers left high and dry in Europe today. They served from the first day until the last. You cannot compare those people with mercenaries. You cannot !'ken them to the unprincipled Hessians, as somebody has whispered. These are the men who have served their country on the Allied side through the Battle of Poland, above and underground, the Battle of France, and the Battle of Britain. They fought in Narvik; they held Tobruk for 8 months. They battled at Anzio. They left 4,000 of their dead as evidence of their bravery and courage at Monte They went the entire length Cassino. of the Italian boot. Again, they fought in France, Holland, and Germany, and, like Moses, they were then denied the privilege of entering their own homeland, for which they fought and died and where they lost their all.

Those people are as opposed to communism as they are to nazism. They would rather fight a Communist or a Nazi than attend a banquet. These are the kind of people America is made of. These men are heroes in a wholesale lot. They deserve every consideration. They would be a great and a valuable asset to the United States. Permitting them to come into the country after having served a hitch in the United States Army would be a mighty valuable thing for the people of this country. Their service in Germany today would for a certainty add strength and safety to our armed forces and to our country.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York [Mr.

Mr. NODAR. Mr. Chairman, under leave to extend my remarks, today I am inserting in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, with the permission of the House Un-American Activities Committee, a report which it furnished on my request concerning the political background of a group of people who play important roles on the editorial staff of the Queensbridge Home News, a small newspaper distributed free of charge among the residents, numbering several thousand families, of the Queensbridge Federal housing project of Long Island City in my constit-

This news sheet is the official publication of the Queensbridge Tenants League and the writers in question are officers of that league. The report on their background speaks for itself. I do not believe that they are truly representative of the kind of people who live in Queensbridge, and I do not think that the views they are propagating are representative of the thinking of the majority of the

However, I feel that the facts about these people should be made known, so that the tenants of the housing project themselves can decide on the basis of the facts whether or not they want this kind of person to speak in their name. It is only fair to point out at this time when many of us in Congress are making a desperate fight for constructive housing legislation, we are hampered by the knowledge that people with backgrounds such as these can gain such control and influence over the tenants in these projects built by public funds. This information can only hinder the adoption of any new Federal housing legislation. None of us are willing to spend public money to house and benefit those with un-American sympathies.

I have had a personal investigation made to be sure that the persons identified in the Un-American Activities Committee report are the same as those listed as officers of the Queensbridge Tenants League. I can verify that although their addresses have now been changed to Queensbridge from their previous residences, they are in fact the same people, who, as the committee states, have engaged in Communist Party and Communist-front activities in some cases.

I believe this information warrants the study and consideration of the Congress as well as by the loyal American tenants of the project.

INFORMATION FROM THE FILES OF THE COM-MITTEE ON UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES, UNITED STATES HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

For: Hon. ROBERT NODAR, Jr. Subject: Jeannette Devausney, Max Diamond, Edward Fodor, Molly Greenberg, Mortimer Greenberg, Miriam Sayer, and

Queensbridge Home News. Jeannette Devausney, chairman of the school committee for the Queensbridge Tenants League, wrote a letter to the Daily er, Communist Party organ, complaining about the school situation in the Queensbridge housing project and commenting upon articles by Joseph North which had appeared in the Daily Worker. (See Daily Worker, March 12, 1948, p. 8.)

Max Diamond, according to the Daily Worker of March 12, 1942, was a speaker for the International Workers Order. In the report of the Special Committee on Un-American Activities of June 25, 1942, it was stated: "Our committee has found unanimously that the International Workers Order is a front of the Communist Party. The organization is head-ed entirely by outstanding avowed members ed entirely by outstanding avowed members of the Communist Party, such as William Weiner, Max Bedacht, Herbert Benjamin, and Louise Thompson." (See report 2277, p. 19.) Attorney General Francis Biddle, in the Congressional Record of September 24, 1942, on page 7688, called it "One of the strongest Communist organizations." The Special Communist organizations." The Special Committee on Un-American Activities also cited the International Workers Order as a Communist front in its report dated January 8, 1940. In a list of organizations compiled by Attorney General Clark pursuant to Executive Order No. 9835, and released by the Civil Service Commission on December 5. 1947, the International Workers Order was cited as being a subversive organization.

Max Diamond is listed as being a member of the editorial staff of the New York Teacher News, which is the official publication of the Teachers Union of New York (New York Teacher News, February 7, 1948, p. 2.) Ac-cording to the New York Times of September 24, 1943, page 25, the New York Teachers Union received its charter from the Congress of Industrial Organizations as Local No. 555 of the New York District of the State, County, and Municipal Workers of America. previously affiliated with the American Federation of Teachers as Local No. 5, but was expelled on charges of being Communist dominated at the August 1941 convention of the American Federation of Teachers. The State, County, and Municipal Workers of America, which the Teachers Union joined, later merged with the United Federal Workers of America at a convention held in Atlantic City during the week of April 23-27, 1946, and became the United Public Workers of America. In Report No. 1311 of the Special Committee on Un-American Activities regarding communism in the CIO, the commit-tee stated they had found Communist leadership strongly entrenched in both the State, County, and Municipal Workers of America and the United Federal Workers of America. (See report 1311, pp. 18–19.)

Edward Fodor was listed as being the chairman of the sixteenth assembly district branch of the Communist Party by the Daily branch of the Communist Party by the Daily Worker, May 4, 1940, page 3, column 8. Edward J. Fodor, according to the Daily Worker, official organ of the Communist Party, was candidate for Congress from the Eighteenth District, New York County, in 1940, for the Communist Party. (Daily Worker, August 5, 1940, p. 5, column 5.)

In the committee's printed lists of the signers of Communist Party election petitions, compiled from the original petitions, the following names are found:

1. Edward J. Fodor, 58 East Ninety-eighth

Street, New York, New York State petition,

Molly Greenberg, 1245 Findlay Avenue, Bronx, N. Y., New York City petition, 1939-40.
 Mortimer Greenberg, 18 Hart Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., New York City petition, 4. Mortimer Greenberg, 4010 Vernon Boule-vard, Queens, N. Y., New York State petition, 1940.

5. Beatrice Laupheimer, 721 Walton Avenue, Bronx, N. Y., New York State petition, 1942.

Miriam Sayer, under the auspices of the Communist Party of Queens County, N. Y., signed a statement to Borough President Burke protesting the denial of the use of the Lost Battalion Hall for the Communist Party election rally. (Daily Worker, December 5, 1946, p. 5.)
We were unable to find any reference to the other members of the editorial board and staff of the Queensbridge Home News, namely, Emlia Mitrand, Jean Sobek, Ruth Kaufman, Meta Goodman, Helen Fodor, Edna Horn, Jean Marin, Muriel Wharton, and Elsie Felipe. We were also unable to find any mention or reference of the Queensbridge Home News in the files of the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. JACKSON]

Mr. JACKSON of California. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. JACKSON of California to the amendment offered by Mr. GAVIN: Insert "Provided, however, That such aliens shall be assigned duty on foreign occupation service only, for the period of their enlistment, except for such domestic service within the United States as may be determined necessary for adequate schooling or instruction."

Mr. JACKSON of California. Chairman, I am speaking not only in support of my amendment to the amendment, but also in support of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Gavin]. As to whether or not there is an emergency now existing in the world, I think one might better direct that inquiry to those now domiciled in Poland, Lithuania, Latvia, Estonia, Bessarabia, Rumania, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, or any one of the formerly free lands in the world who had their freedom at one time and in whose parliamentary bodies you could probably have heard very much the same kind of debate as is now going on in this great Chamber. So far as hiring mercenaries is concerned, I think that any argument based on that count does not hold water. As a matter of fact, this great Chamber is distinguished by the picture of a man who might well have been called by some a mercenary. His name was Lafayette. His picture hangs at the left of the Speaker's chair. There are other great names that come to mind, such as those of Pilsudski, Kosciusko, Steuben, and literally scores of other foreign-born men in our Nation's history who have rendered great service to this country, not because of a few paltry dollars that they may have received as payment for their services, but because they believed in the dignity of the human being and his right to live in freedom.

Have we ever before employed the services of any mercenaries in our national history? We certainly did use the services of many thousands of Philippine Scouts. We certainly made allies and agents out of all of the members of all of the partisan movements during the war. We not only paid them money, but we gave them arms and ammunition. Certainly the thousands upon thousands of aliens who were inducted under Selective Service were, to a certain extent and quite literally, mercenaries as the term is being here employed today. I do not think actually that the employment of a hundred thousand men-able-bodied soldiers-who have been driven out of their homes and off their soil, who have made every possible sacrifice in their efforts to retain their freedom, independence, and liberty-I repeat I do not think that the employment of these men could be termed the employment of mercenaries. When they fight for us, as they would under the provisions of this amendment, they would fight equally for their own homes, for their own human dignity, and for the right to sometime return to the lands that were theirs.

Mr. Chairman, I urge the adoption of the amendment to the amendment, and to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. SADLAK].

Mr. SADLAK. Mr. Chairman, like my distinguished colleague from California [Mr. Jackson], I, too, rise to speak in favor of the amendment proposed by our amiable colleague of Pennsylvania [Mr. GAVIN]. However, the distinguished gentleman from California [Mr. Jackson] has now offered an amendment to the Gavin amendment providing that the aliens to be enlisted, be enlisted for the purpose of duty outside the United States except for such time that might be required for training purposes in the United States, and I am in fullest accord with this suggestion.

Both sponsors have foremost in mind the enlistment into our ranks of men who served in the uniform of Poland as our allies in the global war as also other of our allies such as the Czechs and others mentioned in the vigorous statement by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GAVIN] in behalf of his amendment to the Selective Service Act of 1948.

The portrait of Lafayette here in the House Chamber was pointed out by the distinguished gentleman from California [Mr. Jackson] and other so-called foreigners were mentioned by him to substantiate the fact that this is not the setting of a precedent for having aliens in our forces. May I also reiterate to the Committee that an alien soldier, Gen. Casimir Pulaski, of Poland, fought for our freedom and died in the battle of Savannah. May I also remind the Committee that another alien of Polish extraction, Gen. Thaddeus Kosciusko, also fought with our Colonial troops and founded the Military Academy at West Point. These men are among the first foreigners in our armed forces and there were many outstanding aliens on our side throughout the history of our Nation. If only the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. Wadsworth], who spoke in opposition a few minutes ago, would stop and reflect upon the history of the United States instead of the history of early Britain, he will readily associate the names, the heroic exploits of many non-United States citizens who helped win our battles. The record is selfsufficient in denying any need for interpreters to issue orders to available men like the former Polish soldiers who. shoulder to shoulder with our forces and our allies, fought throughout Africa and Europe. Oh, Mr. Chairman, there is so much that can be said along these same lines in favor of these worthy amendments but the time limitation restricts me. We need trained soldiers for our occupation forces; here is an opportunity for immediate replenishment with soldiers who know intensely the meaning of loyalty and freedom. I urge the adoption of the amendments.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. SAD-LAK] has expired.

All time has expired.

The question is on the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. JACKSON].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. SADLAK) there were—ayes 24, noes 53.

So the amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now recurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania GAVIN].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. GAVIN) there were-ayes 24, noes 77.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Chairman, I would like to see if we can arrive at some idea of how much more time will be required on section 5.

I ask unanimous consent that all debate on section 5 and all amendments thereto and all amendments to amendments close at 5:30.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. Andrews]?

Mr. POWELL. Mr. Chairman, I ob-

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on section 5 and all amendments thereto and all amendments to amendments thereto close at 5:30.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. ANDREWS].

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair wishes to advise the Committee that there are approximately 20 amendments at the desk. There are remaining approximately 55 minutes under the order just entered. The Chair would suggest that, without objection, the proponents of amendments will be recognized for 2 minutes in support of their amendments, and one speaker in opposition to the amendment.

Is there objection? There was no objection. The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Hungel]

Mr. HUBER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which is at the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Huber: Page 21, line 2, strike out all after the comma down through the period in line 6 and insert "The sole surviving son of such family shall not be inducted for service under the terms of this act."

Mr. HUBER. Mr. Chairman, I am satisfied that there is nothing controversial or complex about this amendment. It simply provides that where one or more members of a family were killed in action or died in line of duty during the last war that the sole surviving son shall not be inducted for service under the terms of this act.

I feel that if we were in actual war and it were necessary to scrape the bottom of the barrel it might be necessary to induct the sole surviving son. But under these circumstances, while we are still at peace, I see no reason why we cannot allow these parents who made so costly a sacrifice to have the solace and consolation of having their one remaining son at their side to carry on the family name. I hope this amendment will be adopted.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the Record.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, I intended to offer the identical amendment just offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Huber]. I am glad to support the amendment and hope that the committee will accept it. The bill as presently presented provides for the assignment to noncombatant service within the United States of the sole surviving son of any family who lost one or more persons during the fighting in World War II. This amendment will give such persons complete exemption from the bill. I believe that that is the least we can do for these families. There is no point in taking such a boy away from his family for noncombatant service. If the boy wants to serve he will enlist. On the other hand, if he or his family have any other desires they should be respected, and the boy given complete exemption.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Chairman, may I ask the author of this amendment whether this is the surviving son amendment?

Mr. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. I may say that this was my own original amendment to the bill. I have no objection to the amendment. The committee accepts the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection the amendment is agreed to.

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Kersten] to offer an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Kersten of Wisconsin: On page 15, line 7, strike out all wording on lines 7 and 8 following the comma and insert "or who are recognized by the officials of their church or synagogue or sect as having given a definite and acknowledged intention of entering into full-time religious work, shall be exempt from service (but not from registration) under this act."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin is recognized for 2 minutes.

Mr. KERSTEN of Wisconsin. Chairman, this amendment is largely by way of clarification. It pertains principally to those individuals of the Protestant or Jewish Church who are studying for and intend to enter the ministry. I am a Catholic myself. Most people who enter into the studies for the priesthood in the Catholic Church enter into regular religious preparatory schools of instruction, but it is my understanding that many individuals who enter into the Protestant and Jewish ministry take a regular formal course such as any student might take and do not enter into the regular ministry until after they have completed their college education; but they take the college course with the view of entering the ministry and have made arrangements with their church leaders to that end. I think there will be something in the way of discrimination against people in that category if we do not adopt this amendment, discrimination against people who in good faith enter a regular college having made arrangements with their church superiors to enter into religion thereafter.

My amendment merely takes care of those who have made arrangements with officials of their church, synagogue, or sect to enter into the ministry. Under this amendment they would be exempt as are those who enter regular institutions.

Mr. KILDAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KERSTEN of Wisconsin. I yield.

Mr. KILDAY. This amendment, of course, would make clear the fact that those who are in schools studying for the ministry would be exempt from the draft, but it would also make clear that those in the Catholic religious orders, for instance, known as lay brothers, should also be exempt; and that has always been our intention, and it is now in this Selective Service Act that they should be exempt.

Mr. KERSTEN of Wisconsin. I thank the gentleman for his statement.

Mr. KILDAY. I think the gentleman's amendment should be adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin has expired. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Eaton] for 2 minutes in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. EATON. Mr. Chairman, I understand that today on the floor a very distinguished gentleman made the statement that in our Foreign Affairs Committee executive session this morning Mr. Marshall made the statement that there was no danger of war.

Under the rules of the House and the committees an executive session is supposed to be sacred. I have always tried to follow that rule. I am not going to say anything about what Mr. Marshall said in the committee, but I can tell you what he did not say. He did not say that there was no danger of war.

In addition to that, I called him up this afternoon and he empowered me to make the statement that in his judgment it seems to be quite clear that recessions—in other words, that is a diplomatic phrase which means backing away—from our present line of action for the security of the United States would be most unfortunate and might lead to what we are trying so hard to avoid—that is, war.

That is the position of Secretary Marshall that he empowered me to present to the House at this time and to say once again he did not make the statement before our committee that there was no danger of war.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Kersten].

The amendment was agreed to.
Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. RICHARDS: Page 10, line 3, after the comma after the word "served," insert the words "provided such unit is reasonably accessible to such person without unduly interrupting his normal pursuits and activities, including attendance at a college or university in which he is regularly enrolled."

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Chairman, so far as this side of the aisle is concerned, and I feel quite sure the same is true of the gentlemen on the other side, we have no objection to the amendment and will accept it.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from South Carolina.

The amendment was agreed to.
Mr. BUCK. Mr. Chairman, I offer an

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Buck: On page 9, after line 3, insert:

"(2) That, except as otherwise provided in this act, no person who served honorably on board any vessel (1) in the United States Army Transportation Corps, or (ii) owned by, chartered to, or operated by, or for the account of the United States Maritime Commission or the War Shipping Administration, in areas which the Maritime War Emergency Board determined to be hazardous and subject to enemy activity, for a period of 18 months or more, between September 16, 1940, and September 3, 1945, shall, without his consent, be liable for induction for service under this act except that such exemption shall terminate upon a declaration by the Congress after the date of enactment of this act that a state of war or national emergency exists."

On page 9, line 4, change "(2)" to "(3)." On page 9, line 13, change "(3)" to "(4)."

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is both simple and meritorious, and it also promotes the national defense. I hope it will be accepted by the Committee.

Except on declaration of war or national emergency, this amendment exempts from liability for induction merchant seamen who served 18 months between September 1940 and September 1945 in areas which the Maritime War

Emergency Board determined to be haz-

gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCK. I am happy to yield to the gentleman who has contributed more to the upbuilding of the American merchant marine than any other Member in this House.

As I understand the Mr. BLAND. gentleman's amendment, it would only exempt from induction into the armed forces men whose contribution to our recent war effort was so outstanding that special provision was made for their exemption from military service during the recent war and during the immediate postwar period.

Mr. BUCK. The gentleman is exactly correct.

Mr. BLAND. Since that is the purpose of the amendment and since I am heartily in favor of the pending bill, I shall vote for the amendment.

Mr. COLE of New York. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCK. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. COLE of New York. Will the gentleman kindly explain the mechanics by which these individuals are singled out, and their heroism and outstanding service identified, as against another boy who worked alongside of them but who was not picked out.

Mr. BUCK. The Maritime War Emergency Board classified every seaman as to whether his service was hazardous or not. Every man who served in the merchant marine can be sufficiently certified as to this point.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCK. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. BRADLEY. The Merchant Marine Commission granted certificates of outstanding wartime service which was accepted by the selective-service boards throughout the United States.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired. Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I think we all recognize the importance of the merchant marine service during the period of the last war. It presented many hazards to the persons involved. But, I think the question of recognizing civilian service during World War II and placing such service alongside of those who were in the armed forces is a question that the Congress has disposed of in the past. If we are going to recognize one class of civilians who served in the last war I think we should recognize other groups. Let us not forget the civilian employees of the State and War Departments who were in London during the war raids and were constantly subjected to V-I and V-II bombs. Let us not forget the members of the American Red Cross who served in the last war or the war correspondents.

Let us think of the members of the FBI. Let us think of the civilian employees in the Office of Strategic Services who exposed themselves to extreme dangers behind the enemy lines, and let us think of the State Department employees who were interned in foreign countries at the outbreak of the last war. If we are going to recognize one group, let us go all the way down the line. For that reason I oppose this amendment.

Mr. COLE of New York. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VAN ZANDT. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. COLE of New York. The gentleman is an outstanding Member of Congress who has served in both world wars, and who has been very much interested in veterans' legislation throughout all of This proposition has been these years. presented to the Congress and has been considered by Congress on several occasions as to whether service by the men who served in the merchant marine would be classified as military duty. I would like to ask the gentleman if he would not agree that the Congress has always taken the position that service on merchant vessels, even during wartime, should not be classified as military duty? Mr. VAN ZANDT. That is correct. The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has ex-

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Chairman, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Buck moves that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken.

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Chairman, I utilize this device to obtain time on an amendment for the introduction of which I have been constantly on the floor for the past 2 days. Now, when time comes to consider the amendment I am given 2 minutes to present it, and that notwithstanding the fact that we have had frequent 5-minute speeches both yesterday and today when no amendments were even pending.

This amendment recognizes that seamen aboard ships sunk from under them in the icy waters of the North Atlantic or aboard torpedoed tankers, necessitating their jumping overboard into pools of burning oil, have already risked their lives for their country just as fully as men in front-line trenches. As a matter of fact, the casualties, proportionately, among the men of the American merchant marine who served in the hazardous waters covered by this amendment were greater than among the men of the armed services.

A second feature of this amendment is that it will contribute to the national defense. In both world wars the bottleneck was ships and men to man the ships. If this amendment is adopted, the trained seamen who will be needed in the event of another emergency will be available to man ships rather than be landlocked in Army camps. We would be contributing to the defense of the Nation by keeping these merchant seamen available for use on merchant ships when and as emergency arises.

Mr. HAVENNER. Mr. Chairman, will

the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCK. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. HAVENNER. I think the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York is just a matter of simple justice, and is thoroughly meritorious. I know the men who served in the merchant marine during this war were serving in an essential arm of the national defense. so recognized by the Congress. The mere fact that the Military Establishment has prevented them from getting their due recognition in various matters of legislation is no reason why the gentleman's amendment should not be adopted.

Mr. BUCK. I thank the gentleman. Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCK. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. BRADLEY. Does the gentleman think the veteran is so narrow that he does not want to recognize bravery in other men?

Mr. BUCK. I never thought so.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my motion.

Mr. KILDAY. Mr. Chairman, I object to the withdrawal of the motion, and ask recognition in opposition to it.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas is recognized for 5 minutes in opposition to the motion.

Mr. KILDAY. Mr. Chairman, there are none of us who would say that the merchant mariner did not do a good job during the war. However, I feel that this amendment should be defeated for what I believe to be a fundamental reason. At the outset of the war the merchant mariner could have been taken into the armed forces. He could have been taken into the Navy or the Naval Reserve. But he and the unions which represented him objected most violently, and there are Members here of the former Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, which handled maritime affairs, who can confirm that.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a correction?

Mr. KILDAY. I yield for a correction. Mr. BRADLEY. After extensive hearings, we found that President Franklin Roosevelt was the one who directed that the men should not be taken into the

Mr. KILDAY. Yes, I never knew Mr. Roosevelt to be too violently opposed to unions.

Mr. HUGH D. SCOTT, JR. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KILDAY. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. HUGH D. SCOTT, JR. I think it proper to say that I have twice served in the merchant marine as an ordinary seaman, once in 1920, and once during this war, on a so-called tanker run to Bristol, known as the high-octane run. I have also had an opportunity to examine the files of the War Shipping Administration and the resolutions of all of the unions at the time they were asked whether or not they would be willing to be taken in as part of the armed forces. In every case with suspicious unanimity all those resolutions were adopted, along the same line, and in every case they decided that they were proud of their civilian status, as they put it. They refused to accept discipline, they refused to accept the wearing of a uniform. For that reason, they having had their opportunity to become a part of the armed services and having rejected it, and being unwilling to assume the responsibility of serving in the armed forces of this country, I am not in favor of this amendment.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HOFFMAN. The question before the Committee is whether or not the Committee shall rise and report the bill back to the House with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken out. The gentleman is not talking on that, he is talking about something else.

The CHAIRMAN. The motion that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken out opens up the whole bill.

The gentleman will proceed.
Mr. KILDAY. I agree with what the gentleman has said. They had their choice. They chose to be civilians, and they served at a rate of pay far in excess of service personnel. I wish those of you who may be inclined to vote for this amendment would ask some member of the Navy who served as a member of the armed guard aboard one of these ships, serving there at regular service pay with these civilian crew members who were drawing many times a month what he was, what he thinks about this amendment.

This is the difficulty about this situation. If we recognize the merchant mariner as a veteran of the last war, there is no end to which we must not go. He is going to get the advantages of the GI bill of rights, he is going to get veterans' benefits, and he is going to get everything else. I do not say he should be deprived of that, but I do say that those things have been granted on the theory that a man serving in the Army at low service pay had lost a great deal of what he would have otherwise made in a civilian occupation. These men did not. If you bring them in under the veteran set-up, there must be a reevaluation of what they have lost compared with what the men who went into the service lost. You cannot do it here on the floor of the House. If that is going to be done-and I do not have anything to say against the service of these men because many of them served wonderfully. But if you go into this, you are starting to recognize the merchant mariner as a veteran, and you are going to have to give him all of the veterans' benefits. When you do that you must reevaluate the situation and make sure that he is not getting a tremendously lot more than the boy who fought in the Battle of the Bulge.

Mr. BURLESON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KILDAY. I yield.

Mr BURLESON. Is it not a fact also that they will be drawing other veterans' benefits besides seamen's pay and retirement and so forth?

Mr. KILDAY. The merchant seamen received many more times what a veteran received for his service in the armed forces of the United States while he was on active duty.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired. All time has expired.

The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. BUCK 1.

The motion was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.[Mr. Buck].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Buck) there were-ayes 12, noes 74.

So the amendment was rejected. Mr. FOWELL. Mr. Chairman, I have four amendments at the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman wish the Clerk to report them together?

Mr. POWELL. No, Mr. Chairman. Do I have equal time on each of the amendments?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will recognize the gentleman at this time to offer one amendment on which he will be recognized for 2 minutes.

The Clerk will report the amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Powell: Page 8, line 16, insert a new section as follows:
"(b) No person who does not desire to serve in a unit of the armed services because of segregation shall be taken for induction."

Mr. POWELL. Mr. Chairman, I present this amendment to you because, as I have intimated before on the floor within the past few days, it is in accord with the platform promise of the Republican Party of 1944. I have never read that platform promise for the RECORD. I have only referred to it. I will read it now so that it will be a part of the RECORD here today.

In 1940, and again in 1944:

We pledge an immediate congressional inquiry to ascertain the extent to which mistreatment, segregation, and discrimination against Negroes in our armed forces are impairing morale and efficiency, and we pledge the adoption of corrective legislation.

In view of the fact that the Armed Services Committee, representing the Republican majority of the House, is determined not to put anything into this bill guaranteeing a minimum of their platform pledge, I think it is important, therefore, that since they have broken their word to the 15,000,000 Negroes to whom they gave their word, that there ought to be something here to protect those people from the hypocrisy of the Republican Party.

This amendment would do this. I respectfully urge you Representatives that in all fairness to your conscience this amendment be adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. POWELL].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Powell) there were—ayes 7, noes 54.

So the amendment was rejected. Mr. LECOMPTE. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. LECOMPTE. For how long will I be recognized on my amendment?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will be recognized for 2 minutes in support of his amendment.

Mr. LECOMPTE. May I say that since the motion was made there has been a preferential motion debated and considered which took up time that was not originally planned for.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes that, but the motion that was entered was not a motion for fixed debate for a certain period of time but to close debate at a certain definite time by the clock.

Mr. LECOMPTE. But there has been some time taken out on the preferential motion.

The CHAIRMAN. Unfortunately, that is true, but that does not come within the order of the Committee. Mr. LECOMPTE. Mr. C.

Mr. Chairman. I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LeCompte: Section 5, (D) strike out all of (d) (1), page 11 and in lieu thereof insert the following: Persons who on the effective date of this act, or who, prior to the date they are ordered to report for induction for service under this act, are members of the federally recognized National Guard, the federally recognized Air National Guard, the Officers' Reserve Corps, the Regular Army Reserve, the Air Force Reserve, the Enlisted Reserve Corps, the Naval Reserve Corps, the Marine Corps Reserve, the Coast Guard Re-serve, or the Public Health Service Reserve, and are not on active duty, and who serve therein for a total period of 6 years, during which they satisfactorily participate in which they satisfactorily participate in scheduled drills and training periods as prescribed by the Secretary of Defense, shall be exempt from service by induction under the provisions of this act, but not from registra-

Mr. LECOMPTE. Mr. Chairman, the chief purpose of this amendment is to protect the strength of the National Down through the years the National Guard and the other organizations mentioned have been vital to the defense of our country. In effect, all this amendment does is to give an opportunity to young men to enlist in the National Guard between the time of the enactment of this act and the time of reporting for duty. I believe the National Guard should have a chance to recruit and bring the guard up to strength during that period. Down through the pages of history the National Guard has covered itself with glory and the men of the guard have poured out their blood on every battlefield. We have been told repeatedly that there are not less than 100,000 young men coming of age in the United States each month. If that is the case, there is certainly no great scarcity of manpower. I believe we will serve our country if we protect the strength of the National Guard.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the

Mr. Chairman, the authorized strength of the National Guard is 250,000. The limitation on the guard and other organizations in the country is 350,000. This bill today protects all men who are in the National Guard. It permits all young men to enlist in the National Guard up to the date of enactment of this act, and hundreds of them are doing it. It also protects all young men up until they are 18 years and 6 months old who enlist in the guard, and thereafter be deferred. It permits veterans with less than 12 months' service to to enlist in the National Guard and be deferred. Also available to the guard are all other veterans not liable to the draft.

From these figures it is clear that the Guard has a tremendous pool from which to enlist more than its requirements. With the threat of induction facing the young-age group and the veteran with not more than 12 months' service, the problem will not be how to get more people in the guard but how to decide who will be admitted, and thereby escape induction. To enlarge this group could only aggravate a problem already serious, and seriously deplete the pool for this bill.

Mr. VINSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. I yield. Mr. VINSON. As I understand the amendment, it merely holds out to the person who is apprehensive that he will be drafted the opportunity to enlist in the National Guard and that the period of enlistment is for 6 years, whereas the period of service under the bill is only 2 years. I think the gentleman's amendment is stronger than the committee bill.

Mr. LECOMPTE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. I yield. Mr. LECOMPTE. It does hold out an inducement for them to enlist in the National Guard for 6 years in preference to going into the Regular Army for 2.

I do not know why the committee cannot accept the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired. All The CHAIRMAN. time on this amendment has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Andrews of New York) there were—ayes 53, noes 9. So the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas [Mr. TEAGUE 1 to offer amendments. Chair is advised the gentleman has two amendments pending and would like to have them considered together. Clerk will report the amendments.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. TEAGUE: On page 12, lines 22 and 23, strike out the continuance" and insert after the word "or", the following: "elect to continue."

On page 13, line 3, strike out the word

"continuance" and insert after the word "or", the following: "elects to continue."

Page 13, line 7, strike out "not less than 3 years" and insert "for the same period of time as is required of an inductee under the terms of this bill."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas is recognized for 2 minutes in support of his amendments.

Mr. TEAGUE. Mr. Chairman, if the chairman of the committee will indicate that he is willing to accept these amendments, as I understand the committee is, will not take my time.

Mr. CROW. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TEAGUE. I yield.

Mr. CROW. Does the gentleman intend to strike out the word "continuance" on page 13, line 2, or the word "selected"? Mr. TEAGUE. I wish to strike out the word "continuance."

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TEAGUE. I yield.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. discussed the amendment with members of the committee on this side and as far as we on this side are concerned we will be pleased to accept it.

Mr. Chairman, will the Mr. KILDAY.

gentleman yield?

I yield.

Mr. TEAGUE. Mr. KILDAY. Mr. Chairman, this side of the aisle feels the same way. I wish, however, the gentleman from Texas would make a short statement of ex-

Mr. TEAGUE. Mr. Chairman, in our colleges which have the senior ROTC. the War Department allocates to those colleges contracts which generally determine the number of men to take the last 2 years of ROTC training. In many schools like Clemson, VMI, VPI, Texas A. and M., and others, there are more men who desire to take military training than the colleges have contracts and, therefore, they cannot take all who elect to take this training. This amendment permits those men to take military training as part of their college work and to complete their course. These men may receive a Reserve commission although they have not received pay for their training. I do not know about all of those schools, but, for example, in Texas A. and M. this year about 200 more men took military training than the college had contracts for.

Mr. Chairman, in order to make proper provisions for those completing the basic course of ROTC in our colleges and who are eligible for advanced work in the senior division, I believe it advisable to provide deferment to them if they take the advanced ROTC course as an elective subject when sufficient contracts are not available at the college to take care of the demand of the students. These men taking the course as an elective will receive the same training as those under contract but will not receive the 80 cents per day subsistence nor will they receive the $83 uniform allowance.

The same provisions of section 5 (e) (2) would apply to these men such as signing for 2 years of active duty upon completion of the course if a commission is tendered to them. These officers would render very valuable service as training officers of our inductees and in established units as they would have been trained along with the officers taking advanced work in the senior division.

The Reserve Section of the Department of the Army advises me that a man taking the entire ROTC course and meeting all the prescribed requirements such as having attended summer camp, would be tendered a commission in the Reserves. In the past 3 years there have not been a sufficient number of eligible applicants to fill the Reserve officer quota.

I offer an amendment which is at the desk. I would like to explain the necessity of making ample provisions in the Selective Service Act of 1948 to continue and to expand the present Reserve officers' training program of the Army, Air. and Navy. Section 5 (e) (2) on page 12 of the bill provides deferment to those in the senior division of the Reserve training program and requires 2 years of active duty for these men upon graduation. However, those who enter the senior division of Reserve officers' training after enactment of this bill are required to serve 3 years on active duty upon graduation. I am very much concerned about the effect this will have on our entire training program to require an additional year of service for this latter group.

Mr. Chairman, we should not penalize this group of future officers in training under the Reserve officers' training program as we can produce first-class officers by this method for only about $2,100 per officer whereas it requires an expenditure of something like $45,000 to train a young man to be an officer at West Point or Annapolis.

Most of us realize the importance of having a strong reserve force and to keep this force large and strong we must add to it ever year by encouraging full participation in our military program in colleges and universities. I urge the Members to accept this amendment to require only 2 years of active duty for all graduates of the ROTC program.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendments offered by the gentleman from Texas.

The amendments were agreed to. Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Javits: Page 15, line 17, after the word "activity" insert "in study, research, or medical, scientific or other."

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Chairman, this amendment just puts into the House bill, in order to show the desire of the House to have it in the bill, the language which is now in the bill of the other body. The President will be empowered then to defer young men who are engaged in special study in research, engineering, or medical activity instead of leaving it open in the general words used in the House bill entitling to deferment for 'other endeavors."

I respectfully submit to the committee that this amendment ought to be accepted. In this age when scientific and atomic means are the vital preparations for national security, and when in the last war we used up men who were scientists and prospective scientists, we should forward rather than retard the effort to preserve and effectively utilize this national resource by givin, the President the necessary instructions as to our desires. My amendment leaves it in his authority but expresses the will of the Congress.

We must be wise in mobilizing a military force. Every man should be hus-banded for his maximum contribution to the Nation. Scientific brains are difficult and expensive to train, and take special aptitudes. I believe the maximum contribution to the Nation is to let these young men complete their studies and not to interrupt them and divert them for a considerable time to other duties. I ask that the committee accept this amendment.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Chairman, the provisions of this bill as far as it affects scientists were adopted after consultation with the head of the Bureau of Scientific Research and we followed very fully their recommendations.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The amendment was rejected. Mr. ISACSON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Isacson:

On page 21, line 6, add the following new section 6 and renumber the sections that follow accordingly:

"Sec. 6. No member of the armed forces shall be discriminated against in any manner because of his race, color, national origin, ancestry, language, or religion by (1) any officer or employee of the United States, of any State or any governmental subdivision thereof, of any Territory or possession of the United States, or of the District of Columbia, (2) any other member of the armed forces, (3) any common carrier, (4) any hotel or other place of public lodging, (5) any restaurant or other place engaged in the business of serving food or drink to the public, (6) any place of public amusement, or (7) any business or service engaged in commerce.

"(b) The penalty provisions of section 12 of this act shall be applicable to any violation of this section by any person enumerated in (1) or (2) of subsection (a), by any firm, company, or business enumerated in (3), (4), (5), (6), and (7), or by any officer or employee, of any such firm, company, or business acting in the scope of his employ-ment."

Mr. SIKES. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from New York care to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. ISACSON. Mr. Chairman, this amendment deals with certain rights and consequences which flow from the induction of Negroes into the armed forces of the United States. I submit that there are other sections in this bill which deal with the same subject, and it is therefore germane. I might also add that the amendment was considered in the Senate and was held to be germane.

The CHAIRMAN. Whatever action was taken in another body does not control the action of this body.

The Chair is prepared to rule. In the opinion of the Chair, the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Isacson] clearly goes beyond the scope of the bill. It purports to impose sanctions on persons who are not members of the armed forces, such as common carriers, and other classes. Therefore, the Chair holds that the amendment is not germane and sustains the point of

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Crow] for the purpose of offering an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Crow: Page 8, line 5, after the semicolon, add the following 'Cadets, in recognized senior and basic ROTC colleges and schools, this to include Army, Navy, and air ROTC colleges and schools."

Mr. CROW. Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, the purpose of this amendment is to exempt the cadets at our recognized military colleges from the effect of this draft. I am talking particularly about colleges like VMI and Pennsylvania Military College, where they have actual military training all through their college years. I graduated from PMC myself.

Mr. VINSON. Mr. Chairman, will the

gentleman yield?

Mr. CROW. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. VINSON. The effect of the gentleman's amendment would confer the same consideration on State colleges where military science and tactics are taught as the bill does at West Point and the Naval Academy?

Mr. CROW. No; I do not believe that is correct, unless the State college is a recognized ROTC college.

Mr. VINSON. If it is recognized, it is then given the same benefit as the bill gives to the midshipmen and the cadets?

Mr. CROW. That is right, if they are entitled to a commission when they graduate from that school. They get military training that would qualify them for that purpose. I do not think they should be required to register under this bill. My reason for that is this: The basic men taking the course are not exempt. At the end of the second year you are not going to have any men going into the third or fourth class years. They will all be drafted.

Mr. SIKES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CROW. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. SIKES. I have a great deal of respect for the gentleman's ability and his interest in good legislation. I wonder, however, if he has studied the language of subsection (e) on page 12 which I think largely does what the gentleman is seeking to do.

Mr. CROW. I might say to the gentleman that I have an amendment to strike out that section completely, because I think the cadets in the ROTC should not be subject to this draft.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has ex-

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Crow].

The amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. HINSHAW].

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Chairman, I believe that under the terms of section 5 (i) (1) there is a provision that the President may determine certain classifications which he could defer by order; is that correct, may I ask one of the gentlemen on the committee?

Mr. KILDAY. In section 5 (i) (1) that power is granted to the resident.

Mr. HINSHAW. Is that for the purpose of permitting the President to exempt persons such as those who are engaged in study to become scientists and technicians?

Mr. KILDAY. It is a general provision under which persons in critical occupations would be deferred. Then there is a second sentence in that same provision which would take care of those who are studying. At one time the committee thought of setting out in words the categories of essential personnel who should be deferred, and deferred while they were continuing their education, but when we got to that point we found it was not possible for us to sit down and pick out all of them in advance. Some might have been overlooked. We hoped this would take care of all of them.

Mr. HINSHAW. In the consideration of the National Science Foundation bill by the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce it was found there is a very great shortage in the United States of qualified scientists and technicians in the scientific fields. We need those men worse than we need soldiers. I trust that the language of the bill will permit the President of the United States to order the exemption of persons who are bona fidely, and by certification of the heads of the institutions in which they are studying, training to become scientists. We are 15,000 men short in the scientific field. Even Britain in her dire distress of the recent war had the good sense to exempt scientists and highly qualified students of science from military service. It is more important to the defense of the United States today that we fill the voids in the ranks of our scientists than that we employ men of that type of mind to fill the ranks of foot soldiers. I trust that the advisers to the President appreciate the facts in the matter and that they will advise him accordingly.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Florida [Mr.

ROGERS ].

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Rogers, of Florida: Page 18, line 1, strike out beginning on page 18, line 1, "(2) any person who, while satisfactorily pursuing a full-time course of instruction at a college, university, or, similar institution of higher learning, is ordered to report for induction under this act after the beginning and prior to the end of one of his academic years, shall, upon his request, have his induction under this act postponed (A) until the end of such academic year or (B) until he ceases to actainate year of (2) that he carried satisfactorily pursue such course of instruction, whichever is the earlier", and insert in lieu thereof the following: "(2) Any person who, while satisfactorily pursuing a full-time course of instruction at a college, university, or similar institution of higher learning, is ordered to report for induction under this act prior to his graduation from such college, university, or similar institu-tion of higher learning shall upon his request, have his induction under this act postponed (A) until the time of his graduation therefrom or (B) until he attains the twenty-second anniversary of his birth or (C) until he ceases to satisfactorily pursue such course of instruction, whichever is the earliest, provided such person agrees in writing to serve in the armed forces of the United States for a period not to exceed 1 year subject to call by the Secretary of the Army, the Secretary of the Air Force, or the Secretary of the Navy, respectively."

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. Mr. Chairman, this amendment only provides the same treatment for the boys who are still in college as this bill gives the boys attending high school. In other words, you cannot induct a boy attending high school until he graduates or becomes 20 years old or quits school. I have just applied this to the boys who are in college. In other words, if a boy starts his college career and wants to complete it. this just says that if he is inducted, upon request his induction will be deferred or postponed until he finishes his schooling, becomes 22 years of age, or ceases to satisfactorily pursue such course of instruction, whichever is earliest.

That takes care of this situation. Most high-school boys are through high school by the time they are 20 years of age. The general average of the ages of the boys who enter college is 18 or 19.

This amendment provides that they may complete their courses provided that they enter into an agreement as provided in another section where they take ROTC training, and provided they agree in writing that as soon as the Secretary of War, Navy, or Air Force calls them for service, then they will serve for 1 year. That is the only thing it provides. It simply prevents a boy being interrupted in trying to get a college education. So what are you going to do by that? You are going to give that boy an opportunity to get an education, and at the same time you are going to save the Government a lot of money, because the minute they take these boys away from school and they serve 1 or 2 years, the Government is going to be called upon to send them back to school, just as they do with the boys now, and possibly this Government will do it. But if you let them complete their education now, or up until the age of 22 years, they pay for their own schooling, no preference is shown and no discrimination, for all must serve the same length of time in Army forces. Just an opportunity to educate himself at his own expense before entering in his country's service.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr.

Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, the committee gave considerable consideration to the subject matter of the gentleman's amendment. High school students are not to be taken into the armed forces until they graduate. All college students are exempt providing they are in the ROTC, otherwise they are deferred until the end of the college year. The bill is a very narrow bill, covering all those who not only may be inducted, but those who may enlist or want to enlist. The committee thought that if we went so far as to exempt all college students, it would be committing a highly preferential action which would benefit only the sons of wealthy men.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. All time has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Florida [Mr. ROGERS].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, the following is an excerpt from a letter received from the commander of one of the Reserve units in my district:

It so happens that at present I am the commanding officer of the Howitzer Company, Second Battalion, Three Hundred and Ninety-eighth Parachute Infantry Regiment, One Hundredth Airborne Division, which is the Reserve outfit assigned to Webster County. We got a bunch of ambitious boys here and signed up 72 enlisted men and 3 officers, making us the largest outfit in the whole State, bar none. On second thought, I believe we are the largest in the division, which covers West Virginia, Kentucky, and part of Ohio or Indiana.

Here are our gripes:

1. According to information from higherups, we signed up some Navy and Marine veterans, and some new recruits, mostly 17 years of age. So far, however, these men have not been assigned a serial number, have not been recognized in any way, and do not know their status. What's more, they have not been issued any uniforms, and must attend any formation in Navy blues, Marine uniform, or civvies, as the case may be.

2. The Army has plenty of uniforms, equipment, and arms rotting in storage, but we cannot get any. We are supposed to have in our outfit all the weapons in the whole State, but they are inadequate for even our one company, to wit, 5 M1 rifles, 11 carbines, 8 obsolete 1917 Enfields, 2 pistols. In addition we practically stole from an exhibit, one BAR, three magazines, and two mortars. No uniforms at all have been issued. We received five rounds of ammunition (carbine) per man during all of last year and up to date.

3. We get no pay for training. The boys have been turning out on their own time, with patriotism as their only incentive, with one exception; a week-end contact camp in Charleston this March.

4. The Army does not have enough money to let us train our men here, with expense ridiculously low by comparison, but has enough money for the officers to attend five contact camps in the last year; we officers had two week-end camps at Fort Knox this past year, but the men could not go; there is a 12-day summer camp at Fort Bragg in July, for officers only. What we want to know is: Should the Army finance vacations for a lot of brass or use the same money training the enlisted men at home? The officers of our outfit here are refusing to go where our men cannot go.

5. We have to beg storage and training space from the county court and from the sheriff. Although requested, the Army has done nothing to rent training space for us—and an ideal space is available.

6. The Army has done nothing to rent or lease us space for a range. Finally a local citizen, himself a veteran of World War I, gave me a lease on land suitable for a range, for use of our outfit. Now the Army will do nothing to help us develop it.

7. We had two unit instructors, Maj. Daniel Gallagher and later Maj. Mack C. Shelley, both of whom had plenty of initiative and were a big help to us. Now these men have been absorbed into the limbo of West Virginia military district headquarters in Charleston and we have no commissioned unit instructor at all.

We would like to ask that you take two steps for us:

1. Prod the Army high brass into establishing policy and taking direct steps to remedy the defects we complain of, except where such defects are caused by insufficient legislation.

2. Where lack of legislation is the cause, push action in the House that will cure the defects we complain of.

Mr. Chairman, under the law, Congress had established a policy that all the men in the armed forces, after their release following World War II, were to be transferred to the Reserve organization for a period of 10 years. This provision of the law was deliberately ignored by the Army. No explanation has been given for this action, nor can an explanation be given. One is led to the inescapable conclusion that the Army did not want a large or an active Reserve.

The hearings on H. R. 6401 disclose that General Marshall, in 1944, told General Reckord of the National Guard that the National Guard and the Reserve should be set up on the basis of a universal military training program.

I believe all recognize the fact that the world is in an unsettled condition; the United Nations is not functioning; postwar problems have not been settled; peace treaties have not been written; and it is necessary for this Nation to be strong until the various problems are settled.

We must be strong from both a military and an economic standpoint. From a military standpoint, we must have an active, strong Reserve, an active, strong National Guard, and an adequate Regular Army—all organized into combat teams and groups. We must maintain our strength from an economic standpoint. Current revenues will have to meet current expenses. With the size of our present national debt, we cannot afford deflicit spending. For this country to go over the brink in that respect would be more disastrous in many ways than anything any foreign power might be able to do to us.

We are now considering H. R. 6401, providing for the conscription of young men between the ages of 19 and 26 into the armed services. We have no right to draft them unless there is a very real emergency and the Army cannot get them in any other way.

Up to the time this bill was presented, I thought that we could tolerate peacetime conscription, provided it gave us the military strength we needed and was within our ability to finance. After studying the bill, it is hard to imagine a worse draft bill, from the standpoint of the interest of all components of the armed services, this bill will virtually eliminate the National Guard and emasculate the Reserve force. Instead of building up those organizations, upon which we must depend if we are to have a healthy, strong national-defense program, it goes a long way to destroy them.

Maj. Gen. E. A. Walsh, president of the National Guard Association, in a telegram dated May 3, 1948, stated:

The enactment of H. R. 6401 as now drafted will mean the complete dissolution of the National Guard of the United States by June 1950. The security of the Nation cannot be assured by destroying its reserves. If there is a possibility of war, the measures proposed are utterly inadequate. If there is no possibility of war, then the measures proposed are excessive.

Mr. Chairman, I have listened to the debate and I have read in the report where it is stated this bill would strengthen the Reserve and the National Guard, but upon examination of the provisions of the bill itself I find that no recognition is given to enlistment of a man in the Reserve or National Guard where he serves two or even three en-listments. If such a provision was contained in the bill, thousands or even tens of thousands of our young men would go into the Reserve and National Guard and be trained in their home locality by Reserve officers and National Guard officers. Such training, of course, would be under the supervision and direction of the Regular Army.

The proposed legislation makes a young man who is attending college and who may be taking ROTC work subject to the draft and 2 years of service. The only attempt to make any provision for the Reserve is that after a man has served 2 years he is given the option to join the Reserve until he is 35 years of age or stay in the Army for 3 years.

The Army has not changed its position on a civilian Reserve, and until it does so the Reserve will probably receive no better treatment than that indicated in the letter to which I have referred.

I will freely admit that I am friendly to the Reserve and friendly to the National Guard. I am likewise friendly to our Regular Army. We need all threeall three need to be strong. Our program for national security and national defense should be so coordinated and organized that the strength of all three is simultaneously built up. H. R. 6401 fails to accomplish that very essential purpose and therefore it should be rejected and a program written which will accomplish that objective.

Again we must look at this matter from the standpoint of whether or not we can finance it. We will have approved already for expenditure this year over $17,000,000,000 for our armed services. The enactment of this legislation will build our total military budget for 1949 to over $21,000,000,000. This is more than we can expend without either raising taxes or going into the red. We will accomplish nothing by a collapse of our economy.

I have urged and still urge providing adequate air power. The Congress has taken the necessary action to accomplish that purpose. We should put additional emphasis on the stock piling of strategic materials. Very little, if anything, has been accomplished in that all-important

A system of registering of our young men on arriving at the age of 18 years should be established.

We must build up our Reserve and National Guard and train a specialized Regular Army. All must be accomplished within our financial ability. The Reserve and National Guard can be trained at a fraction of the cost as proposed in H. R. 6401. The training can be identical, it is only a question of locale of training. a well-balanced program for the civilian and professional components of the Army was worked out, I believe the Regular Army would get all of the men it needs through voluntary enlistments. If not, then in that event, conscription could be placed in effect, provided the world situation warranted it.

If a conscription program is to be placed into effect, then that program should include the conscription of the necessary men for the Reserve Corps, the National Guard, and the Regular Army. A balanced program will include all three. A large professional Army cannot and will not give the Nation the security it needs. That security will come only through the organization and training of the civilian components of the armed services.

This proposed legislation will not give this Nation the security we need and will not give our Nation a well-balanced defense program. To adopt it as an expediency, in my judgment, is not sound. Rather must the legislative branch of the Government insist upon the Army carrying out the policy established by the Congress in building up the civilian reserve components, instead of a large professional Army. The Army has failed to follow this clear, defined policy. I have spent some 20 years in the active service of the National Guard and the Army of the United States, over 5 years of that service was during World War II. I believe position action is indicated at this time, but that action must be to build a sound and strong national defense and we will not have such a defense without a strong and well-trained civilian reserve.

From a national defense standpoint this bill should be sent back to the Committee on Armed Services and there the program should be revised and reformed to build up simultaneously the Reserve, the National Guard, and our Regular Army.

Mr. Chairman, if this is done we will get the men we need without conscrip-

Mr. CROW. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Crow:

On page 14, after the new section (g) add a new section (h), as follows:

"(h) (1) The Secretaries of the Army, the Navy, and the Air Force are authorized and directed to accept enlistments for periods of year in the Army of the United States, the United States Navy, or the United States Marine Corps, and the Air Force of the United States, respectively, from among qualified male persons between the ages of 18 and 19. Provided, That no person who is enlisted in the Army of the United States under the provisions of subsection (h) shall be permanently assigned to duty at any place outside of the continental limits of the United States; and no person who is enlisted under the provisions of such subsection in the United States Navy, the United States Marine Corps, or the Air Force of the United States shall be assigned to duty at any naval or air force installation which is located on land outside of the continental limits of the United States.

(2) Each person who hereafter is enlisted under the provisions of subsection (h) (1) above and who meets the qualifications for enlistment or appointment in a Reserve component of the Armed Forces shall, upon discharge from such enlistment under conditions other than dishonorable, be transferred to a Reserve component of the Armed Forces of the United States and shall serve therein for a period of 6 years or until sooner discharged. Each such person shall so long as he remains a member of such Reserve component, be liable to be ordered to active duty only in time of war or national emergency as declared by the Congress and shall not be subject to any further service under Reletter latter paragraphs correctly.

Mr. CROW. Mr. Chairman, this amendment merely adds to the bill, what I believe is a very good provision which is found in the bill as passed by the other body. Nothing in this bill authorizes an 18-year-old boy to enlist. Under the bill he has to wait until he is 19 years of age, and then he is drafted. I have a son. My son is not going to be drafted. I myself would rather have him go out and enlist. I think if the committee wants to get more men into the armed services, this provision will do it. It will give men 18 years of age the authority to enlist. After that person has served 1 year, he will go into the Reserve Officers' Corps for a period of 6 years, after which he is exempt from the provisions of this act.

I think the committee should accept the amendment. I hope it will. Mr. COLE of New York. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. CROW. I yield.

Mr. COLE of New York. I should like to say, solely for myself, but as a member of the committee, that I highly approve of the amendment which the gentleman has offered.

Mr. CROW. I thank the gentleman. I hope the committee will accept the amendment.

Mr. DURHAM. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CROW. I yield. Mr. DURHAM. This would just about cut the pool of men in half. The total pool, 18 to 19, is 640,000, estimated. total group, 19 through 25, would be 660,-000. So, in effect, this amendment would just about cut the pool of available men for occupation forces in half.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

All time has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Crow].

The question was taken; and, on a division (demanded by Mr. Andrews of New York) there were-ayes 54, noes 43.

Mr. KILDAY. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered; and the Chairman appointed Mr. SIKES and Mr. CROW to act as tellers.

The Committee again divided; and the tellers reported there were-ayes 86. noes 67.

So the amendment was agreed to. The CHAIRMAN. If there are no further amendments to be offered to section 5, the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 6. No bounty shall be paid to induce any person to enlist in or be inducted into the armed forces of the United States: Provided, That the clothing or enlistment allowances authorized by law shall not be regarded as bounties within the meaning of this section. No person liable for service in such forces shall be permitted or allowed to furnish a substitute for such service; no substitute as such shall be received, enlisted, enrolled, or inducted into the armed forces of the United States; and no person liable for service in such forces under section 4 shall be permitted to escape such service or be discharged therefrom prior to the expiration of his period of such service by the payment of money or any other valuable thing whatsoever as consideration for his release from such service or liability therefor.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WILLIAMS: On page 21, after the period in line 21, insert a new section as follows:

"Sec. 7. (a) Any person who registers as required by the terms of this act, or any person who hereafter voluntarily enlists in the armed forces of the United States under the terms of this act, shall be afforded an opportunity to state in writing over his signature whether he has a preference to serve only in a unit all of the enlisted personnel of which are of his own race. Such opportunity shall be afforded at the time of registration in the case of those registering under the requirements of this act, or upon enlistment in the case of those who are not in the service on the date this act takes effect. Any such person who expresses such preference shall thereafter, upon induction, be assigned only to units of a type consistent with his preference. The right to express and the effect of expressing any such preference shall be clearly explained to each person who hereafter registers under this act or who enlists in the armed forces of the United States under the terms of this act. As used in this section the term "unit" As used in this section the term "unit" means a group of persons serving in the armed forces who (1) share the same housing, messing, or sanitary facilities, or (2) participate jointly in recreational or social activities. For the purposes of this subsection, an individual's race shall be determined to the coordinate with the proposed with the proposed state. mined in accordance with the more detailed classification as to race used by the Bureau of the Census in connection with the taking and preparation of statistics of the Sixteenth Census of the United States. Nothing in this subsection shall be deemed to preclude the assignment of any individual who belongs to a race comprising less than 1 percent of the population of the United States to units containing enlisted personnel of the most numerous race in the United States, if the Secretary of the armed force concerned has determined that it is impracticable to organize units all of the enlisted personnel of which are of such individual's race.

"(b) Any commissioned officer of the armed forces who knowingly and willfully denies to any person his right to express a preference upon enlistment as provided by subsection (a) or assigns any person after induction to any unit in violation of the provisions of such subsection shall be guilty of conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman and shall be subject to trial and punishment under the appropriate article of war or article for the Government of the Navy."

Mr. DURHAM, Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order against the amendment.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Chairman, in offering this amendment, I have no intention to weaken this bill or to delay its passage or to destroy it. As a matter of fact, I will probably support this measure on final passage. It appears that the draft is necessary in order to maintain the military strength that we must have in order to preserve our national security. But let me remind you that this is a very serious business that we are about today. Peacetime conscription is not a typical American institution and we only resort to it in times of dire emergency when our country is facing a crisis such as it faces today, and such as it faced in 1940.

Many times on the floor of this House I have heard the distinguished minority leader, I have heard the distinguished majority leader. I have heard other distinguished Members of the House, and, in fact, the President of the United States, talk about maintaining and preserving the dignity of the individual in this country. We hold that to be the democratic way and this amendment does that very thing. Remember that every man you draft into this Army under the pending bill is an individual. He is not just another soldier. He is a man with a life, a soul, and a mind of his own. It is our duty to provide as much for his comfort and as much for his convenience as we possibly can in order to preserve and to bolster the morale of the men in the armed services. This is a debt that we owe to him.

This amendment does not compel segregation in the armed services for those who do not want it, but it does for those who do want it. As a matter of fact, it applies to the Negro just as much as to the white man, and if they have pride in their own race they will insist on being assigned to units composed of members of their own race.

You are going to draft a lot of men out of the South into this Army. These boys are not going to be satisfied, they are not going to be happy, and they are not going to do their best work in an army in which they are not segregated because, thank God, they are proud of their race and believe in protecting and preserving the integrity of their race. Be not deceived—those from the North feel the same way.

Mr. WINSTEAD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. WINSTEAD. Is it not true that the Negro boy from the South will be just as anxious to be in a camp where segregation is practiced as the white boy?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Of course he will. Under my amendment, if a man does not care about being in a segregated unit, it gives him an opportunity to be in a nonsegregated unit merely by failing to express a preference, but for the boys who do want to be in a segregated unit it provides that right. That is the American way—to give them freedom to choose their associates.

There is a sound basis for this amendment, and I would like to read to you some statements that General Eisenhower made before the Committee on Armed Services of the other body on the subject of segregation in the United States Army:

It has been the problem, of course, that has been with the Army ever since it has been with the country. We must never forget that in a very definite way the Army is merely one of the mirrors that holds up to our faces the United States of America. It has never been easy to solve because you have certain incontrovertible facts that you must walk right up to.

One of them is that there is race prejudice in this country, and when you put in the same organization and make live together under the most intimate circumstances men of different races, we sometimes have trouble.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Mississippi has expired.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for two additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. WILLIAMS. General Eisenhower said further:

I personally have always stood since that time for organizing the Negro down to include units no larger than platoons. It does create certain social problems on a post, because you always have men that do not like to mingle freely between the races, and therefore if you have a dance for your soldiers, you have a problem.

And listen to this:

Now, if you are going to go further, here is the problem you run into, Senator. In general, the Negro is less well educated than his brother citizen that is white, and if you make a complete amalgamation, what you are going to have is in every company the Negro is going to be relegated to the minor jobs, and he is never going to get his promotion to such grades as technical sergeant, master sergeant, and so on, because the competition is too tough.

If, on the other hand, he is in smaller units of his own, he can go up to that rate, and I believe he is entitled to the chance to show his own wares.

Mr. Chairman, I wish I had 30 minutes to talk on this amendment, because I sincerely believe there can be no conscientious opposition. It is my firm belief that the adoption of this amendment will strengthen rather than weaken the bill. It will bring about a better Army, a more satisfied Army, and will provide for higher morale among the members of our armed services.

Mr. KILDAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. KILDAY. I was interested in what the gentleman read from General Eisenhower's statement. Of course, that was all for the present system that exists in the Army of having races in their own units. So there is not in that anything that would indicate that there would be a departure from the present system.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I would agree that it is not as bad as it might be, but the gentleman knows, they do not segregate them in the armed forces. He knows that Mr. KILDAY. So the gentleman has raised a question that does not exist.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Why, certainly, it exists.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Mississippi has expired.

Does the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Durham] insist on his point of order?

Mr. DURHAM. I withdraw my point of order, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Williams]. The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MARCANTONIO) there were—ayes 24, noes 88.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. VINSON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the remaining sections of the bill be considered as read and open to amendment at any point.

Mr. MARCANTONIO and Mr POWELL objected.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 7. (a) The selection of persons for service under section 4 shall be made in an impartial manner, under such rules and regulations as the President may prescribe from the persons who are liable for such service and who at the time of selection are registered and classified, but not deferred or exempted: Provided, That in the selection of persons for service under this act, and in the interpretation and execution of the provisions of this act, there shall be no discrimination against any person on account of race or color: Provided further, That in the classification of registrants within the jurisdiction of any local board, the registrants of any particular registration may be classified, in the manner prescribed by and in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the President, before, together with, or after the registrants of any prior registration or registrations; and in the selection for induction of persons within the jurisdiction of any local board and within any particular classification, persons who were registered at any particular registration may be selected, in the manner prescribed by and in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the President, before, together with, or after persons who were registered at any prior registration or registra-

(b) Quotas of men to be inducted for service under this act shall be determined for each State, Territory, possession, and the District of Columbia, and for subdivisions thereof, on the basis of the actual number of men in the several States, Territories, possessions, and the District of Columbia, and the subdivisions thereof, who are liable for such service but who are not deferred after classification, except that credits shall be given in fixing such quotas for residents of such subdivisions who are in the armed forces of the United States on the date fixed for determining such quotas. After such quotas are fixed, credits shall be given in filling such quotas for residents of such subdivisions who subsequently become members of such forces. Until the actual numbers necessary for determining the quotas are known, the quotas may be based on estimates, and subsequent adjustments therein shall be made when such actual numbers are known. All computations under this subsection shall be made in accordance with such rules and regulations as the President may prescribe.

Mr. COLE of New York (interrupting the reading of the bill). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that section 7 be considered as read.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I object, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. REES. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. REES: At the end of line 12, page 23, add the following and number the succeeding sections accordingly:

ingly:
"Sec. 8. (a) The training under this act shall be administered and carried out on the highest possible moral, religious, and surfitual plane

spiritual plane.

"(b) It shall be unlawful within such reasonable distance of any military camp, station, fort, post, cantonment, or training or mobilization place, where training under this act is being given, as the Secretary of National Defense may determine to be necessary to the protection of the health, morals, welfare of such persons who are receiving training under this act and shall designate and publish in general orders or bulletins, to establish or keep houses of ill fame. brothels, bawdy houses, or places of entertainment which are public nuisances, other like facilities detrimental to the health and morals of persons who are being trained under this act, or to receive or permit to be received for immoral purposes any person in any vehicle, place, structure, or building used for the purpose of lewdness, assignation, or prostitution within said distance determined by the Secretary of Defense or to knowingly rent, lease, or permit the use of any property for such purposes. Any person, corporation, partnership, or association violating any of the provisions of this subsection shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment for not more than 12 months, or both.

"(c) The sale of or dealing in, beer, wine, or any intoxicating liquors by any person in any post exchange, canteen, ship's store, or Army, Navy, or Marine transport or upon any premises used for military or naval purposes by the United States is hereby prohibited. The Secretary of Defense is authorized and directed to take appropriate action to carry out the provision of this subsection."

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the amendment that the provisions thereof are not germane to the provisions of this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Kansas desire to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. REES. Mr. Chairman, I call attention to the fact that the committee in charge of this bill approved practically all of the amendment I am submitting under what is known as the Towe bill. The remainder of this amendment was enacted by Congress in 1901.

Mr. VINSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. VINSON. May I say to the distinguished gentleman that the Towe bill was a training bill and had no military obligation. This bill is to build up an Army.

Mr. REES. That is an interesting observation from a very distinguished member of the committee. I see no real difference. Why not be practical. Is it not a fact that these boys under this bill are to go into training? I just do not see how you can say my amendment was needed for the 18-year-old boys you proposed to put into training camps and then suggest it is not needed for the 19-to-21-year-old boys under this bill

This measure has been talked about as a training bill, so a large group of young men could have training in the armed forces, in event they may be called later on. It is also mentioned as a sort of preparation bill, not for immediate emergency but in the event of an emergency later on. You also refer to it as an Army bill. My understanding is that you are putting these men in training for a year, or 2 years, we do not know what decision will be finally made. The House, by a definite decision, has said by its vote it should be 1 year. You may overrule the decision of the House and bring back a bill for 2 years' service. If this is a training bill, 1 year is enough. It has already been stated that even in European countries the period of service in peacetime is 1 year.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES. I yield again to the distinguished chairman of the committee who approved this language in the Towe bill.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. I understood the gentleman from Kansas was opposed to the Towe bill.

Mr. REES. That is not the question presently under consideration. Neither is the Towe bill. Please do not sidestep the issue. If the committee was for the proposal, then he should be for it now. In fact he should recommend it in this bill. We are presently talking about one feature of this legislation. If you are going to approve this bill, I think the chairman ought to accept this amendment and permit it to remain in the bill.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES. I am glad to yield to the gentleman.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Will the gentleman support the bill if this provision is in it?

Mr. REES. I am not sure of that. do not know what this bill will look like when this House is through with it. I am interested in putting safeguards in it where they are needed. There are a good many Members of this House wondering about this measure. The gentleman, in his opening presentation, seemed to indicate there may be an emergency. He wants the bill passed right away. Later he, himself, proposed an amendment that, as I understand it, says in substance the bill will not become effective until about the 1st of November of this year. I refer to the extra 90-day period of extension approved by the distinguished chairman. I am informed another amendment will be offered to postpone the effective date until January 1949.

In any event, I want this protective language in this bill. If you are going to have the bill enacted into law, it ought to have this important amendment in it. This amendment ought to have the support of the Members of the House. There should be no objection to it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is interested in hearing the observations of the gentleman from Kansas on the point of order. The gentleman from Kansas is now speaking on the merits of the amendment.

Mr. REES. Mr. Chairman, I do not see how a point of order could lie against this proposed amendment. It is within the broad scope of this legislation. Certainly, if you can pass a law to take these boys from their homes in peacetime without their consent, then you can provide for protection in this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman from California rise?

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. Mr. Chairman, may I be heard briefly on the point of order?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will be pleased to hear from the gentleman from California.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. Mr. Chairman, in another section of the bill on page 37, it is specifically stated that there may be a determination of the location of the camps. It seems to me this is directly along the same line.

Mr. FOLGER. Mr. Chairman, will the

gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman from North Carolina rise?

Mr. FOLGER. Mr. Chairman, I want to ask the gentleman from Kansas a question and call his attention to a matter which I think has something to do with making his amendment germane.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair cannot recognize the gentleman to engage in debate on the merits of the amendment, but the Chair will be pleased to hear the gentleman discuss the point of order.

Mr. FOLGER. Mr. Chairman, that is what I am addressing myself to.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina will state his observations.

Mr. FOLGER. In speaking of training, the bill states, "Provided further, That the number of persons who are serving on active duty for training purposes." If this is not a training bill, I do not know what it is.

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. PACE] rise?

Mr. PACE. Mr. Chairman, I would like to be heard on the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will be pleased to hear the gentleman.

Mr. PACE. Mr. Chairman, I respectfully submit that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas is germane to the purpose, intent, and policy of the bill. The bill proposes, not a system of volunteers but a plan of induction for taking young men from their homes and placing them in military-training camps. Certainly it is within the jurisdction of the Congress, where it invokes conscription for the assembling of great masses of young men in military-training camps, as this bill specifically provides, to prescribe the circumstances and conditions under which they shall be trained. I think it is significant, as has been mentioned, Mr. Chairman, that this same committee, in reporting out the so-called universal training bill, carried identically almost word for word the language of this amendment, showing that there is a policy and a need for setting up the circumstances under which these young men shall be trained. This amendment states that when these men are taken from their homes and from the moral influence of their own parents and are concentrated in military-training camps, there shall be thrown around them some degree of protection comparable with that which they enjoyed in their own homes before they were taken into service.

Mr. Chairman, I respectfully submit that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas is germane to the purposes, the policy, and the provisions of the program to be set up.

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. HAYS] rise?

Mr. HAYS. Mr. Chairman, I rise to make a brief observation.

Mr. Chairman, the bill contains a provision with reference to medical service to protect the health of these inductees. By the same token, the gentleman from Kansas offers an amendment to protect the health of these men. If the reference to medical service was germane, then the provision with reference to these surroundings is germane.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Kansas desire to be heard further?

Mr. REES. Just one thing further, Mr. Chairman:

Page 37, paragraph 9, it will be observed that authority is given to determine the location of such additional temporary installations as he may deem essential; to utilize and enlarge existing installations; to construct, install, and equip; and to complete the construction, installation, and equipment of buildings, structures, utilities, and appurtenances, including the necessary grading and removal, repair, or remodeling of existing structures and installations; giving all the authority with respect to the location of these camps. It seems to me that well within the provisions of this act can be included the provisions of this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. Case of South Dakota.) The Chair is ready to rule.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. ANDREWS] has made the point of order that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. REES] is not germane to the bill. Several of the Members who have spoken have called attention to other provisions in the bill. The Chair must remind the Committee that the provisions in the bill as reported by the committee were made in order by a special rule adopted by the House of Representatives. There may be pro-visions in the bill which would not be germane if offered as an amendment by individual Members, but are in order in the bill because they were made in order by the rule adopted by the House.

So every amendment offered must stand on its own bottom as to whether or not it is germane.

The Chair invites attention to the fact that the amendment includes such language as "It shall be unlawful to maintain certain institutions," and further on says, "Any person, corporation, partnership, or association violating any of the provisions of this subsection shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor" and so forth. In that respect it seems to the Chair that the amendment goes beyond the provisions of the bill, imposing penalties and sanctions on persons outside the armed forces.

Therefore, the Chair is constrained to sustain the point of order.

Mr. REES. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be modified by striking out beginning with the words "Any person, corporation, partnership"—

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair suggests that the gentleman prepare the amendment and offer it in the regular way.

Mr. REES. Mr. Chairman, I offer another amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. REES: At the end of line 12, page 23, add the following, and number succeeding sections according-ly:

"SEC. 8. The training under this act shall be administered and carried out on the highest possible moral, religious, and spiritual plane.

"(b) It shall be unlawful within such reasonable distance of any military camp, station, fort, post, cantonment, or training or mobilization place, where training under this act is being given, as the Secretary of National Defense may determine to be necessary to the protection of the health, morals, and welfare of such persons who are receiving training under this act and shall designate and publish in general orders or bulletins, to establish or keep houses of ill fame, brothels, bawdy houses, or places of entertainment which are public nuisances, or other like facilities detrimental to the health and morals of persons who are being trained under this act, or to receive or permit to be received for immoral purposes any person in any vehicle, place, structure, or ouilding used for the purpose of lewdness, assignation, or prostitution within said distance determined by the Secretary of Defense or to knowingly rent, lease, or permit the use of any property for such purposes.

"(c) The sale of or dealing in, beer, wine, or any intoxicating liquors by any person in any post exchange, canteen, ship's store, or Army, Navy, or Marine transport or upon any premises used for military or naval purposes by the United States is hereby prohibited. The Secretary of Defense is authorized and directed to take appropriate action to carry out the provisions of this subsection."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes in support of his amendment.

Mr. REES. Mr. Chairman, this great committee which brought this present legislation before the House saw fit at one time to approve it. It was part of the bill that was submitted by this committee.

Now, the only slim excuse that is given by one of the distinguished Members is that since the other bill was a so-called training bill for 18-year-old boys and older, that there is a difference with regard to training boys 19 years old and over. If they were right after giving consideration to that particular feature of the bill, if they were right in their judgment then they cannot reverse their judgment now and still be right, as I see it. In any event, we have this matter before this Committee for consideration.

Mr. SIKES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES. In just a moment. It is a matter for this Committee to determine. The legislation is here, whether or not you are willing to protect these boys who are in these training camps as provided under the terms of this amendment.

In 1917 the Congress passed an act which was a great deal more severe than this as far as that is concerned, in an attempt to protect the boys in these training camps.

This is an extremely important amendment and you are going to find out I think that it is going to be difficult to explain why you are not willing to protect these boys in these various camps throughout the country when you have a chance to do so. This is not a question of whether you believe in drinking or not, this is a question of whether you believe in protecting the boys against a number of things included in this proposal.

Mr. SIKES. Mr. Chairman, will the

gentleman yield?

Mr. REES. I am delighted to yield to my friend from Florida, who I am sure is familiar with this amendment, sympathetic to it, and I know he is for it.

Mr. SIKES. I am sure my distinguished friend wants to be fair and I would like to tell him that I am in sympathy with the purpose he has in mind.

Mr. REES. That helps a great deal.

I do appreciate his support.

Mr. SIKES. I wish the gentleman would point out, however, that in the training bill where the language the gentleman has sought to incorporate in this bill is already included the training program is set up for many hundreds of thousands of boys and young men most of whom are fresh out of high school. They will be in special encampments, not in military camps. They will not be in the service and the committee sought to establish safeguards around them which it did not feel were absolutely necessary to be included in a service bill which would bring in a relatively much smaller number of people and induct them into units already in existence.

I bring that up for the information of the gentleman. I am in sympathy with what he is trying to do.

Mr. REES. The committee thought there was something to be gained playing one against the other. I do not see anything especially different in the need to protect these young men in either instance.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES. I yield.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Can the gentleman explain to the Committee that the second paragraph of his amendment goes much further-

Mr. REES. Yes; that is right. Mr. WADSWORTH. Just a momentgoes much further than the original bill.

Mr. REES. I might explain to the Committee that that particular paragraph was passed by the Congress in 1901.

Mr. WADSWORTH. And was re-

Mr. REFS. No, not repealed. There was a tax act passed by Congress in 1933 in which an interpretation was given but not to the extent that it was re-pealed. I will explain that later. It is still on the statute books. The gentleman can look and find it for himself.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Is it not a fact that the gentleman's amendment would prevent a soldier of the United States getting a glass of beer in Germany?

Mr. RFFS. Oh, I do Lot think so.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Of course it would.

Mr. REES. Mr. Chairman, I call your attention to the report of the President's Commission on Universal Military Training entitled "A Program for National Defense."

That report made certain recommendations with regard to the responsibility of Congress toward trainees. It seems to me that if those recommendations are good with respect to trainees, then they are just as important with regard to men who come under the provisions of this bill. I quote from those recommenda-

We must admit at once that a serious moral problem is presented by the very removal of a boy of 18 from the normal influences of his home, church, school, and local community, and his comparative isolation in a camp with large numbers of other men under an entirely new and different environment.

We believe the key to this problem lies in the following directions:

(7) Limitation of the opportunities for the purchase by trainees of any alcoholic beverages, including beer, through (a) prohibiting the sale thereof to them on any military, naval, or other camp reservation, or in any part and property of the company of the co post exchange, ship's store, or canteen, (b) declaring "off-limits" to trainees all taverns, taprooms, and similar facilities whose principal business is selling alcoholic beverages, (c) soliciting the assistance of local communities in this program, and (d) making it a Federal crime knowingly to sell such beverages to any person in training.

The ages of trainees, as defined in the Towe bill-H. R. 4278-are from 18 up to 20

(3) No person, corporation, partnership, or association, or agency shall sell, give, or in any way supply any intoxicating liquors to any trainee in training in the National Security Training Corps. Any person, corporation, partnership, or association or agency violating any of the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment for not more than 12 months,

In H. R. 6401 you are drafting 19- and 20-year-olds. Both of these ages would be protected by law in their own States against the sale of alcoholic beverages. If you draft boys under age, you owe them all the protection which the President's Commission recommended for trainees, whom your own bill defines as 18- and 19-year-olds.

Furthermore the draft bill as it passed the Senate-S. 2655-has in it a provision for enlisting 18-year-olds voluntarily and training them along with the Regular Army. Should this provision prevail-and we hope the House conferees will resist it-you would have trainees. exactly the class for whom the President's Commission recommended all these safeguards, to protect.

With regard to the third section of my amendment and to which the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] has seriously objected, this is the text of the law now in section 1350, title 10, United States Code, passed by Congress in 1910, dealing with the Army and is as follows:

No. 1350. Sale of intoxicating liquors: The sale of or dealing in beer, wine, or any intoxicating liquors by any person in any post exchange or canteen or Army transport or exchange of canteen of Army transport of upon any premises used for military pur-poses by the United States, is prohibited. The Secretary of War is directed to carry the provisions of this section into full force and effect. (February 2, 1901, ch. 192, No. 38, 31 Stat. 758.)

This law was nullified by the Army's accepting the definition of Congress in a tax law passed in 1933, to the effect that 3.2 beer was nonintoxicating. The theory is that the 1933 law being of later date, superseded the 1901 act as above quoted, so the act was never repealed, but an interpretation placed by the Treasury Department nullified it. I should also add that the 1901 law applied only in areas actually being used for military purposes.

There is also the acute problem of the immediately surrounding territory. In the absence of prohibitory statutes, various kinds of taverns and unnecessary joints of that kind have sprung up in the immediate vicinities of these places.

The 1917 law gave authority to set up zones in the phrase "in or near military camps." I am informed that some miles in width were set up around the camps under this authority and the courts upheld them against cases brought by irresponsible tavern keepers.

In this connection, it might be well to remind you of the statement made by General Marshall regarding these taverns which were hastily built in the neighborhood of World War II draft camps almost before the camps themselves were in existence, and to the detriment of organizations like the YMCA and the Salvation Army and the WCTU and other organizations which were trying to set up recreation centers and "cookie jars" there: Here is what General Marshall, now Secretary of State, said:

Here we have on the one side a sordid business for the accumulation of money, and on the other the interest of every parent in the United States who has a son in the Army, not to mention the responsibility of the War Department to develop an Army of the highquality. This situation must be brought under control before it grows serious.

Unfortunately it was not brought under control, and the sordid business, to which General Marshall directs attention, flourished to the detriment of the men and boys in the Army camps, as well as their families. This was not the fault of the boys. It was the fault of men and women who failed in their duty to provide decent protection against an unnecessary, sordid situation.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kansas has expired.

For what purpose does the gentleman from Georgia rise?

Mr. PACE. In support of the amend-

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto close in 6 minutes.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Was not the gentleman from Georgia recognized?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair asked for what purpose the gentleman rose. The gentleman from New York [Mr. Andrews] was on his feet, but the Chair and him he gave prior recognition to the chairman of the committee.

The gentleman from New York.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto close in 5 minutes.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Pace] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. PACE. Mr. Chairman, those who have attended the meetings of the House for the last few days will be compelled to confess that there are serious misgivings on the part of many Members as to the advisability of the pending legislation. I find that the same is true in every part of this country. The mothers and fathers all over this country are concerned. I do not think they object to their boys' serving their country when really needed, but they are concerned about the circumstances under which they will be trained and under which they will serve. When a boy volunteers for the armed service with his parents' consent, regardless of age, then he and the parents accept the conditions as they find them.

It is quite different under legislation of this character, where without the consent of the father or mother, a representative of the Government comes and knocks on the door and tells them: "I want your boy 12 months or 2 years; I am going to take him out from under the moral influence which you have exercised over him for the last 19 years; I am going to throw him into camp with all kinds, from all sections."

If it were my boy, and that is the only way I can look at the boys of other fathers and mothers, it seems to me I would ask: "Well, are you going to try to help carry on the training that I have given him? Are you going to try to protect as far as you can the moral principles which I taught him? Are you going to try to keep him away as much as you can from the temptations that I have tried to guard him against?"

Is that so bad? Is that wrong when we are here about to vote to go and take that son? The least we can do is to throw up such safeguards as reasonable practices will permit.

We are asking no more in the adoption of this amendment than has been done in the past. It has been proven to be practicable, and the most I can say is if you write this amendment into the bill, when it becomes law there will be at least a little consolation to those mothers and fathers whose sons must go to training, whose sons must meet new surroundings and, on the whole, the mothers and fathers of this Nation, in my opinion, will find more acceptable the action of the Congress which is now contemplated.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Chairman, when I made my motion there were four Members seeking recognition. I wish to modify that request to permit those four gentlemen to speak for 1 minute.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that there were five Members standing.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Then I will modify my motion that they be permitted to proceed for 1 minute.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I object, Mr. Chair-

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Then I withdraw the motion.

Mr. BRYSON. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BRYSON. Has it not been the rule, when such a motion was put, that the time would be equally divided between the Members standing?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understood the motion to close debate in 5 minutes, and there were five Members standing when the gentleman was recognized on the amendment.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. Mr Chairman, a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. I appreciate the statement just made by the Chairman, but I do think that, if the Chairman will let his mind go back, he will recognize the fact that he had already said to the gentleman from Georgia that he might be recognized, so that the motion made by the gentleman from New York actually applied to the time subsequent to that.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that at the time he recognized the gentleman from Georgia for 5 minutes there was no objection made.

The Chair will state that those Members who desire to extend their remarks in the RECORD at this point may do so at this time.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. Mr. Chairman, I will support this amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. REES]. It would do much to relieve the concern of the parents of the young men who might be drafted under the bill now before the House. gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Pace] has stated the situation. I will not repeat his arguments. I add the following: Germany was a nation which made liquor freely available to the young men in her armies; we have twice defeated Germany. Italy subscribed to similar principles, and the attitude of that nation toward vice included legalization, and state-supervised bordellos; and Italy has twice within my lifetime come out rather badly in armed competition with the clean-living young men of America. France's code on the issues involved in this amendment might possibly coincide with the opinions of Members who will vote against it, and we have twice had to put American men into uniform to save France. Finally, the protections desired by this amendment were the protections given the soldiers of the United States in World War I, and while I may be slightly prejudiced on that subject, I thought the American soldiers did pretty well in World War I, in competition with soldiers from nations which would not approve of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas. I say again, Mr. Chairman, that I will vote for the amendment.

Mr. MILLER of Connecticut. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Connecticut?

There was no objection.

Mr. MILLER of Connecticut. Mr. Chairman, it is unfortunate that time on this amendment has been limited to 5 minutes, I minute for each of only 5 Members. I make this brief observation. I have tried over the years to assist many veterans in the preparation of their claims for disability compensation. Many times it has been heartbreaking to receive a report from the Veterans' Bureau that the claimants disability was due to misconduct and under the law no compensation can be paid.

It is my wish that we protect the men trained under this program if possible from ever facing such a tragic situation as I have referred to. I urge the adoption of the Rees amendment.

Mr. FOGARTY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the Record.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Rhode Island?

There was no objection.

Mr. FOGARTY. Mr. Chairman, we are advised that this is to be the last week of activity prior to adjournment or recess. In view of this, I am particularly interested in knowing what is to become of the National Land Policy Act, H. R. 6054. This bill, as you know, calls for a policy of permanent conservation of all our basic agricultural land and water resources.

We have listened to much talk on the necessity for sound conservation and I am sure that we are more or less agreed that it is really needed. However, unless this talk is reduced to action our national resources will continue to face steady depletion. Without an adequate program of conservation our food production resources face the constant threat of dwindling below that standard which guarantees the physical and economic well-being of all the American people. When we stop to realize the enormity of this fact, the importance of such a program is forcefully brought to our attention.

I have been in touch with most of the groups who are interested in conservation in my own State of Rhode Island. Without exception they are strongly in favor of a National Land Policy Act. The Rhode Island Wildlife Association, which is composed of groups and individuals vitally interested in all aspects of conservation, had this to say about the bill:

The history of the development of every nation is written in the landscape. * * *
Not until this Nation adopts a policy based on the wise use of our living resources will we be able to begin to check the forces of our own destruction. Our soil is the source of our very existence; it is the basis of our whole social and economic structure. * * We firmly believe that H. R. 6054 recognizes these truths and furnishes the necessary measures to erase the writing on our landscape. It provides the requirements for a sound policy for wise land use necessary to stabilize national economy and to insure

Why, then, in the face of all this necessity should the Republican leadership refuse to take direct action. The hearings on this bill have been completed but to date nothing is being done toward bringing the bill out. I, personally, would like to have the opportunity to vote for this bill here on the floor and I am sure that the majortly of you hold the same thought. I am afraid that we are not going to have that opportunity, however, for it is my opinion that this bill is going the way the rest of the beneficial legislation has gone under the leadership of this Congress.

Mr. ALLEN of Louisiana. I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. ALLEN of Louisiana. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Rees amendment to throw around these young men to be drafted in the service under this bill the best moral, physical, and spiritual protection possible. The fathers and mothers of these young men want their boys protected, as much so as possible, from the pitfalls that are thrown their way. They want their sons to come back from the camps as clean and strong as when they went We are living in a day when our young men are subjected to temptations and evils which many of us escaped in part and everyone knows that evil men and women prey upon these young men in camps.

It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, that the least we could do in enacting this legislation is to try to minimize the opportunity which such evil men and women might have to debauch these young men. We owe that to their parents. We owe that to the young men. We owe that to the young men.

The evils which this amendment seeks to prevent are destructive and do not help in building the finest manhood and character. Men meeting the great issues of life in this hour of destiny need the strongest bodies, the clearest minds and resolute hearts to cope with a world situation making this legislation necessary.

Many of these young men will come from homes of the highest Christian teaching. Is it not the obligation of the Nation to clothe them with every protection possible? I regret, Mr. Chairman, that debate was shut off on such an important question. But let me appeal to you to take the proper steps to do something about this problem now. I hope the committee will give this great question the proper consideration. This amendment should have your approval.

Mr. BRYSON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. BRYSON. Mr. Chairman, I am not one of the Members of Congress who has resorted to weakening amendments in an effort to pass a selective-service act. It has been my intention all along to vote for the pending bill, H. R. 6401. I sincerely hope and earnestly urge that protection be thrown around the young men who are to be called from their homes to military duty by minimizing or eliminating the temptations so often thrust upon them to become users of intoxicating drinks. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas IMr. REES], is certainly in the right direction. And I call upon each of you to support that feature of this extremely important and too long delayed measure so vitally needed for the preservation of our free Government.

This amendment-the Rees amendment-would reenact provisions of law which were enacted in 1917 and operative in World War I. The law of 1917 provided that the President of the United States, as Commander in Chief of the Army is authorized to make such regulations governing the prohibition of alcoholic liquors in or near military camps and to the officers and enlisted men of the Army as he may from time to time deem necessary or advisable: "Provided, That no person, corporation, partnership, or association shall sell, supply, or have in his or its possession any intoxicating or spirituous liquors at any military station, cantonment, camp, fort, post, officers' or enlisted men's club, which is being used at the time for military purposes under this act, but the Secretary of War may make regulations permitting the sale and use of intoxicating liquors for medicinal purposes. It shall be unlawful to sell any intoxicating liquor, including beer, ale, or wine, to any officer or member of the military forces while in uniform, except as herein provided. Any person, corporation, partnership or association violating the provisions of this section or the regulations made thereunder shall, unless otherwise punishable under the Articles of War, be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment for not more than 12 months, or both." Under this law of 1917, the Secretary of War did fix zones of about 5 miles in width for both alcohol and vice (which was included in another section of the 1917 law). As a result of this policy adopted both by Congress and by the War Department, Secretary of War Newton D. Baker said, such a physically sound Army was produced as never before had been known in the history of the world.

When World War II was about to break upon us, even before the draft camps themselves were built or finished, taverns and honky-tonks moved into their immediate neighborhood. Gen. George C. Marshall, then Chief of Staff of the Army, was greatly concerned. He said:

Here we have on the one side a sordid business for the accumulation of money, and on the other the interest of every parent in the United States who has a son in the Army, not to mention the responsibility of the War Department to develop an Army of the highest quality. This situation must be brought under control before it grows serious.

Great efforts were made to obtain the voluntary cooperation of local communities. Some communities took this responsibility seriously, and after a number of them had voted dry and the chairman of Senate Military Affairs Committee, Senator Morris Sheppard, of Texas, who had piloted the draft bill safely through, had introduced a bill to reenact legislation similar to that of 1917, the brewers made a specious effort to clean up some of these taverns-those in the vicinity of communities that had voted dry or were preparing to vote dry. But many communities not only failed to cooperate but actually cooperated with the taverns in exploiting the draftees. And the brewers went about from camp to camp and staged beer parties, with the consent of camp commanders.

A bill introduced in the House by the chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee which set up a zone for vice similar to that provided for in the 1917 legislation passed the Senate, after having passed the House, on June 30, 1941, and was signed by the President a few days later and became law. All this time we were not at war. It was not until December 7, 1941, that the Japs struck at Pearl Harbor. But Congress continued to temporize with the Sheppard bill and the Senate finally sent it back to committee.

Meanwhile, in May 1941 the Brewers Digest joyfully announced:

One of the finest things that could have happened to the brewing industry was the insistence by high-ranking Army officers to make beer available at Army camps. * * *

The opportunity presented to the brewing industry by this measure is so obvious that it is superfluous to go into it in detail. * *

Here is a chance for brewers to cultivate a taste for beer in millions of young men who will eventually constitute the largest beer-consuming section of our population.

The brewers got their chance, and presently they were using up our scarce tin making tin cans to ship beer in badly needed space on planes over to countries where there were plenty of alcoholic beverages, but no milk and no airplane parts and tank equipment, the latter of which were badly needed by some of our young men in uniform in the north African campaign and elsewhere. They tied up freight traffic to ship Milwaukee beer to Maryland and New York and Pennsylvania which had beer of their own, and later on the War Food Board had trouble with them when they insisted on using up grain and rice that were needed for food.

The public and Congress were told that the purpose of putting beer in the camps was to keep the young men in them so that they would not be drinking in worse places, or drinking stronger beverages. But, when they found Congress was not going to interfere with the beer, presently the Army began giving shots of whisky to fliers returning from training flights or combat missions.

Either the camp beer led to the drinking of stronger alcoholic beverages in those places it was supposed to keep our soldiers out of, or the beer itself was not so harmless as it was represented to be. because we now hear that the Veterans Administration has a hospitalization problem connected with alcoholism in World War II veterans that is going from bad to worse. A Washington dispatch published in the Chicago Daily News on November 21, 1947, stated:

ALCOHOLICS BURDEN VETERAN HOSPITALS

Washington.—Veterans' Administration hospitals are being burdened seriously, and, in most cases, needlessly, with alcoholics.

Thousands of ex-servicemen who drink excessively because they enjoy whisky—not because of physical or mental complica-tions—occupy beds needed for men with more legitimate allments.

There are 17,000 veterans awaiting hospitalization, though not all of them require it immediately.

The alcoholics are legitimate patients in the sense that the large increase in their numbers has caused VA to recognize alco-holism as an "official disease."

holism as an "official disease."
Dr. Paul R. Hawley, VA medical director, who says the problem "is increasing by leaps and bounds," estimates that VA will treat 10,000 alcoholic cases this year.
There were 6,459 last year and 3,529 in 1945.
About two-thirds of this year's cases, Dr. Hawley estimates, will be uncomplicated—those without any demonstrable mental illeges the rest do have an eccompanying men. ness; the rest do have an accompanying mental disease.

All are classified as neuropsychopathic cases.

The average cost to VA of maintaining one such patient is $8.70 a day. Thus the expense of caring for the two-thirds group, who stay anywhere from 5 to 30 days, runs into thousands of dollars.

Only a comparative few of the alcoholic cases have a service-connected mental disability, according to Dr. Hawley.

VA hospitals are finding that the great majority of the patients entering with cases of uncomplicated alcoholism stay only long enough to sober up and then demand their release. They cannot be detained against their will, so VA can do little for them.

Using standard treatments for the more serious alcoholic cases that may be hospitalized as long as a year, VA tries hard to help them. But Dr. H. J. Tompkins, assistant chief of the neuropsychiatric division, points out that there is no known cure.

As for the two-thirds group, who refuse lengthy treatment, Dr. Hawley lays much of the blame for their numbers on local com-munities. He contends that the latter are not doing enough to help their alcoholics

As soon as they find an alcoholic is a veteran, they ship him to a VA hospital.

Also, Dr. Hawley charges, too many judges are giving alcoholic veterans a choice be treatment in a VA hospital and a jail sentence.

So then this is the picture of the actual results of putting beer in our camps in World War II. Sick veterans, who could be helped, are being crowded out of veterans' hospitals by the great and ever-increasing number of alcoholics who came out of that policy in World War II.

By reason of the circumstances hereinabove referred to many of our church and educational officials as well as parents and other individuals, have protested against compulsory military training since they fear the safety of young men to be inducted because of the great temptations to drink.

We are spending thousands upon thousands of dollars which will soon run up into millions and millions. And our actual reserve of battle-trained men upon whom we might have to fall back in case of actual total war, is not so strong as we thought. Because we did not take any proper precautions to protect them against the saboteurs who are as bad as or worse than the Communists-the brewers, distillers, and tavern-keepers who persuaded somebody high up in authority to let them put beer in our camps.

Now we are again being asked to draft young men, many of whom will be only 19 and 20 years old. If this bill is accepted and becomes law, we will also be setting up training camps for 18-yearold volunteers right along with the Regular Army. We can take time by the forelock and avoid a repetition of those conditions which so aroused our citizens, and for which we are now paying so dearly, by providing in this bill proper protections against what General Mar-shall called "a sordid business for the accumulation of money."

If we do not do this, how many of these young men, on whom we are relying to form our permanent Reserve force. will be capable and ready for duty when and if the real call comes?

Mr. HAYS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. HAYS. Mr. Chairman, there should be no question about the adoption of the first two paragraphs of the amendment. They will give assurance to the families of young men inducted into the services that Congress expects the military authorities to make a sincere effort to maintain as decent and wholesome an environment as possible around the camps. The proponents of the amendment do not expect the authorities to do more than reduce to a minimum the hazards to health and morals that are incident to military service, but the families, and the men themselves, are entitled to that degree of protection. Individual character is not maintained by external controls. Men must be fortified from within, but our official action in recognizing the evils enumerated in the amendment and equipping the Department to deal with them will inspire greater confidence in this legislation.

Mr. PFEIFER. Mr. Chairman, I am heartily in favor of the amendment of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. REES]. I believe it is germane because we are duty-bound in the drafting of the young men of our country to provide them with that which is necessary to maintain mental and physical well-being. It certainly becomes our obligation to make sure that the camp surroundings are such that will not injure the morals of these young men. Therefore such restrictions provided for in this amendment are essential and therefore germane. It also gives solace and consolation to the parents of these young men in knowing that a guiding hand is constantly at their side as a result of this amendment. We must never forget that these boys become our charges and we must look at the whole picture as if all these boys were our own sons. When one looks at this picture from this viewpoint one cannot help to vote for this amendment, for all of us surely are interested in seeing that these boys are returned home as pure and innocent as they have left.

Insofar as the restriction on the sale of beer is concerned, I believe it is going too far. A glass of beer with meals or as a refreshing drink during off hours does no harm but serves at times a useful purpose. I therefore am in favor of deleting this paragraph from the proposed amendment.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I inquire as to whether or not this amendment may be divided and an opportunity given to the members of the committee to vote separately with respect to the first paragraph and separately with respect to the second paragraph.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the parliamentary inquiry. The request comes too late, Mr. Chairman. The amendment has been considered as a whole, and the request to separate it should have been made earlier.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that under the rules of the House a division of a question may be asked for at any time, if the question is divisible, before the vote.

The Chair has examined the amendment and notices that it is in three paragraphs labeled subparagraph (a), subparagraph (b), and subparagraph (c), each one of them being substantive in form, and each one of them could be voted on separately, if it is so demanded.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, a further parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WADSWORTH. May I ask that a separate vote be taken on the second paragraph as contrasted with the third paragraph?

The CHAIRMAN. If the gentleman so demands.

Mr. WADSWORTH. The first paragraph is not part of my motion.

The CHARMAN. If the gentleman demands, a separate vote can be taken on the second paragraph. The vote will come on the first paragraph first.

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will

Mr. REED of New York. Do I understand that we are now limited to 5 minutes or less on this very important amendment dealing with the welfare and the morals of the boys of this country?

The CHAIRMAN. Of course, that is not a matter within the control of the Chair. The committee, by vote, has determined the amount of time to be allocated on this particular amendment.

The question is on the first part of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. JENNINGS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that each portion of the amendment be again read by the Clerk before it is voted on.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the first portion of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 8. (a) The training under this act shall be administered and carried out on the highest possible moral, religious, and spiritual plane.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the first portion of the amendment.

The first portion of the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the second portion of the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

(b) It shall be unlawful within such reasonable distance of any military camp, stafort, post, cantonment, or training or mobilization place, where training under this act is being given, as the Secretary of National Defense may determine to be necessary to the protection of the health, morals, and welfare of such persons who are receiv-ing training under this act and shall designate and publish in general orders or bulletins, to establish or keep houses of ill fame, brothels, bawdy houses, or places of enter-tainment which are public nuisances, or other like facilities detrimental to the health and moral's of persons who are being trained under this act, or to receive or permit to be received for immoral purposes any person in any vehicle, place, structure, or building used for the purpose of lewdness, assignation, or prostitution within said distance determined by the Secretary of Defense or to knowingly rent, lease, or permit the use of any property for such purposes. Any person, corporation partnership, or association vio-lating any of the provisions of this subsec-tion shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment for not more than 12 months, or both.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the second portion of the amendment.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. FHILLIPS of California and Mr. O'HARA) there wereayes 98, noes 3.

So the second portion of the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the third portion of the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

(c) The sale of, or dealing in, beer, wine, or any intoxicating liquors by any person in any post exchange, canteen, ship's store, or Army, Navy, or marine transport or upon any premises used for military or naval pur-poses by the United States is hereby pro-hibited. The Secretary of Defense is au-thorized and directed to take appropriate action to carry out the provisions of this

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will

Mr. EBERHARTER. Would that language pertain to the camps and the soldiers already over in Europe?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has heard the amendment read. The Chair cannot interpret the amendment for the gentleman.

The question is on the third portion of the amendment.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Hoffman) there were-ayes 57, noes 55.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chairman appointed as tellers, Mr. Andrews of New York, and Mr. REES.

The Committee again divided; and the tellers reported that there were-ayes 54, noes 72.

So the third portion of the amendment was rejected.

Mr. POWELL. Mr. Chairman, I offer preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Powell moves that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with the enacting clause stricken out.

Mr. POWELL. Mr. Chairman, speaking on this preferential motion, I wish to indicate in closing a few things.

First, we are not going to have a vote here today. This brings our debate under the 5-minute rule to an end. There is not going to be a vote because we will ask for the reading of the engrossed copy of the bill. Therefore, I am asking that all those who supported the amendments which I compiled shall withdraw them except the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BENDER], who is going to advocate the abolition of the poll tax for members of the armed forces; the gentlewoman from California [Mrs. DougLas] has an FEPC amendment; and the gentleman from New York [Mr. Isacson] an antidiscrimination amendment.

Let us not feel that because we have passed the Shafer amendment that it will be in the final bill when it is returned from the other body. The conferees have already planned to take it out.

Finally, I would like to announce that I have the pledge of a couple of men in the other body that they will filibuster the conference report on Saturday. Senator WHERRY has just announced that if there is a filibuster the Senate will adjourn, nevertheless, even if the draft bill is not reported out. Therefore, I am happy to announce that the probability now is that there will be no draft. If such is true I will be very happy. At any rate I wish to thank all my colleagues who supported me so ably. It was a great fight. The brass hats thought they could ram this down our throats. We licked them.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Powell].

The motion was rejected. Mr. ISACSON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which is at the desk:

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Isacson: On page 22, line 18, after the period, insert the following: "Provided further, That there shall be no segregation or discrimination on account of race or color or religion."

Mr. ISACSON. Mr. Chairman, both Democrats and Republicans have admitted on this floor today that the armed forces of the United States are practicing discrimination, segregation, and Jim Crow against the Negro people.

It has been argued that General Eisenhower supports segregation and Jim Crow. Well, I do not.

The amendment that I have offered will end, once and for all, the practice of racial discrimination, of segregation, and of Jim Crow in the armed forces of the United States.

Mr. Chairman, there are some in whose hearts there are festering sores of bias and bigotry and prejudice.

There are some whose souls deny the brotherhood of men, regardless of race or color or religion, and their equality before God. There are some whose minds, in some distorted manner, cling to the false and unscientific Nazi doctrine of white supremacy, of the inferiority or superiority of certain races.

My amendment cannot purify such hearts. My amendment cannot cleanse such souls. My amendment cannot improve the minds to which I have referred. A long process of education and reeducation is necessary for that purpose.

What my amendment can do is to establish by force of statute and by force of law that bias and bigotry be not translated into the practice of discrimination or segregation or of Jim Crow in the armed forces of the United States.

Very soon the two old parties will convene in convention, and when they convene in convention there will be a great to do made about a plank in their platform to end discrimination. Similar planks have existed in the past, in both the Democratic Party platform and the Republican Party platform. The place to enact a real plank against discrimination—the place to enact a real plank against segregation—the place to enact a real plank against Jim Crow is not in the halls of a convention, but right here on the floor of Congress where it will have meaning and where it will be enacted into the law of this country.

If the Democrats and Republicans do not vote for my amendment-let them not flock to Philadelphia and mouth their hypocritical protestations against XCIV--548 discrimination, and with tongue in cheek, support a meaningless resolution against discrimination.

Now is the time and this is the place to end discrimination and Jim Crow. This is the time and the place to stand up and be counted.

Yes, soon, on the streets of New York and in the cities of this Nation, Democratic and Republican politicians will by vying with each other in phony pious protestations of their friendship for the Negro.

You have seen it happen before. You will see it happen again. Once more the political candidates of the Democratic and Republican Parties will try to outshout each other that their very best friend is the Negro.

They cannot promise too much for the Negro—just before election time. They seem to think that the Negro, like themselves, will forget those promises as soon as the votes are counted.

But the Negro people want performance, not promise.

They want action on my amendment which will eliminate discrimination, segregation, and Jim Crow; and assure them full civil rights.

The armed services of the United States discriminated against Negroes before the war. They discriminated all through the war. They are still discriminating.

When the Governor of one of our States—New Jersey—under the provisions of a new constitution, attempted to abolish segregation in the National Guard, the Secretary of the Army, Kenneth C. Royall, wrote to him that "for the present" the Jersey National Guard could have nonsegregation but that in the Regular Army and all other National Guard units the old Jim Crow policy would continue "in the interest of national defense."

National defense of what? Do Mr. Truman's Cabinet officers believe that democracy can be defended with a policy borrowed from Adolf Hitler's book? And does Mr. Truman himself believe that? If he does not, why does not he make his orders stick? He has the authority of Commander in Chief of all the armed forces. He could abolish Jim Crow overnight, as the New Jersey Governor did, if he really wanted to.

The answer is that the President of the United States is talking doubletalk. He is bidding for Negro votes on the one hand, and on the other quietly assuring the white-supremacy boys that there is no need for alarm because nothing drastic is going to happen.

Now let us compare Mr. Truman's policy of strong talk and weak action with the Democratic platform of 1944, upon which he was elected:

We believe that racial and religious minorities have the right to live, develop, and vote equally with all citizens and share the rights that are guaranteed by our Constitution. Congress should exert its full constitutional powers to protect those rights.

Fine words. But the Democratic Party had its tongue in its cheek when these words were written and adopted. There was an election coming up then, too. When the Republican politicians sat down to write their platform in 1944, they went the Democrats one better. Here is what the Republicans said:

We pledge an immediate congressional inquiry to ascertain the extent to which mistreatment, segregation, and discrimination against Negroes who are in the armed forces are impairing morale and efficiency, and the adoption of corrective legislation. We pledge the establishment by Federal legislation of a permanent Fair Employment Practices Commission.

That statement proves either that the Republican Party cannot remember a pledge for more than 2 years or that the pledge was phony when it was written, or both. For the fact is that the Republicans have controlled Congress since 1946, and where is the permanent FEPC? Where is the corrective legislation to end discrimination in the armed forces?

The Republicans have done no better than the Democrats, because there is no real difference between them.

Last December Grant Reynolds, chairman of the Committee Against Jim Crow in Military Training and Service, went to Washington with a distinguished delegation of Negroes to ask that Jim Crow provisions be stricken from the universal military training bill.

The chairman of the Armed Services Committee told the delegation that he was in favor of "limited segregation, in keeping with Army policy."

Mr. Reynolds commented:

If this is a sample of Republican thinking, then it is well that Negroes know it now.

Mr. Reynolds was right. You can search the Republican record from now until election day, and you will find nothing to show that the Republican Congress has tried to carry out its platform pledge. That pledge was a lie when it was written.

Let me now cite an example of Democratic double talk that affects the lives of the entire Negro population of New York City.

In June 1946 the Department of Justice took what seemed to be a very brave step. It filed a complaint against some of the biggest banks and insurance companies of the Nation, charging them with conspiring to keep New York Negroes in ghettoes—and very high-priced ghettoes, too—by refusing mortgage loans to Negroes and by putting pressure on landlords to keep Negroes or Spanish-speaking tenants out of so-called white areas.

These un-American activities were undertaken, the Department charged, through the Mortgage Conference of Greater New York. The members of the conference included such leading banks as the National City Bank, the Chase National Bank, and the Manufacturers Trust Co., and such big insurance companies as Mutual and Prudential.

It may have been only a coincidence that the complaint was filed just a few months before the congressional election of November 1946. J. Francis Hayden, head of the Antitrust Division's local office, promised that the case would come to trial by last fall.

But 20 months have now passed. The case has not come to trial. The attorney in charge said recently that it may not be possible to act before early summer, or perhaps later. This delay is very gratifying to the mortgage conference—whose attorney, incidentally, is none other than A. A. Berle, Jr., the head of the so-called Liberal Party in New York—but it is bad news for the Negroes who are jammed into the worst and most expensive housing in the city.

Even New York City can hardly be proud of its record on Negroes. In many ways we are following the pattern of the South.

How often do you hear the voice of a Negro telephone operator?

How often is your check cashed by a Negro bank teller?

Where, outside of Harlem, do you find Negro pharmacists, Negro hotel clerks, Negro secretaries, Negro insurance agents, Negro mechanics, and Negro teachers?

How many railroads employ Negro ticket agents?

Few of the white people in New York know what most of the Negroes know—that Jim Crow trains leave Pennsylvania station every day. There are Jim Crow sections on all of the reserved-seat trains to the South.

It took Billy Rose to tell New York that when Negroes go to the box offices of the legitimate theaters, there are no orchestra seats available. And anybody knows that Negroes are not wanted at the tables of the better restaurants.

Mayor O'Dwyer could do something about these conditions if he wished to. He evidently finds it more expedient to play the role of the double-talking Democrats.

A couple of years ago the Research Institute of America made a survey that "flabbergasted" a lot of big sales executives. The researchers investigated the buying habits of a cross section of Negroes in Washington, Baltimore, and Philadelphia. Then they compared the preferences of the Negroes with the preferences of white families in two other cities, Milwaukee and Omaha.

It came as quite a shock that the Negroes used more Maxwell House coffee than any other brand, more Gold Medal flour, more Aunt Jemima pancake mix, more Red Heart dog food, more Colgate's toothpaste. In Washington the favorite soap among Negroes was Ivory, in Baltimore Octagon, and in Philadelphia Fels Naptha. The most popular cigarette was Camels, the most popular liquor blended whisky—though it turned out that Negroes drank just a little more Scotch per capita than the whites did.

Evidently it had never occurred to the great geniuses of American merchandising that there is no real difference between Negroes and whites—except that the Negroes have always got a raw deal from the whites and the two old political parties.

I find no evidence today that either the Democratic or Republican Party can recognize the simple truth that the Negro deserves equal treatment.

I look above me as I speak to you and I see the drab grayness of the ceiling of this Chamber. Then I turn to my right and hanging on the wall I see the beautiful painting of the Father of our Country, George Washington. That portrait is not composed of just one color; that portrait has red, and blue, and green, and gray. It has all the pigments, and the shades, and the tints of which an artist is capable. When all those colors were put together there was achieved a masterpiece, a portrait, a painting of which we are all proud.

So with our Army and so with our civilization-it takes a combination of all colors in complete harmony to achieve perfection.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, in spite of the harsh words and, to my mind, the unjust accusations and insinuations made by the gentleman from New York, I will concede

Mr. ISACSON. Mr. Chairman, will

the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Not at the moment. I will ask the gentleman something in a minute.

I concede his sincerity, his loyalty to this country, and his lofty purpose; but I think he does not know just what will happen if we follow through on the theories he seems to be supporting.

The gentleman spoke of that portrait of Washington which hangs on the wall to my right. He called attention to the many colors shown and how all blended together into a beautiful whole, and I assume from his illustration that he believed that, if there was a mingling of the blood of the black, the brown, the yellow, and the white races, the result would be something admirable, beautiful, desirable, and an improvement upon the human beings who now populate the

But one or two things he forgot. One was that the background in the portrait and which sets forth the majestic figure of the father of his country so well was not a mixture of colors, but that the various colors each retained its own characteristics, reflecting light and shadow in its own way.

Taken as a whole, with each color playing its part, the result is magnificent. It is magnificent and beautiful and satisfying to the eye because the artist had the power of selection and the ability to apply each in its proper place.

Had all of those colors been put in one pile on the artist's palette and then, with a wide sweep of the arm, thrown against the canvas, the result would have been something like what we will get if ever the practice of a mingling of the blood of the races prevails in this or any other land.

Nor was there in that commanding figure of Washington a blending of the blood of various separate and distinct races.

The gentleman referred to Washington and to the Negroes who fought side by side with him through the eight long years of bloody war. He made no mention of the fact that in Washington's day and in Washington's household the Negro was a slave.

He made no mention of the fact that for many long years the opportunity of the Negro to do other than serve was denied him, that his ambition was throttled, that he was treated many times kindly but nevertheless always as an inferior.

The gentleman said nothing of that bitter war wherein the blood of hundreds of thousands of white men was shed to make the Negro free. He said nothing of the cost the white man paid in that war to throw open the gates of opportunity to the Negro.

He said nothing of the fact-perhaps he did not know-that in my home, in my town, in my district and State, schools, churches, places of public amusement, bathing beaches, and means of transportation are open to people of all races and creeds-that there is no discrimination-yet he would deny freedom of choice to conscripted men and by law force one upon another by his amendment.

I would be the last to deny to the Negro, or to any other man, equality of opportunity. In my humble opinion, because white men were responsible for bringing Negroes to this country, the Negro should be given, on every possible occasion, in every possible way, more than equality of opportunity—and that because it was so long denied him.

In my humble judgment, however sincere the gentleman from New York [Mr. Isacson] may be, the thing he advocates will lead ultimately not only to the destruction of this Republic but to the destruction of our race—I mean the human race as it exists today.

The gentleman wants, does he not, not only equality of opportunity, but he is talking about the intermingling of the races?

Mr. ISACSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Yes, but just for a question. That is what you want, is it not?

Mr. ISACSON. I asked—— Mr. HOFFMAN. Well, are you or are

Mr. ISACSON. I asked the gentleman to yield for a question, not for him to ask me one.

Mr. HOFFMAN. No; I yielded to the gentleman to ask him a question. You answer that question. I will ask it again. My question is whether or not you are for the intermingling of the races.

Mr. ISACSON. The intermingling of races is a personal matter for the individuals concerned and not the proper subject for legislation. Now, will the gentleman answer a question for me?

Mr. HOFFMAN. If you make it short. But before you ask that question, let me call attention to the fact that your answer to my question is proof of the unsoundness of the position you take in offering this amendment.

Your statement just made is that, in your opinion, whether the members of the races intermingle is a personal matter, the decision of which rests with the individual. I agree with that particular statement. That is, the right of the individual to choose his own associates is the foundation of the argument which I

But the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Isacson] would deprive the individual of his personal choice, deny him preference. It would take all of the drafted men regardless of race or color and force them to live and fight together in one unit.

If the question were left to me I would say let the men who are drafted decide as individuals whether they prefer to fight with black, brown, yellow, or white buddies. Or, if they so elect, let us have mixed companies or regiments or divisions, where those who prefer to march shoulder to shoulder with others in a unit made up of all races or more than one race will have that privilege.

In Michigan it is the law that there shall be no discrimination in transportation. We get along fairly well, but I think the ideal situation would be, for example, on the trains, if we had one coach for the Negro, one for the white, and one where all races, colors, and creeds could, if they desired, ride together. Then each would have an opportunity to select his own companions, and certainly, under that kind of situation, no one would be forced, at least to any great extent, to travel with people who to him were objectionable. We have on all trains separate accommodations for smokers and nonsmokers.

Now for your question.

Mr. ISACSON. The gentleman, on page 8394 of the Congressional Record which I hold in my hand, made the statement:

While perhaps the brown or the yellow or the colored race has been advanced in some way by association and intermarriage and interbreeding with the whites, the over-all result and the average on the whole has been lower and downward.

My question is: Is there not implied, is there not implicit in this statement the Nazi idea of white supremacy and the inferiority of the other races?

Will you answer that question? Mr. HOFFMAN. Well, I will if you will sit down.

I in no way subscribe to the Nazi idea of the supremacy of any race. Each race is endowed with certain characteristics. In each, certain traits and ambitions exist and each follows its own pathway down history's corridors. The result, whether it be good or bad, is open for all to read.

It is not my purpose nor my desire to sit in judgment—to dogmatically state that one race is superior, another inferior.

The answer to the forced and indiscriminate intermingling is that wherever you have indiscriminate crossing of strains or species, whether it is of plants, flowers, fruits, animals, or human beings, the ultimate result has always been to advance perhaps to a slight degree the merit of some species, but to make less desirable the larger number.

Mr. ISACSON. Are you saying that the white race is the upper race and the colored is the lower? Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman. I do not yield further. Mr. ISACSON. Answer that question. Mr. HOFFMAN. I have answered.

Mr. ISACSON. Is the white the upper race and the colored the lower? Mr. HOFFMAN. Oh, sit down.

Mr. Chairman, I refuse to yield further. I am talking about facts.

Mr. ISACSON. Why do you not answer the question?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I claim no superiority for the white race. I make no charge that any other race is inferior—as to what is good or bad, as to what is desirable or undesirable each individual and each nation must judge-no people has been more caustically criticized and ridiculed than white Americans. The Chinese, I am told, because of our impatience and energy, think we are a na-tion of fools. The fact is that from our standpoint and judged by our standards, the white race for some reason or other, I do not know what it is, it is not due to anything the individuals of the white race have implanted in themselves, it may be due to something that God planted there, but the fact is they have made greater advancements along the lines we think worth while than any other race—advancements in what we call civilization, in the establishment of governments which endure, in mechanical inventions, in a freedom to hold each his own religious views, to follow his own way of life.

Nowhere at any time, from the days of the Garden of Eden right down to the present moment, at least so far as we know, have any people ever had and been permitted to enjoy to as great a degree any of the things which we at least consider desirable, as do we here in America.

We have no way of knowing whether the black, the brown, the yellow, or the white race was first upon this earth. We may assume that they were created at approximately the same time; that each has had equal opportunity in his own land to do the things he wished to do. As to which was the better way, as to which reached the more desirable end, the individuals of each race must judge for themselves.

The picture the world over is open to all and, from the standpoint of the white race, it may be said, if it is not presumptuous or offensive, that the white race is better satisfied with what it has done, is doing, proposes to do, than it is with the pathway pointed out by any other race or any member of any other race.

In what I have said or propose to say, there is no claim from me that the white race is the superior race. My position and my contention is that there should be no forced intermingling of the races; that each should have equal opportunity to enjoy all the rights created, all the privileges granted, by our Constitution.

My contention is that the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Isacson] violates that conception of liberty and freedom of individual choice which he just a few moments ago insisted should be left to each individual.

Mr. ISACSON. Will the gentleman

Mr. HOFFMAN. No. I have said I did not care to yield. If the gentleman wants to observe the rules of the House he will not continue to interrupt.

Mr. ISACSON. Are you refusing to yield further?

Mr. HOFFMAN. That is my point, and anyone who will read the theory of Mendel will find that the monks established the soundness of the theory I have called to your attention by experiment; they demonstrated the correctness of that theory by the crossing of flowers, fowls, and animals. They did not try human beings. You can breed upward, yes, by selection, but where you force indiscriminate intermingling, that is bad, unwholesome, and destructive.
As I said the other day, God He made us white, He made us black, He made us brown, He made us yellow and neither you nor I can do anything about it except to give equality of opportunity to

No. I do not subscribe to the theories nor the practices advocated by Hitler, by the Nazis, nor by the Communists. Nor do I subscribe to the more recent theory of Morgenthau.

Apparently, because Hitler persecuted and murdered the Jews, Morgenthau called for, an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, and, motivated by revenge rather than the practice of a policy which Hitler should have followed, would have us ape Hitler and exterminate the Germans.

We should be able, if we are intelligent beings, to have a choice as to whether we shall live at peace with our neighbors or whether we shall have continual war.

The people of middle Europe, many races, many creeds, are crowded together. Each clings to its own ideas, its own practices, its own religion. Each is intolerant of others, and the result has been fighting and war all down through the centuries.

The fighting and the warfare may be due to the fact that people with different views, different desires and aspirations, are forced to live together, become impatient and intolerant.

In my humble judgment, forcing our drafted men, where they are of different races, have different ways of life, to live together day and night, where each irritates the other, is not conducive to an effective military force.

Throughout our history, Americans have always been charitable, tolerant, considerate, of those individuals who were their neighbors and who were less fortunate, either from a material or an educational standpoint. It has always been an American characteristic to give a helping hand to the so-called under-

The soundness of that view is illustrated here in Congress every day when opportunity arises. Every Member of this House knows that most of our legislation is based, not upon strict equality of treatment, but upon helping him who needs it most. The poor man's income tax is always assessed on a lower percentage basis than that used to fix the tax of the higher income groups.

For my own part, I would give not only to the Negro but to the individuals of every race who have not made in every way as great an advancement as has the white race not only an equal opportunity, but I would give to him a better opportunity. I would give to the one less able to pull the load, whether it was in the industrial or the educational field, the longer end of the lever, and that regardless of color, creed, or race.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. COLE of New York. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a unanimous-consent request?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. COLE of New York. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous censent that all debate on the pending amendment close in 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, it is regrettable that a serious proposal such as the one advanced in the amendment offered by my colleague from New York [Mr. Isacson] should receive the treatment which has been accorded it by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOFFMAN]. The gentleman from Michigan indulged in the same treatment of a serious proposal when he dealt with a similar amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Powell]. It is perfectly all right to try to be smartalecky about this proposition, it may bring about a laugh, and certain gentlemen on the floor of this House may enjoy it; but I do not believe serious or decent Americans, confronted with the serious problems of today, enjoy that sort of conduct. I do not believe that such con-duct and those statements are in keeping with the best democratic traditions of either this Nation or of this House.

The doctrine that has been advanced here by the gentleman from Michigan is a doctrine of insult to the various races that compose this great Nation. When he speaks of an inferior race, what is it? When he speaks of a superior race, what Contemporary history has demonstrated conclusively that only Nazis, those who imposed on this world the most barbarian rule ever conceived by man or devil, were capable of talking of superior races or inferior races or of denouncing the intermingling of races.

In the Bible it is said that God made man in his own image. That is the essence of all democracy. That is the essence of civilization as we know it and as we try in our small way to live it. That democratic principle was carried out in the Declaration of Independence when the men who conceived this Nation and this Republic and its democratic institutions said that all men are created equal. They did not say that all men are created equal except Negroes.

They did not say that all men are created equal except Jews. They did not say that all men are created equal except people of races whose skins are not white. When they said that all men are created equal, they put no exceptions in that declaration.

Mr. NICHOLSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I decline to I am trying to make a serious effort here and in all earnestness, and I am speaking from my heart.

They placed no exception in that Declaration of Independence, and it is only when men in this Nation have attempted to place exceptions in that proposition that democracy has been negated.

What is the proposition that is advanced by my colleague, the gentleman from New York [Mr. Isacson]? It is a very simple one. It is one that would apply the Christian doctrine, that Biblical doctrine, to the armed forces. It is one that would apply the fundamental doctrine of democracy of our Declaration of Independence to the armed forces of these United States. When bombs are dropped and bullets are exploded from guns, they do not differentiate between white and black. They mow them down equally. When sacrifices are made for this country, there is no choice for either black or white; the sacrifices are made by both. Yet here you say that there must be discrimination and there must be denial of equality to those men whose skin happens to be black. America revolts against that. America's revolt against that will be stamped by the events of today and tomorrow.

Mrs. DOUGLAS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment of the gentleman from New York. I think there is nothing more important today than that the minority groups in our country feel that they are an integral part of the community and the Nation. If they are made to feel that there are walls between them and the majority in the community, they may become receptive to those influences which tend to divide a nation. In time of war, the Negro has been a part of our Army and he has served magnificently. When you measure his contribution in terms of his limited opportunity for education and in terms of the discrimination and segregation that he has suffered in his home community, his service and devotion to the defense of his country is surpassed by no one.

The Negro soldier fought in World War I and World War II for a liberty that he only partially enjoys. The injustice of calling men to fight for freedom while subjecting them to humiliating discrimination within the fighting forces is at once apparent. Furthermore, by preventing entire groups from making their maximum contribution to the national defense, we weaken our defense to that extent and impose heavier burdens on the remainder of the population.

I made a study when I first came to Congress of the record of the Negro soldier in this world war. I made it because on the floor of the House I heard some speeches that deeply disturbed me. So, I went to the trouble of going to the War Department, to the Navy Department, to the merchant marine, and to the Air Force, and gathered the materials that they had. This had never been done before in this country. There was no official record of the contribution that the Negro soldier had made in time of war.

I put a research woman to work on this material for several months. Then, while Congress was on vacation and others rested, I sat down and for weeks closeted myself with this wealth of loose material gathered from all branches of the service in order to compile it. I worked to get it into orderly form so that the Nation would have a record for all time in the official document of this country of the participation of the Negro soldier in the defense of our country and in the cause of freedom for all men.

The Army so appreciated this record that they have used it many, many times since. The documentation of the Negro soldier's contribution in World War II is to be found today in the libraries of the country.

I wish I could tell you of the Negro soldiers who have been wounded and are now in hospitals who wrote asking for that record. I wish I could tell you what it has meant to them that a Member of Congress said only, "Well done." I did not dress up the record, I did not give any opinions of my own. I just culled the facts and put them where they could be kept for all time.

Through our Army we export democracy wherever that Army goes. How can we—a democratic people—tell our story to the world unless we practice true democracy in the ranks of the men who represent us?

This is not, as the committee has said, a bill to meet an immediate emergency of war. It is a bill to bring up to authorized strength the number of men we need in the armed forces to meet our commitments in the occupied territories. If we send out an Army in which there is segregation, what do we tell the other peoples of the world? What are we saving?

Aside from the injury we do to the promotion of democracy in the world. what do we do to ourselves as a Nation when we go into a community and draft men into an Army where discrimination and segregation are condoned? do we do to these drafted men when discrimination and segregation are allowed to continue here at home? How does a drafted man who is asked to defend liberty in the world feel when he cannot get a meal in a public eating place, when he cannot go to a theaterwhen he hears of Negroes who are not permitted to enter colleges and universities?

How does a wounded Negro veteran feel when he may have to be hospitalized some place far from home—away from his family and friends? Hospitals, too, practice segregation and discrimination. Segregation and discrimination breed suspicion, sullen distrust, hatreds, and widespread violence.

I could go on for hours with wicked and specific cases of discrimination and segregation. What are we doing to this group of citizens in our country who represent 14,000,000 people?

Congress has never passed legislation requiring a segregated Army. The policy is purely administrative. But the President's Committee on Civil Rights specifically recommends unequivocal legislation to end the pattern. Said the committee's report:

Legislation and regulations should expressly ban discrimination and segregation in the recruitment, assignment, and training of all personnel in all types of military duty. Mess halls, quarters, recreational facilities, and post exchanges should be nonsegregated. Commissions and promotions should be awarded on consideration of merit only. Selection of students for the Military, Naval, and Coast Guard Academies and all other service schools should be governed by standards from which considerations of race, color, creed, or national origin are conspicuously absent. The National Guard, Reserve units, and any universal military training program should all be administered in accordance with these same standards.

In the last war a very small proportion of Negroes were used in combat duty. Negroes with doctor-of-philosophy degrees from our major colleges left the Army with the rank of private or sergeant after being used as truck drivers and gravediggers. A large amount of bitterness felt today is among the educated and intellectual Negroes who were drafted into the armed services and then relegated to labor battalions where none of their training was utilized.

I give you another thought: It is nonsense when the gentleman from Michigan talks about the superiority of the white people and cites as his example the fact that their governments have survived the longest of any governments in history. What about the Chinese? Does he consider that they are white people? I do not know what he considers they are. They have survived quite a long time in the world. What about the people of India? Are they white people? I do not know what the gentleman from Michigan considers the Indian people. They have survived quite a long time, too. India and China both have handed down cultures which have contributed much to the progress and enjoyment of man everywhere.

This is a very serious matter we have before us. It is not a matter to be disposed of lightly. I know there are problems. You in the Southern States have your problems. But the question of national unity goes further than the problems of the Southern States. The question of national unity is a problem of the 48 States of the Union.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentlewoman from California has expired. All time has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Isacson].

Mr. MARCANTONIO. On that, Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were refused.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Then I ask for a division, Mr. Chairman.

The question was taken; and on a divi . sion there were—ayes 18, noes 87.

So the amendment was rejected. The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 8. (a) Any person inducted into the armed forces under this act for service, who, in the judgment of those in authority over him, satisfactorily completes his period of service under section 4 (b) shall be entitled to a certificate to that effect upon the completion of such period of service, which shall include a record of any special proficiency or merit attained. The Secretaries of Army, Navy, or Air Force shall furnish to the Selective Service System hereafter established a report of separation for each person separated from active duty. In addition, each such person who is inducted into the armed forces under this act for service shall be given a physical exami-ation upon separation and, upon his written request, shall be given a statement of physical condition by the Secretary concerned: Provided, That such state-ment shall not contain any reference to mental or other conditions which in the judgment of the Secretary concerned would prove injurious to the physical or mental health of the person to whom it pertains,

(b) In the case of any such person who, in order to perform such service, has left or leaves a position (other than a temporary position) in the employ of any employer and who (1) receives such certificate, (2) is still qualified to perform the duties of such position, and (3) makes written application for reemployment within 90 days after he is re-lieved from such service or from hospitalization continuing after discharge for a period of not more than 1 year-

(A) if such position was in the employ of the United States Government, its Territories, or possessions or political subdivisions thereor the District of Columbia, such person shall be restored to such position or, if such position no longer exists, to a position of like seniority, status, and pay;

(B) if such position was in the employ of private employer, such employer or his successor in interest shall restore such person to such position, or, if such position no longer exists, to a position of like seniority, status, and pay unless the employer's circumstances have so changed as to make it impossible or unreasonable to do so:

(C) if such position was in the employ of any State or political subdivision thereof, it is hereby declared to be the sense of the Congress that such person should be restored to such position or, if such position no longer exists, to a position of like seniority,

status, and pay.

(c) If any such person is not qualified to perform the duties of such position by reason of disability sustained during such period of service, but is qualified to perform the duties of some other position, then, in the case of paragraphs (A) and (B) of subsection (A) tion (b), he shall (and in the case of para-graph (C) of subsection (b) it is hereby declared the sense of Congress that he should) be employed at such other position as may provide the nearest possible similarity in seniority, status, and pay.

(d) Any person who is restored to a posi-tion in accordance with the provisions of paragraph (A) or (B) of subsection (b) or of subsection (c) shall be considered as having been on furlough or leave of absence during his period of service in the armed forces, shall be entitled to all promotions, increases in pay, vacation rights not otherwise regulated by law, and accumulations of seniority to which he would have been en-titled had he been working for the employer during his period of service in the armed shall be so restored without loss of seniority, shall be entitled to participate in insurance or other benefits offered by the employer pursuant to established rules and practices relating to employees on furlough or leave of absence in effect with the em-ployer, and shall not be laid off or discharged from such position without cause within year after such restoration.

(e) In case any private employer fails or refuses to comply with the provisions of subsection (b), subsection (c), or subsection (d), the district court of the United States for the district in which such private emfor the district in which such private employer maintains a place of business shall have power, upon the filing of a motion, petition, or other appropriate pleading by the person entitled to the benefits of such provisions, specifically to require such employer to comply with such provisions and to compensate such person for any loss of wages or benefits suffered by reason of such employer's unlawful action: Provided, That any such compensation shall be in addition to and shall not be deemed to diminish any of the benefits of such provisions. The court shall order speedy hearing in any such case and shall advance it on the calendar. Upon application to the United States district attorney or comparable official for the district in which such private employer maintains a place of business, by any person claiming to be entitled to the benefits of such provisions, such United States district attorney or official, if reasonably satisfied that the person so applying is entitled to such benefits, shall appear and act as attorney for such person in the amicable adjustment of the claim or in the filing of any motion, petition, or other appropriate pleading and the prosecution thereof to specifically require such employer to comply with such provi-sions: Provided, That no fees or court costs shall be taxed against any person who may apply for such benefits: Provided further, That only the employer shall be deemed a necessary party to any such action.

(f) In case the United States Government or any of its Territories or possessions, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia fails or refuses to comply with the provisions of subsection (b), subsection (c), or subsection (d) of this section and section 9 (b) (4), the United States Civil Service Commission is authorized and di-rected, upon finding that such failure or refusal is in violation of the said provisions, to require specific compliance with such provisions and to require compensation to any person entitled to the benefits of such provisions for any loss of salary or wages suffered by reason of failure to comply with said provisions, less any amounts received by him through other employment or from unemployment compensation, including readjustment allowances. The United States Civil Service Commission is authorized and directed to issue rules and regulations giving full force and effect to the provisions of this act governing restoration, and such rules and regulations shall have the force and effect of law; and it shall be mandatory for the agency concerned to take such corrective action as the Commission recom-mends: Provided, That where any agency refuses to take the corrective action recommended by the Commission, the district court of the United States for the district in which the person entitled to such benefits was employed shall have jurisdiction, upon the filing of a motion, petition, or other appropriate pleading by such person so entitled, to require specific compliance with the recprovisions of subsections (b), (c), and (d) of this section by, and to enter judgment against, the United States Government or any of its Territories or possessions, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, to compensate such person for any loss of salary or wages suffered by reason of failure to comply with said recommendation and provisions, less any amounts re-ceived by him through other employment or from unemployment compensation, including readjustment allowances: Provided That any such compensation directed to be paid by the Commission or the court shall be in addition to and shall not be deemed to diminish any of the benefits of such recommendation or provisions, and shall be paid by the head of the governmental agency concerned out of appropriations currently available for salaries and expenses of the agency, and such appropriations shall be deemed available for such purposes. No fees or court costs shall be taxed against any person who may apply for such benefits. The court shall order speedy hearings in any such case and shall advance it on the calendar.

(g) The Director of Selective Service shall establish adequate facilities to render aid in the replacement in their former positions of persons who have satisfactorily completed any period c. active duty in the armed forces of the United States.

(h) Any person who, subsequent to the effective date of this act and while it remains in effect, enters upon active service in the armed forces of the United States and is released under honorable conditions from such active service shall be entitled to all the reemployment benefits and other rights of this section, except that the 90-day period prescribed in section 8 (b) shall commence (1) in the case of enlisted personnel, from the date of termination of the first enlistment (excluding extensions thereof) entered into subsequent to the date of enactment of this act; (2) in the case of officer personnel, from the date of the third anniversary of reporting for active service subsequent to the date of enactment of this act; and (3) in the case of officer and enlisted personnel who are discharged or released from active service prior to the afore-men-tioned dates, from the date relieved from such service or from hospitalization continuing after discharge for a period of not more than 1 year.

(i) As between two or more persons entitled to be restored to the same position under the provisions of this act or other law relating to similar reemployment benefits, the person who left such position first shall have the prior right thereto, without prejudice to the rights of the other person or persons to be restored to a position of like seniority, status, and pay with the employer, if such position exists and is not occupied by a person having greater seniority. SEC. 9. (a) (1) There is hereby established in the executive branch of the Government an agency to be known as the Selective Service System, and a Director of Selective Service who shall be the head thereof.

(2) The Selective Service System shall include a national headquarters, at least one State headquarters in each State, Territory, and possession of the United States, and in the District of Columbia, and the local boards, appeal boards, and other agencies provided for in subsection (b) (3) of this section.

(3) The Director shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The Director shall receive compensation at the rate of $12,500 per year. The Director shall receive

(4) The functions of the Office of Selective Service Records (established by the act of March 31, 1947) and of the Director of the Office of Selective Service Records are hereby transferred to the Selective Service System and the Director of Selective Service, respectively. The personnel, property, records, and unexpended balances (available or to be made available) of appropriations, alloca-tions, and other funds of the Office of Selective Service Records are hereby transferred to the Selective Service System. The Office of Selective Service Records shall cease to exist upon the taking of effect of the pro-visions of this act: Provided, That, effective upon the termination of this act, and notwithstanding such termination in other respects, (a) the said Office of Selective Service Records is hereby reestablished on the same basis and with the same functions as obtained prior to the effective date of this act, (b) said reestablished Office shall be responsible for terminating any other out-standing affairs of the Selective Service System, and (c) the personnel, property, records, and unexpended balances (available or to be made available) of appropriations, allocations, and other funds of the Selective Service System shall be transferred to such re-established Office of Selective Service Records.

(b) The President is authorized—
(1) to prescribe the necessary rules and regulations to carry out the provisions of this act;

(2) to appoint, upon recommendation of the respective governor or comparable executive official, a State director of the Selective Service System for each State, Territory.

and possession of the United States and in the District of Columbia who shall represent the governor and be in immediate charge of the State headquarters of the Selective Service System. The President may order to active duty with their consent and assign to the Selective Service System those officers of the Selective Service section of the State headquarters and headquarters detachments of the federally recognized National Guard of the United States and members of other Reserve components, and may employ such number of civilians as may be necessary for the administration of the national and of the several State headquarters of the Selective Service System. (3) to create and establish within the Selective Service System civilian local boards, civilian appeal boards, and such other agencies, including agencies of appeal, as may be necessary to carry out its functions with re-spect to the registration, examination, selection, assignment, delivery for induction, and maintenance of records of persons registered under this act, together with such other du-ties as may be assigned under this act, and shall provide for the classification of registrants under this act on the basis of availability for service. He shall create and establish one or more local boards in each county or political subdivision corresponding there to of each State, Territory, and possession of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. Each local board shall consist of three or more members to be appointed by the President from recommendations made by the respective governors or comparable executive officials: Provided, That an intercounty local board consisting of at least one member from each component county or corresponding subdivision may be established for an area not exceeding five counties or political subdivisions corresponding thereto within a State or comparable jurisdiction when the Director determines, after considering the public interest involved and the recommendation of the governor or com-parable executive official or officials, that the establishment of such local board area will result in a more efficient and economical op-eration, such intercounty local board within its area to have the same power and jurisdiction as a local board has in its area. No member of any local board shall be a member of the armed forces of the United States, but each member of any local board shall be a civilian who is a citizen of the United States residing in the county or political subdivision corresponding thereto in which such local board has jurisdiction, and each intercounty local board shall have at least one member from each county or political subdivision corresponding thereto included within the intercounty local board area, Such local boards, under rules and regulations prescribed by the President, shall have the power within their respective jurisdictions to hear and determine, subject to the right of appeal to the appeal boards herein authorized, all questions or claims with respect to inclusion for, or exemption or defer-ment from, service under this act, of all individuals within the jurisdiction of such local boards. The decisions of such local boards shall be final, except where an appeal is authorized and is taken in accordance with such rules and regulations as the President may prescribe. There shall be at least one appeal board for each State. Appeal boards within the Selective Service System shall be composed of civilians who are citizens of the United States and who are not members of the armed forces. The decision of such ap-peal boards shall be final in cases before them on appeal unless modified or changed by the President. The President, upon appeal or upon his own motion, shall have power to determine all claims or questions with respect to inclusion for, or exemption or de-ferment from service under this act, and the determination of the President shall be final. No person who is a civilian officer, member, agent, or employee of the Office of Selective Service Records, or the Selective Service System, or of any local board or appeal board or other agency of such Office or System, shall be excepted from registration or deferred or exempted from service, as provided for in this act, by reason of his status as such civilian officer, member, agent, or employee;

ian officer, member, agent, or employee;
(4) to appoint and fix the compensation of such officers, agents, and employees as he may deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this act in accordance with the Classification Act of 1923, as amended: Provided, That the compensation of employees of local boards and appeal boards may be fixed without regard to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended: Provided further, That any officer on the active or retired list of the armed forces, or any Reserve com-ponent thereof with his consent, or any officer or employee of any department or agency of the United States who may assigned or detailed to any office or position to carry out the provisions of this act (except to offices or positions on local boards or appeal boards established or created pursuant to section 9 (b) (3)) may serve in and per-form the functions of such office or position without loss of or prejudice to his status as such officer in the armed forces or Reserve component thereof, or as such officer or employee in any department or agency of the United States;

(5) to utilize the services of any or all departments and any and all officers or agents of the United States and to accept the services of all officers and agents of the several States, Territories, and possessions, and subdivisions thereof and the District of Columbia and volunteer welfare organizations in the execution of this act:

(6) to purchase such printing, binding, and blank-book work from public, commercial, or private printing establishments or binderies upon orders placed by the Public Printer or upon waivers issued in accordance with section 12 of the Printing Act approved January 12, 1895, as amended, and to obtain by purchase, loan, or gift such equipment and supplies for the Selective Service System as he may deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this act, with or without advertising or formal contract;

(7) to prescribe eligibility, rules, and regulations governing the parole for service in the armed forces, or for any other special service established pursuant to this act, of any person convicted of a violation of any of the provisions of this act;

(8) to procure such space as he may deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this act and Public Law 26, Eightieth Congress, approved March 31, 1947, by lease, pursuant to existing statutes. The provisions of the act of June 30, 1932 (47 Stat. 412), as amended by section 15 of the act of March 3, 1933 (47 Stat. 1517; 40 U. S. C. 278a), shall not apply to any lease entered into under the authority of this act;

(9) to determine the location of such additional temporary installations as he may deem essential; to utilize and enlarge existing installations; to construct, install, and equip; and to complete the construction, installation, and equipment of buildings, structures, utilities, and appurtenances, including the necessary grading and removal, repair, or remodeling of existing structures and installations; and, in order to accomplish the purpose of this act, to acquire lands, and rights pertaining thereto, or other interests therein, for temporary use thereof, by donation or lease, and to prosecute construction thereon prior to the approval of the title by the Attorney General as required by section 355, Revised Statutes, as amended.

section 355, Revised Statutes, as amended, (10) to utilize, in order to provide and furnish such services as may be deemed necessary or expedient to accomplish the purposes of this act, personnel of the armed forces and of Reserve components thereof, with their consent, and such civilian personnel as may be necessary, notwithstanding the provisions of section 14 of the act of May 24, 1946, entitled "Federal Employees' Pay Act of 1946" (Public Law 390, 79th Cong.), with respect to the maximum limitations as to the number of civilian employees.

(c) The President is authorized to delegate any authority vested in him under this act, and to provide for the subdelegation of any such authority.

(d) In the administration of this act, voluntary services may be accepted.

(e) The Chief of Finance, United States Army, is authorized to act as the fiscal, disbursing, and accounting agent of the Director in carrying out the provisions of this act.

(f) The Director is authorized to make final settlement of individual claims, for amounts not exceeding $50, for travel and other expenses of uncompensated personnel of the Office of Selective Service Records, or the Selective Service System, incurred while in the performance of official duties, without regard to other provisions of law governing the travel of civilian employees of the Federal Government.

SEC. 10. Under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the President, all funds appropriated for operation and maintenance under this act are also available for the payment of actual and reasonable expenses of emergency medical care, including hospitalization of registrants who suffer illness or injury, and the transportation, and burial, of the remains of registrants who suffer death, while acting under orders issued under the provisions of this act, but such burial expenses shall not exceed $150 in any one case.

SEC. 11. Any member of the Selective Service System or any other person charged as herein provided with the duty of carrying out any of the provisions of this act, or the rules or regulations made or directions given thereunder, who shall knowingly fail or neglect to perform such duty, and any person charged with such duty, or having and ex-ercising any authority under said act, rules, regulations, or directions who shall know ingly make, or be a party to the making, of any false, improper, or incorrect registra-tion, classification, physical or mental ex-amination, deferment, induction, enrollment, or muster, and any person who shall know-ingly make, or be a party to the making of, any false statement or certificate regarding or bearing upon a classification or in support of any request for a particular classification, for service under the provisions of this act, or rules, regulations, or directions made pursuant thereto, or who otherwise evades registration or service in the armed forces or any of the requirements of this act, or who knowingly counsels, aids or abets another to refuse or evade registration or service in the armed forces or any of the requirements of this act, or of said rules, regulations, or directions, or who in any manner shall knowingly fail or neglect or refuse to perform any duty required of him under or in the execution of this act, or rules or regulations made pursuant to this act, or any person or persons who shall knowingly hinder or inter-fere in any way by force or violence with the administration of this act or the rules or regulations made pursuant thereto, or who conspires to commit such offense, shall, upon conviction in any district court of the United States of competent jurisdiction, be punished by imprisonment for not more than 5 years a fine of not more than $10,000, or by both such fine and imprisonment, or if subject to military or naval law may be tried by court martial, and, on conviction, shall suffer such punishment as a court martial may direct. No person shall be tried by court martial in any case arising under this act unless such person has been actually inducted for the service prescribed under this act or unless he is subject to trial by court martial under laws in force prior to the enactment of this act. Precedence shall be given by courts to the trial of cases arising under this act, and such cases shall, upon request of the Attorney General, be advanced on the docket for immediate hearing. SEC. 12. (a) Nothing in section 109 or 113 of the Criminal Code (U. S. C., title 18, secs. 198 and 203), in section 190 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 5, sec. 99), in section 19 (e) of the Contract Settlement Act of 1944 (U. S. C., title 41, sec. 119 (e)), or in the second sentence of subsection (a) of section 9 of the act of August 2, 1939 (53 Sat. 1148), entitled "An act to prevent pernicious politican activities," as amended, shall be deemed to apply to any person because of his ap-pointment under authority of this act or the regulations made pursuant thereto, as an uncompensated official of the Selective Service System, or as an individual to conduct hearings on appeals of persons claiming exemption from combatant or noncombatant training because of conscientious objections.

(b) All functions performed under this act shall be excluded from the operation of the Administrative Procedure Act (50 Stat. 237) except as to the requirements of section

SEC. 13. Notwithstanding the provisions of section 604 of the act of October 17, 1940 (54 Stat. 1191), nor the provisions of section 4 of the act of July 25, 1947 (Public Law 239, 80th Cong.), all of the provisions of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940, as amended, including specifically article IV thereof, shall continue in effect and be applicable as to all persons in the armed forces of the United States including all persons inducted into the armed forces pursuto this act, until such time as the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940, as amended, is repealed or otherwise termi-nated by subsequent act of the Congress: Provided, That wherever under any section or provision of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940, as amended, a proceeding, remedy, privilege, stay, limitation, account-ing, or other transaction has been authorized or provided with respect to military service performed while this act is in force by any person inducted into the armed forces under this act, such section or provision shall be deemed to continue in full force and effect so long as may be necessary to the exercise or enjoyment of such proceeding, remedy, privi-lege, stay, limitation, accounting, or other

SEC. 14. With respect to the persons inducted for service under this act there shall be paid, allowed, and extended the same pay, allowances, pensions, disability and death compensation, and other benefits as are provided by law in the case of other enlisted men of like grades and length of service of that component of the armed forces to which they are assigned. Section 3 of the act of July 25, 1947 (Public Law 239, 80th Cong.), is hereby amended by deleting therefrom the following: "Act of March 7, 1942 (56 Stat. 143-148), as amended." The act of March 7, 1942 (56 Stat. 143-148), is hereby made applicable to persons inducted into the armed forces pursuant to this act.

SEC. 15. Nothing contained in this or any other act shall be construed as forbidding the payment of compensation by any person, firm, or corporation to persons inducted or enlisted into the armed forces of the United States for service under this act, or to members of the Reserve components of such forces now or hereafter on any type of active duty, who, prior to their induction, enlist-ment, or commencement of active duty, were receiving compensation from such person, firm, or corporation.

SEC. 16. Any person inducted into the armed forces for service under this act shall, during the period of such service, be permitted to vote in person or by absentee ballot in any general, special, or primary election occurring in the State of which he is a resident, whether he is within or outside such State at the time of such election, if under the laws of such State he is otherwise entitled so to vote in such election; but nothing in this subsection shall be construed to require granting to any such person a leave of absence or furlough for longer than 1 day in order to permit him to vote in person in any such election.

SEC. 17. (a) The President is empowered, through the Secretary of Defense, in addition to the present authorized methods of purchase or procurement, to place an order with any individual, firm, association, company, corporation, or organized manufacturing industry for such product or ma-terial as may be required by the armed forces, and which is of the nature and kind usually produced or capable of being produced by such individual, firm, company, association, corporation, or organized manufacturing industry. (b) Compliance with all such orders for products or material placed pursuant to subsection (a) of this section shall be obligatory on any individual, firm, association, company, corporation, or organized manufacturing industry, or the responsible head or heads thereof and shall take precedence over all other orders and contracts theretofore placed with such individual, firm, company, association, corporation, or organized manufacturing industry, and any individual, firm, association, company, corporation, or organized manufacturing industry or the responsible head or heads thereof owning or operating any plant equipped for the manufacture of arms or ammunition or parts of ammunition, or any necessary supplies or equipment for the armed forces, and any individual, firm, association, company, corporation, or organized manufacturing industry or the responsible head or heads thereof owning or operating any manufacturing plant, which, in the opinion of the Secretary of Defense shall be capable of being readily transformed into a plant for the manufacture of arms or ammunition, or parts thereof, or other necessary supplies or equipment for the armed forces, who shall refuse to give to the United States such preference in the manner of the execution of orders, or who shall refuse to manufacture the kind, quantity, or quality of arms or ammunition or the parts thereof, or any necessary supplies or equipment for the armed forces, as ordered by the Secretary of Defense, or who shall refuse to furnish such arms, ammunition, or parts of ammunition, or other supplies or equipment for the armed forces, at a reasonable price as de-termined by the Secretary of Defense, then, and in either such case, the President, through the Secretary of Defense, in addi-tion to the present authorized methods of purchase or procurement, is hereby authorized to take immediate possession of any such plant or plants, and through the appropriate branch, bureau, or department of the armed forces to manufacture therein such product or material as may be required for the armed forces, and any individual, firm, company, association, or corporation, or organized manufacturing industry, or the responsible head or heads thereof, failing to comply with the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and upon conviction shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than 3 years and a fine not exceeding $50,000.

(c) The compensation to be paid to any individual, firm, company, association, corporation, or organized manufacturing industry for its products or material, or as rental for use of any manufacturing plant while used by the United States, shall be fair and just: Provided, That nothing herein shall be deemed to render inapplicable

SEC. 18. (a) Every person shall be deemed to have notice of the requirements of this act upon publication by the President of a proclamation or other public notice fixing a time for any registration under section 3.

(b) It shall be the duty of every registrant to keep his local board informed as to his current address and changes in status as required by such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the President.

(c) If any provision of this act, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is held invalid, the remainder of the act, and the application of such provision to other persons or circumstances, shall not be affected thereby.

(d) Nothing contained in this act shall be construed to repeal, amend, or suspend the laws now in force authorizing voluntary enlistment or reenlistment in the armed forces of the United States, including the Reserve components thereof, except that, whenever the Congress has declared that the national interest is imperiled, voluntary enlistment or reenlistment in such forces, and their Reserve components, may be suspended by the President to such extent as he may deem necessary in the interest of national defense. SEC. 19. When used in this act— (a) The term "between the ages of 18 and shall refer to men who have attained the 18th anniversary of the day of their birth and who have not attained the 31st anniversary of the day of their birth; and other terms designating different age groups shall be construed in a similar manner.

(b) The term "United States", when used in a geographical sense, shall be deemed to mean the several States, the District of Columbia, Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands.

(c) The term "armed forces shall be deemed to include the Army, the Navy, the Marine Corps, the Air Force, and the Coast Guard (when during World War II it served, or when in the future it shall serve, under the Department of the Navy).

(d) The term "district court of the United States" shall be deemed to include the courts of the United States for the Territories and possessions of the United States.

(e) The term "local board" shall be deemed to include an intercounty local board in the case of any registrant who is subject to the jurisdiction of an intercounty local board.

(f) The term "Director" shall be deemed to mean the Director of the Selective Service System.

(g) The term "organized unit" or a Reserve component shall be deemed to mean a unit in which the members thereof are entitled to receive pay for attendance at not less than 24 drills or training periods throughout the year.

SEC. 20. (a) Except as provided in this act, all laws and parts of laws in conflict with the provisions of this act are hereby suspended to the extent of such conflict for the period in which this act shall be in force.

(b) All of the provisions of this Act. except the provisions of sections 1, 2, 4 (b), 4 (e), 8, 9 (a) (4), 14, 20 (b), and 22, shall become inoperative and cease to apply 2 years after the date of enactment of this act, except as to offenses committed prior to the termination date.

(c) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

SEC. 21. Nothing in this act shall be deemed to amend any provision of the National Security Act of 1947 (61 Stat. 495).

SEC. 22. The Congress declares, in accordance with traditional military policy as expressed in the National Defense Act of 1916, as amended, that it is essential that the strength and organization of the civilian components of the armed forces, as an integral part of the first-line defenses of the Nation, be at all times maintained and assured. To this end, it is the intent of the Congress that whenever the Congress shall determine that troops are needed for the national security in excess of those of the regular components of the armed forces, and those in active service under this act, the civilian components of the armed forces, or such part thereof as may be necessary, shall be ordered to active Federal service and continued therein so long as such necessity exists.

SEC. 23. No person shall be inducted under this act within 90 days after the date of its enactment. Otherwise this act shall be effective upon its enactment.

Mr. VINSON (interrupting the reading of the bill). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the remaining sections of the bill be considered as read and be open to amendment at any point.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Van Zandr: On page 26, lines 6 and 7, after "be" in line 6 and running into line 7 strike out "laid off or."

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VAN ZANDT. I yield.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Chairman, we accept the amendment on this side of the aisle.

Mr. KILDAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VAN ZANDT. I yield.

Mr. KILDAY. Mr. Chairman, so far as we are concerned on this side of the aisle, we accept the amendment.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Chairman, there is one phrase in H. R. 6401 that has not received the consideration by the Congress its importance deserves. Superficially it appears to be unimportant. Carefully analyzed it becomes apparent that it may be destructive of one of the most valuable rights of an employment relationship.

Section 8 (d) of H. R. 6401 provides that a person who leaves a position to enter the armed forces pursuant to the provisions of these bills and is subsequently restored to such position shall not be laid off or discharged from such position without cause within 1 year after such restoration.

Except for the phrase "laid off or," this same language was contained in the Selective Training and Service Act of 1940. It is pertinent to ask why this new phrase was inserted.

Under the 1940 act the Director of Selective Service urged upon employers and veterans that discharge without cause included lay-offs. This interpretation of the law came to be known as the doctrine of superseniority. It was vigorously supported by Selective Service until it was repudiated by the Supreme Court in the case of Fishgold against Sullivan

Dry Dock & Repair Corp. In the course of its opinion the Court said:

Thus when Congress desired to cover the contingency of a lay-off, it used apt words to describe it. If it had desired to enact that, so long as there was work, no restored veteran, regardless of seniority, could be temporarily laid off during the year following his restoration, when the slackening of work required a reduction in forces, we are bound to believe that it would have used a word of the kind which it had itself recognized as being descriptive of that situation.

In effect, the Supreme Court said that if Congress had intended that returned veterans must not be laid off within 1 year, it would have said so.

The new legislation includes lay-offs within the statutory prohibition. The bills generally use language which has a commonly accepted meaning in employment relations and we must assume that the term "lay-off" must be accepted to have that meaning. If it does, then Congress by enacting the proposed legislation without change will have established the unjust and inequitable principle of superseniority. Why is it unjust?

Millions of veterans of World War II have now returned to private employment and have reestablished their places within the framework of established seniority systems. It is unthinkable that Congress could intend to enact legislation which would place these veterans of the shooting war in an employment status inferior to that of men to be inducted under the pending legislation. That would be the effect of the creation of "super-seniority rights." It would mean that when an employer must reduce his forces he may not lay off an employee who was restored to his position under this legislation for 1 year, even though it required him to lay off veterans of the last war who have greater seniority.

The sponsors of this legislation may argue that the added phrase "laid off or" is not intended to establish superseniority. If this is true, then there appears to be no reason for its inclusion. The only basis for such an argument would be that the new legislation does not refer to all lay-offs but only to those which are without cause. What constitutes cause? The term "discharge without cause" is one commonly used and understood in employment relations; but the term "laid off without cause" is unheard of and without any understood meaning. By the use in this one instance of language which is foreign to the terms used in employment relationships, Congress may deprive veterans of World War of their means of livelihood even though they have already endured heavy financial sacrifice in the service of their country.

There is no reason why persons inducted under this legislation should have greater rights to their jobs than the veterans of the last war. There is no excuse for tampering with language which is just and fair and reasonable and which through numerous court decisions now clearly describes the rights of veterans. At best, the phrase "laid off or" is confusing, ambiguous and out of place. In view of the history of the 1940 act, it is more probably an attempt to put over on Congress the doctrine of superseniority.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SCRIVNER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SCRIVNER on page 41, line 22, after the word "act", strike out the period, insert a colon and the following:

"(a) Before any proposed regulation or order to carry out the purposes of this act shall be issued by any governmental agency exercising authority conferred hereunder, other than intra-agency administrative rules or orders governing the conduct of its activities or interagency rules governing relations with other agencies of the Government, a draft thereof shall be submitted to the President of the Senate for the Senate of the United States and to the Speaker of the House for the House of Representatives.

(b) The draft of such proposed regulation or order shall be immediately assigned to the Committee on Armed Services in the Senate and to the Committee on Armed Services in the House of Representatives for study, to consider whether such rule or regulation is made in comformity with the spirit, intent, letter, and purpose of this act, and that no unusual or unexpected use of powers herein granted is proposed. Such regulation or order may be approved or disapproved by the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate or the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives, or a duly authorized subcommittee of either. In the absence of action by either committee approving or disapproving such regulation or order, it may go into effect not earlier than the 15th day following, but not including, the date of the receipt of the draft of such proposed regulation or order by the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives. If sooner approved by either committee, it may go into effect immediately upon such approval. Disapproval of such regulation or order by either committee shall suspend its issuance; Provided, That in the event of conflicting committee actions, the earlier action shall govern.

"(c) For the purposes of this section, the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, are authorized to sit and act during the sessions, recesses, and adjournment periods of Congress."

Mr. SCRIVNER (during the reading of the amendment). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the remainder of the amendment be considered as read, and that the amendment be printed in the Record. It was printed on page 8391 of the Record on Tuesday. It was presented to the Committee on Armed Services for consideration.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. SCRIVNER. Mr. Chairman, as I have just stated, this amendment was presented to the Committee on Armed Services for consideration in connection with this and other similar legislation. It was printed in full on page 8391 of the Record of Tuesday so that the Members might all have an opportunity to read it and study it. The amendment may be a little long. But after some of the remarks made here today about the men who will administer this legislation, then certainly you will want something like this in the bill. Why does this come about? You will all recall that during the war under the Selective Service Act and under the direction of the Selective Service Director, General Hershey, there was in that act an amendment called the Tydings amendment which specifically set out in very simple language what deferment should be granted to farm labor. We all remember that the Director did not pay much attention to the language in the bill or the edicts of Congress, and upon at least two occasions it was necessary to call Director Hershey before committees of the House and tell him again that we meant what we said. The second time it had no effect at all, and we found ourselves in the position of being compelled to enact a law to override and wipe out a regulation made by the Director of Selective Service, which was contrary to the spirit, letter, intent, and purposes of the act. If anybody knows what this bill means, and what our intent is, certainly the Committees on Armed Services know. If the regulations made thereunder are in conformity with the spirit, letter, intent, and purpose of the act it will take a very short time for this committee or any subcommittee thereof to make that determination. If they are not, then they should not take effect. Then this committee and the committee in the other body should then say, "Mr. Director, that regulation is not in con-formity with the spirit, letter, intent, and purposes of this act, and therefore we say, 'No'." If no action is taken by either committee within 15 days, then it is considered that the Committee on Armed Services have read it over and that it is all right.

There should be no delay. A good regulation would not be hard to sell and committee approval could be almost immediately obtained. It is only the poor ones, the ones in which sometimes they seek to usurp some power here and make unusual use of it that would be blocked. I could show you any number of cases, not only Selective Service, but OPA, and every agency of Government that has to do with the administering of laws we pass, by regulation. There will be the argument made that then Congress is taking on a judicial garb. But these regulations have the force and effect of laws-why should we not consider them? I would prefer to have Congress act as legislator and interpreter of that legislation than I would have any bureau downtown or any bureaucrat acting not only as judge but also as legislator and also as administrator. They are acting in a triple character. I will trust Congress, but not the bureaucrat. At this late hour, I will say quite frankly that I am not optimistic about the adoption of this amendment. However, Mr. Chairman, I feel that the House should have the opportunity-if it sees fit-to regulate the regulators.

In order to expedite time, Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks, and I yield back the remainder of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. KILDAY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Of course, this is an attempt to bring back to Congress the administration of the law that we are passing. Under our system of government we have a division of powers, the legislative, the executive. and the judicial. The Congress has all that it can possibly do in passing laws, and cannot possibly administer those This is an attempt to bring into the Congress the administration of laws that we have passed.

Now, we complain bitterly at times about the executive assuming some of the powers of the legislative branch of the Government. Here we are attempting to do exactly the thing we complain about the executive department doing. I think if we attend to our own business we have all we can possibly do.

I hope the amendment will be rejected. The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Scrivner].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Scrivner) there were—ayes 27, noes 61.

So the amendment was rejected. Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Chairman, I have a number of committee amendments that are purely clarify-

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that they be reported en bloc and considered en bloc. The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendments en bloc, without objection.

There was no objection. The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: On page 41, line 21, change the number "50" to "60."
Page 32, line 6, after the word "each" insert "headquarters in each."

Page 49, delete section 22 and insert in lieu thereof a new section 22, as follows: "Szc. 22. The Congress declares in accordance with our traditional military policy as expressed in the National Defense Act of 1916, as amended, that it is essential that the strength and organization of the National Guard, both ground and air, as an integral part of the first-line defenses of this Nation, be at all times maintained and assured. To this end it is the intent of the Congress that whenever Congress shall de-termine that units and organizations are needed for the national security in excess of those of the Regular components of the Ground Forces and the Air Forces, and those in active service under this act, the Na-tional Guard of the United States, both ground and air, or such part thereof as may be necessary for a balanced force, shall be ordered to active Federal service and continued therein so long as such necessity in lieu thereof:

Page 49, strike out section 23 and insert

"SEC. 23. This act shall be effective upon its enactment.'

Page 48, strike out lines 8 through 11, inclusive, and insert in lieu thereof a new subsection (g) as follows:

"(g) The term 'organized unit' when used with respect to a Reserve component shall be deemed to mean a unit in which the members thereof satisfactorily participate in scheduled drills and training periods as prescribed by the Secretary of Defense."

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Chairman, I take this time to ask a question of the chairman of the Committee on Armed Services which, through inadvertence, I am sure, he failed to answer before. My question relates to lines 19 to 24 on page 8 and to lines 14 to 20 on page 9 of the bill.

Due to some news report apparently a good many young men who have served for 12 months or more after September 16, 1940, in the armed forces, but also after September 2, 1945, are confused as to whether under the bill they may now be drafted.

The question is: Will that service relieve them from service under subsection (b) of section 5 of this bill?

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. tember 2, 1945, refers only to the Allied forces.

Mr. JAVITS. In other words, if a man served after September 16, 1940, and up to now, for 12 months or more, he is covered by the provisions of subsection (b) of section 5 of the bill.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Under the provisions of this bill he is exempt. Mr. JAVITS. Exactly. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment.

Mr. Chairman, perhaps you have not beheaded this monstrous and queer animal, but certainly you have dehorned it, you have torn the very heart out of it, until I suspect there are few Members in this House who know that is going to be in the bill. You have passed amend-ments sugar coating a bitter pill in an election year to make the medicine more palatable, but I warn you now when this bill goes to conference if we unfortunately pass it here, again I shall be very much a lone wolf as often I have been-providing I am one of the conferees and I am not sure of that yet, and it will be thrown back into your laps with all its sugarcoating and its nice trimmings.

The only way to get rid of this is to defeat it. I want you all to bear that in mind.

Who really wants this bill? The military wants it. Generals and admiralsand I do not criticize them. They have a vested interest. In peace time they are interested in pay and promotions, many stars and much braid, and to command great bodies of men. I do not think we would be any different in their position.

Do the churches of America want this, Protestant, Catholic, Jewish? No.

Does education want it, the colleges and universities? No.

Do the farm organizations of America want it? No.

Does organized labor want it? No. Do the fathers and mothers want it?

Does the youth of America want it— this uncertainty in any form that you pass peacetime conscription? No, they do not want it.

And when you get back to campaign among your people-oh, yes, emergency. While you are back there wanting to be reelected the Congress has recessed for 6 months.

An emergency! You have taken my boy Joe from the farm and Bill from the factory, and we were depending on his support and help here. You take him out of the college, the university. This is a great emergency. The fact that the committee itself wanted to extend the time 75 or 90 days, it makes no difference which, is a frank confession that there is no emergency.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Chairman, will

the gentleman yield?

Mr. SHORT. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. KNUTSON. If there is such a great emergency how come that the President is out on the west coast?

Mr. SHORT. Well, I was coming to

You, my colleagues, will be told, "You Congressmen voted an emergency, now you are back shaking our hands, but you are taking our boys."

The President is riding across the country at the taxpayers' expense in a political campaign under the cry of emergency.

Oh, emergency! Emergency! How many crimes have been committed in thy name?

Mr. Chairman, I feel sorry for the draft boards of this country that will be forced to draft 250,000 men out of more than 2,000,000 and when we get back here in the new Congress we do not know whether we will be or not. But when we come back we are going to get letters from Bill Smith and Joe Jones saying, "Why did you not take my neighbor's boy instead of taking mine?"

Members of Congress, think it over; think it over. God help you to use a little of the common sense which the good Lord and your parents gave you.

Kill this bill. Bury it.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Missouri has expired.

The question is on the committee amendments.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. EBERHARTER: Amend H. R. 6401, on page 43, line 1, by inserting after the period the following: "Section 22 (b) (relating to exclusions from gross income) of the Internal Revenue Code is hereby amended by striking out 'January 1, 1949' wherever occurring therein, and inserting in lieu thereof 'January 1, 1951.' Section 10 (b) of the act of August 8, 1947 (Public Law 384, 80th Cong.), entitled 'An act to terminate certain tax provisions before the end of World War II' is hereby amended by striking out 'January 1, 1949' and inserting in lieu thereof 'January 1, 1949' and inserting in lieu thereof 'January 1, 1951'."

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Chairman, it is with great reluctance that I make a point of order against the amendment. It has to do with the revenue laws and should be considered by the Ways and Means Committee. The amendment may be very meritorious but it is clearly out of order on this legislation.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania care to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Chairman, first I make the point of order that the point of order of the gentleman comes too late.

Mr. KNUTSON. Oh, no. I was on my

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair may say that the gentleman from Minnesota was on his feet as was the gentleman from New York [Mr. Andrews] and the Chair was endeavoring to recognize either of the gentlemen.

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Chairman, I would like to be heard for a minute or two on the point of order.

Section 14 of the bill provides for the pay and allowances of the members who will be inducted under this bill. My amendment has reference to their pay and allowances and merely seeks to maintain the same rate of pay as is now in existence for the men in the armed services whose rate of pay will be changed in January next.

Mr. Chairman, I believe that the Committee on Armed Services should support this amendment. I want to call attention to the fact that the only purpose of the amendment is to maintain the same salaries and allowances that the men are now receiving under the terms of this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule.

The Chair has examined the text of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Eberharter]. Clearly the amendment proposes to legislate on the Internal Revenue Code which is legislation that would be within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Ways and Means. Therefore the Chair is constrained to sustain the point of order.

PAY OF SERVICEMEN SHOULD NOT BE SUBJECT TO INCOME TAXES

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Chairman, under existing law, these men who would be drafted—who would be called upon to sacrifice 2 years of civilian life to the military service of their country, with all this means in disruption of their education, careers, and personal plans—would, after January 1, 1949, be subject to Federal income taxes, and would have withheld by the finance officer a portion of their monthly base pay.

Imagine what a contribution to morale that will be to the men drafted in the next few months who would for a short time receive their full pay and allowances. Then, after next New Year's eve, they will be told that their Uncle Sam is making a cut in their pay by the amount of the income-tax liability. Mr. Chairman, that is a hang-over they will long remember—even those who strictly abstain from intoxicating beverages.

And the soldiers and wives who have voluntarily undertaken the military life, either temporarily or as a career, may very well feel that their Government has broken faith. The articles of partnership under which they began their service will have been broken, and it is only to be expected that they will be sorely discouraged by this breach of faith. At the present time, compensation received for active service as a member of the military or naval forces of the United States below the grade of commissioned officer or commissioned warrant officer is excluded from gross income for Federal income-tax purposes.

Section 14 of H. R. 6401 provides that persons inducted for service under the act—

Shall be paid, allowed, and extended the same pay, allowances, pensions, disability and death compensation, and other benefits as are provided by law in the case of other enlisted men of like grades and length of service of that component of the armed forces to which they are assigned.

Mr. Chairman, this section, dealing with the pay and allowances of servicemen, should, in my opinion, be amended to insure that the existing modest pay and allowances of these servicemen, as well as the servicemen who have volunteered, are not diminished by application of the Federal tax laws.

I have prepared an amendment, which I shall offer at the proper time, to amend section 14 of H. R. 6401 to continue for another 2-year period the existing exemption of the military pay of noncommissioned military personnel. And, Mr. Chairman, it seems only fair that, pending the completion of a study now under way by the Advisory Committee appointed by the Secretary of Defense on the revision of the scales of military pay and allowance of both enlisted men and officers, the existing tax treatment should be continued for officers as well as enlisted men for another 2 years. Accordingly, my amendment would continue for another 2 years the existing tax exemptions and exclusions, under which enlisted men are fully tax-exempt on their military pay, and officers have the benefit of a special exclusion of the first $1,500 of their military pay.

The following table summarizes the base pay and taxes of enlisted men, effective January 1, 1949, unless my amendment is adopted:

September 1994	Base pay		Total	Month-
Elmi Ton Some	Per month	Per year	tax per year	with- hold- ing
Private Private, first class	$75 80	$900	$37 44	$2.80 4.00
Corporal	90	1,080	- 63	5, 10
Sergeant	100	1, 200 1, 380	82 108	6. 90 8. 10
Technical sergeant Master sergeant	135 165	1,620	141	11.70 16.50

Mr. LANDIS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Lands: At the end of the bill insert the following new section:

"No person shall be required to register, and no person shall be inducted, under this act until such time as the President of the United States, the Secretary of State, and the United States Delegate to the United Nations organization unanimously agree that everything possible has been done by the Government of the United States to secure the abolition of compulsory military service in all the major nations."

Mr. LANDIS. Mr. Chairman, I am of the opinion that this bill is unconstitutional. I want to quote from Daniel Webster in the House of Congress on December 9, 1814:

Where is it written in the Constitution, in what article or section is it contained that you may take children from their parents and parents from their children and compel them to fight the battles of any war which the folly or the wickedness of government may engage in?

Mr. Chairman, this bill is an attempt to exercise the power of forcing the freemen of this country into the ranks of the Army. It is in no way connected with the militia, nor, included within any of the powers which Congress possesses over them. We have the power to enact laws for the organization and discipline of the militia. We can call into service any portion of the militia of the States and govern them during the continuance of such service.

The services of the men to be raised under this bill are not limited to repel invasion, suppress insurrection or execute the laws; but for the general objects of war. The administration asserts the right to fill the ranks of the Regular Army by compulsion.

I know Congress has the power to raise and support armies. Congress also has the power to borrow money. How is it to exercise this power? Is it confined to voluntary loans? Congress might resort to forced loans, if you can have peacetime compulsory military training, if you resort to forced loans in America, and if you make men work, then you have a dictatorship.

I would like to quote once more from Daniel Webster. The same situation exists today as it did in 1814.

It is time for Congress to examine and decide for itself. It has taken things on trust long enough. It has followed Executive recommendation till there remains no hope of finding safety in that path. What is there, sir, that makes it the duty of this people now to grant new confidence to the administration, and to surrender their most important rights to its discretion? Of what merits of its own does it rest this extraordinary claim?

Compulsory military service would result in greater restrictions over the lives and activities of our people, would impose heavy burdens on them, causing greater taxes and profound changes in their way of life. Compulsory military service has long been customary in many European states and elsewhere, but has been contrary to American tradition since the founding of our Republic. It has never prevented war in Europe or elsewhere, but on the contrary, cause suspicion and fears to grow between nations and inclines the rulers of men to war rather than to peace.

An agreement between the nations of the world to eliminate systems of compulsory military service would itself be greatly conducive to that restoration of peace which is so profoundly desired by all the plain peoples of the world, and would release their energies and resources for rebuilding their war-devastated countries. World-wide abolition of compulsory military service in no way precludes the maintenance of national or international military forces adequate for safeguarding national or collective security.

Therefore, before the United States adopts peacetime compulsory military service, the President of the United States, the Secretary of State, and the United States Delegate to the United Nations organization, should be urged to work unceasingly for an immediate international agreement whereby compulsory military service shall be eliminated from the policies and practices of all major nations.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the Record.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arizona?

There was no objection.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Chairman, in regard to the Landis amendment and the oft-repeated quotation from Daniel Webster. I want to say that while Daniel Webster was recognized as a great constitutional lawyer his interpretation of the constitutional powers and obligations were given more than a century ago. I believe they do not apply with the same force today as when originally given. The Constitution is a growing thing and the pronouncements of the greatest constitutional lawyer stating his views a hundred-and-thirty-odd years ago may not be a correct interpretation. I respect Daniel Webster as the great expounder of the Constitution in his day and for his time, but that is not to say that he would have the same views today, or, if he did, that such would be the correct view

As an instructor of our youth in civic obligations and duties, I have always believed and taught the following, as is a quotation from an elementary textbook which I prepared more than 20 years ago. It will be seen from the quotation that my view differs materially from the view of Daniel Webster as quoted by the gentleman from Indiana. The quotation is as follows:

The Constitution (the State and the Federal combined, or either alone) is very powerful, both to give and to take away, to protect and to require. It saved a young New England hobo, alone and friendless, from prison when he was wrongfully accused of stealing automobile tires. It took a student from a quiet home in Arizona and called upon him to give up his life on the battlefield of France.

Mr. Chairman, I have had little to say in this debate on renewing Selective Service-perhaps too little-but I have had plenty to think, and they are heartpiercing thoughts. I do not believe, and I cannot believe, that our national security is hazarded by any possible foe today as much as it was hazarded in 1940 when war had actually broken out and the flame of World War II had started. I know that some regard the danger greater. If I thought that the situation today is anything like comparable, or that our risk was as great now as in 1940, I should be equally willing now as then to take every possible step toward insuring national security. In my opinion there is no military force threatening us today with conquest and enslavement as there was pushing abroad in the world in 1940. doubt there is a foe to hazard us, but it is a foe that cannot be met in this way by the passage of this bill. We must ward off this foe in an effective way.

It seems that we lack consideration. I cannot search the heart of my colleagues, but I have sad and painful memories of 1940 and 1941. At that time, as now, I feared militarism and hated the very thought of peacetime conscription, but I voted for the Selective Service Act in 1940 and did it because I felt that the very safety of my country depended upon it. I had two sons who donned the uniform of our country, and I thought and hoped it was only for a period of one years' training, as it was then universally considered—and then what? Those votes will stand forever in our memories, burned in with white heat.

On August 12, 1941, a bill was brought into this chamber to extend the term of service and to authorize the President to send our men overseas, if need be. That vote I shall never forget. Before the vote was taken that day I went to the majority leader's desk and I asked my Democratic colleague in charge of the bill: "My God! Is this bill necessary?" Said he: "John, I have a son in uniform. If I knew that the passage of this bill today meant his death in battle, even so I must vote for it for our national safety." The vote was taken. There were 203 years and navs. There are many who believe that There were 203 yeas and 202 the successful outcome of the recent war hinged on that vote. All I know is that it was a cruel vote. I voted "yea" on that roll call. I do believe that the very safety of my country depended upon that vote, but it has cost my family untold anguish and my own flesh and blood paid the price of that conviction.

Is the situation today comparable? If I could feel that it is, or be convinced that the danger to America from abroad is as great, my vote would be the same today as on August 12, 1941. I feel confident the danger from abroad today is exaggerated but we cannot be sure, we cannot know, and we cannot jeopardize our country. And in addition to our sworn constitutional duty—our patriotic duty—we have international commitments we must carry out and an obligation to those now abroad carrying out those obligations. It is with a heavy heart and a sense of duty that I shall vote for this bill.

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I have listened now for many, many weary hours to the debate on this bill. I came here hoping I would be able to have my conscience appeased and be able to support some type of legislation. As matters now stand I could not under any circumstances support the legislation pending before this House, and I am going to vote against it. I am going to vote against it because I would not dare go back home and face the people I represent and say I voted for a bill in the shape this bill is in at the present time.

I am acting under no illusions about it because the committee is letting almost every Member of the House offer his favorite amendment to this bill, to make him feel good and weight it down with a lot of sugar-coating, as the gentleman from Missouri said. You know and I know that when this bill comes back from conference, if we pass it, it will come back stripped of all these amendments, and it will be the bill the Committee on Armed Services wants. I for one do not intend to vote for a bill under those circumstances.

Mr. Chairman, I have been here 10 years now. I was here in 1938, 1939, and 1940. I remember the debates and the fights in the well of this House during those years when we were in session until 2 o'clock in the morning and 1 o'clock in the morning. I cast those votes, the same as many of you did during those years, and you are still here and so am I. When they called me an isolationist and called me a Hitlerite, as they will call you a "Communistite" or something else if you do not go along with everything that they ask for, why, I survived. The people I represented said they wanted me to vote honest convictions. My majority jumped from 17,000 to 26,000 to 40,000 in the face of that sort of behavior. I want you to know I have just come back from my people, and have attended a State convention of the people of the my State. You will face the issue if you vote for this bill. You will face those people when you go back home. When you vote for the kind of bill that is submitted here today with an amendment that the committee unanimously submitted, even though the chairman stated in the well of the House that he himself was opposed to the committee amendment, what kind of a bill do you expect to get back from the conference?

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KEEFE. I yield.

Mr. SHORT. Does the gentleman think we have reached the point where we want to transplant the Prussian philosophy from Potsdam to the Pentagon?

Mr. KEEFE. I am not thinking of transplanting the Nazi philosophy. What I am thinking of is the American philosophy and the maintenance of the American philosophy.

Mr. BUSBEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KEEFE. I yield.

Mr. BUSBEY. I think the gentleman from Wisconsin has stated the problem before the House absolutely correctly. The committee has accepted many amendments, knowing that they will be thrown out in conference. The bill that is passed by the House will not be the bill that will come back from the con-The whole thing is a subterference. fuge and I do not think we should be a party to it.

Mr. KEEFE. In the interest of trying to get something done instead of carrying on this spectacle here in the House on this bill, why not bring this bill to a vote? Everybody knows how they are going to vote on this bill. Why carry on this silly thing of presenting all these amendments and having the bill sugarcoated? Let us vote on this bill.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Chairman, I move that debate on the bill and all amendments thereto close at 8 o'clock, 10 minutes to be reserved for the Committee.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. REED of New York and Mr. PLOESER) there wereayes 112, noes 45.
Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask if I do not have the floor?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman had been recognized but yielded to the gentleman from New York, so the time has come out of the gentleman's time.
Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I was assured it was not coming out of my time.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Chairman, I specifically stated in the parliamentary inquiry that the time was not to be taken out of the gentleman's

Mr. COOLEY. Otherwise, I would never have yielded the time.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will recognize the gentleman at this time under the agreement reached. Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. COOLEY. I yield.

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD immediately following the ruling of the Chair on my amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Cooley] is recognized.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I, too, have listened with great interest to this debate. Rather substantial and persuasive arguments have been made, both by the proponents and opponents of the pending measure. While I had not intended to speak or to say on the floor of the House anything further than that which I have already said concerning the pending bill, I feel constrained to do so, since listening to the speech of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Short]. As he spoke I was mindful of another day, March 12, 1940, when the selective service bill was before the House and when the gentleman from Missouri entertained exactly the same views as he entertains at the present time. He was just as vociferous and perhaps far more eloquent than he is today in his denunciation of the bill providing for selective service, upon which a final vote was taken on August 12, 1940. I wonder now what would have happened had his views prevailed on August 12, 1940, when selective service was continued by the bare margin of one single vote. We all know that had the gentleman's views prevailed at that time our armed forces would have been completely demoralized and our Nation would have been defenseless when the Japs struck Pearl Harbor only a few short months later. I might even say, "Isolation, isolation, oh, what crimes have been committed in thy name."

The gentleman from Missouri asks who was for this bill. He said the churches are not for it; the colleges and universities are not for it: the mothers and fathers are not for it; the farm organizations and labor organizations are not for it. Certainly none of these organizations are for war. I might ask the gentleman who and what organization in America is for war. The fact remains that we had a war and glorious and gallant victories were won. The institutions of America were saved, and brave men died on crimson seas and on the altars of freedom throughout the world.

If this were only a peacetime military conscription bill and I so regarded it. I would certainly not vote for it or give it the benefit of my support, but, gen-tlemen, we are not living in normal times. Our armed forces are not at home on American soil. The documents of peace have not been drafted. Only the cease-fire order has been issued. We are certainly not too far removed from at least the possibilities of conflict. Our armies are scattered throughout the world and American men are in distant lands. Certainly the young men of America do not want to abandon the vocations and avocations of private life and to be inducted into the armed services and to cross the seas and to serve and to suffer the hardships of military life in the distant outposts in different parts of the world, where the Stars and Stripes have been planted.

While I appreciate the inconvenience and the burdens of military service even at this hour, even after the victories have been won and men have by the millions been maimed and murdered, I am not unmindful of the blood that has been shed and of the lives that have been lost in the cause of freedom. We are not now about to draft men from their peaceful pursuits merely for the purpose of training them for combat. If this were merely a training bill, perhaps 6 months would be sufficient. If this were a draft bill preparatory to war, perhaps even 2 years would be long enough. In time of war men were inducted for the duration, and only God knew how long that would be. The men we are now about to bring into the services will stand guard in the graveyards of the living dead, where their brethren fell on foreign shores, and where they rest tonight beneath the Stars and Stripes in the cemeteries of the world. Yes; ceasefire orders have been issued, and the men now going into the service will not be shot and maimed and murdered unless the victories won on the battlefields of the past are imperiled. While we are thinking about the effect that this will have on the youth of America, let us contemplate the lives of those who died in the uniforms of their country. Yes; let us realize that the world is far from peace.

I am thinking now, ladies and gentlemen, not only of those Americans who sleep in the graveyards of the world, but of those Americans who tonight are separated from their homes and loved ones and who stand watch on distant battlefields. Yes. I am thinking of those 5,000 American boys in Trieste and of the 10,000 in Berlin, and of the other thousands of boys who served their country in Vienna, of those who served mid the shambles of Tokyo and Yokohama, and of those who tonight are looking on the gray ashes of Nagasaki and Hiroshima, who want to come home to their mothers and fathers, to their loved ones, their wives and their sweethearts. Who is going to relieve them if we do not provide

Just last fall I traveled through the countries of Europe and about a year ago I went with the distinguished gentleman from Missouri[Mr. SHORT], a very pleasant and charming companion, into other parts of the world. Yes, and I have visited our troops in the islands of the Pacific, and I can tell you that I did not see a single American boy who did not want to come home. How can they come home if we do not furnish the necessary

The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHORT] asks who is for this bill. My answer to him is that every military man in America-in the Army and the Navy and the Marine Corps, in the National Guard and the Reserve Corps. every man from the Commander in Chief down to the last private who is now on duty across the sea. Yes; every man who has faith and confidence in those to whom we actually entrusted the destinies of this Nation in the cruel hours and in the uncertain months of a great conflict in which our Nation's greatest victories were won. Can it be possible that all of these men are warmongers? Is this great Armed Services Committee of ours so dumb that they would be duped and misled? If I were not convinced that this bill were necessary and absolutely essential to the safety and security of my Nation, I would oppose it.

We were told—and I still believe—that the Selective Service was the democratic way of raising an army. The rich and the poor, the black and the white, the high and the low, from all walks of life, wore the same uniforms and they fought for the same righteous cause. We are now told that American patriotism can be bought for a price. The opponents of this bill say that if we will pay men enough they will volunteer for the armed forces. We are told that the dollar sign will attract men and that in pursuit of proper pay they will be willing to abandon their homes and firesides and flock into the services, to be shipped across the sea and to serve in foreign lands.

I am willing to provide adequate and substantial pay for every man who wears the uniform, but is it worth more to serve in the postwar period, when the shooting is over, than it was to serve when the world was on fire and human blood was running in rivulets and making crimson the seven seas? The fighting men of America never went on a strike and they never failed to fight because of the lack of pay. I am willing now to increase the pay, but I am not willing to increase it merely for the purpose of attracting men in the armed services. Can the Nation ever in war or peace afford to pay the members of our own forces according to their own talents. Those of professions bled and died with those in the lowly walks of life in times of war, and this has always been true, and I am sure that it ever shall be true. The rich and the mighty, the weak and the poor all rally to the standards of freedom when our way of life is challenged. By the method we are now about to employ the men to be drafted will come from the homes of the rich and the poor alike, and they will serve together, to the end that the victories which have been won shall not be lost, and the men who have died shall not have died in vain.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. LANDIS].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Chairman, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. REED of New York moves that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken out.

The gentleman The CHAIRMAN. from New York is recognized for 5 minutes in support of his motion.

Mr. REED of New York. It is perfectly obvious to me and to every man in the House that I offer this amendment to obtain time. It will be the first time that I have taken the floor on this bill so I have no apology to make. will probably take no more time than this 5 minutes.

I know something about the American boy. I have worked with them and I have trained them over a great period of years. I know something of their ideals when they come under proper influences at home and go to the right kind of colleges and schools.

I think the most important thing about this whole conscription bill is this: First, that it is not necessary; and, next, it is taking the boys at a very formative age and destroying certain ideals that have been inculcated in them under proper home influences and school influences. You cannot tell me that if a boy is taken for 2 years or even for 1 year and put under Army control, as this bill proposes, that his whole outlook on life and his whole attitude toward this Republic will not be changed.

I knew a boy before this last war who came from a fine American home, trained in the best American tradition, he was drafted, taken from school, and was killed in the service. He excelled in his classes and in athletics, was a fine oars-When he was killed some of his buddies got together and went up to Canada, where the tragedy took place, to see if they could find something he had left that they might bring back to his parents in their distress. What did they find? They found this little document up there entitled "My Guide." and they took it back to the old folks in Pennsylvania. Let me read it to you:

MY GUIDE

To respect my country, my profession, and myself. To be honest and fair with my fellowmen, as I expect them to be honest and square with me. To be a loyal citizen of the United States of America. To speak of it with praise and act always as a trust-worthy custodian of its good name. To be To be man whose name carries weight with it wherever it goes. To remember that success lies within myself, in my own brain, my own ambition, my own courage and deter-mination. To expect difficulties and to force my way through them; to turn hard experience into capital for future struggles.

To steer clear of dissipation and guard my health of body and peace of mind as a most precious stock in trade.

Finally, to take a good trip on the joys of life, to play the game like a man; to fight against nothing so hard as my own weakss, and to grow in strength a gentleman, a Christian.

There is America! Preserve that part of America. Do not take them into the Army during the formative age of their

This bill should be killed here and now. Mr. SHORT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REED of New York. I yield.

Mr. SHORT. In answer to our good friends, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Cooley] and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. KILDAY] who pointed out that I led the fight against the extension of the draft that carried by only one vote, we were told then that this was a peace measure, this would insure peace. I told you that it was another step leading us inevitably into war.

Well, the fact of the matter is, they got the draft law that was going to keep us out of war and insure peace. They repealed the arms embargo, they repealed the Neutrality Act, they armed merchant vessels, and all of the rest of They carried every measure they wanted; and we were not kept out of war, and today the whole world finds itself in wreck and ruin.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the remaining time be divided among those who have amendments on the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. MacKINNON. Mr. Chairman, I

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my preferential motion.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. FULTON. Mr. Chairman, I object. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the preferential motion.

The question comes up, Shall you implement the foreign policy of the United States by real action and by having a force that will be respected wherever our boys may be? Or shall you immediately at the close of this debate abdicate everything and side with people who have been called isolationists and probably yet proudly wear the badge? Or shall you take the challenge as the United States did early in 1941, when this House of Representatives, by a vote of one person, decided to continue the draft?

I was one of those fellows who registered in the draft for World War II and later volunteered, but I had no such resentment the way these people talk here. And, believe you me, while in the Navy I was glad to serve and proud to be with those fellows. I did not think that we were rising then to our opportunities and our responsibilities when we had many people in the country saying: "Just sit down and fold your hands; Hitler will take care of himself; so will Tojo; so will the Emperor."

It did not work out, and Pearl Harbor happened. I am not one of those who wants to push militarism, but I do want to defend the United States of America, and I want our forces to be protected wherever they are.

You are not playing fair with the boys at Trieste, as the gentleman from North Carolina said, unless you give them adequate backing. You are not playing fair with the people who are clear out in Yokohama and Tokyo, Berlin and Vienna, unless there are replacements for them. You are not playing fair with the boys wherever they may be away from this country unless you give them more than a token force and a token backing by those of us in civilian life.

I hope the preferential motion will be voted down.

May I finish by saying that wherever our Army is, I want to see them well taken care of. I want to see our foreign policy well implemented.

In closing, may I ask the Armed Services Committee why our occupation policy in Japan is so fixed that the Coca-Cola Co. gets twice the number of yen when it changes its dollars into occupation currency as the missions of our churches and our educational associations? Why are they given the first priority by the State Department and the occupation forces when our people who are the missionaries and educators have to pay $1 for 50 yen? What is it that the Coca-Cola Co. has? What is this inside track? What is the inside track that the other commercial firms have over the Protestant, Catholic, and Jewish charities so these worthy church activities have to pay the highest rate of exchange there is?

If we are going to have a draft policy, we better straighten out some of the Army occupation policies. I would like to see the Armed Services Committee and State Department look into this portion of the Japanese occupation, and let the American people know the full facts. This discrimination against our churches and charities should be changed at once.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired. All time has expired.

The question is on the preferential

The motion was rejected.

Mr. BENDER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BENDER: Page 44, line 2, after the period, insert "Provided,

That no person inducted into or enlisted in the armed forces for training and service under this act during the period of such service as a condition of voting in any election for President, Vice President, electors for President or Vice President, or for Senator, or Member of the House of Representatives shall be required to pay any poll tax, or other tax, or make any other payment to any State or political subdivision thereof."

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will

Mr. WILLIAMS. I make the point of order that the amendment is not germane.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule. The Chair has examined the amendment. It seems to deal entirely with persons who are inducted or enlisted in the armed forces under this act. The Chair holds that the amendment is germane and overrules the point of order.

Mr. BENDER. Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, this was a part of the Selective Service Act that was passed during the Second World War. The other body incorporated it in the bill that it acted upon favorably only last week. I am sure you all understand it. It provides that any person who is inducted under this law is not subject to a payment of a poll tax or any other tax during his period of service.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Bender].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Williams) there were—ayes 106, noes 35.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. PLOESER].

Mr. PLOESER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the two amendments I have on the desk be read successively and that we consider them together.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Ploeser: Page 44, line 11, after the period, insert "under any such program of national procurement, the President shall recognize the valid claims of American small business to participate in such contracts, in such manufactures, and in such distribution of materials, and small business shall be granted a fair share of the orders placed exclusively for the use of the armed forces or for other Federal agencies now or hereafter designated in this section. For the purpose of this section a business enterprise shall be determined to be 'small business' if (1) its position in the trade or industry of which it is a part is not dominant, (2) the number of its employees does not exceed 500, and (3) it is independently owned and operated."

"(d) (1) The President is empowered through the Secretary of Defense to require all producers of steel in the United States to make available to individuals, firms, associations, companies, corporations, or organized manufacturing industries having orders for steel products, or steel materials required by the armed forces, such percentages of the steel production of such producers, in equal proportion deemed necessary for the expeditious execution of orders for such products or materials. Compliance with such requirement shall be obligatory on all such producers of steel and such requirement shall take precedence over all orders and contracts theretofore placed with such producers. any such producer of steel or the responsible head or heads thereof refuses to comply with such requirement, the President, through the Secretary of Defense, is authorized to take immediate possession of the plant or plants of such producer, and, through the appropriate branch, bureau, or department of the armed forces, to insure compliance with such requirement. Any such producer of steel or the responsible head or heads thereof refusing to comply with such requirement shall be deemed guilty of a felony and upon con-viction thereof shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than 3 years and a fine not exceeding $50,000.

"(2) The President shall report to the Congress on the final day of each 6 months' period following the date of enactment of this act the percentage figure, or if such information is not available, the approximate percentage figure, of the total steel production in the United States required to be made available during such period for the execution of orders for steel products and steel materials required by the armed forces, if such percentage figure is in excess of 10 percent.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield, these amendments fit in with the committee amendments which are part of the bill, and part of the draft legislation in World War I and World War II. So far as I am concerned, we will accept the amendments.

Mr. VINSON. There is no objection on this side.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendments offered by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Ploeser]. The amendments were agreed to.

Mrs. DOUGLAS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mrs. DougLAS: On page 44, line 11, after the period add a new subsection to read as follows:

"Sec. . (a) Every contract entered into by the United Sttaes for the supplying of goods or services to be used by, for, or in connection with any person inducted into, or enlisted in, the armed forces of the United States under the provisions of this act shall specify, as a condition thereof, that the company or individual with whom the contract is made shall not discriminate in the employment of any person, or in the terms and conditions of employment of any person, because of his race, color, national origin, ancestry, language, or religion, and shall specify that a breach of such condition shall result in the termination of such contract. It shall be the duty of every contracting officer making a contract on behalf of the United States for the supplying of such goods or services to terminate immediately any such contract when he is satisfied that the condition prescribed by this section has been breached.

"(b) No member of the armed forces or person in the employ of the United States shall procure any goods or services to be used by, for, or in connection with any person inducted into, or enlisted in, the armed forces of the United States under the provisions of this act from any company or individual which discriminates in the employment of any person, or in the terms and conditions of employment of any person, because of his race, color, national origin, ancestry, language, or religion."

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the amendment is not germane.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will be pleased to hear the gentleman on the point of order.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, the amendment goes far beyond the realm of this legislation. It reminds me of the Englishman shingling his house. He said there was such a fog that the first thing he knew he had shingled 15 or 20 feet out on the fog. This amendment goes so far from the purposes of this legislation that I cannot understand why anybody would offer it who knows anything about the rules of the House.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentlewoman from California desire to be heard on the point of order? Mrs. DOUGLAS. Mr. Chairman, I think the amendment is germane. Section 17 (a) deals with procurement and purchase of materials. The amendment simply specifies what kind of contracts must be entered into in the procurement of materials. The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has examined the amendment and is inclined to believe that under the broad purposes of the bill the amendment is in order. It seeks to effectuate portions of the declaration of policy and relates to persons and duties within the scope of the bill. The Chair accordingly overrules the point of order.

Under the order of the Committee heretofore entered, the last 10 minutes were to be reserved to the members of the committee. Therefore, the Chair is unable to recognize the gentlewoman for debate in support of her amendment.

Mrs. DOUGLAS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from California.

There was no objection.

Mrs. DOUGLAS. Mr. Chairman, this amendment which I offer would require fair-employment practices of any company or individual selling goods or services to the Government under any selective-service program.

Mr. Chairman, when we draft men to serve in the Army—even though the draft is not necessitated because of a war emergency—we propose to put this Nation on a war basis.

President Roosevelt issued an Executive order before our entrance into World War II reaffirming a policy of full participation in the defense program by all persons, regardless of race, creed, color, or national origin, and directing certain action in furtherance of said

Executive Order 8802 read in part:

Whereas it is the policy of the United States to encourage full participation in the national defense program by all citizens of the United States, regardless of race, creed, color, or national origin, in the firm belief that the democratic way of life within the Nation can be defended successfully only with the help and support of all groups within its borders; and

Whereas there is evidence that available and needed workers have been barred from employment in industries engaged in de-fense production solely because of consideration of race, creed, color, or national origin, to the detriment of workers' morale and of national unity;

Now, therefore, by virtue of the authority vested in me by the Constitution and the statutes, and as a prerequisite to the successful conduct of our national defense production effort, I do hereby reaffirm the policy of the United States that there shall be no discrimination in the employment of workers in defense industries or Government because of race, creed, color, or national origin, and I do hereby declare that it is the duty of employers and of labor organizations, in furtherance of said policy and of this order, to provide for the full and equitable participation of all workers in defense industries, without discrimination because of race, creed, color, or national origin;

it is hereby ordered as follows:

1. All departments and agencies of the Government of the United States concerned with vocational and training programs for defense production shall take special measures appropriate to assure that such programs are administered without discrimi-nation because of race, creed, color, or national origin;

2. All contracting agencies of the Government of the United States shall include in all defense contracts hereafter negotiated by them a provision obligating the contractor not to discriminate against any worker because of race, creed, color, or nati origin.

The need for unity and justice is as great today as it was when President Roosevelt issued his Executive order.

The Republican platform included an unequivocal endorsement of permanent FEPC legislation. I regret that the leadership of this Congress has not seen fit to allow FEPC legislation to come out of committee so that the House and Senate might vote on it.

FEPC has met the fate of all other needed social legislation-housing, price control, health, old-age pensions, cation, and anti-poll-tax and antilynch legislation.

The Republican leadership now has the opportunity to at least support and pass this amendment which will guarantee fair employment practices in those plants which will supply materials for the men who will be drafted under this

That is the very least that can be done for the Negro soldier.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from California [Mrs. DougLAS].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mrs. DougLAS) there were-ayes 28, noes 114.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MITCHELL: On page 48, line 19, after the word "act", insert these words "or at such earlier time as may be specified in a concurrent resolution the two Houses of the Congress for that purpose."

The amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the order heretofore entered, the committee reporting the bill was entitled to 10 minutes. The chairman of the committee has advised the Chair that he would be content with 5 minutes. It is now 5 minutes before 8 o'clock, so the chairman of the committee is entitled to the remaining time to close debate.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York [Mr. Andrews].

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Dur-

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Durham], a member of the committee, for 5 minutes.

Mr. COLE of Missouri. Mr. Chairman. a point of order. According to the clock I am looking at, there are only 3 minutes remaining.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee has 5 minutes remaining.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Chairman, I understood according to the agreement that the committee had 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair advised the gentleman from New York that he had 10 minutes remaining before the 10 minutes had begun to run. The Chair understood the chairman to say that he would be content with 5 minutes.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Chairman, I understand that I still have 5 minutes remaining myself. I then yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Durnam] and 2 minutes to the gendeman from Ohio [Mr. Elston], who has a very important announcement to make about the court-martial bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will advise the gentleman that he has consumed part of the time of the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. DURHAM. Mr. Chairman, I decline to yield further.

Mr. COLE of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, the motion was carried to close debate at 8 o'clock, is that not correct?

The CHAIRMAN. That is correct. Mr. COLE of Missouri. There are only 21/2 minutes left until 8 o'clock.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina will proceed.

Mr. DURHAM. Mr. Chairman, I do not yield further. Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the Clerk's desk. The CHAIRMAN. There will be an opportunity to vote on amendments when the time has expired.

Mr. DURHAM. Mr. Chairman, far be it from me to try to lecture the House, as the gentleman from Missouri has done. We in the House who were here in 1939 and 1940 remember the many lectures we received. What we are facing here is something realistic. It is realistic because most of you Members have voted for a budget for 1949 of $17,500,000,000. Initial 1949 budget request__ $10,600,000,000 Supplemental 1949 request_ 3, 200, 000, 000

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from North Carolina has expired.

In accordance with the statement made by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Andrews], the Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Elston] for the balance of the time, 2 minutes.

Mr. COLE of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, a point of order. There are not 2 minutes remaining 2 minutes remaining.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is keeping time by the clock at the back of the Chamber.

Mr. ELSTON. Mr. Chairman, in general debate I indicated that at the conclusion of the reading of the pending bill, I would offer the military justice bill as an amendment. Since it is not essential that it be offered in order that it become a part of the bill we are now considering. I will in the interest of saving time at this late hour, not offer the military justice bill as an amendment. It is not necessary for the reason the other body has adopted the military justice bill as it was written by the House as an amendment to the Senate bill. If I were to offer the bill, which is 47 pages long, as an amendment at this time, and unanimous consent were not obtained to dispense with reading it, the reading clerk might have to read the entire bill. Furthermore it would then be open for amendment as each section would be read.

We can save all of this time because when the House conferees meet in conference with the Senate conferees, if this bill is passed, the House conferees can simply agree to the Senate amendment. The same result will be accomplished as if we attached the military justice bill to the pending bill at this

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Elston] has expired.

All time has expired under the order heretofore entered.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all Members of the House may have permission to extend their remarks in the RECORD at this point in the order in which they are handed in.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. O'TOOLE. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, I would like to know at this point what has happened to the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill?

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York | Mr. Andrews!?

There was no objection.

Mr. MacKINNON. Mr. Chairman, the question has been asked, "What emergency makes this action necessary?"

Mr. Chairman, it is common knowledge that the emergency which compels this action is that we have a President who has so mismanaged our foreign affairs since the close of World War II that he has not only come close to losing all for which World War II was fought but has also brought us close to the brink of another war. For a strong President diplomacy is sufficient but a weak President needs a big Army. That is the emergency and I do not believe we are going to improve permanently our prestige among foreign nations until we permanently improve our President. That is the necessity for this legislation.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. Chairman, my amendment would provide that by concurrent resolution of both Houses of Congress the bill if enacted into law could be terminated without consent of the President at any time.

A BANKRUPT FOREIGN POLICY REQUIRES MILITARY CONSCRIPTION

Mr. SMITH of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, since 1919, as a member of the American Legion I have urged adequate national defense for this country. I contend today that world conditions require a strong defense system. question before the House turns upon the method we ought to use in order to secure the manpower to equip such a system. I am unalterably opposed to drafting men for military service in time of peace. So far in this debate there has been no showing of need for a 2,000,-000-man peacetime Army. Nor has there been a showing that it is impossible for the armed services to recruit a sufficient number by voluntary enlistment. In fact the record shows that mental and physical standards have been raised to such a high degree that four out of five boys are being rejected. Further, there is no evidence in the record to show that we need 2,000,000 men in the services except a statement in the majority report that it is necessary "in order to provide the Nation with minimum adequate security" and then the committee fails to prove its contention.

I am quite certain, Mr. Chairman, that we can build an adequate defense for this country, first, by adopting and promoting a sensible recruiting program and, second, by placing the responsibility for a strong Reserve system upon the National Guard, the Officers' Reserve Corps, and the Organized Reserves, with proper pay schedules for each group. It is in the American tradition that in time of emergency this country relies upon civilians—a civilian Army—to defend our homes and institutions. Let us not depart therefrom.

Mr. Chairman, this legislation is much more important than the drafting of our young men for military service, important as that is. As I see it, the President and the State Department are here confessing that our foreign policy is a bankrupt institution. We are here considering a call for soldiers who will be trained to fight an enemy somewhere in the world. A call such as that comes when diplomats fail—when our State Department seeks to bolster its position by a show of force. Passage of this bill means that troops will move at the command of the President.

Our foreign policy, Mr. Chairman, started in a tail spin at Teheran; it was accelerated at Yalta, and it crashed at Potsdam. Today we are reaping the evils of a bankrupt foreign policy which the unfortunate Mr. Marshall inherited from his predecessors. He is doing his best but it is not enough in view of the international debacle.

We were told, Mr. Chairman, during the debate on the European recovery program that it was imperative that we vote the requested billions as that was the only alternative to many more billions for increased armament. The ultimatum was: Take ERP or a large standing Army, Navy, and Air Corps. But here we are today, Mr. Chairman, after having voted for the European recovery program, asking for that huge defense force. notwithstanding. Does that make sense? Who lied? Who fooled the American people—or did they? Not only is the President asking all these things but he will soon enter into military alliances with the 16 European countries. This is now our foreign policy—a world WPA, military alliances, and military conscription.

We are engaged in a power program to augment our futile foreign policy and if continued it will lead us to the same identical place where other countries have gone which embraced the principle of force and that is: straight to destruction. If we adopt this legislation we must follow through and approve economic controls, manpower controls, and the regimentation that goes with dictatorial power. There will be no escape from that kind of situation. We need only look to the history of empires to discover that they lead down blind alleys and the enslavement of their people. Is that what we fought two world wars for? Is this the liberty and freedom we hear so much about from official Government papers?

Mr. Chairman, we must turn from the wild embrace of force and build a strong constructive foreign policy by strict adherence to principles that have made this country the greatest, most productive on earth. We must seek peace by reliance upon law—international law—and not upon the whim, the will or capriciousness of individuals. Leagues of nations, world government, or united nations do not hold out hope for a peaceful world as we now realize.

The way to a just and lasting peace must come through individuals who will at all times under all circumstances say "and my neighbor."

The Bible has this to say, Mr. Chairman, about my theme:

Not by might, nor by power, but by My spirit, saith the Lord God of Hosts.

Might is only temporary, but the spirit remains forever.

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Chairman, I am convinced that we cannot obtain the increased armed strength we need without a draft law.

To me the most amazing thing about this long debate is that no one is seriously challenging our need for increased manpower in our armed forces. Section 2 of the bill states the increased numbers needed for adequate armed strength. They are: Army, 837,000; Navy and Marine Corps, 666,882; Air Force, 502,000; total, 2,005,882. Amid the avalanche of amendments in the past few days it is significant that not one was offered to reduce these increased numbers. Where did these numbers come from? from the despised and derided brass and braid, our generals and admirals, who recently had something to do with winning two wars at once. Why did no one challenge these figures by amendment? Because none of us except expert military men know exactly how to figure our manpower needs to fit our security problem. Why did we all accept without formal challenge these estimates that are over four times our prewar peacetime strength? Because we all know that, whatever this is now, this is not peace-Members have misquoted Secretary Marshall as having said there is no danger of war. Of course, he did not say this. I venture to say no Member of Congress thinks this. No Member in his right mind would vote to sustain the largest Navy on earth, to build a 70-group air force, if he thought there was no danger of war. During this debate many Members have tried to measure this danger in words, the danger from Soviet aggression. The acts of this House speak louder than the words of any Member our collective measure of the degree of danger; we have voted for a great Navy, a 70-group air force, a modern Army, and have accepted without amendment an increase to over 2,000,000 men for these forces. This is not a peacetime force. This is not peacetime conscription we are considering.

This force will require about 900,000 new men next year, to replace expiring enlistments and provide the necessary increases. The Army say they cannot obtain them by recruiting alone. If I thought, as some of my colleagues do, that the Army was deliberately sabotaging its own recruiting program, deliberately jeopardizing our national defense to put over the draft or UMT, I would immediately demand the court martial of the responsible officers on charges of treason; I would cortainly vote against any appropriations at all to be handled by such traitors. I do not believe these charges. I know the weaknesses of our military men; they make mistakes, they are often inefficient and wasteful, but whenever I have tested them they have been trying hard to get physically sound recruits with at least a fifth-grade mentality. I have checked on generals, captains, and recruiting sergeants, and they cannot get enough recruits now. In 1940 and 1941 and during the war I thought volunteering had nothing to do with the draft. In the last 2 years I have realized that I was wrong and that the possibility of being drafted stimulates volunteering. I do not blame our boys and young They have grown up during a period when their country used selective service in time of need, and they naturally think that if there is need for them their Government will put selective service in force. It is quite possible that, with the draft law on the books sufficient volunteers will be obtained, but they will not be obtained otherwise. It is interesting to note that those who approve volunteering and oppose the draft here and all over the country are not taking the lead in any recruiting drives.

The same patriotic spirit is necessary to make either conscription or volunteering work, for conscription, to be successful, must be largely voluntary, and recruiting, to be successful, must have an element of popular compulsion behind it. Our young men will respond willingly as soon as we set up a fair selective service system; we must first discharge our responsibility by voting whether we believe they are needed or

We must do more than prepare to wage war. We must continue to wage peace. There is pending in the House a bill to strengthen the United Nations. In paragraph 5 of section 1 of that bill we say the policy of the United States must provide for pressing for agreements to provide the United Nations with armed forces as contemplated in the Charter, and for agreements to achieve universal control of weapons of mass destruction and universal regulation and reduction of armaments, including armed forces. under adequate safeguards to protect complaining nations against violation and evasion.

We should enact that bill. First, however, we must prepare to lead through strength. We must enact this draft law.

Mrs. DOUGLAS. Mr. Chairman, I said I would vote for this bill if the Shafer amendment were adopted.

The Shafer amendment provided that no person should be registered or inducted under this act until January 31, 1949, and then only after the President. with the concurrence of the Congress, should find that sufficient voluntary enlistments had not been provided by an intensified voluntary enlistment campaign.

The amendment went on to say that this intensified campaign was to begin at

(a) The base pay of enlisted men was to be increased 10 percent for all grades. (b) The passing mark on the Army Classification Test was to be reduced

(c) Two-year new enlistments were to be accepted for all age groups suitable military service, with enlistment privileges at least similar to those now provided for longer term enlistments.

(d) One-year and two-year reenlistments were to be accepted, with proportionate payment of any reenlistment incentives, and other privileges similar to those now provided for longer term reenlistments.

Regular monthly reports and consultation on the methods and results of the intensified campaigning were to be furnished by the armed forces to a special subcommittee of the House Armed Services Committee established for that pur-

The Shafer amendment was passed. but it has been changed in two major respects: The base pay of enlisted men has not been increased; and Congress has passed the buck to the President to make the final decision as to the need for a peacetime compulsory draft.

I cannot vote for the bill in its present

Many men are dropping out of the Army today because they cannot support their families on Army pay and because they cannot find homes for their families near Army barracks.

High prices and housing are contributing factors to the shortage of manpower in the Army. We are indeed asked to pay a high price for the failure of this Congress to pass adequate housing legislation and for its failure to check

Moreover, if a draft is to be passedand I am willing to vote for it when the need has been irrefutably proved-Congress should review the volunteer program of the Army itself. Congress should itself determine whether or not a peacetime draft is necessary. In a matter of such great importance I do not believe we can refuse to shoulder this responsibility which is rightfully ours. Indeed, to seek to do so is to play the cheapest of political tricks.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. Chairman, under the request of the gentleman from New York, would it be possible for me to insert my remarks in the Record at this point?

The CHAIRMAN. It is. Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to the imposition of a peacetime draft on the people of the United States. I am disappointed that the Congress did not adopt my amendment to the measure now under consideration which would have drafted excess profits at the same time we drafted boys for the armed services. Why do we think it right to draft our manhood and wrong to draft the profits which will follow as a result of this military program? Surely, if an emergency exists which calls for the drafting of our youth, no one should expect to make excess profits out of such a Everybody in this Chamber knows that my amendment represented the wishes of the great majority of our citizens. The way to stop wars is to take the profits out of war.

It has been said that we do not have time to enact a tax measure such as I have proposed. My answer is that we have plenty of time because we have the remainder of this year to enact such legislation. We do not need to adjourn on June 19, and we should not, because we have this and too much other unfinished business before us.

We have just finished a war. What did our victory-I use the word advisedlycost us? On one side we have a total cost of $336,000,000,000 in cash, plus the dead, the wounded, and the missing; on the other, the huge profits made by our large corporations, which exceeded $56,000,000,000 in cash plus the power to dominate the lives, the welfare, and the security of our people.

What will this selective-service program mean to us? It will mean more power and money for the armed forces than they ever dreamed of having in peacetime in this Republic.

The cost of selective service and UMT to our spirits, our psychology, and our ideals will be staggering. Arnold Toynbee, the great historian, has shown that whenever the most powerful nation in any civilization has turned militaristic, it has after a brief burst of glory collapsed. That has happened 16 times to the 16 major civilizations of the earth during the past 6,000 years. The danger we face in turning from personal independence and initiative to mass conscription is plain for all to see.

What will be the cost of this program? As I understand this measure, $2,149,-000,000 would be expended for the training equipment and the initial machinery setting the program in operation, and $3,900,000,000 for reequipping the 25 divisions of the Army. These items are in addition to the $11,000,000,000 budget appropriation, the $3,400,000,000 supplementary appropriation, and the $822,-Thus, 000,000 Air Corps appropriation. the military budget for 1949 is seen to be more than $21,000,000,000. And yet we refuse to draft excess profits!

To indicate just how much money this is let us take just three billion of the twenty-one billion dollars and see what our Government could do with it in useful purposes for the people of the United States.

With $3,000,000,000 the United States Government could do the following things each year:

First. Construct one 10-room, modern school building in every county in the United States, a $50,000 library in every county and a $150,000 hospital in every county.

Second. Employ 10 doctors and 10 nurses full-time for schools and publichealth services in every county.

Third. Purchase 10 modern school busses in every county, maintain 1 psychiatric clinic in every county and provide 10 full-time recreational workers in every county.

Fourth. Bring all schools of the counties up to a reasonable standard of efficiency, provide free education for 3,000,-000 children under 18 not now in school, pay all expenses of a 3-year post-graduate course for 10,000 students each year and erect a $750,000 trade and technical school in each congressional district, Fifth. Pay 1 year's expenses of 900,000 boys at college or technical schools.

Sixth. After all these expenditures have been made the Government would have $15,300,000 left over the first year. In subsequent years, as the counties caught up with their needs in buildings, buses. and so forth, not more than $2,000,000,000 a year would be required.

It is my belief that the passage of the selective service bill of 1948 would be one of the most tragic errors which could be committed by the Congress. Let us look at the implications of this bill from the perspective of an enlightened American citizen. We believe that this radical departure in American history-the imposition of peacetime military conscription and the expanded military program of which it is a part-will be interpreted by all nations of the world to mean that this country expects war. And so the fateful game of threat and counterthreat, bluff and counterbluff continues. The bill provides another lap in the spiraling armaments race which will bring the world crashing down on our heads.

This program is based on the hopeless assumption that the world is irrevocably divided into two power blocs, and that consequently we must abandon all semblances of peaceful relations with the other half of the planet. Less than 3 years after the completion of the most devastating of all wars, this program gives support to the charge that the United States has rejected the notion of world cooperation in favor of the long outmoded fallacy that military preparedness, advisable as it may be, can guarantee peace. The United States must not turn its back on cooperation and the United Nations as a means of insuring

The proposal to establish selective service and eventually UMT in this country is another useless but highly dangerous attempt at insurance. It is useless because it would train millions of young men in the techniques of fighting the last war. It is dangerous, not only because it is provocative, but because it would train the young men of this Nation to think in terms of war rather than in terms of peace and to accustom themselves to authoritarian command rather than to the independent spirit of free citizenship.

I am not suggesting that we should be so foolish as to disarm ourselves unilaterally. We did that once, with disastrous results. We must remain strong in scientific research, in polar aviation, and wherever strength would count in an atomic war, until we can bring about universal disarmament. But I am suggesting that we make it much clearer than we have to date that we desire to disarm, and that we look to the United Nations to take over the job of policing the world-as I have constantly urged through the creation of an international police force—at the earliest possible moment. I am suggesting that we stop thinking in strategic terms which are now meaningless. And, above all, I would like to suggest that we, as responsible public officials, think more about how to prevent the next war and less about what we should do if war comes. The greatest danger of an atomic war is the widespread acceptance of its inevitability.

It is my belief that we would be remiss in our duty to the common people of this country if we did not point out the grave effects of the system of conscription on our political institutions. We must emphasize again that this is a permanent system. Let no one be deceived into the belief that this proposal for peacetime conscription is intended to be a temporary measure merely because the bill contains an expiration date. On the contrary, the record of the hearings before the Armed Services Committees of both Houses of Congress is replete with forthright statements from authorized spokesmen of the National Military Establishment that this program is designed to remain in effect indefinitely until universal military training adopted as the permanent law of the land. We must then anticipate the growing importance of the military bureaucracy in political affairs.

We do not shirk our obligation to expose what we consider to be the effect of this new pressure group on the processes of American democracy. Any increase requested in the appropriations for the Military Establishment, any extension of the term of service, any proposal to increase the scope and numbers of the vast military hierarchy, will have the support of a Nation-wide organization. It would be a long step away from democracy to create a Nation-wide bureaucracy, financed from public funds, and under the domination of the Military Establishment, which through its influence in elections could decide the limits of its own activities. There is, I believe, no more sinister indication for the complete submergence of American political and economic democracy than the permanent system of military training provided by this bill.

In my judgment, the United States should not begin a permanent peacetime conscription policy. No spokesman of the national defense establishment has suggested to the committee that we are today facing a crisis comparable to the 1940 situation when the draft was instituted for the only time in our peacetime history.

The considerable degree of hysteria prevalent today is in large measure due to the propaganda efforts of the armed services themselves. As pointed out by the Harness committee report, Secretary Royall admitted that the Army was spending large amounts of the taxpayers' money to obtain a permanent system of conscription. The proponents of conscription imply that the United States is helpless and unprepared. On the contrary, the inescapable facts are quite different. We have the greatest Navy in the peacetime history of the world; we have a splendid Air Force; we have the leading position in the field of ultramodern weapons of destruction, the atomic bomb, bacteriological warfare, and other developments almost too terrible to contemplate. And, finally, our industrial position is incomparably superior to any possible combination of other nations.

We have taken all steps necessary to provide the United States with an adequate defense against any enemy. most modern weapons, the greatest Air Force and Navy in the world, the possession of the newest and most effective atomic bombs, and a modernized ground and service force backed by the productive resources and manpower of the United States are a formidable defense.

The men needed to complete our Ground Forces can be secured, just as those of the Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force are being kept at peak requirements, through voluntary enlistments. Backed by a Reserve force and a National Guard brought to full strength, the Army will be of such size and quality as to meet all our defense requirements. Ample evidence is available to prove that no compulsory peacetime draft is needed to build up the Army to required strength.

I do not believe that we are warranted in taking such a fatal course through the passage of H. R. 6401. America is populated by many peoples, most of whom came to the New World to escape the tyranny of the Old-to escape this very Prussianism which it is now proposed to fasten upon these United States for all time. Millions of Americans have fought and died to avoid just such slavery as it is now proposed that we legislate into existence. The compulsory peacetime draft will wreck the institutions upon which America is founded.

I am opposed to the measure before us and shall vote against it.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment on the Clerk's desk, and I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from

New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I make a similar request.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.
The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Javits: Page 48, line 24, insert the following new section and renumber the succeeding sections ac-

"SEC. 21. (a) There is hereby established a joint congressional committee to be known as the Joint Committee on Military Policy (hereinafter referred to as the committee) to be composed of 18 members, as follows: (1) Three members who are members of the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate, two from the majority and one from the minority, to be appointed by the chairman of the committee; (2) two members who are members of the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, one from the majority and one from the minority, to be appointed by the chairman of the committee;
(3) two members from the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate, one from the majority and one from the minority, to be appointed by the chairman; (4) two members from the Labor and Public Welfare Committee of the Senate, one from the majority and one from the minority, to be appointed by the chairman of the committee; (5) three members who are members of the Committee on Armed Services of the House, two from the majority and one from the minority, to be appointed by the chairman of the committee; (6) two members who are members of the Committee on Appropriations of the House, one from the majority and one from the minority, to be appointed by the chairman of the committee; (7) two members from the Commit-tee on Foreign Affairs of the House, one from the majority and one from the minority, to be appointed by the chairman of the committee; (8) two members from the Education and Labor Committee of the House, one from the majority and one from the minority, to be appointed by the chairman of the committee

"A vacancy in the membership of the committee shall be filled in the same manner as the original selection. The committee shall elect a chairman and a vice chairman from among its members.

"(b) It shall be the function of the committee to make a continuous study of the military policy of the United States with respect to (1) its capability to enable the United States to discharge its international responsibilities; (2) the dominance of civilian control in the military policy; (3) the training and orientation in citizenship of the personnel of the armed forces; and (4) the participation of personnel of the armed forces in the foreign and domestic affairs of the United States, and to review the progress achieved in the execution and administration of the military policy of the United

"Upon request the committee shall aid the several standing committees of the Congress having legislative jurisdiction over the military policy of the United States and shall make reports to the Senate and House of Representatives from time to time concerning the results of its studies together with such recommendations as it may deem desirable. The Director, at the request of the committee, shall consult with the committee from time to time with respect to the actions of the committee.

"(c) The committee, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, is authorized to hold such hearings, to sit and act at such times and places, to require by subpena or otherwise the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such books, papers, and documents, to administer such oaths, to take such testimony, to procure such printing and binding, and to make such expenditures as it deems advisable. The cost of stenographic services to report such hearings shall not be in excess of 25 cents per hundred words. The provisions of sections 102 to 104, inclusive, of the Revised Statutes shall apply in case of any failure of any witness to comply with any subpena or to testify when summoned under authority of this subsection.

"(d) The committee is authorized to appoint and, without regard to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, fix the compensation of such experts, consultants, technicians and organizations thereof, and clerical and stenographic assistants as it deems necessary and advisable.

"(e) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section, to be disbursed by the Secretary of the Sen-ate on vouchers signed by the chairman."

Mr. RANKIN (interrupting the reading of the amendment). Mr. Chairman, a point of order. The Clerk has read sufficient to demonstrate clearly that the amendment is not germane and there is no use taking up time to read any more of that stuff into the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentle-man from New York desire to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. JAVITS. Yes, I do, Mr. Chair-man. I believe the Clerk should read through this paragraph. It is not in order to interrupt in the middle of the reading of the amendment.

Mr. RANKIN. Well, I do not need any advice from that source.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read. (The Clerk concluded the reading of the amendment.)

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the amendment is not germane and not in order on this

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Chairman, may I be heard on the point of order?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Chairman, this amendment appoints a watchdog committee to do the one thing that the American people want to see done, and that is to see that the civilian and not the military are dominant in the military policy of the United States. It is germane to the bill also because it seeks to provide for the coordination of the military and the foreign policy of the United States, and for the training of selectees not alone in military matters, but in citizenship and the purposes for which they are being called upon to serve.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, will

the gentleman yield?

Mr. JAVITS. I yield. Mr. RAYBURN. The gentleman's amendment, in my opinion, is very unheard of. It is the first time I ever heard of a congressional commission being set up with the appointments to which the Speaker of the House did not have anything to do.

Mr. JAVITS. May I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that the committee proposed in my amendment is set up exactly as the Joint Committee for the European Recovery Program was set up according to the Foreign Assistance Act of 1948.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is prepared to rule. The Chair has examined the amendment proposed by the gentleman from New York. The subject matter of the gentleman's amendment proposing the creation of a special congressional committee comes under the jurisdiction of the Committee on Rules which. of course, makes the amendment not germane and not in order.

The Chair sustains the point of order. Mr. HAND. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HAND: On page 47, line 19, subsection (c), strike out all of lines 19 to 23, inclusive, and insert in lieu thereof the following:
"(c) The term 'armed forces' shall be deemed to include the Army, the Navy, the Marine Corps, the Air Force, and the Coast Guard, but the provisions of this act relating to induction shall not apply to service in the Coast Guard while the Coast Guard is operating under the Treasury Depart-

Mr. HAND. Mr. Chairman, I am including the following statement in the RECORD as a matter of legislative information, and as a basis for subsequent action by the Congress. I want to emphasize that the statement was not made to the House prior to the consideration of the amendment to which it refers, nor was any statement made, because at the time the amendment was offered, the House had forbidden all debate on all pending amendments so that the amendment was voted upon without a word of explanation in support of it. Under the circumstances, it is remarkable that it received as many votes as it did.

The distinguished gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Canfield], chairman of the Subcommittee on Appropriations concerned with the Coast Guard, and a Member who is thoroughly familiar with the problems of the Coast Guard, and other Members were prepared to support this amendment had the opportunity been afforded.

Following the defeat of the amendment, I submitted a memorandum to the conferees in a last effort to save the United States Coast Guard from the great injury done to it by the bill passed by the House. In the event that the conferees do not correct this blunder, my statement is herewith included in the RECORD for the basis of further legislative action correcting this unfortunate situ-The explanatory statement fol-

Section 19C of the House bill reads as follows:

"The term 'armed forces' shall be deemed to include the Army, the Navy, the Marine Corps, the Air Force, and the Coast Guard (when during World War II it served, or when in the future it shall serve, under the Department of the Navy)."

The effect of this language is to deny that the Coast Guard is an "armed force" in time of peace.

In fact, the Coast Guard has been an armed force since the eighteenth century, and in law it is specifically defined as an armed

Fourteen United States Code 1 provides

"The Coast Guard shall be a military service and constitute a branch of the land and naval forces of the United States at all

The adoption of the language presently in the House bill will be accepted as an ex-pression by Congress that the Coast Guard is not part of the military forces of the United States. This will have the following results:

1. It will throw into endless confusion all legislation which deals with the Coast Guard as an armed force (and I know of no legislation which does not so regard it).

2. It will have a serious effect on the morale of the present personnel.

3. It will seriously affect voluntary enlistments in the Coast Guard.

Fearing these consequences, the Secretary of the Treasury, on May 3, proposed an amendment as follows:

"The term 'armed forces' shall be deemed to include the Army, the Navy, the Marine Corps, the Air Force, and the Coast Guard, but the provisions of this act relating to induction shall not apply to service in the Coast Guard while the Coast Guard is operating under the Treasury Department."
On the same date, May 3, 1948, the Secretary of Defense replied to the Secretary of the Treasury in full as follows:

"I have your letter concerning the definition of the term 'armed forces' in the selective-service bill.

"It seems to me that the reasons you have advanced for including the Coast Guard, along with the Army, the Navy, the Marine Corps, and the Air Force, are persuasive. In view of the fact that the House committee voted this morning to report out its bill on this subject, H. R. 6401, I am taking the lib-erty of sending a copy of your letter, to-gether with a copy of this reply, to Senator GUENEY for his consideration in connection with the final preparation in the Senate of the Senate bill.

"Particularly in the light of the language of 14 U. S. C. 1, I do not see that there can be any real question concerning the propriety of including the Coast Guard in the manner in which you have suggested."

The bill was not changed, and it came to the floor with the incorrect language used. As chairman of the Subcommittee on Coast Guard, I conceived it to be my duty to offer the amendment in behalf of this service. presented the amendment in advance to both the majority and minority managers and their staff, together with a memorandum explaining its purpose, in the not unreasonable hope that the committee would accept the amendment, but they did not.

I remained on the floor continuously during the consideration of the Selective Service Act awaiting the opportunity to present the amendment, which did not occur until the final moments of consideration of the bill since the amendment was germane to page

46. The Committee of the Whole finally limited debate on all remaining amendments to 20 minutes, with the result that eight amendments, including this one, were left on the Clerk's desk without any opportunity for ex-planation, debate, or discussion. I, nevertheless, offered the amendment, which was read without explanation, and inevitably defeated, since few understood its purpose

In my opinion, the language remaining in the House bill and not amended, as suggested by the Secretary of the Treasury and agreed to by the Secretary of Defense, will do a great and unwarranted and undeserved injury to one of our five armed forces.

Mr. CANFIELD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. CANFIELD. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased that my distinguished col-league from New Jersey [Mr. Hand], the able and hard-working chairman of the Coast Guard Subcommittee, has offered his amendment. It is most important that it be adopted and that the Coast Guard be considered a component part of our military forces at all times, in peace as well as in war. I need not tell the House of the fine record made by the Coast Guard in World War II. In accordance with the law, the Coast Guard was then a part of the Navy, as it is in every war. With the return of peace, the Coast Guard reverted to its status in the Treasury Department, for the enforcement of laws and the protection of life and property. But despite the fact that it is under the Treasury, it has a military function and is part of the military services, for title 14, chapter 1, section 1, United States Code, provides:

The Coast Guard shall be a military service and constitute a branch of the land and naval forces of the United States at all

In keeping with its motto, Semper Paratus, the Coast Guard is always prepared for military action, and to maintain a status of military readiness. It is vital to our national security that this be recognized, which this amendment will do.

Appearing before the Treasury Subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee a few weeks ago, Secretary of the Treasury Snyder said:

In the event of a national emergency the Coast Guard would again operate as part of the Navy. I have already spoken of the duties performed by the Coast Guard in World War II—duties which were assigned to that service because of its experience and special skills. Should war come again I have no doubt that the Coast Guard would be called upon to carry out the same diffi-cult and necessary tasks. The services that the Coast Guard provides to this country in peacetime would overnight become vital war duties. In addition, national defense plans call for the Coast Guard assuming in time of national emergency additional roles, particularly with respect to our port and harbor facilities. All of these considerations make it imperative that Coast Guard vessels and establishments be manned by the requisite numbers of officers and men, and that the plant and equipment of the service be maintained in good working condition.

Congress just this week appropriated the necessary funds to permit the Coast Guard to carry out its duties; funds which will permit the service to maintain a full state of military readiness. But funds for such purpose are worthless without the men: men to perform the normal duties of the Coast Guard and carry out the assignments Coast Guard has received, under the mandates of Congress, from the Army, the Navy, and the Air Force, such as the maintenance of ocean weather stations, which this House approved yesterday, the operation of loran stations and high-frequency direction finders, and the establishment of other aids to navigation as well as protection against sabotage. Our highest military authorities have decided that of all military branches, Coast Guard alone is equipped and prepared to perform these important and necessary defense and security functions. Congress has granted the funds and authority, but without this amendment it may not be possible to get the men to do the job. The Coast Guard feels that the bill as presently written will have an adverse effect on recruitment. Capt. A. C. Richmond, the very able and competent Chief of the Planning and Control Staff of Coast Guard, and possessor of an outstanding war record, made this statement before the appropriations subcommittee last month, in answer to a question:

The celective service bill, as now being considered by the House, might have a very bad effect on the recruitment program for the reason that the committee, in reporting it out, and I believe feeling that they were doing the Coast Guard a favor, changed the original definition of armed forces therein to include the Coast Guard, but in such a way that it appears that the Coast Guard is not a military service in peacetime. The net result might be, if that is enacted in that form, men will be reluctant to enlist in the Coast Guard because they might be afraid of being charged with the epithet of "draft dodgers.

Captain Richmond said further:

It seems to me that an expression of opinion by the Congress, even though it is only a definition for a specific act, that in peace-time we are not a part of the armed serv-ices might have an undesirable effect.

Nothing would be more unjust than to call a man enlisting in the Coast Guard a "draft dodger." It would be not only unjust but untrue. To define the Coast Guard as anything but a military service at all times would be contrary to existing law. To deprive the Coast Guard of the requisite number of men to carry out the national defense functions assigned to it by Congress and other branches of the service would be to endanger the national security. This amendment would eliminate a possible injustice, would be in keeping with existing law, and would make possible the recruitment of manpower for the promotion of our national defense and security.

I hope that this amendment will be adopted

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey.

The question was taken; and the Chair announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. HAND. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is so important that I must ask for a division.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Hand) there were—ayes 48, noes 92.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. FULTON. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk introduced at the request of a member of one of our hard-worked draft boards.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Fulton: On page 35, line 11, after the semicolon add the following: "Each member of civilian local boards and civilian appeal boards may be paid for services rendered under this act a compensation of $1 per hour for each full hour over 16 hours in each calendar month that he is actually present at the office of the board and wholly engaged in the duties prescribed by this act for members of civilian local boards and civilian appeal boards, in no case to exceed $6 per day and $100 for any single calendar month; the determination of the amount and time of payments shall be made by the State director, whose decision shall be final, upon submission of sworn statements by the members claiming such compensation in such form and at such times as the State director shall direct."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Fulton].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. CHAPMAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

Mr. CHAPMAN. Mr. Chairman, I give my support to this bill. It is a proper and necessary step for the prevention of war, and a wise and a prudent safeguard for our country if it is ever attacked by a foreign aggressor. Failure to enact it before adjournment would be a national and international calamity. I have always believed in the wisdom and propriety of Polonius' advice to his son, Laertes:

Beware of entrance to a quarrel; but being in, bear't that the opposed may beware of thee.

UNIVERSAL HOPE FOR UNIVERSAL PEACE

The fondest hope of the human race is that there may come an endless era of universal peace, the fulfillment of the scriptural prophecy that men will "beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks." For centuries, ideelists have dreamed, poets have sung and saints have prayed that there would dawn a day—

When the war drum throbs no longer And the battle flags are furled In the parliament of man, The federation of the world.

That prayer is in the hearts of millions of men and women whose homelands have been seared by the flames and riven by the plowshare of war; mothers and fathers in every American State, whose sons have left the crimson dew of their lifedrops on the battle-stained soil of other lands. It is a sublime ideal, a beautiful dream, and there might be hope for its realization if human nature were susceptible to change. The stark truth is that human nature has changed little, if any, as the human race has staggered through centuries of recorded and unrecorded time.

We saw the ideals of peace, of which Woodrow Wilson was the inspired voice, blasted by partisan prejudice and personal hatred. We witness now a dire threat by the narrow, selfish, ambitious Soviet power to the efficacy of the United Nations as an instrumentality of peace. The forces of reaction and isolation at home attempt to administer a lethal potion to the reciprocal trade program. which is the basis of our best hope for international good will. No, human nature does not change, and until the hearts and minds of men composing nations can be purged of such attributes of character as intolerance, prejudice, hatred, selfishness, cupidity, greed for power and lust for conquest, in one fateful hour the most solemn covenant may become a mere scrap of paper and the most fraternal treaty dissolve into a rope of sand.

"A RESPECTABLY DEFENSIVE POSTURE"

The only language which totalitarian peoples understand and ambitious dictators respect is the language which. when translated literally, means the irresistible power of invincible armed force. Long before the time of either Frederick the Great or George Washington, a philosopohical German named Clausewitz wrote a book in which he correctly described war as a special form of politics, a violent means of political expression. Independently, and separated as widely as the poles in ideologies, both the father of Prussian militarism and the Virginia farmer who became the father of this Republic comprehended and interpreted war in accordance with Clausewitz' definition. Frederick founded the ambitious, aggressive, grasping, ruthless, truculent militarism that drenched Europe with blood and tears under the iron hands of Bismarck, Kaiser Wilhelm, and the slimy, grisly, unspeakable Hitler. George Washington's concept of the Clausewitz philosophy found expression in what he called a "respectably defensive posture." a citizen soldiery organized and trained in the art and science of war, a citizen militia drilled and trained in time of peace as the surest preventive of war and the most dependable bulwark in the event of attack.

WASHINGTON'S WISE COUNSEL

Washington's own countrymen have for the most part ignored his sage counsel. The next war was in 1812. American land forces were ignominiously defeated. Detroit was surrendered in disgrace without the sound of a gun. The city of Washington was captured and the National Capitol was burned. President Madison's escape to the Virginia woodswas obliged, literally, to "take to the tall timber"—and the queenly Dolly Madison saved the White House silver. Practically the only bright record on land in that war was made by citizen soldiers from States that had heeded the wisdom of George Washington, who adjured his countrymen to prepare in time of peace against the danger of future war. militiamen from Kentucky marched behind Gov. Isaac Shelby and Col. Richard M. Johnson to fight under Gen. William Henry Harrison, and end at the Battle of the Thames the reign of terror of the redoubtable Tecumseh. The militiamen-citizen soldiers-from Kentucky, went down the Kentucky, the Ohio, and the Mississippi to New Orleans; fought beside the Tennessee Militia; under the leadership of "Old Hickory Jackson, humble veterans who had gained martial renown under the Iron Duke; and defeated on the heroic plain of Chalmette, the last attempt, until the ambitious rise of Hitler and Stalin, at foreign domination of American soil. The hills and valleys of old Kentucky echoed with the victory song:

There stood John Bull in martial pomp, And here was Old Kentucky.

FIRST WORLD WAR

Little Switzerland, the freest country in Europe, model land of liberty and democracy, did adopt George Washington's recommendation that was unheeded by his own country, and provided military training for every able-bodied citizen. When the flames of war swept over Europe in 1914, little Switzerland placed in the field in 4 days a trained, equipped citizen army of 300,000 men, and through 4 years of devastating war maintained her neutrality without the firing of a gun or the tread of a hostile footstep on her land.

In that war not an American-made airplane ever flew over a German line. Less than 500 American-made field guns ever reached the battle front. Thousands of the rose and expectancy of America's young manhood went into battle; marched to death as to a picnic; fought amidst entanglements of barbed wire: fell in the bloody inferno of No Man's Land—thousands of our bravest and best-who did not know how to load the French rifles our Government placed in their hands. Then the United States disbanded its armed forces, and sank its battle fleet, while the Japanese tore up their blueprints, of which they retained copies.

There are those who apparently still think they can build a Chinese wall around America; that America can withdraw like a terrapin in its shell; or, like an ostrich, hide its head in the sand. Some seem to believe that we can piously proclaim that we do not want war and be safe from attack. Others know that we ought to have the greatest air force in the world; the most invincible Navy on the oceans of the earth; the authorized legal strength of our armed forces; and ought to train America's young manhood, not as a part of the Regular Army, but as a part of their educational equipment as American citizens, according to a program supported by the great organizations of American servicemen and their women's auxiliaries, recommended by the President's patriotic commission.

and urged by the President in an able address to the Congress; but they do not want this Congress to vote on it. They do not want us to meet our solemn responsibility as Representatives of a great free people who believe in preparedness and self-defense.

LITTLE BOY BLUES

Our earnest hope and fervent prayer ought to be that these little boys that prattle at our knees, these Little Boy Blues, wearing their little soldier suits and their little sailor suits, these Little Boy Blues with their little toy swords and their little toy guns, may never have to march to a carnival of carnage. We ought to make sure that never again will an American mother's son charge into battle without knowing how to load his rifle.

DEFENSIVE PREPAREDNESS; NOT OFFENSIVE MILITARISM

If the United States had maintained a trained, well-equipped citizen soldiery since the turn of the century we would never have been involved as a belligerent in either world war. Surely a generation that has lived through two world wars ought to have learned a lesson. Some know all of those things but think it is indiscreet, inexpedient, and unwise for them from the standpoint of personal or party politics, to advocate such a preparedness program in election year. I have never known the meaning of the word "discreet" or "expedient" in the performance of my duties during more than 20 years as a national legislator, As a consistent, constant advocate of adequate preparedness as the best insurance against war-defensive preparedness, not offensive militarism-I have said on probably a thousand rostrums since the First World War that there ought to be emblazoned in the corridors of every public building in America, inscribed on the walls of every schoolroom in America, and, I would now add, engraved on the desk of every Congressman in both House and Senate, George Washington's words of wisdom:

One of the most effectual means of preserving peace is to be prepared for war.

Let us not dally or doubt, falter or fail, in this hour of our country's need.

Mr. LOVE. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. LOVE. Mr. Chairman, today we are faced with the critical and farreaching issue of a peacetime conscription in the United States. We must consider deeply the individual rights of a free people, and we must, for just as strong a reason, carefully weigh the absolute essentials of a constant defense and the future security of our people and our country.

It is fundamental that our armed forces should be improved and modernized to the extent that our country may be adequately and continually defended from any type of attack.

Is peacetime conscription required at this time for an adequate and modernized system of national defense for our country? That is the question. Let us look at the available facts. If there are any undisclosed facts they should be bared to the Congress now.

In reading from the committee report on page 4, I find that we now have approximately 1,211,818 men in our armed forces as of March 1, 1948—469,496 in the Army, 351,181 in the Navy, 317,102 in the Air Force, and 74,039 in the Marines.

We now have the largest and strongest Navy in the world, in fact, our Navy is at least equal to the strength of the combined navies of all the rest of the world.

From the hearings on this proposed legislation and from the committee report, the facts show that our great Navy can be adequately manned without peacetime conscription. This Congress has recently passed legislation to increase our Air Force to a 70-group corps. Again I am unable to find facts to show that peace-time conscription is required to man this mammoth and modernized force.

I am very well aware that our armed forces need many infantrymen as a part of a modernized Army. Air bases and beachheads are vital to our national defense. We must never ignore the major necessity of our foot soldiers.

The facts disclose that the duties of the Infantry do not carry as much glamor and appeal to our young men who wish to volunteer as do the Navy, Marines, and the Air Corps. It is a fact, that under present Army requirements and inducements we have been unable to secure ample enlistments for the Army. The testimony reveals that the Army needs some 300,000 men to carry out our present program of defense. Since the facts reveal that we do not need peacetime conscription for an adequate and modernized Navy and Air Corps, the issue boils down to one simple question: Should we, at this time, have conscription to increase our Infantry? That is the issue gentlemen. May I ask two questions at this point?

Is there any immediate danger of our country being attacked by any foreign power? Is there any other alternative to secure 300,000 additional men for our Army than by selective service? It is true that no man can be sure of the answer to the first question. Gentlemen, I do not believe that our country is in any immediate danger of war nor that any country is immediately capable of waging war against us. The evidence before us does not disclose a national emergency. I further believe, very firmly, that our Army enlistments could be sufficiently encouraged to meet current quotas under our modernized program. Army enlistment requirements should be liberalized and attractive inducements should be offered to Army volunteers.

Regimentation of our people, in time of peace, is a very dangerous Government policy. We in America have strived to forego such practices. Our citizens have always taken pride in their individual rights as set forth in our great Constitution. Only in case of a national emergency should these rights be infringed by forcing our young men into the Army.

Therefore, gentlemen, I am constrained to vote against military conscription, at this time.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. Case of South Dakota, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 6401) to provide for the common defense by increasing the strength of the armed forces of the United States and for other purposes, pursuant to House Resolution 671, he reported the bill back to the House with sundry amendments adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment? If not, the Chair will put them en grosse.

The amendments were agreed to.
The SPEAKER. The question is on

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, I demand the reading of the engrossed copy of the bill.

The SPEAKER. The bill will have to be laid aside until the engrossed copy can be provided.

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A further message from the Senate, by Mr. Carrell, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate agrees to the amendments of the House to a bill and joint resolution of the Senate of the following titles:

S 239. An act relating to the Board of Visitors to the United States Naval Academy and postgraduate school; and

S. J. Res. 202. Joint resolution to change the name of the South Coulee Dam in the Columbia Basin project to O'Sullivan Dam.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H.R. 4435. An act to amend the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938, as amended, by redefining certain powers of the Administrator, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendments to the foregoing bill; requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. Brewster, Mr. Hawkes, and Mr. Johnson of Colorado to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6772) entitled "An act making appropriations for the Department of the Navy and the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, and for other purposes."

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the amendment of the House to the Senate amendment numbered 40 to the above-entitled bill.

The message also announced that the President pro tempore has appointed Mr. LANGER and Mr. McKellar members of the Joint Select Committee on the part of the Senate, as provided for in the act of August 5, 1939, entitled "An act to provide for the disposition of certain records of the United States Government," for the disposition of executive papers in the following departments and agencies:

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House stand in recess until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly (at 8 o'clock and 12 minutes p. m.) the House stood in recess until 10 o'clock a. m. tomorrow, Friday, June 18, 1948.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as fol-

SENATE

FRIDAY, JUNE 18, 1948

(Legislative day of Tuesday, June 15, 1948)

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m., on the expiration of the recess.

The Chaplain, Rev. Peter Marshall, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O God our Father, in these days when men freely judge and condemn each other, remind us all of the Great Assize before which we must all someday

Thou knowest whether we have been voices or merely echoes, whether we have done Thy will or our own or, worse still, have done neither.

Teach us, O Lord, that only Thy "Well done" will afford peace and everlasting happiness.

May we strive for that rather than the approval of men, which is but for a little while. In Jesus' name we pray. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. WHERRY, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of Thursday, June 17, 1948, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Miller, one of his secretaries.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6771) making appropriations for military functions administered by the National Military Establishment for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, and for other purposes; agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. ENGEL of Michigan, Mr. Case of South Dakota, Mr. TIBBOTT, Mr. SCRIVNER, Mr. KERR, Mr. Mahon, and Mr. Norrell were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

The message also announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills, and they were signed by the President pro tempore:

S. 3. An act to provide for the training of air-traffic control-tower operators; S. 2505. An act to amend the act of August 1, 1947, to clarify the position of the Secretary of the Air Force with respect to such act, and to authorize the Secretary of Defense to establish six additional positions in the professional and scientific service, and for other purposes; H. R. 6419. An act authorizing the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors for navigation, flood control, and for other purposes: and

H. R. 6772. An act making appropriations for the Department of the Navy and the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, and for other purposes.

THE CALENDAR

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the order of the Senate, the calendar will now be called for the consideration of measures to which there is no objection, beginning with Calendar No. 1504. House bill 5882.

Mr. WHERRY. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Mr. WHERRY. I announce that the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. Bush-FIELD], the Senator from Kansas [Mr. CAPPERI, and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Longe] are necessarily

Mr. LUCAS. I announce that the Senator from Georgia [Mr. George] is absent because of a death in his family.

The Senator from Nevada [Mr. Mc-CARRAN | and the Senator from New York [Mr. Wagner] are necessarily absent.

The Senator from Utah [Mr. Thomas] is absent by leave of the Senate, having been appointed a national delegate by the President to the annual conference of the International Labor Organization, meeting in San Francisco, Calif.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Eighty-nine Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

The clerk will state the first bill on the calendar.

DONATION OF SURPLUS PROPERTY FOR EDUCATIONAL PURPOSES

The bill (H. R. 5882) to authorize the Secretary of the Army, the Secretary of the Navy, and the Secretary of the Air Force to donate excess and surplus property for educational purposes was announced as first in order.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, when this bill was reached on the last call of the calendar. I objected to it. I understand there is a possibility of good in it. I should like to ask for the RECORD an explanation of the bill. The bill was reported by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. BALDWIN].

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut is not present at the moment.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I ask that the bill be passed over temporarily and placed at the foot of the calendar.

Mr. AIKEN. I should like to have the bill go over until the Senator from Connecticut comes to the floor. I simply desire an explanation for the RECORD, and then will probably withdraw my objec-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will go to the foot of the calendar.

Mr. BALDWIN subsequently said: Mr. President, I ask that the Senate return to consideration of House bill 5882, Calendar No. 1504, which, when reached on the calendar, was passed over.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, this is the bill I asked to have passed over on the last call of the calendar. It would appear that agencies of the Government. if they undertake to dispose of surplus property even if for worthy purposes may sooner or later be found to be yielding to pressure to give away material belonging to the agency, even though some other agency of Government wants to purchase it at the same time. I should like to know if it is the understanding of the Senator from Connecticut that agencies of the Government having such surplus property will take pains to ascertain that the material which they propose to give away is not needed by some other agency of Government before completing the transaction or giving away the material.

Mr. BALDWIN. Mr. President, the bill uses the word "obsolete" so I assume that with the use of that word there is implied that the material which the Government agency would give away to educational institutions would be material that could not be used either by that agency or by any other Federal agency. Certainly it was our purpose that the uses to which the Government could put the property would have been exhausted before it would be turned over to an educational institution.

Mr. AIKEN. With that explanation, Mr. President, I have no objection to passage of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 5882) to authorize the Secretary of the Army, the Secretary of the Navy, and the Secretary of the Air Force to donate excess and surplus property for educational purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Armed Services with an amendment on page 1, line 7, after the word "such", to strike out "facilities."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, I offer an amendment in lieu of the committee amendment which I understand is agreeable to the chairman of the subcommittee, the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. BALDWIN]

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Mississippi offers an amendment which the clerk will state.

The CHIEF CLERK. In lieu of the matter proposed to be stricken out in line 7. on page 1, it is proposed to insert the following: "facilities located June 1, 1948, on lands owned by or held for the use and benefit of institutions eligible for donations."

Mr. BALDWIN. Mr. President, I understand that purpose of this amendment to be that facilities which have previously been turned over to educational institutions, such as buildings and structures, are to be included as a part of the equipment covered by the bill. In effect, this is retroactive, so as not to raise the question that such facilities could not be legally turned over, by reason of the fact that they were not included in the terms of the bill.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I respectfully submit that I do not believe the amendment is in line with what we had in mind in the Armed Services Committee when we reported the bill, and I regret that I must object to the amendment, because I believe that it would make possible the donation of substantial facilities worth a great deal of money, for which the educational institutions should pay at least 50 percent of their appraised value. I shall object to the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. STENNIS].

The amendment to the committee amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment of the committee amendment and the third reading of the bill.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 2644) to provide for the development of civil transport aircraft adaptable for auxiliary military service, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. President, ask that the bill go to the foot of the calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over and go to the foot of the calendar.

The bill (S. 843) to provide additional revenue for the District of Columbia was announced as next in order.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

UNITED STATES RADIATOR CORP.

The bill (H. R. 1490) for the relief of the United States Radiator Corp., of Detroit, Mich., was considered, order to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I inquire what happened to Senate bill 2644, Calendar No. 1507?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill went over and went to the foot of the calendar.

JURISDICTION OVER OFFENSES COMMIT-TED ON STANDING ROCK INDIAN RES-ERVATION

The bill (S. 543) to confer jurisdiction on the States of North Dakota and South Dakota over offenses committed by or against Indians on Standing Rock Indian Reservation was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That jurisdiction is hereby conferred on the State of North Da-kota over offenses committed by or against Indians on that portion of the Standing Rock Indian Reservation which lies within the State of North Dakota, and on the State of South Dakota over such offenses committed on that portion of such reservation which lies within the State of South Dakota, to the same extent as their courts have jurisdiction generally over offenses committed within said States, respectively, outside of Indian reservations: Provided, however, That nothing herein contained shall deprive the courts of the United States of jurisdic-tion over offenses defined by the laws of the United States committed by or against Indians on said reservation, nor shall anything herein contained deprive any Indian of any protection afforded by Federal law, contract, or treaty against the taxation or alienation of any restricted property.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 2076) to authorize Defense Homes Corporation to convey to Howard University certain land in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 2736) to amend the act entitled "An act to expedite the provision of housing in connection with national defense and for other purposes," was announced as next in order.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Over. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 2779) to create a Government corporation to operate cafeterias and conduct certain other activities in Government buildings and on Government property, was announced as next is order.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

DISPOSITION OF CERTAIN SURPLUS HOUSING

The bill (H. R. 5710) to amend the act entitled "An act to expedite the provision of housing in connection with national defense, and for other pur-poses," approved October 14, 1940, as amended, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That bill is similar to Senate bill 2736, Calendar No. 1547, which just went over.

Mr. CAIN. It is a companion bill.

We would much prefer to have the Senate take action on House bill 5710, to which an amendment has previously been offered and which lies on the table.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of House bill 5710?

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill?

Mr. CAIN. The bill with the amendments has two parts. The body of the bill conveys title to the educational institutions of America on whose property there exists today temporary war housing. The total number of housing units involved approximates 129,000. By virtue of an existing statute, if this property is not disposed of through conveyance to the educational institutions in question it must be removed and de-stroyed by the 25th of July, 1949. The Defense Homes Corporation is deeply interested in this disposition recommendation. The Committee on Banking and Currency in its entirety thinks that we have an excellent opportunity now to dispose of property which can fully be utilized by American educational institutions everywhere. The amendment to the bill proposes to convey title from the Defense Homes Corporation to Howard University, of two dormitories which are known as Slowe and Carver Halls. The Defense Homes Corporation, as most Senators know, is presently in the process of liquidation, and to dispose by conveyance of this property will not only be of assistance to Howard University but will hasten the liquidation of the Defense Homes Corporation.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, will the Senator vield?

Mr. CAIN. I yield.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Do I correctly understand that this particular bill covers all temporary housing wherever it may be on the campuses of the colleges?

Mr. CAIN. On the campuses of the colleges on land owned and leased by American educational institutions.

Mr. REVERCOMB. In other words, this bill relates to temporary buildings which will have to be removed by a certain date in 1949, unless the action proposed by the bill is taken.

Mr. CAIN. Yes: unless the action proposed by the bill is taken.

Mr. REVERCOMB. As a matter of fact, many of the buildings involved are of a temporary construction, and it would cost the Government more to move them than it would to leave them where they

Mr. CAIN. I may say to the Senator from West Virginia that if this property is conveyed to American educational institutions the institutions will assume the burden of maintenance and repair, and the Senator from West Virginia is conclusively correct when he understands that a great deal of money will be spent by the Federal Government for the maintenance of the property.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CAIN. I yield.

Mr. CAPEHART. As a member of the Committee on Banking and Currency I wish to join with the Senator from Washington in recommending the passage of the bill.

Mr. WATKINS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CAIN. I yield. Mr. WATKINS. It is a fact also that there will be need for this housing next year as well as this year.

Mr. CAIN. There is a very pressing need for the property in question at the present time, and the American universities can quite properly continue to have a fine use for the property for several years in the future.

Mr. WATKINS. Does this apply to private schools as well as public schools such as State universities where these buildings have been placed?

Mr. CAIN. It so happens, I have been informed, that the buildings in question are only situated on the property of public institutions.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The time of the Senator from Washington has expired.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, on the last call of the calendar I asked that the bill go over. In the meantime I have had a careful examination made of the bill and its effects. I find that it will not conflict or interfere with other pending legislation on the calendar, and that adoption of the bill would have a beneficial effect.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Washington wish to offer amendments to the bill?

Mr. CAIN. An amendment was previously offered. I have a copy of the amendment, and ask that it be considered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Washington offers an amendment to House bill 5710.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CAIN. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. Is this amendment represented by Calendar No. 1546, Senate bill 2076?

Mr. CAIN. It is Senate bill 2076. The amendment in fact I may say to the Senator from Kentucky is Senate bill 2076.

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes. It is offered as an amendment just as it was reported from the committee and is on the calendar?

Mr. CAIN. Word for word.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under those circumstances, without objection, the amendment will be printed in the RECORD at this point and the reading of it will be waived.

The amendment is as follows:

SEC. 5. The Defense Homes Corporation is authorized to convey, without reimburse-ment therefor, to Howard University, a corporation organized pursuant to an act of Congress, all of its right, title, and interest in certain lands in the District of Columbia, together with the improvements constructed thereon and the personal property used in connection therewith, and commonly known as Lucy Diggs Slowe Hall, 1919 Third Street Northwest, and George Washington Carver Hall, 211 Elm Street Northwest: Provided, That no employee of the United States or of the District of Columbia who, on the date of approval of this act, is a tenant of either Lucy Diggs Slowe Hall or George Washington Carver Hall shall, unless quarters were signed to such tenant on a transient basis or on the sole basis that the tenant was enrolled at an educational institution, be evicted from such halls within 4 years after the approval of this act, except where such tenant commits a nuisance or otherwise violates any obligation of tenancy.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is hereby authorized and directed to discharge the indebtedness of the Defense Homes Corporation to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in an amount equal to the Defense Homes Corporation's net invest-ment in these properties as of the date of transfer, as determined by the President of the Defense Homes Corporation, and the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to discharge the indebtedness of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to the Treasury in like amount as of the same date.

SEC. 6. The right, title, and interest in any lands, together with the improvements constructed thereon, which are conveyed pursuant to the authority granted by section 5 hereof, shall revert to the United States upon a written finding made by the President prior to July 1, 1963, that the property is needed by the United States in connection with a national defense emergency.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington is agreed

The question is on the engrossment of the amendment and the third reading of the bill.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third

The bill (H. R. 5710) was read the third time and passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, Senate bill 2076 will be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. CAIN. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendment, request a conference with the House thereon, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the President pro tempore appointed Mr. CAIN, Mr. BUCK, and Mr. FULBRIGHT conferees on the part of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the next bill on the calendar.

GOVERNMENT-OWNED ALCOHOL PLANTS

The bill (H. R. 6096) to provide for making available the Government-owned alcohol plants at Muscatine, Iowa, Kansas City, Mo., and Omaha, Nebr., for production of products from agricultural commodities was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MATERNITY LEAVE FOR GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES-BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 784) to provide maternity leave for Government employees was announced as next in order.

Mr. BALL and Mr. WILLIAMS. Over. Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I am not a member of the Committee on Post Offices and Civil Service, but I have noted with great interest and admiration the fight which has been made by the able chairman of that committee [Mr. Langer in behalf of the bill to which objection has just been made, to grant maternity leave to women who are Government employees.

It seems to me, Mr. President, that this is a humane measure. Surely the Government of the United States should not lag behind many private enterprises which grant such relief to their women employees.

I do not know what may be in the minds of Senators who objected, but I hope the Senator from North Dakota will find a way to bring this measure to a vote in the Senate. I do not know of anything that is a greater expression of governmental leadership in humane legislation than this bill. I commend the Senator from North Dakota for his fight. I hope he will be able to obtain consideration of the bill and that it will be possible for the Senate as a whole to vote on the measure.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I can assure the distinguished Senator from Florida that when I come back in January this will be the first bill I shall reintroduce.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I am one of the Members of this body who asked that the bill go over. The reason I feel that the bill is not practicable is that under the present law an employee is now granted 26 days annual leave. In addition, he is allowed 15 days sick leave, making a total of 41. This bill proposes to allow 60 days additional leave as maternity leave, making a total of 101 working days out of each year. The average number of working days a month in the Government service is 20. That means that in a maternity case a Government employee can have 5 months of the year off with pay. I do not feel that it is practicable for any Government agency to operate if it allows 5 months off with pay every time an employee has a child.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

AMENDMENT OF TRADING WITH THE ENEMY ACT

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6116) to amend the Trading With the Enemy Act, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with amendments, on page 1, line 11, after the word "by", to strike out "July 31" and insert "April 30"; and on page 2, at the beginning of line 3, to strike out "August 9, 1948" and insert "April 30,

The amendments were agreed to. The amendments were ordered to be

CONVEYANCE OF LAND TO CHEYENNE, WYO., FOR PARK PURPOSES

The bill (S. 2820) to authorize the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs to convey to the city of Cheyenne, Wyo., for public park and golf course purposes, certain land situated within the boundaries of the Veterans' Administration center at Cheyenne, Wyo., was announced as next in order.

Mr. MILLIKIN. Mr. President, there is before the Committee on Finance House bill 5734, which is the same as Senate bill 2820, Calendar 1601. I move that the Senate Committee on Finance be discharged from the further consideration of House bill 5734, and that the Senate immediately proceed to consider the House bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the Senate Finance Committee is discharged from the further consideration of House bill 5734, a bill to authorize the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs to convey to the city of Cheyenne, Wyo., for public-park and golf-course purposes, certain land situated within the boundaries of the Veterans' Administration center at Cheyenne, Wyo.

Is there objection to the present consideration of the House bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. MILLIKIN. I understand that Senator from Oregon [Mr. Morse] has an amendment to offer.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment offered by the Senator from Oregon will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. At the proper place in the bill, it is proposed to insert the following: "Provided, That the city of Cheyenne shall pay 50 percent of the appraised value of the property, to be determined by the Veterans' Administration.'

Mr. ROBERTSON of Wyoming. Mr. President, I realize that time does not permit us to oppose this amendment. What the amendment does is to call upon the city of Cheyenne to pay 50 percent of the appraised value of this land, which the city of Cheyenne originally gave without cost to the Veterans' Administration. The Veterans' Administration is unable to utilize or improve the land, and the city of Cheyenne has agreed to make improvements by making a park around the veterans' hospital in Cheyenne, or on the outskirts of Chevenne.

It seems hard on the city that it should have to pay for land which it is going to improve for the benefit of the veterans. However, it is impossible to get this bill through without accepting the amendment, so I will accept the amendment.

Mr. MILLIKIN. Mr. President, it is with reluctance that I have decided not to object to the amendment. It is apparent that it is an amendment which the distinguished junior Senator from Wyoming would prefer not to accept, but which he feels impelled to accept under the circumstances. Let me say that we are establishing no precedent so far as the Senate Committee on Finance is concerned, and at the first opportunity for debate on the subject, there will be plenty of it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Oregon [Mr. Morse].

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third

The bill was read the third time and passed.

DEPORTATION PROCEDURES-BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 2755) to amend the act of June 11, 1946, as amended, was announced as next in order.

Mr. TAYLOR. Over.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, will the Senator who objected withhold his objection temporarily so that an explanation may be made?

Mr. TAYLOR. I am glad to do so. Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, this is an immigration bill, under the general immigration and naturalization laws. It has been indicated that in dealing with cases for deportation there may be some question about the proper procedure under the Administrative Procedures Act. The purpose of this bill is to permit the Immigration and Naturalization Service to have its own employees conduct the first hearing and make recommendations in deportation cases, rather than have the cases held up for the full process under the Administrative Procedures Act. Unless this bill is passed several thousand cases will be held up for hearing, and no action can be taken on them. The purpose of the bill is simply to expedite the hearing. I do not think it has any other effect.

Mr. President, I have made the explanation. If the Senator wishes to persist in his objection, I cannot stop him.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. there objection to the present consideration of Senate bill 2755?

Mr. TAYLOR. I object.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 1988) to confirm and establish the titles of the States to lands and resources in and beneath navigable waters within State boundaries and to provide for the use and control of said lands and resources was announced as next in order.

Mr. DONNELL. Let the bill go over. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

CONVEYANCE OF LANDS IN PARK COUNTY, WYO.-BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 1821) authorizing the conveyance of certain lands in Park County. Wyo., to the State of Wyoming was announced as next in order.

Mr. TAYLOR. Let the bill go over. Mr. ROBERTSON of Wyoming. Mr.

President, if the Senator will withhold his objection for a moment, I should like to make an explanation of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Idaho withhold his objection for that purpose?

Mr. TAYLOR. I do.

Mr. ROBERTSON of Wyoming. Mr. President, I explained this bill at the previous call of the calendar, at which time the distinguished Senator from Oregon asked to have an opportunity to consider the bill. He has since examined it, and has now removed any objection that he had to it.

This bill provides for a conveyance of 80 acres of land in section 36, township 58 north, range 100 west, from the United States of America to the State of Wyoming. Section 36 is one of the school sections which were reserved for the support of the public schools when Wyoming was admitted to the Union.

In 1915 the State of Wyoming issued an oil and gas lease on the 80 acres of the east half of the northeast quarter. Development proceeded on that 80 acres. oil was produced there, and royalties in excess of $19,000 have been paid.

The Government of the United States sued the State and its lessee; and on June 2, 1947, the United States Supreme Court, disregarding the rights created in Wyoming by the Congress, as well as the equities in Wyoming under the surveys, decided that the United States should have ownership.

Section 3, article IV of the Constitution still provides that Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the property belonging to the United States. Wyoming as a matter of right and justice is entitled to the entire section. However, under the circumstances, in order that it may recognize its longexisting lease and contract, Wyoming now is willing to accept the 80 acres. This bill is for the purpose of conveying those 80 acres to the State of Wyoming.

I hope the Senator will not object. A similar bill has been passed by the House, and is now on the calendar. It is House bill 4462, Calendar 1685, which I would ask to have substituted for the Senate bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. TAYLOR. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection being heard, the bill will be passed

The clerk will state the next measure on the Calendar.

ESTABLISHMENT OF NAVAJO-HOPI IN-DIAN ADMINISTRATION—BILL PASSED

The bill (S. 2686) to establish the Navajo-Hopi Indian Administration, to provide for the rehabilitation of the Navajo and Hopi Indian Tribes, and for other purposes, was announced as next in or-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. BALL. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I should like to ask the author of the bill whether it authorizes an extensive program and what the cost of the program under the bill is likely to be. I take it that the bill carries out the action of the House of Representatives, in connection with the Interior Department appropriation bill this year, in setting up a separate administration for the Navaios tration for the Navajos.

Mr. WATKINS. The purpose of the bill is to expedite the administration of the affairs of the Navajo and Hopi Indians. They are in a deplorable condition, as the public has been informed in recent months by the press of the country. We have found that by reason of the red tape and ruts in which the Indian Bureau has been involved in recent years, it has been almost impossible to get under way a program to rehabilitate the Indians. This bill would change the administration of the affairs of this group of Indians, and would provide a new administrator for them.

These Indians are the most primitive Indians we have in the country. More than 60,000 of them are there in one group, and they require special attention and treatment.

This bill would authorize an appropriation of $25,000,000 for educational purposes, and also would authorize an appropriation of $250,000 for relief. The bill provides for the transfer of the administration of these Indians from the Indian Bureau to a special administrator who will be required to live on the reservation and direct its affairs, and he would be given the power to exercise all the functions and activities which the Indian Bureau as now constituted is authorized to exercise regarding them.

Mr. BALL. Mr. President, does the Senator mean that the $25,000,000 for education would be for operating expenses, or would it be for building new schools?

Mr. WATKINS. The bill provides for a comprehensive program to take care of the Indian children who are not now in school. There are 14,000 of them, as the Senator probably will remember, who are not now in school, although our treaty with the Indians calls for a school teacher for each 30 pupils and a school room. We have not kept our treaty obligations.

Mr. BALL. The testimony before the committee was that it is very hard to keep them in one place long enough to send them to school.

Mr. WATKINS. More than 30,000 of these Indians will, of necessity, have to be transferred from the reservation to other places to live.

Mr. BALL. Do I correctly understand that the $25,000,000 to be authorized under the bill will be for the purpose of building new schools? It will not be for annual operating charges; will it?

Mr. WATKINS. No; it will not be for annual operating charges. It has to do not only with buildings on the reservation itself, but with buildings in white communities where probably many of the Indians will have to go to make a living and to establish homes in the future.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield to me, let me say I think it is true that the tribal council has requested this type of program and has asked that the bill be passed.

Mr. WATKINS. They have requested in substance this type of program.

Mr. DWORSHAK. Mr. President, under this proposed legislation, will the Bureau of Indian Affairs lose all jurisdiction over this particular Indian tribe?

Mr. WATKINS. The Indian Bureau will lose all jurisdiction; the tribe will be placed under a special administrator.

These Indians have special problems. We hope the Indian Bureau then will spend its time in liquidating the affairs of the Indians in the United States, and will go out of business in 10 or 15 years.

Mr. DWORSHAK. Of course, they are not doing that very rapidly, because in the recent Interior Department appropriation bill the Bureau of Indian Affairs had an appropriation approximately double the appropriation for that agency only a few years ago; and in the bill we approved a few days ago there was provision for an appropriation of approximately $10,000,000 for the Navajo Tribe.

I am just wondering whether we are going to continue to give millions of dollars to the Bureau of Indian Affairs for the relief of the Navajos, and then under this new agency provide additional millions of dollars for those Indians,

Mr. WATKINS. No; we shall transfer all matters and functions relating to this group of Indians to the new Administrator, and we hope that will make it possible for the Indian Bureau to go out of operation in a few years.

The purpose is to make the Indians American citizens, with all the rights and liabilities of citizens, as soon as possible. This Administrator will have that special job and will not have anything else to do.

Mr. DWORSHAK. How long has the Indian Bureau had charge of the Nava-

Mr. WATKINS. For more than 60 years—ever since the Navajos were conquered by our armies and were placed on the reservation.

Mr. DWORSHAK. And yet now they are in such dire straits that it is necessary to have a new agency to take care of them.

Mr. WATKINS. The committee is convinced that it will be better to have a new administrator for them, so that the Indian Bureau will not go on forever handling their affairs.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator's time has expired. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. AIKEN. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection being heard, the bill will be passed over.

The clerk will state the next measure on the calendar.

SALE TO THE CROW TRIBE OF INTERESTS IN ESTATES OF DECEASED CROW
INDIAN ALLOTTEES

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 2352) to provide for sale to the Crow Tribe of interests in the estates of deceased Crow Indian allottees, which had been reported from the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs with an amendment, on page 3, after line 10, to insert:

SEC. 4. That the Secretary of the Interior with the consent, in writing, of the tribal council representing the Indians of the Kiowa, Comanche, and Apache Reservation, is hereby authorized and directed to sell and convey to the Board of County Commissioners of Comanche County, Okla., for public purposes, to wit: A site for a county hospital for said county upon such terms and conditions as he may prescribe—ten acres from the north one-half of section 30, township 2 north, range 11 west, Indian meridian, and more definitely described as follows:

The southeast quarter of the scutheast quarter of the northwest quarter of raid section 30, township 2 north, range 11 west, Indian meridian: Provided, That out of the proceeds of such sale the sum of $1.25 per acre shall be credited to the general fund of the United States Treasury and the balance shall be deposited in the United States Treasury to the credit of the tribal fund of Indians of the said Klowa, Comanche, and Apache Reservation.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

The title was amended so as to read:
"An act to provide for sale to the Crow Tribe of interests in the estates of deceased Crow Indian allottees, and to provide for the sale of certain lands to the Board of County Commissioners of Comanche County, Okla., and for other purposes."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

MRS. PEARL SCOTT LOUKES

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2551) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to issue a patent in fee to Mrs. Pearl Scott Loukes, which had been reported from the Committee on the Interior and Insular Affairs, with amendments, on page 1, line 10, after the word "northeast", to strike out "quarter of the" and insert "quarter," and on page 2, line 2, after the figure "3", to strike out "all of", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is authorized and directed to issue a patent in fee to Mrs. Pearl Scott Loukes, for the following-described lands in the State of Montana: The southeast quarter, section 12, township 7 south, range 27 east; lot 4, section 7, township 7 south, range 28 east; the northwest quarter of the northeast quarter, section 11; the west half of the southwest quarter of the northwest quarter, section 16; lots 1, 2, and 3, northeast quar-section 16; lots 1, 2, and 3, northeast quarter, east half of the northwest quarter, the east half of the east half of the west half of the northwest quarter, section 17, lots 1, 2, and 3, section 18, township 7 south, range 28 east, Montana principal meridian, con-taining approximately 628 acres.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

IMPROVEMENT OF POST OFFICE, LOS ANGELES, CALIF.

The bill (H. R. 5750) to provide for the extension and improvement of post-office facilities at Los Angeles, Calif., and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LEASE OF LAFAYETTE BUILDING. WASHINGTON, D. C.

The bill (S. 2706) to authorize the Federal Works Administrator to lease for commercial purposes certain space in the building located at 811 Vermont Avenue NW., Washington, D. C., commonly known as the Lafayette Building, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Federal Works Administrator is hereby authorized to lease for commercial purposes for periods not exceeding 10 years and upon such terms and conditions as he may deem to be in the public interest, such space in the building located at 811 Vermont Avenue NW., Washington, D. C., commonly known as the Lafayette Euilding, as was leased by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for commercial pur-poses on July 30, 1947, the date title to such building was transferred from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to the United States of America by section 306, title III, Public Law 268, Eightieth Congress. The rentals received pursuant to this act may be deposited into a common fund account or accounts in the Treasury, and notwithstand-ing the provisions of the act of June 30, 1932 (40 U. S. C. 303b), shall be available to pay the cost of maintenance, upkeep, and repair of the space so leased and for the establishment of necessary reserves therefor: Provided, That except for such necessary reserves, the unobligated balances of rentals so deposited into the Treasury shall be covered at the end of each fiscal year into miscellaneous receipts.

ISSUANCE OF PATENTS FOR CERTAIN LANDS

The bill (H. R. 6090) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to issue patents for lands held under color of title was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REVISION AND CODIFICATION OF TITLE 18, UNITED STATES CODE

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 3190) to revise, codify, and enact into positive law title 18 of the United States Code, entitled "Crimes and Criminal Procedure," which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with amendments.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill contains a large volume of amendments. Is there objection to the consideration of the amendments en bloc?

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill? This is a long bill, containing 475 pages.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, I assure the distinguished Senator I shall not take much time, and that we shall not spend much time on the bill.

The House has sent to the Senate the revision of title 18. It was my privilege and duty to appoint a very distinguished subcommittee to go over the matter. The subcommittee was headed by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Donnell].

The purpose of the bill is to codify and revise the laws relating to Federal crimes and criminal procedure.

With the amendments proposed by the committee the bill includes all pertinent laws to January 5, 1948, and is made effective September 1, 1948.

The bill makes it easy to find the criminal statutes because of the arrangement. numbering, and classification. The original intent of Congress is preserved. uniform style of statutory expression is adopted. The new Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure are keyed to the bill and are reflected in part II of title 18.
Obsolete and executed provisions are eliminated. Uncertainty will be ended and there will no longer be any need to examine the many volumes of the Statutes at Large as the bill, upon enactment, will itself embody the substantive law which will thus appear in full in the United States Code.

It is one of the constructive things we have been endeavoring to accomplish, and I think the bill accomplishes it. I should like to see the amendments adopted en bloc. If any further specific information is desired, I shall ask the distinguished senior Senator from Missouri to explain it, but I think, in view of the fact that the work has been gone into by some of the best experts in codification in America, in conjunction with the House committee, the committee has proposed a number of amendments, most of which are insubstantial, some of which are substantial. They will necessitate, I assume, if we pass the bill, a conference with the House. I hope the measure can be disposed of without a great deal of debate. As I said, it is along the line of bringing together the Federal criminal statutes into one place, so as to avoid the necessity of going from one volume to another in order to ascertain what the criminal law of the Nation is.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator's time has expired. Is there objection to the consideration of the amendments en bloc?

There being no objection, the amendments were considered and agreed to en bloc.

The amendments agreed to en bloc are as follows:

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, request a conference with the House thereon, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will presently name the conferees.

Mr. WILEY subsequently said: Mr. President, I have been credibly informed that the House will accept our amendments. In view of that information, I ask that the action taken to rescind on my motion to appoint conferees in respect to the bill (H. R. 3190) be rescinded.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT OF TRADING WITH THE ENEMY ACT

The bill (S. 2764) to amend the Trading With the Enemy Act was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. President, I offer an amendment.

Mr. PEPPER. I should like an explanation of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Kentucky offers an amendment which the clerk will state.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 3, line 14, after the word "buy", it is proposed to strike out "July 31, 1949", and insert "April 30, 1949."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment submitted by the Senator from

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I request an explanation of the bill.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. President, the bill proposes to amend section 32 of the Trading With the Enemy Act. That section, among other things, authorizes the Alien Property Custodian to return property to an alien if he deems that the alien was a persecutee. It has developed that some of these persons to whom property would be returned are dead, and there are no known heirs. In such case I assume the property would escheat to this country.

The bill provides that the President may designate approved organizations under certain limitations and conditions. and that such organizations may receive the property of a deceased persecutee alien and use it for the benefit of the group to which the persecutee belonged. I think it is a very humane measure. It was introduced by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT].

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Ken-

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 32 of the Trading With the Enemy Act of October 6, 1917 (40 Stat. 411), as amended, is hereby further amended by adding at the end thereof the following subsection:

"(h) The President may designate one or more organizations as successors in interest to deceased persons, who, if alive, would be eligible to receive returns under the provisos of subdivision (C) or (D) of subsection (a) hereof. An organization so designated shall be deemed a successor in interest by operation of law for the purposes of subsection (a) (1) hereof. Return may be made to an organization so designated (a) prior to July 31, 1949, or 2 years from the vesting of the property or interest in question, whichever is later, if the President or such officer or agency as he may designate determines from all relevant facts of which he is then advised that it is probable that the former owner is dead and is survived by no person eligible under section 32 to claim as successor in interest by inheritance, devise, or bequest; and (b) after such later date, if no claim for the return of the property or interest is pending.

"No return may be made to an organization so designated unless it files a claim on or before January 1, 1952, and unless it gives assurances satisfactory to the President that (i) it will use the property or interest re-turned to it for the rehabilitation and reset-tlement of persons who suffered substantial deprivation of liberty or failed to enjoy the full rights of citizenship within the meaning of subdivisions (C) and (D) of subsection (a) (2) hereof, by reason of their membership in the political, racial, or religious group of which the former owner was a member; (ii) it will transfer, at any time within 2 years from the time that return is made, such property or interest or the equivalent value thereof to any person designated as entitled thereto pursuant to this act by the President or such officer or agency; and it will make such reports and permit such examination of its books as the President or such officer or agency may from time to time require.

The filing of a claim by an organization so designated shall not bar the payment of debt claims under section 34 of this act.'

SEC. 2. The first sentence of section 33 of the Trading With the Enemy Act of October 6, 1917 (40 Stat. 411), as amended, is hereby further amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 33. No return may be made pursuant to section 9 or 32 unless notice of claim has been filed, (a) in the case of any property or interest acquired by the United States prior to December 18, 1941, by August 9, 1948, or (b) in the case of any property or interest acquired by the United States on or after December 18, 1941, by April 30, 1949, or 2 years from the vesting of the property or interest in respect of which the claim is made, whichever is later: Provided, That return may be made to successor organizations designated pursuant to section 32 (h) hereof if notice of claim is filed by January 1, 1952."

TRANSFER OF CERTAIN ARMY EQUIP-MENT TO NEW MEXICO MILITARY INSTITUTE

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2698) to authorize the transfer of horses and equipment owned by the United States Army to the New Mexico Military Institute, a State institution, which had been reported from the Committee on Armed Services, with amendments, on page 1, line 4, after the word "authorized", to insert "upon the request of the institution"; in line 7, after the word "institution", to insert "to Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., to Norwich University, Norwich, Vt., and to Virginia Military Institute, Lexington, Va."; on page 2, line 1, before the word "together", insert "except those used in the remount breeding program"; in line 3, after the word "by", insert "each of the"; at the beginning of line 4, to strike out "military institute" and insert "institutions"; and in line 5, after the word "purposes", to insert "Provided, That the receiving institution in each case agrees to arrange for the proper pension and old-age care of the donated horses."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, nothwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of the Army is hereby authorized, upon the request of the institution, to transfer without reimbursement, to the New Mexico Military Institute, Roswell, N. Mex., a tax-supported State institution, to Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., to Norwich University, Norwich, Vt., and to Virginia Military Institute, Lexington, Va., all horses, except those used in the remount breeding program, together with their records and equipment, property of the United States Army, located at and utilized by each of the said institutions for military training purposes: Provided, That the receiving institution in each case agrees to arrange for the proper pension and old-age care of the donated horses.

CONVEYING CERTAIN LANDS IN PARK COUNTY TO WYOMING

The bill (H. R. 4462) authorizing the conveyance of certain lands in Park County, Wyo., to the State of Wyoming was announced as next in order.

Mr. ROBERTSON of Wyoming. Mr. President, this bill is identical with Calendar No. 1661 (Senate bill 1821) to which the Senator from Idaho made objection. The Senator now advises me he withdraws his objection. I ask for the consideration of House bill 4462.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill H. R. 4462?

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I originally objected to the bill. I have gone into the matter with the Senator from Wyoming and I find that what the bill is designed to do is to correct what amounts to an error in a survey line, which, after all, is an error on the part of the Federal Government. Therefore, I shall not object.

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, Senate bill 1821 is indefinitely postponed.

AMENDMENT OF CIVIL SERVICE RETIRE-MENT ACT OF MAY 29, 1930

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6454) to amend the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, to provide annuities for certain Federal employees, and for other purposes.

Mr. BALL, Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill?

Mr. BALDWIN. Mr. President, some time ago Congress passed an act which provided for an increase in retirement allowances for members of the FBI. There were two reasons behind that action. One was to keep young men in the service, and the other was to provide for a little extra retirement pay for those who have hazardous occupations. This particular bill would extend the same privileges to the Narcotics Division of the Treasury Department and, I think, also to those who have to deal with immigration and who are in a position of hazard. The annulty would be based upon 2 percent of the employee's average salary for 5 years next preceding his retirement, multiplied by the number of years of service not to exceed 30 years. If we are to keep men in the Federal service to perform these particularly hazardous jobs, we have to appeal to a group of younger men. After 20 or 25 years' service they frequently must seek other employment because of their physical condition and age. They are not really suited to deal with some of the tough customers with which they have to deal.

Mr. BALL. The Senator's explanation of the bill is satisfactory, and I agree that it is a much-needed measure.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ROSE MARY AMMERATO

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 2729) for the relief of Rose Mary Ammerato, a minor, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment on page 1, line 4, to strike out "$5,000" and to insert "$3,500."

EFFECTUATION OF LOAN AGREEMENT BETWEEN UNITED STATES AND UNITED NATIONS

The Senate proceeded to consider the resolution (S. J. Res. 212) to authorize the President, following appropriation of the necessary funds of the Congress, to bring into effect on the part of the United States the loan agreement of the United States of America and the United Nations, signed at Lake Success, N. Y., March 23, 1948.

Mr. IVES. Mr. President, I offer two amendments to the joint resolution and ask that they be considered en bloc. In this connection, I wish to point out that the two amendments authorize the construction of the buildings to proceed through the borrowing of not to exceed $25,000,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Unless this amendment is incorporated in the bill, it will undoubtedly be impossible to proceed this year with the undertaking.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Clerk will state the amendments offered by the Senator from New York.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 9, line 9, after "sec. 4.", it is proposed to insert "(a)"; after line 15 to insert:

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of any other law, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is authorized and directed until such time as an appropriation shall be made pursuant to subsection (a) of this section to make advances not to exceed in the aggregate $25,000,000 to carry out the provisions of this joint resolution and of the loan agreement referred to in section 1 in such manner, and in such amounts, as the President shall determine, and no interest shall be charged on advances made by the Treasury to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for this purpose. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation Finance Corporation shall be repaid without interest, for advances made by it hereunder from funds made available for the purposes of this joint resolution and of the loan agreement set forth in section 1.

And on page 3, line 4, after the word "Congress", to insert the words "or the making available of funds as provided in section 4 (b) hereof."

So as to make the joint resolution read:

Resolved, etc., That the President is hereby authorized, following appropriation of the necessary funds by the Congress, or the making available of funds as provided in section 4 (b) hereof, to bring into effect on the part of the United States, the loan agreement, set forth below, between the United States of America and the United Nations, signed at Lake Success, N. Y., on March 23, 1948, with such changes therein not contrary to the general tenor thereof and not imposing any additional obligations on the United States or relieving the United Nations of any obligations, as the President may deem necessary and appropriate:

LOAN AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND THE UNITED NATIONS

It is hereby agreed by the Government of the United States of America and the United Nations as follows:

(1) Subject to the terms and conditions of this agreement, the Government of the United States will lend to the United Nations a sum not to exceed in the aggregate $65,000,000. Such sum shall be expended only as authorized by the United Nations for the construction and furnishing of the permanent headquarters of the United Nations in its headquarters district in the city of New York, as defined in the agreement between the United States of America and the United Nations, regarding the headquarters of the United Nations, signed at Lake Success, N. Y., on June 26, 1947, including the necessary architectural and engineering work, landscaping, underground construction and other appropriate improvements to the land and approaches, and for other related purposes and expenses incident thereto.

(2) Such sum, or parts thereof, will be advanced by the United States through the Secretary of State, to the United Nations upon request of the Secretary General or other duly authorized officer of the United Nations and upon the certification of the architect or engineer in charge of construction, countersigned by the Secretary General or other duly authorized officer, that the amount requested is required to cover payments for the purposes set forth in paragraph (1) above which either (a) have been at any time made by the United Nations, or (b) are due and payable, or (c) it is estimated will become due and payable within 60 days from the date of such request. All sums not used by the United Nations for the purposes set forth in paragraph (1) will be returned to the United States through the Secretary of State when no longer required for said purposes. No amounts will be advanced hereunder after July 1, 1951, or such later date, not after July 1, 1955, as may be agreed to by the Secretary of State.

(3) All sums advanced hereunder will be

(3) All sums advanced hereunder will be receipted for on behalf of the United Nations by the Secretary General or other duly authorized officer of the United Nations.

thorized officer of the United Nations.

(4) The United Nations will repay, without interest, to the United States the principal amount of all sums advanced hereunder, in annual payments beginning on July 1, 1951, and on the dates and in the amounts indicated, until the entire amount advanced under this agreement has been repaid as follows:

Date	Amount

However, in the event the United Nations does not request the entire sum of $65,000,000 available to it under this agreement, the amount to be repaid under this paragraph will not exceed the aggregate amount advanced by the United States. All amounts payable to the United States under this paragraph will be paid, out of the ordinary budget of the United Nations, to the Secretary of State of the United States in currency of the United States which is legal tender for public debts on the date such payments are made. All sums repaid to the United States will be receipted for on behalf of the United States by the Secretary of State.

(5) The United Nations may at any time make repayments to the United States of funds advanced hereunder in excess of the annual installments as provided in paragraph (4) hereof

(6) The United Nations agrees that, in order to give full effect to section 22 (a) of the agreement regarding the headquarters of the United Nations referred to in paragraph (1) above (under which the United Nations shall not dispose of all or any part of the land owned by it in the headquarters district without the consent of the United States), it will not, without the consent of the United States), it will not, without the consent of the United States, while any of the indebtedness incurred hereunder is outstanding and unpaid, create any mortgage, lien, or other encumbrance on or against any of its real property in the headquarters district as defined in said agreement. The United Nations also agrees that the United States, as a condition to giving its consent to any such disposition or encumbrance, may require the simultaneous repayment of the balance of all installments remaining unpaid hereunder.

(7) The effective date of this agreement shall be the date on which the Government of the United States notifies the United Nations that the Congress of the United States, with the approval of the President, has made available the funds necessary to be advanced in accordance with the provisions of this agreement.

In witness whereof, the Government of the United States of America, acting by and through the United States Representative to the United Nations, and the United Nations, acting by and through the Secretary General, have respectively caused this agreement to be duly signed in duplicate at Lake Success, N. Y., on this 23d day of March 1948.

For the Government of the United States of America:

WARREN R. AUSTIN,
United States Representative to the United Nations.
For the United Nations:

TRYGVE LIE, Secretary General.

Sec. 2. Sums advanced to the United Nations in accordance with the provisions of paragraph (2) of the aforesaid loan agreement shall be disbursed by the United Nations for the purposes for which such sums were advanced within 90 days after their receipt from the United States. Any funds not so disbursed within that period shall be returned to the United States through the Secretary of State within 30 days thereafter.

Secretary of State within 30 days thereafter. Sec. 3. So long as the headquarters district is used as the seat of the United Nations, nothing in this resolution shall be deemed to limit the control and authority of the United Nations over such district as exercised pursuant to Public Law 357, Eightleth Congress: Provided, however, That in the event such district is, for whatever reason, no longer used as the seat of the United Nations. the United States shall, in addition to any rights it enjoys under paragraph (6) of the aforesaid loan agreement and section 22 of the headquarters agreement (Public Law 357, 80th Cong.), be entitled to recover from the land and buildings in the headquarters district, in advance of all other creditors of the United Nations, any indebtedness incurred under the loan agreement which is then outstanding and unpaid.

SEC. 4. (a) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated to the Department of State, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $65,000,000 to accomplish the purposes of this joint resolution. Amounts received in repayment of such loan shall be deposited and covered into the Treasury of the United States as miscellaneous receipts.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of any other law, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is authorized and directed until such time as an appropriation shall be made pursuant to subsection (a) of this section to make advances not to exceed in the aggregate $25,000,000 to carry out the provisions of this joint resolution and of the loan agreement referred to in section 1 in such manner, and in such amounts, as the President shall determine, and no interest shall be charged on advances made by the Treasury to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for this purpose. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation shall be repaid without interest, for advances made by it hereunder from funds made available for the purposes of this joint resolution and of the loan agreement set forth in section 1.

The amendments were agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to, as follows: Whereas the Congress of the United States in House Concurrent Resolution 75, passed unanimously by the House of Representatives December 10, 1945, and agreed to unanimously by the Senate December 11, 1945, invited the United Nations "to locate the seat of the United Nations Organization within the United States"; and

Whereas the General Assembly on December 14, 1946, resolved "that the permanent headquarters of the United Nations shall be established in New York City in the area bounded by First Avenue, East Forty-eighth Street, the East River, and East Forty-second Street"; and

Whereas, pursuant to authorization of the Congress in Public Law 357 of the Eightieth Congress, the Agreement Between the United Nations and the United States of America Regarding the Headquarters of the United Nations was brought into effect November 21, 1947, defining the rights and obligations of the United States and the United Nations with respect to the above-mentioned site; and

Whereas plans have been prepared for construction on said site of permanent head-quarters of the United Nations to cost not more than $65,000,000, and the United Nations is ready to proceed with such construction as soon as financing can be provided; and

Whereas the present temporary headquarters of the United Nations are inadequate for the efficient functioning of the organization and retention of its headquarters in the United States can be assured only by the erection of adequate permanent facilities; and

Whereas, owing to the current critical dollar shortage, the other member nations are not able to provide in cash at present their respective shares of the cost of constructing the permanent headquarters; other methods of borrowing the necessary funds have been found impracticable; and the permanent establishment of the headquarters of the United Nations in this country will result directly and indirectly in substantial economic benefits to the United States from the expenditures of the Organization and its member nations; and

Whereas, in view of the foregoing considerations, the United States representative at the seat of the United Nations, in response to an inquiry of the Secretary General of the United Nations regarding the possibility of a United States Government loan, informed the Secretary General, with the authorization of the President, by note dated October 29, 1947, that the President would recommend to the Congress the authorization of a loan from the United States to the United Nations for the construction of the headquarters in an amount not exceeding $65,000,000; and

Whereas the General Assembly of the United Nations, by resolution of November 20, 1947, authorized the Secretary General to negotiate such a loan with the appropriate officials of the United States Government, expressly recognizing that such loan would require the approval of the Congress; and

Whereas the United States Representative to the United Nations has negotiated and signed, on behalf of the United States an agreement with the United Nations in the form set forth below, providing for an interest-free loan of not more than $65,000,000 from the United States to the United Nations to be repaid in annual installments, and said agreement is, by its terms, to become effective on notification to the United Nations that the Congress, with the approval of the President, has made available the funds necessary to be advanced in accordance with the provisions of the agreement: Therefore be it

TRANSFER OF LAND AT BROWNSVILLE, TEX., TO THE INTERNATIONAL BOUND-ARY AND WATER COMMISSION

The bill (S. 2691) authorizing the transfer to the United States Section, International Boundary and Water Commission, by the War Assets Administration of a portion of Fort Brown at Brownsville, Tex., and adjacent borrow area, without exchange of funds or reimbursement was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the United States Section, International Boundary and Water Commission, United States and Mexico, is hereby authorized to accept by transfer without reimbursement or exchange of funds, and to assume permanent custody and control over, in connection with the lower Grande flood-control project under the jurisdiction of said United States Section, that portion of Fort Brown at Brownsville, Tex., and adjacent borrow area, described as fol-lows: Tract 1, Fort Brown—A tract containing two hundred and forty-one and six one-hundredths acres in the Espiritu Santo Grant in Cameron County, Tex., out of and a part of the Fort Brown military reservation as shown on map recorded in volume 8, page 23, of the Map Records of Cameron County, Tex.; tract 2 borrow area—A tract containing seventeen and four-tenths acres in share No. 19 of the Espiritu Santo Grant, Cameron County, Tex., conveyed to the United States of America by deed from Carrie M. Combe, individually and as independent executrix of the estate of Frederick J. Combe, deceased, recorded in volume 322, page 352, of the Deed Records of Cameron County. Tex.; both of said tracts being shown on drawing No. 4311-RC-12, San Benito, Tex., January 15, 1947, of the International Boundary and Water Commission, United States and Mexico, United States Section, designated "Flood Control Project-Lower Rio Grande, Tex.-Fort Brown Military Reservation" and on field notes attached thereto, which drawing and field notes are on file with said United States Section, and with the War Assets Administration, said property having heretofore been declared surplus to the War Assets Administration; and the War Assets Administration, or other Federal agency in responsible charge, is authorized and directed to transfer said property to the said United States Section without reimbursement or exchange of funds.

SEC. 2. There shall likewise be transferred to said United States Section, in connection with the transfer of said land, that certain building thereon situate known and numbered as warehouse building 252.

SEC. 3. The improvements on said land, except warehouse building 252, may be sold by the War Assets Administration under its existing authority, for use on the premises where now situated, subject to the provision that such use shall be in conformity with the terms and conditions of licenses to be issued therefor by the Secretary of State under the authority of the act of August 27, 1935 (49 Stat. 906, 22 U.S. C., sec. 277e), and provided that such licenses shall not be inconsistent with the primary purpose of flood control and the use of said land as a floodway, as determined by the Secretary of State. Any such improvements not sold for use on the premises may be sold by the War Assets Administration for removal from the premises within 1 year from the date of sale. To the extent that any such improvements are not sold under the provisions hereof within a period of 1 year from the effective date of this act, title thereto shall remain in the United States, and jurisdiction and control thereover shall vest in the said United States Section

SEC. 4. The Secretary of State shall, in order to assure beneficial public use of this land not inconsistent with the primary purpose of flood control, grant a license or licenses to the city of Brownsville, Tex., under the authority of the act of August 27, 1935, to use portions of the lands transferred to the United States Section under this act for municipal parks, golf courses, museums, athletic fields, including stadiums, and other public purposes not inconsistent with the primary purpose of flood control and with the use of said land as a floodway, as determined by the Secretary of State and subject to such terms and conditions as may in the opinion of the Secretary of State be necessary to protect the interests of the United States: Provided, That application is made by the city of Brownsville for such license or licenses within a period of 1 year from the effective date of this act: Provided further, That such license or licenses shall not be inconsistent with those granted under section 3 hereof for the use of the improvements therein specified: And provided further, That except for this provision granting to the city of Brownsville a preferential right for 1 year to be granted a license or licenses, nothing in this section shall be construed as modifying or impairing the authority of the Secretary of State over said lands under said act of August 27, 1935

SURVIVOR ANNUITIES

The bill (S. 2740) to amend section 8 of the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, as amended, was announced as next in order.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, may I ask my colleague whether he conferred with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS | about this bill?

Mr. McCLELLAN. No; I did not.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I may explain that the Senator from Maryland introduced this bill, and I was talking to him a moment ago, just before he had to go to a conference, and I volunteered to state his position on the bill.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. President, if my colleague will yield, there is on the Mr. McCLELLAN. calendar order of business 1812, a similar bill, which has been reported by the Senate Committee on Post Office and Civil Service. I am advised that the House will probably accept the Senate version of the bill, and I was about to suggest that House bill 6641 be taken up for immediate consideration, and then I shall offer the Senate bill as a substitute for the House bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6641) to amend the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, to provide annuities for certain surviving spouses of annuitants retired prior to April 1, 1948.

Mr. McCLELLAN. I move that the bill be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and substituting the text of Senate bill 2740.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

That section 8 of the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, as amended, is amended by inserting after the first sentence thereof a new sentence as follows: "Any such annuitant who died during the period beginning on February 29, 1948, and ending on April 30, 1948, leaving a surviving wife or husband, shall be deemed to have made the election authorized in the foregoing proviso and to have named such wife or husband to receive an annuity as provided in such proviso, but no such annuity shall become due or payable to such wife or husband prior to April 1, 1948."

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. out objection, Senate bill 270 will be indefinitely postponed.

That interest which accrued on said note from August 7, 1946, to June 17, 1947, in the sum of $1,193.50 is hereby waived and Secretary of Agriculture is authorized and directed to cause the proper entries to be made in the accounting records of the Department of Agriculture to effect such waiver.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

MEDICAL CARE FOR PHILIPPINE VETERANS

The bill S. 2861 was announced as next in order.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Over.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, if the Senators will withhold their objection a moment, I may say that this bill was introduced at the request of Mr. Emmet O'Neal, the American Ambassador to the Philippines. It relates to hospital care for Philippine veterans who are members of the United States Army. For a long time there has been a question as to how far Filipino veterans of the United States Army should be permitted to participate in the GI bill of rights, and in general the benefits have been denied to them. That question has arisen partly because it was felt that it was difficult to identify a good many of the guerrillas and the bill originally introduced covered a great many different fields. The bill now under discussion has been cut down to one field of assistance for these Filipino veterans, that is, in the field of hospitalization.

There is no question that large numbers of Filipinos were wounded, and this program will provide approximately 3,000 beds in the Philippines for the care of Filipino veterans. It seems to me they are clearly entitled to such care.

There cannot be any question that there may be benefited some guerrillas who were not regular members of the Army, because after all many more than 3,000 Filipino veterans were wounded. There is no question that from the time action started, on Bataan, many thousands of them were wounded, and many thousands of them require hospital care for injuries actually suffered in the battles of the United States against Japan. It seemed to the committee that the very least we could do was to provide a hospital program for these veterans. They were full-fledged members of the United States Army. They fought for the United States. At the time they fought they were American citizens who were members of our Army, but they have since been excluded by reason of the place of their domicile, and by reason of the fact that it was not considered wise to make the provisions made for American veterans applicable to them; so they have been denied hospital service. Pictures were exhibited to the committee showing the squalid conditions in the hospitals where these veterans are.

I feel that anyone who has investigated this situation would be willing to have the $10,000,000 used for this purpose, which represents a very small fraction of the total veterans' hospital program in the country for the care of these men who fought for the United States.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, section 3 of the bill authorizes grants of $22,-500.000.

Mr. TAFT. Yes; $22,500,000. 1 thought it was $10,000,000.

Mr. CORDON. Section 4 provides for payment for a period of not to exceed 5 years for such reimbursement to the Republic of the Philippines, and then provides that the total sum of the grants shall not exceed $3,285,000 a year.

Mr. TAFT. That is correct. It was thought that by the end of 5 years we might make some arrangement with the Philippine Government to have them take over the hospitals in some general settlement. For the time being, the hospitals will be operated at a cost of $3,000,000, and $22,500,000 is for the construction of three or four new hospitals.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2861) to assist by grants-in-aid the Republic of the Philippines in providing medical care and treatment for certain veterans, which had been reported from the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare with an amendment on page 2, line 24, after the word "made", to insert "for a period not to exceed 5 years", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to assist the Republic of the Philippines in providing medical care and treatment for veterans, as defined in section 2 of this act, who are in need of hospitalization for disabilities, determined by the Veterans' Administration under laws which it administers to be connected with the service described in such section, the President is authorized, subject to the provisions of this act, to furnish aid in the form of grants to the Republic of the Philippines (a) for the construction and equipping of hospitals in the Philippines to be used exclusively for such medical care and treatment, and (b) for expenses incident to such medical care and treatment in either the hospitals so constructed and equipped or other hospitals in the Philippines.

SEC. 2. For the purposes of section 1 of this act, the term "veterans" means persons who served in the organized military forces of the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines while such forces were in the service of the armed forces of the United States pursuant to the military order of the President of the United States, dated July 26, 1941, including among such military forces organized guerrilla forces under commanders appointed, designated, or subsequently recognized by the Commander in Chief, Southwest Pacific Area, or other competent authority in the Army of the United States, and who were discharged or released from such service under conditions other than dishonorable.

SEC. 3. Any grant for the construction and equipping of a hospital may be made prior to or following its completion: Provided, That the total of such grants shall not exceed $22.500.000.

SEC. 4. Grants for expenses incident to hospitalization may be made for a period not to exceed 5 years to reimburse the Republic of the Philippines for moneys expended for such hospitalization: Provided, That the total of such grants shall not exceed $3,285,000 for any fiscal year.

SEC. 5. The President may from time to time prescribe such rules and regulations and impose such conditions on the receipt of financial aid as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act; and he may delegate in whole or in part the authority conferred upon him by this act to any officer or officers of the United States.

SEC. 6. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FEDERAL ASSISTANCE TO CERTAIN LOCAL • SCHOOL AGENCIES

The bill (S. 2795) to provide assistance to certain local school agencies overburdened with war-incurred or postwar national-defense-incurred enrollments was announced as next in order.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I ask that the bill be temporarily passed over until we reach House bill 6527, Calendar No. 1765. That bill will be reached in a moment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. House bill 6527 can be taken up at this time in lieu of Senate bill 2795 if the Senator desires to have that done.

Mr. TAFT. Then, Mr. President, I ask that the Senate proceed to consider House bill 6527 instead of the Senate bill.

The clerk will state the bill by title for the information of the Senate.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (H. R. 6527) to provide assistance to certain local school agencies overburdened with warincurred, or postwar national-defense-incurred, enrollments.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the House bill. Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I do not care to object, but I should want to speak on the amendment. There is an amendment to the Senate bill.

Mr. TAFT. I was about to move to strike out all after the enacting clause in the House bill and to insert in lieu thereof Senate bill 2795, as amended.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Ohio wish to insert the Senate bill, as amended, in lieu of the House text?

Mr. TAFT. Yes, I offer the Senate bill, as amended, as an amendment to the House bill, and in lieu of the House text.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Ohio asks unanimous consent to strike out all after the enacting clause of House bill 6527, and to insert the text of Senate bill 2795, as reported with amendments from the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I am in favor of the purposes of the bill, but the Senate committee adopted an amendment to which I am very much opposed. The situation in my State is as follows. I only cite one outstanding case: At Grand Prairie, Tex., there were, during the war, two large aviation plants constructing airplanes. Workers flocked in from everywhere. The community received school aid from the Federal Government by reason of the increase in population resulting from the war work, Recently, however, the Navy has acquired the properties of the former airplane companies and the plants have been reactivated, and workers are coming from all over the country, flooding in there to work in the plants. Because the property belongs to the Navy the city authorities can derive no taxes from the property for the maintenance of their schools. So we think that is a comparable case to the war situation, because it is a Government activity, it is Government property, it is free of taxes, and we think that school district should be included within the terms of the bill. But under the amendment of the Senate committee it would be excluded. There would be no aid for a situation of that kind. This is an outstanding case, and unless the amendment is rejected the schools in that area will not be able to operate more than 4 or 5 months in the year.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, the committee feels very strongly that we should not begin to extend again the business of paying for public schools because of some Federal installation had in peacetime. During the war, because of the tremendous emergency and the great number of camps which were established, as well as the various kinds of plants which were built, we undertook to aid local school districts with Federal money to a certain extent.

The attempt which was made in the language which the committee struck out was that if the Federal Government undertakes a new project, if the Federal Government opens up a new airport, if it starts a new Federal institution within a State, it shall pay the expense of the school districts in the neighborhood which are in some way affected by the tax situation. Certainly I do not think any such general policy should be adopted through the Federal Works Administration. After all every State comes here begging the Federal Government to establish airports, or erect war plants, and it seems to me that if they want them, and it involves some expense to them, yet there is as against that the tremendous economic advantage which they derive from the establish-ment of such plants and airports, so the States themselves ought to provide for the payment to the school districts. We have wanted to cut off this program which has dragged on from year to year, which was left over from the war situation, but now it is proposed to open it up again and say that new Federal institutions installed shall begin to pay the cost of the school districts of the neighborhood. Of course the Navy pays for the education of the children of the naval personnel; it pays for the education of the children of its contractors. but when it comes to paying for the education of children of persons who gather around and open stores and generally build up the community, it seems to me the Federal Government should not be involved in any such new program. So the committee feels that the Senate bill should not be amended by reinserting the original provision.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I have no argument with the Senator about the general policy. I think we ought to get out of this thing as soon as we can. But in the situation I mentioned it is not a case of a new project being established at all. It was a war project, and the Government extended aid to the schools. Now instead of remaining with the Army, the Navy takes over title to the property.

Mr. BALDWIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. BALDWIN. I ask the Senator from Texas where the project is about which he is speaking.

Mr. CONNALLY. It is at Grand Prairie, Tex., which is near Dallas. Two tremendous airplane factories were built there during the war.

Mr. BALDWIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield so I make a comment on that?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. BALDWIN. In the town of Stratford, Conn., during the war there was a plant making aircraft. That plant employed 8,000 workers. Most of those workers with their families came into the community to work in the plant due to the war situation, and we were going along very nicely with this aircraft development. The town of Stratford and the State of Connecticut did not ask one nickel from the Federal Government to help with the school program.

Now the Chance Vought Co., which builds aircraft, is going to move to Dallas, Tex., and thus take one of the main industries out of our community and move it to Texas, and the State of Connecticut will be asked to contribute to Federal funds to maintain schools for that particular purpose. Mr. President, I shall vote for the committee amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Texas has 2 minutes left.

Mr. CONNALLY. I yielded to the Senator from Connecticut for a question, and we have listened to an oration from him.

Mr. BALDWIN. The question, Mr. President, is whether substantial justice is involved in a situation of that kind.

Mr. CONNALLY. Except for this par-ticular amendment there is no change in the bill. Under the other provisions of the bill aid is given to schools all over the country. In the case I cited the property involved is Navy property. It is owned by the Navy. The Navy pays not one dollar in taxes to the commu-Under the bill, if the amendment is defeated, the expenses of education would not be paid by the Government; it would simply mean that the town of Grand Prairie will continue to levy its taxes and attempt to maintain its schools. But it is fair and sound that the Government should contribute something for the maintenance of these schools, because by the ownership of this Federal property engaged in war work-it may be in peacetime, but it is war work-the Navy is carrying on its activities.

I appeal to the Senate to reject the amendment.

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. President, in my own State there is a perfect illustration of this problem, involving a new project started since the war. Army Air Corps is building a $25,000,-000 air base in a very small town in northern Maine, at Limestone. It has taken almost half of the geographical area of the town, a town of three or four thousand inhabitants. Obviously it is utterly impossible for this community to furnish schooling for the vast number of children who will come there during the 2 years of the construction period. Following that, when it is determined how much of an Army installation will be there—there may be two or three thousand school children-I assume that the project will be worked out on some equitable basis as between the Federal Government and the town. But in the intervening year or two certainly that little community cannot build the school houses and provide the facilities. It is a perfect illustration of the complete equity of the Federal Government being authorized to take care of a situation such as that.

I hope that those responsible may devise some way in which the problem can be met. If it is not met it will be most unfortunate for everyone concerned.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of Senate bill 2795?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2795) to provide assistance to certain local school agencies overburdened with warincurred, or postwar national-defenseincurred enrollments, which had been reported from the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare with amendments, on page 1, line 7, after the word "that" to strike out "(a)"; on page 2, line 5, after "facilities" to strike out the comma and "or (b) have become overburdened with defense-incurred school enrollments as the result of the reactivation or expansion of any defense establishment or the operation of any new refense establishment"; and in line 12, after the words "the sum of" to strike out "$7,000,000" and insert "$5,000,000", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Federal Works Administrator is authorized to make, in the same manner as heretofore authorized, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, contributions for the operation and maintenance of school facilities to local school agencies requiring assistance that are still overburdened with school enrollments caused by war activities and the transition from war to peacetime conditions and have received during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1948, Federal contributions administered by the Federal Works Administrator for the operation and maintenance of their school facilities.

SEC. 2. In order to carry out this act, including administrative expenses therefor, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, not to exceed the sum of $5,000,000.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendments to the Senate bill. Therefore the first question submitted to the Senate will be in connection with Senate bill 2795. The clerk will state the first committee amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 1, line 7, after the word "that", it is proposed to strike out "(a)."

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 2, line 5, it is proposed to strike out the comma after the word "facilities," and down to and including the word "establishment" in line 8.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 2, line 12, to strike out "$7,000,000" and insert "$5,000,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I ask for a division.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Texas asks for a division. On which amendment does the Senator from Texas desire a division?

Mr. CONNALLY. On the amendment on page 2, beginning in line 5.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Announcement of the vote has been made. Is there objection to returning—

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, that was the vote on the first amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair has announced, in both cases, that the amendments of the committee have been agreed to.

Mr. CONNALLY. I called for a divi-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair now asks the Senate if it has any objection to reconsideration of the vote by which the first committee amendment was agreed to, for the purpose of a division? The Chair hears none.

On a division, the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the vote on the other committee amendment will stand.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, I have an amendment to offer. First I should like to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. CAPEHART. Is the sconsidering Senate bill 2795? Is the Senate still

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Senate is undertaking to perfect Senate bill 2795 before substituting it for the text of House bill 6527.

Mr. CAPEHART. Is an amendment in order?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. An amendment is in order.

Mr. CAPEHART. On behalf of my colleague [Mr. Jenner] and myself, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment offered by the Senator from Indiana on behalf of himself and his colleague will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 2, line 12, before the period it is proposed to insert a colon and the following: "Provided, That of the amount herein authorized to be appropriated not less than $14.500 shall be available for contributions to the Charlestown Township School (Pleasant Ridge School), Charlestown, Ind."

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I shall be obliged to oppose this amendment. We could have a great list of special schools if we were to start enacting special legislation for individual school districts.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART] for himself and his colleague [Mr. JENNER].

The amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question now is on the request of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] to substitute the amended text of Senate bill 2795 for the text of House bill 6527, after striking out all after the enacting clause in the latter bill. Is there objection to the consideration of House bill 6527?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6527) to provide assistance to certain local school agencies overburdened with war-incurred or postwar national-defense-incurred enrollments.

INFLATION INCREASES COST OF GOVERNMENT

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I think this is about as good an opportunity as any other to invite the attention of the Senate to the underlying cause of these increasing demands upon the Federal Treasury for expenditures for local purposes.

Every Member of Congress knows that bill after bill is presented, and bill after bill is passed, increasing the expenditures of the Federal Government to take care of functions which ordinarily are performed by local government or State government.

The primary reason for this is the fact that Congress has chosen to do nothing whatever about the continued concentration of control over our economy in the hands of a few large industrial and commercial groups.

Another cause is the fact that the Congress has deliberately chosen to do nothing about inflation. I hold in my hand a copy of the Journal of Commerce, published in New York, issue of yesterday. The lead story is devoted to an interview given the day before by President Charles E. Wilson, of the General Electric Co., at a press conference, in which Mr. Wilson undertook to explain why, in his opinion, it has become necessary for the General Electric Co. to increase its prices. Only a few months ago the General Electric Co. filled the newspapers of the country with expensive advertisements announcing a reduction of prices on some products.

I sought at that time to bring about some action by the Joint Committee on the Economic Report to look into the method by which the management of concentrated business fixes the prices the rublic must pay. My efforts to date have been altogether unsuccessful. Now prices are rising again. And Congress is about to adjourn.

According to the New York Journal of Commerce, Mr. Wilson, at his press conference announcing the rise, pointed to what he called two outstanding facts:

1. The company has been hit by an additional $72,000,000 annual bill in the form of higher wages, salaries, materials, and transportation costs, which is being only partially offset by the price rises.

The company can hold the line at these new levels only providing expenses, including the costs of parts and components bought from suppliers, don't skyrocket further.

Then the story goes on as follows:

Mr. Wilson made it plain that about the only hope he now saw for resuming the price-cutting trend lay in the direction of technological improvements in production and in distribution.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the entire article in the New York Journal of Commerce may be printed at length in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit A.)

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, from the article which I have just read, it would appear that we can depend only on technological improvements for any fight against inflation, according to Mr. Wilson.

However, I think Mr. Wilson is wrong. It is my conviction, from the information at my disposal, that the profits of the General Electric Co. and of other industrial giants are so great that they can absorb all or most of the increased wages which are necessary if their employees and the masses of the people are to be enabled to continue to purchase the products of industry at steadily rising price levels.

This contention I think is supported by a very interesting article appearing in the United States News and World Report for June 18, on concentration of buying power. As everyone knows, the United States News cannot be regarded as a radical publication. Mr. David Lawrence, whose opposition to radicalism is well known, is the editor of this very valuable weekly magazine.

The article to which I refer shows that 14 percent of the people whose incomes were $5,000 or more received, in 1947, 40 percent of the total money income received by all individuals, before taxes. Even more striking than that is the fact that, according to this article, the top one-fifth of the population received 48 percent of the income, and the top threetenths received 60 percent. Of course that means that seven-tenths of the people, the vast majority, received only 30 percent of the total money income in 1947. It is this disproportion, this maldistribution of income, which lies at the basis of all economic unrest. This is the underlying fact which makes it absolutely essential that the Congress of the United States take some action to prevent continued rise of prices. Unless it is stopped it will destroy the market upon which General Electric and all the other industrial giants depend.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the entire text of the United States News article on concentration of buying power be published in the RECORD immediately following the article from the New York Journal of Commerce.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

O'MAHONEY. Mr. President. under the 5-minute rule there is not time for me to discuss this matter as fully as it should be discussed. I am having prepared an analysis of the income and profits of the General Electric Co. I shall seek another opportunity to lay the results of that analysis before the Senate.

I shall do this because I believe that this Congress should not adjourn without taking positive and constructive action to prevent the continuing increase of prices, of which the announcement by General Electric this week is only a single instance. Congress is neglecting its duty to the masses of the people by its failure to do anything about inflation.

It is absurd for Congress to allow itself to be driven to increase Government spending as we do by this bill, reported by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] because we fail to do anything about inflation.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator's time has expired.

GE LIFTS PRICES AS WAGE-LINE FIGHT COL-LAPSES—"THIRD ROUND" DECIDES ISSUE AFTER PROLONGED EFFORT TO TURN SPIRAL

(By Shelly Pierce)

A general upward revision of prices is being placed into effect by General Electric Co., Charles E. Wilson, president, announced here yesterday.

Behind that announcement lies a story of a desperate and losing battle by industry to stem the rising tide of inflation by holding the wage line and cutting prices. dustrial giants as United States Steel, Westinghouse, and General Electric spearheaded the drive.

And yesterday's General Electric announcement confirmed the fears, which had been expressed in many quarters, that the effect of the "third-round" of wage rises would be too much. Speculation was stimulated as to how long Big Steel could hold out against the demands of the CIO for a reopening and upward revision of its wage contract.

REASONS FOR MORE

Two cutstanding facts were spotlighted by Mr. Wilson at the press conference announcing the rise:

1. The company has been hit by an additional $72,000,000 annual bill in the form of higher wages, salaries, materials and trans-portation costs, which is being only partially offset by the price rises.

2. The company can hold the line at these new levels only providing expenses, including the costs of parts and components bought from suppliers, don't skyrocket further.

Mr. Wilson made it plain that about the only hope he now saw for resuming the price-cutting trend lay in the direction of tech-nological improvements in production and in distribution.

The price increases announced by Mr. Wilson wiped out partially, and in some cases completely, the two major price reductions announced earlier this year.

TRREGULAR ADVANCES

In a few cases, the advances will exceed the amount of the original announcements.

Fractional horsepower electric motors will remain at a price level 5 percent below the 1947 price, for instance, by virtue of the withdrawal of one of the two 1947 cuts of 5 percent each. Switch gear and distribution transformers have had the price cuts withdrawn.

Certain radio models are higher. For example, a table model television set is now priced at $325 compared with $299.50 earlier this year. But an AM-FM table-model radio remains unchanged at $69.95 compared with $89.15 in December 1947. All standard washing machines are $10.20 higher. But in a long list of such items as electric ironers, toasters, coffee makers, vacuum cleaners, and the like, no changes at all have been made.

It was stressed by the General Electric head that the upward revision of prices will not take the form of a uniform across-theboard percentage rise. Every line, he explained, will be separately considered and prices adjusted in terms of the effect of higher labor, material, and transportation costs. New schedules for certain products have been determined and already put into effect; others are undergoing analysis.

COST FACTORS

Reemphasizing the reluctance with which he announced the collapse of the GE hold-the-line price policy, Mr. Wilson detailed the factors which made it impossible to go on. The recent 8-percent wage rise (9 to 15 cents an hour) was the biggest factor. It was esti-mated that new wage and salary increases will add more than $50,000,000 a year directly to labor costs.

And it was in giving this figure that Mr. Wilson significantly underscored the fact that the price changes announced and now being computed do not provide for still higher costs which may arise from wage demands upon GE suppliers.

In addition to the wage rises, Mr. Wilson said, there has been added to GE costs some $22,000,000 a year by virtue of higher transportation costs and higher prices for the things that GE buys from its suppliers.

Though Mr. Wilson did not name the motor companies (which announced third-round rises), it was plain that he had them in mind when he expressed the keenest regret over his company's failure to sell at lower prices and resist wage demands.

SOUGHT WIDER MARKET

"We were fighting for a price level that would encourage the widest possible market," he said. "We wanted to provide the needed facilities for more jobs and to reduce the cost of living for everyone.

"Unfortunately, not every segment of industry was able to hold the line and we are now faced with the necessary adjustments due to the cost of doing business. "During the past several months we have exerted our best efforts within our organization in the communities in which we operate and with other companies and indus-tries to fight inflation with increased production, expanded facilities, and lowered manufacturing costs," he said.

LED MOVE FOR CUTS

The action of General Electric in revising prices now is particularly significant in view of the fact that the company through Charles E. Wilson, president, took the lead in efforts to reverse the inflationary spiral by effecting two price reductions earlier this year. Mr. Wilson said that industry must take the initiative in the matter.

General Electric's efforts to stabilize the price level follow similar attempts early in 1947 by the Ford Motor Co. and the International Harvester Co.

FIRST PRICE CUT

The first price reduction announced by General Electric went into effect January 1 and it ranged from 3 to 10 percent, and averaged better than 5 percent. It was es-timated that it would result in savings to consumers of better than $50,000,000 a year. It covered a number of appliances in pop-ular demand such as refrigerators, radios, and television receivers and electric ranges. Prices were also cut on components which were supplied to other manufacturers in order to encourage price reductions on their finished products as well.

The company left a loophole for a reversal of its new policy a that time, however, Mr. Wilson's announcement stated that the company expected to maintain the lower prices unless the company is faced with further increases in labor costs, the situation which has now occurred.

SECOND REDUCTION MADE

Another price reduction was announced effective April 16. This was a 5-percent cut in prices of fractional horsepower motors, switch gear, conventional transformers, lightning arresters, feeder regulators, cut-outs, and power capacitors. It was estimated that these reductions would save customers about $10,000,000 a year on a $200,000,000 volume.

The company's annual report said that during 1947, as a consequence of the con-tinuing upward spiral of wages and prices generally, and notwithstanding the fullest possible utilization of advantages offered by large volume, technological improvements, and modern plant facilities, it was impossible for the company to absorb all of the higher operating costs.

EXHIBIT B

CONCENTRATION OF BUYING POWER-TENTH OF FAMILIES WITH THIRD OF INCOME

(Income still is concentrated in the hands of relatively few United States families. Big pay raises won by millions of workers have not produced any real leveling of incomes. Official survey shows this. In 1947, 10 percent of families had 33 percent of total personal income. That is where the big market is to be found for durable goods.)

The big pay increases won by millions of workers in 1947 failed to produce the marked leveling of incomes that many expected. Buying power, as measured by the distribu-tion of personal incomes, still is massed in the hands of relatively few families.

A new Nation-wide sampling survey of "spending units"—households in which incomes and expenses are pooled—makes this This survey is the third annual sampling of consumers, made for the Federal Reserve Board by the University of Michigan's Survey Research Center.

As shown by part II of that study, just made public, here is what happened to income distribution in 1947:

High-income people still make up only a small portion of the population, but they account for a major part of the national total of personal incomes.

Above $5,000 of annual income, as the chart on this page shows, there were only 14 percent of the 48,400,000 spending units in 1947. This 14 percent of the people got 40 percent of the total personal income.

In 1946, the survey showed that spending units with more than $5,000 of income made up 10 percent of the population and got 31 percent of the income.

Above $7,500 of income, there were 5 percent of the spending units in 1947. This 5 percent got 24 percent of the personal in-

In 1946, the group above $7,500 of income made up 4 percent of the spending units. This group got 20 percent of the total personal income that year.

Middle-income people, in spending units with $3,000 to $4,999 of income, accounted for 27 percent of the population and 31 percent of the income in 1947.

In 1946, people in this income group made up 25 percent of the population, and got 33 percent of the income.

Low-income people, in spending units with less than $3,000 of income, were by far the most numerous group. At this income level, there were 59 percent of the spending units in 1947, and they got 29 percent of the total personal income.

In 1946, this group contained 65 percent of the total of spending units, and accounted for 36 percent of the income.

Concentration of income is shown even more strikingly when the population is di-vided into tenths that are classified according to income received.

The top tenth consists of spending units with more than $5,700 of income. These received 33 percent, or almost exactly one-third, of the total personal income in 1947.

The second tenth—those with $4,200 to $5,700 of income-got 15 percent of the total in 1947.

The third tenth—the spending units with $3,500 to $4,200 of income-received 12 percent of the total in 1947.

Here, then, are 30 percent of United States families or spending units getting 60 percent of the personal incomes earned by the whole population. This 30 percent represents 14,-520,000 spending units. The remaining 33,-880,000 spending units divide up to 40 percent of the personal income.

The relative share of each tenth of the population from top to bottom was almost exactly the same in 1947 as in 1946. Thus, even though many families in the lower and middle brackets moved up into higher brackets in 1947, the relative distribution of income among the whole popula-tion remained just about unchanged.

Moreover, as the survey report points out, millions of workers, including many who moved into the upper-income bracket, found that their income gains barely kept pace with the rise in the cost of living. This with the rise in the cost of living. suggests that the market for high-priced goods may not be so broad as might be in-ferred from the bare figures on income in-

Income changes in 1947, as reported by the survey, showed this:

About 24,000,000 spending units, or half the total covered by the survey, carned more money in 1947 than in 1946. Only about 9,000,000 earned less.

Personal earnings increased about $20,000 .-000.000.

The number of spending units earning as The number of spending units earning as much as $5,000 a year increased by about 2,500,000 during 1947. There was a similar reduction in the number below $3,000. Because they are rounded, the official percentage figures on the changes at each income level do not produce exactly these totals.

Despite these shifts, there still were six households with less than $5,000 for every-

There were three one with more than $5,000. times as many below $4,000 as above $4,000, and nearly half again as many below $3,000 as above $3,000. Only one out of 20 spending units had as much as $7,500 of income in 1947.

The top 2,400,000 spending units made twice as much money as the bottom 17,400,-000 units.

Occupational groups varied widely in the amount of their pay increases in 1947 over

This is shown by what happened to the median income of spending units headed by persons in the various occupations. Median income is the middle income for each groupin other words, half earn more than the median, half less. Changes in the median for each group are shown in the chart below.

Business executives, managers, and selfemployed persons, got the biggest gains. The median rose from $3,700 in 1946 to $4,500 in 1947. In this group, 45 percent got more than $5,000, and only 30 percent got less than

Professional people just about held their own. The median for both 1946 and 1947 was $4,000. Forty percent got more than $5,000, and 27 percent got less than $3,000. Clerks and salesmen got a $300 gain in median income, from $2,600 to $2,900. In this group, 15 percent earned more than $5,000, and 52 percent earned less than $3,000.

Skilled and semiskilled workers advanced from a $2,700 to a $3,000 median income.

Nine percent got more than $5,000.

Unskilled workers got an increase in median income from $1,600 to $1,800. Almost none received more than $5,000, and 86 percent earned less than $3,000.

Farm operators, on the basis of cash income only, had a median of $1,500 in 1947, a $200 advance over 1946. In cash, 8 percent of the farmers got more than $5,000, and 79 percent got less than $3,000. However, this does not accurately picture the condition of farmers, as their nonmoney income is not included.

The big market for new automobiles, new houses and other high-priced goods appears, on the basis of current income, to be among business and professional people.

More than half the spending units headed by these two groups are in the upper 24 percent of the population, which commands 53 percent of the total of personal income.

Professional persons merely held their own in 1947, so far as median income was concerned, yet they still rank next to the business group.

Business executives seem to be the ones who are riding out this period of high living costs most comfortably. Median income of the managerial and self-employed group rose $800 in 1947. The top median increase for any other occupational group was only $300.

This suggests that the most concentrated buying power is to be found among the 50 percent of business managers and self-employed persons whose 1947 earnings were above the $4,500 median for the whole group.

Other points that should be noted in appraising the market outlined by the consumer survey are these:

Median income for all spending units in 1947 was $2,530. It was $2,300 in 1946 and $2,020 in 1945.

Pay increases were reported for 1947 by three-fifths of all spending units with incomes above $3,000. Forty-five percent of those between $1,000 and $3,000 got increases. Only one-quarter of those below $1,000 got raises.

Big gains in income were reported most frequently in the group between $5,000 and $7,500. In that group, 26 percent said they had at least 25 percent more income in 1947 than in 1946. In the group from $4,000 to $5,000, 23 percent had increases of more than one-fourth. The same report was made by 18 percent of those above $7,500, which also was the average for all units.

Big losses in income were reported least frequently by high-income groups. Among those over $5,000, only 4 percent suffered as much as a 25-percent decrease in income last year. Out of the whole number of spending 8 percent had decreases of that amount.

FEDERAL ASSISTANCE TO CERTAIN LOCAL SCHOOL AGENCIES

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6527) to provide assistance to certain local school agencies overburdened with war-incurred, or postwar national-defense-incurred, enroll-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Senator from Wyoming interrupted the Chair's recital of the rather complicated order in connection with House bill 6527 and Senate bill 2795.

Without objection, the arrangement will be perfected as indicated in the previous announcement. That is to say, without objection, House bill 6527 is amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting the text of Senate bill 2795 as now amended.

The question now is on the engrossment of the amendment and third reading of the bill.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, Senate bill 2795 is indefinitely postponed.

The clerk will state the next measure on the calendar.

SECONDARY MARKET FOR GI HOME LOANS

The bill (S. 2790) to amend the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Ohio, who is in charge of the bill, whether this bill will be necessary if a housing bill is passed.

Mr. TAFT. It seemed wise to have this bill passed. The most serious check on housing today apparently is the piling up of GI loans in the banks. This bill provides a secondary market for GI housing loans. There is such a provision, on a rather more elaborate scale, in the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill; but we are not certain whether that bill will be en-

I think this particular feature is the most important feature, certainly to veterans, of that bill.

We think this bill should be passed and at least be available for passage by the House if the general housing bill, which probably will go to conference, is not agreed upon or if this particular feature of it should be eliminated. This feature is not in the bill which the House is proposing to pass.

So it seems wise to pass a separate

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare with amendment, on page 1, beginning in line 7, to strike out:

SEC. 511. (a) The Administrator is authorized under such terms and conditions as he may prescribe, consistent with this act, to purchase, at a price equal to the unpaid principal plus accrued interest, hereinafter referred to as "par," any real estate loan guaranteed under section 501 or 502 of this title: Provided, That, (1) such loan is offered to the Administrator for purchase within 5 years of the date of its orogin by the lender to whom the evidence of guaranty was originally issued, (2) the original amount of any loan hereafter made shall not exceed $10,000, (3) the loan shall not be in default at the time of purchase, and (4) the seller shall enter into an agreement with the Administrator that at the option of the ministrator the seller will service the loan in return for a service charge at such rate, not in excess of 1 percent per annum of the unpaid balance, as may be provided in such agreement: Provided further, That the Administrator may sell any loan purchased under this section at a price not less than par, with the primary right of repurchase reserved to the original mortgagee.

And insert:

SEC. 511. (a) The Administrator is authorized under such terms and conditions as he may prescribe, consistent with this act, to purchase at a price equal to the unpaid principal plus accrued interest, hereinafter re-ferred to as "par," any real-estate loan guar-anteed under section 501 or 502 of this title: anteed under section 501 or 502 of this title: Provided, That (1) such loan is offered to the Administrator for purchase within 5 years of the date of its origin by the lender to whom evidence of guaranty was originally issued; (2) the original dollar amount of loans purchased from any seller pursuant to this section shall not exceed 66% percent of the aggregate original dollar amount of all loans eligible for purchase pursuant to this section which such lender has originated, nor more than 66% percent of the original dol-lar amount of the loans originated by such lender during any one calendar year; (3) the original amount of the loan shall not exceed $10,000; (4) the loan shall not be in default at the time of purchase; (5) no loan financing the purchase price of a dwelling on which construction is begun subsequent to August 1, 1948, shall be eligible for pur-chase unless such dwelling has been built and inspected in conformity with minimum construction standards prescribed by the Administrator; (6) the Administrator shall re-fuse to purchase any loan which in his judg-ment does not reflect acceptable credit or security standards in its origination; (7) loans made after August 1, 1948, shall be eligible for purchase only if made on standard forms prescribed by the Administrator; and (8) at the option of the Administrator; the seller shall enter into an agreement with the Administrator that the seller will service the loan in return for a service charge at such rate, not less than one-half of 1 percent nor more than 1 percent per annum, as may be provided in such agreement. The Admin-istrator may sell any loan purchased under this section at a price not less than par, with-out recourse, and upon such terms and con-ditions, including restoration of the guaranty, as the Administrator may determine.

So as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944 is hereby further amended by inserting immediately after section 510 thereof the following new sections:

"SECONDARY MARKET

"SEC. 511. (a) The Administrator is authorized under such terms and conditions as he may prescribe, consistent with this act, to purchase at a price equal to the unpaid principal plus accrued interest, hereinafter referred to as 'par,' any real-estate loan guaranteed under section 501 or 502 of this title: Provided, That (1) such loan is offered to the Administrator for purchase within 5 years of the date of its origin by the lender to whom evidence of guaranty was originally issued; (2) the original dollar amount of loans purchased from any seller pursuant to this section shall not exceed 66% percent of the aggregate original dollar amount of all loans eligible for purchase pursuant to this section which such lender has originated, nor more than 66% percent of the original dollar amount of the loans originated by such lender during any one calendar year; (3) the original amount of the loan shall not exceed $10,000; (4) the loan shall not be in default at the time of purchase; (5) no loan financing the purchase price of a dwelling on which construction is begun subsequent to August 1, 1948, shall be eligible for purchase unless such dwelling has been built and inspected in conformity with minimum construction standards prescribed by the Administrator; (6) the Administrator shall refuse to purchase any loan which in his judgment does not reflect acceptable credit or security standards in its erigination; (7) loans made after August 1, 1948, shall be eligible for purchase only if made on standard forms prescribed by the Administrator; and (8) at the option of the Administrator, the seller shall enter into an agreement with the Administrator that the seller will service the loan in return for a service charge at such rate, not less than one-half of 1 percent nor more than 1 percent per annum, as may be provided in such agreement. The Administrator may sell any loan purchased under this section at a price not less than par, without recourse, and upon such terms and conditions, including restoration of the guaranty, as the Administrator may deter-

"(b) For the purpose of this section the Secretary if the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to make available to the Administrator such sums as he may request from time to time between the effective date of this section and the expiration of the period of time in which loans may be offered for purchase pursuant to the terms of this section. Such sums, together with all moneys received by the Administrator under this section, shall be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States in a special deposit account, to be disbursed through the Division of Disbursement of the Treasury Department. On sums so advanced by the Secretary of the Treasury, less those amounts deposited in miscellaneous receipts under subsection (d) hereof, the Administrator shall pay semiannually to the Treasurer of the United States interest at the rate or rates determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into consideration the current average rate on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States as of the last day of the month preceding the deposit.

"(c) In order to make such sums available to the Administrator the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to use, as a public-debt transaction, the proceeds of the sale of any security hereafter issued under the Second Liberty Bond Act as now in force or as hereafter amended, and the purposes for which securities may be issued under the Second Liberty Bond Act as now in force or as hereafter amended, and the purposes for which securities may be issued under the Second Liberty Bond Act as now in force or as hereafter amended are hereby extended to include such purposes.

"(d) The Administrator shall from time to time cause to be deposited into the Treasury of the United States, to the credit of mis cellaneous receipts, such of the funds in the special deposit account referred to in subsection (b) hereof, as in his judgment are not needed for the purposes hereof, and after the last day on which the Administrator may purchase loans under this section, he shall, with due allowance for outstanding commitments, cause to be so deposited all sums in said account, and all moneys received thereafter, representing the repayment or recovery of the principal of obligations purchased pursuant to this section.

Interest collected by the Administrator in excess of the amount payable by the Administrator to the Treasurer pursuant to subsection (b) of this section, together with any miscellaneous receipts or credits the dis-position of which is not otherwise provided for herein, shall constitute a reserve for payment of losses, if any, and expenses incurred in the liquidation of said loans. Without regard to any other provisions or limitations of law or otherwise except the provisions of this title the Administrator shall have authority in carrying out the functions hereby or hereunder vested in him to exercise any and all rights of the United States, including without limitation, the right to take or cause to be taken such action as in his judgment may be necessary or ap-propriate for or in connection with the custody, management, protection, realization, and liquidation of assets, to determine the necessary expenses and expenditures and the manner in which the same shall be incurred, allowed, paid, and accounted for and audited, to invest available funds in obligations of the United States, to make such rules, regulations, requirements, and orders as he may deem necessary and appropriate, and to employ, utilize, compensate, and delegate any of the functions hereunder to, such persons and such corporate or other agen-cies, including agencies of the United States, as he may designate.

"INCONTESTABILITY

"Sec. 512. Any evidence of guaranty or insurance issued by the Administrator shall be conclusive as to the eligibility of the loan for guaranty or insurance under the provisions of this title and as to the original amount of such guaranty or insurance, except that nothing in this section shall preclude the Administrator from establishing, as against a holder, defenses based on the fraud or material misrepresentation of such holder, and except that the Administrator shall not, by reason of anything contained in this section, be barred from establishing, under regulations in force at the date of such issuance or disbursement, whichever is the earlier, defenses to payment of any part of the guaranty or issuance."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMENDMENT OF PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE ACT TO PROVIDE FOR CONSTRUCTION OF HOSPITALS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 4816) to amend section 624 of the Public Health Service Act so as to provide a minimum allotment of $250,000 to each State for the construction of hospitals, which had been reported from the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare with an amendment, on page 2, in line 3, after the words "less than", to strike out "$250,000" and insert "$100,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "An act to amend section 624 of the Public Health Service Act so as to provide a minimum allotment of $100,000 to each State for the construction of hospitals."

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 2655) to provide for the common defense by increasing the strength of the armed forces of the United States, including the Reserve components thereof, and for other purposes, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate; that the House insisted upon its amendment; asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. Andrews of New York, Mr. SHORT, Mr. COLE of New York, Mr. BATES of Massachusetts, Mr. VINSON, Mr. Brooks, and Mr. KILDAY were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

The message also announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6248) to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to stabilize prices of agricultural commodities; to amend section 22 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, reenacted by the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937; and for other purposes; agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. HOPE, Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN, Mr. JOHNSON of Illinois, Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin, Mr. Flannagan, Mr. Cooley, and Mr. PACE were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLU-TIONS SIGNED

The message further announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions, and they were signed by the President pro tempore:

S. 239. An act to provide for a Board of Visitors to the United States Naval Academy and for a Board of Visitors to the United States Military Academy, and for other purposes:

participation by the United States; and S. J. Res. 202. Joint resolution to change the name of the Potholes Dam in the Columbian Basin project to O'Sullivan Dam.

PROMOTION OF NATIONAL DEFENSE—IN-CREASE IN PERSONNEL OF ARMED FORCES

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2655) to provide for the common defense by increasing the strength of the armed forces of the United States, including the Reserve components thereof. and for other purposes, together with a message from the House insisting upon its amendment and requesting a conference with the Senate thereon:

That (a) this act may be cited as the "Selective Service Act of 1948."

(b) The Congress declares that an adequate armed strength must be achieved and maintained to insure the security of this Nation.

(c) That Congress further declares that such armed strength, to be adequate, requires an increase at the earliest practicable date in the number of persons on active service in the armed forces to not to exceed the manpower strengths authorized in section 2 of this act.

(d) The Congress further declares that if at any time such requisite manpower strengths are not attained and maintained by voluntary means, the national security requires that they be provided through a system of compulsory selective service.

(e) The Congress further declares that in a free society the obligations and privileges of such service should be shared generally in accordance with a fair and just system of selection as hereinafter provided.

SEC. 2. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the number of persons on active service in the Army of the United States is hereby authorized to be 837,000; in the Navy, including the Marine Corps, the present statutory authorized strength of 666,882; and in the Air Force of the United States, 502,000: Provided, That the number of persons provided for in this section shall be construed to mean the daily average number of persons in the armed forces during the fiscal year: Provided further, That the number of persons who are serving on active duty for training purposes only and the number of officer candidates shall be excluded in computing the number of persons within these authorized strengths or on active service.

Sec. 3. Except as otherwise provided in this act, it shall be the duty of every male citizen of the United States, and of every other male person residing in the United States, who, on the day or days fixed for the first or any subsequent registration, is between the ages of 18 and 31, to present himself for and submit to registration at such time or times and place or places, and in such manner and in such age group or groups, as shall be determined by proclamation of the President and by rules and regulations prescribed here-

SEC. 4. (a) Except as otherwise provided in this act, every male citizen of the United States, and every other male person residing in the United States, except those aliens who have not declared their intention to become citizens thereof, who is between the ages of 19 and 26 at the time fixed for his registration, or who attains the age of 19 after having been required to register pursuant to sec-tion 3 of this act, shall be liable for service in the armed forces of the United States. The President is authorized from time to time, whether or not a state of war exists, to select and induct into the armed forces of the United States for service in the manner provided in this act such number of persons as may be required to provide and maintain manpower strengths of the respective armed forces not to exceed those authorized by section 2 of this act: Provided, That no person shall be inducted or ordered into active service without his consent under this act until the President proclaims not earlier than 75 days after the date of enactment (1) that an insufficient number of persons is on active service in the armed forces to maintain an adequate national defense, and (2) that a sufficient number of such persons cannot, sufficient number of such persons cannot, in his judgment, be attained by voluntary enlistment and by voluntary request for call to active duty. Immediately upon the issuance of such proclamation the provisions of this act authorizing the induction of persons into the armed forces and the ordering of persons into active service without their consent shall be effective, but no person shall be inducted or ordered into active service without his consent under this act prior to 90 days after the date of its enactment: Provided, That no person shall be inducted under this act before January 31, 1949: Provided further, That no person shall be inducted under this act on or after January 31, 1949, unless the President shall first find that the requisite manpower strengths of the armed forces have not been attained or maintained by an intensified voluntary enlistment campaign: And provided jurther, That the retary of the Army, the Secretary of the Navy. and the Secretary of the Air Force are hereby authorized and directed to initiate and carry forward an intensified voluntary enlistment camaign. For the purposes of such campaign and notwithstanding any other provisions of law (a) original enlistments in the armed forces for periods of 2 years shall be accepted from among all age groups suitable for military service, with such enlistment privileges as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Army, the Secretary of the Navy, and the Secretary of the Air Force, as the case may be, which shall be the same or similar to the enlistment privileges now provided for en-listments for periods of more than 2 years and (b) reenlistments in the armed forces for periods of 1 or 2 years, at the option of the person so enlisted, shall be accepted with such reenlistment privileges as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Army, the Secretary of the Navy, and the Secretary of the Air Force, as the case may be, which shall be the same or similar to the enlist-ment privileges now provided for reenlistments for longer periods, and the Secretary of the Army, Secretary of the Navy, and Sec retary of the Air Force are further directed to report to the Congress before January 31,

No person shall be inducted for service under this act unless and until he is acceptable to the armed forces for such service and his physical and mental fitness for such service has been satisfactorily determined under standards prescribed by the Secretary of Defense.

No person shall be inducted for such training and service until adequate provision shall have been made for such shelter, sanitary facilities, water supplies, heating and lighting arrangements, medical care, and hospital accommodations, for such persons, as may be determined by the Secretary of Defense to be essential to public and personal health.

Persons inducted into the land forces of the United States pursuant to this act shall be deemed to be members of the Army of the United States; persons inducted into the naval forces of the United States pursuant to this act shall be deemed to be members of the United States Navy or the United States Marine Corps, as appropriate; and persons inducted into the air forces of the United States pursuant to this act shall be deemed to be members of the Air Force of the United States.

No person, without his consent, shall be inducted for service under this act except as otherwise provided herein, after he has attained the 26th anniversary of the day of his birth.

(b) Each person inducted under the provisions of this section shall serve for a period of 12 months, unless sooner discharged in accordance with standards and procedures prescribed by the Secretary of Defense.

(c) No persons shall be inducted under paragraphs (1) and (2) above until and unless the President shall find, and so advise the President pro tempore of the Senate and Speaker of the House of Representatives, not before 3 months after the date of enactment of this act, that insufficient numbers of doctors of medicine, dentists, veterinarians, optometrists, osteopaths, and pharmacists have volunteered for service in the armed forces to maintain the ratios specified in said subsections. Upon such advice to the President pro tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the authority in said subsections to induct persons into the armed forces shall become effective immediately.

(d) (1) Under the provisions of applicable laws and regulations any person between the ages of 19 and 26 shall be offered an opportunity to enlist in the Regular Army for a period of service equal to that prescribed in subsection (b) of this section.

(2) Any enlisted member of any Reserve

(2) Any enlisted member of any Reserve component of the armed forces may, during the effective period of this act, apply for a period of service equal to that prescribed in subsection (b) of this section and his application shall be accepted: Provided, That his physical and mental fitness for such service meet the standards prescribed by the head of the department concerned: And provided further, That active service performed pursuant to this section shall not prejudice his status as such member of such Reserve component.

(e) The passing requirement for the General Classification Test shall be fixed at 70 points or less. The monthly requisitions on the President under this act by the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, or the Secretary of the Air Force shall not exceed the number of men required after consideration of the actual number of voluntary enlistments during the 3 months preceding that month in which the requisition is made.

(f) Each person who hereafter is inducted, enlisted, or appointed and serves for a period of less than 2 years in one of the armed services and meets the qualifications for enlistment or appointment in a Reserve component of the armed forces of the United States, shall be transferred to a Reserve component of the armed forces of the United States and shall be deemed to be a member of such Reserve component until he attains the age of 35, or until the expiration of a period of 5 years after such transfer, or untl he is discharged from such Reserve component, whichever occurs first, and shall be subject to such additional service as may now or hereafter be prescribed by law for such component: Provided, That any person who completes at least 24 months of service in the armed forces under subsection (b), and who thereafter serves satisfactorily on active duty in the armed forces under a voluntary extension for a period of at least 1 year, which extension is hereby authorized, or in an organized unit of any Reserve component of any of the services for which he is entitled to receive pay for attendance at drill or equivalent duty for a period of at least 36 consecutive months, shall, in time of peace, be re-lieved from any liability under this subsection to serve in any Reserve component of the armed forces of the United States, but nothing in this subsection shall be construed to prevent any such persons, while in a Reserve component of such forces, from being ordered or called to active duty in such forces in accordance with other applicable

SEC. 5.. (a) Commissioned officers, warrant officers, pay clerks, enlisted men, and aviation cadets of the Regular Army, the Navy, the Air Force, the Marine Corps, the Coast Guard, the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and the Public Health Service; cadets, United States Military Academy; midshipmen, United States Navy; cadets, United States Coast Guard Academy; members of the Reserve components of the armed forces, the Coast Guard, and the Public Health Service, while on active duty; and foreign diplomatic representatives, technical attachés of foreign embassies and legations, consuls general, consuls, vice consuls, and other consular agents of foreign countries who are not citizens of the United States, and members of their families, and persons in other categories to be specified by the President, residing in the United States, and who have not declared their intention to become citizens of the United States, shall not be required to be registered under section 3 and shall be relieved from liability for service under section 4 (b).

(b) (1) No person who has been awarded the Purple Heart or who has served honorably on active duty after September 16, 1940, for a period of 12 months or more in the Army, the Air Force, the Navy, the Marine Corps, the Coast Guard, or the Public Health Service on active duty with the armed forces or the Coast Guard, or in the armed forces of any country allied with the United States in World War II prior to September 2, 1945, shall without his consent be liable for induction for service under this act, except after a declaration of war or national emergency made by Congress subsequent to the date of enactment of this act.

(2) Any person who, for service in the armed forces between December 7, 1941, and September 2, 1945, has been authorized to wear any badge, award, or decoration or other authorized evidence of exceptional valor in the face of the enemy, bravery in combat, or continued service in combat, as determined under regulations prescribed by the President, shall be exempt from induction for service or call to active duty under this act, but not from registration.

(3) No person who has served honorably on active duty after September 16, 1940, for a period of 90 days or more but less than 12 months in the Army, the Air Force, the Navy, the Marine Corps, the Coast Guard, or the Public Health Service on active duty with the armed forces or the Coast Guard, or in the armed forces of any country allied with the United States in World War II prior to September 2, 1945, shall without his consent be liable for induction for service under this act, except after a declaration of war or national emergency made by Congress subsequent to the date of enactment of this

(A) the local board determines that he is regularly enlisted or commissioned in an organized unit of a Reserve component of the armed force in which he served, provided such unit is reasonably accessible to such person without unduly interrupting his normal pursuits and activities, including attendance at a college or university in which he is regularly enrolled or in a Reserve com-ponent (other than in an organized unit) of the armed force in which he served in any case in which enlistment or commission in such organized unit is not available to him;

(B) the local board determines that enlistment or commission in a Reserve com-ponent of the armed force in which he served is not available to him.

(c) For the purposes of computation of the periods of active duty referred to in sub-section (b) of this section, no credit shall be allowed for—

(A) periods of active duty for training

purposes;
(B) periods of active duty in which the service consisted solely of training under the Army specialized training program, the Army Air Force college training program, or any similar program under the jurisdiction of the Navy, Marine Corps, or Coast Guard;

(C) periods of active duty as a cadet at the United States Military Academy or United States Coast Guard Academy, or as a mid-shipman at the United States Naval Academy, or in a preparatory school after nomi-nation as a principal, alternate, or candi-date for admission to any of such academies,

(D) periods of active duty in any of the armed forces while being processed for entry into or separation from any educational program or institution referred to in paragraphs (B) or (C).

(d) (1) Persons who on the effective date of this act, or who, prior to the date they are ordered to report for induction for service under this act, are members of the federally recognized National Guard, the federally recognized Air National Guard, the Officer's Reserve Corps, the Regular Army Reserve, the Air Force Reserve, the Enlisted Reserve Corps, the National Reserve Corps, the Marine Corps Reserve, the Coast Guard Reserve, or the Public Health Service Reserve, and are not on active duty, and who serve therein for a total period of 6 years, during which they satisfactorily participate in scheduled drills and training periods as prescribed by the Secretary of Defense, shall be exempt from service by induction under the provisions of this act, but not from registration.

(2) Except as provided in subsection (b) and except as hereinafter provided, no person who shall become a member of a res component after the effective date of this act shall thereby be exempt from registration or service by induction or call to active duty under the provisions of this act: Provided, That persons who, prior to attaining the age of 18 years and 6 months, are appointed to or enlisted in an organized unit of any of the reserve components of the armed forces mentioned in paragraph (1) of this subsection, which participate in scheduled drills and training periods throughout the year, shall, so long as they continue to be members of any of such components, be exempt from service by induction under the provisions of this act, but not from registration.

(e) (1) Any person who, on the effective date of this act, is enrolled in the advanced course, senior division, Reserve Officers' Training Corps or the Air Reserve Officers' Training Corps or the Air Reserve Officers' Training Corps, or is a member of the Naval Reserve Officers' Training Corps and has entered upon the junior or senior year, or is a midshipman, United State Naval Reserve, shall be deferred from induction for service under this act until the completion or termination of the course of instruction and so long thereafter as he continues in a regular or reserve status upon being commissioned, but shall be required to register under section 3, but after completion or termination of the course of instruction may be ordered to active duty without his consent as provided in paragraph (3) of this subsection.

(2) Within such number as may be pre-scribed by the Secretary of Defense any per-son who, on or after the effective date of this act, is selected for enrollment or elects to continue in the senior division, Reserve Officers' Training Corps or Air Reserve Officers' Training Corps, or who is appointed a midshipman, United States Naval Reserve, or is a member of the Naval Reserve Officers' Training Corps and who is selected for enrollment or elects to continue in the course after the effective date of this act, and who agrees, in writing, to accept a commission if tendered and to serve, subject to call by the Secretary of the Army, the Secretary of the Air Force, or the Secretary of the Navy, respectively, for the same period of time as is required of an inductee under the terms of this bill on active duty after receipt of a commission, shall be deferred from induction for service under this act until after completion or termination of the course of instruction and so long thereafter as he continues in a regular or reserve status upon being commissioned, but shall be required to register under section 3.

(3) Notwithstanding any other provisions of law or of this act except subsection 4 (a) and paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (d) of this section, the President is hereby authorized to order into the active service of the armed forces of the United States, for a period not to exceed 24 consecutive months each, members of any or all Reserve components of the armed forces of the United States without their consent who prior to the effective date of this act have had less than 90 days' continuous active service in the armed forces of the United States, exclusive of periods of active training duty: Provided, That with respect to ordering members of the National Guard of the States into the active service of the United States, the consent of the Governor of the State or Territory concerned, in each case, and for the District of Columbia, the consent of the commanding general of the District of Columbia National Guard, shall first be secured: Provided further, That this sub-section shall not be construed as repealing or abridging any existing law which author izes the ordering of members of Reserve components into active service.

(f) Fully qualified and accepted aviation cadet applicants of the Army, Navy, and Air Force who have signed an agreement of service shall, in such numbers as may be designated by the Secretary of Defense, be deferred, during the period covered by the agreement but not to exceed 4 months, from induction for service under this act, but shall be required to register under section 3.

(g) The Vice President of the United States; the governors of the several States, Territories, and possessions, and all other officials chosen by the voters of the entire State, Territory, or possession; members of the legislative bodies of the United States and of the several States, Territories, and possessions; judges of the courts of record of the United States and of the several States, Territories, possessions, and the District of Columbia shall, while holding such offices, be deferred from service under this act in the armed forces of the United States.

(h) (1) The Secretaries of the Army, the Navy, and the Air Force are authorized and directed to accept enlistments for periods of 1 year in the Army of the United States, the United States Navy or the United States Marine Corps, and the Air Force of the United States, respectively, from among qualified male persons between the ages of 18 and 19: Provided, That no person who is enlisted in the Army of the United States under the provisions of subsection (h) shall be permanently assigned to duty at any place outside of the continental limits of the United States; and no person who is enlisted under the provisions of such subsection in the United States Navy, the United States Ma-rine Corps, or the Air Force of the United States shall be assigned to duty at any naval or air force installation which is located on land outside of the continental limits of the United States.

(2) Each person who hereafter is enlisted under the provisions of subsection (h) (1) above and who meets the qualifications for enlistment or appointment in a Reserve component of the armed forces shall, upon discharge from such enlistment under conditions other than dishonorable, be transferred to a Reserve component of the armed forces of the United States and shall serve therein for a period of 6 years or until sooner discharged. Each such person shall so long as he remains a member of such Reserve component, be liable to be ordered to active duty only in time of war or national emergency as declared by the Congress and shall not be subject to any further service under this act.

(i) Regular or duly ordained ministers of religion, Christian Science Readers and practitioners, and students preparing for the ministry under the direction of recognized churches or religious organizations, who are satisfactorily pursuing full-time courses of instruction in recognized theological or divinity schools, or who are satisfactorily pursuing full-time courses of instruction leading to their entrance into recognized theological or divinity schools in which they have been preenrolled, or who are recognized by the officials of their churches or gogue or sect as having given a definite and acknowledged intention of entering into full-time religious work, shall be exempt from service (but not from registration) under this act.

(j) (1) The President is authorized, under such rules and regulations as he may pre-scribe, to provide for the deferment from service under this act in the armed forces of the United States of any or all categories of persons whose employment in industry, agriculture, or other occupations or employ-ment, or whose continued service in an office (other than an office described in subsection (g)) under the United States or any State, Territory, or possession, or the District of Columbia, or whose activity in other en-deavors is found to be necessary to the maintenance of the national health, safety, or interest: Provided, That no person within any such category shall be deferred except upon the basis of his individual status. The President is also authorized, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, to provide for the deferment from service under this act in the armed forces of the United States (1) of any or all categories of persons in a status with respect to persons dependent upon them for support renders their deferment advisable, and (2) of any or all categories of those persons found to be physically, mentally, or morally deficient or defective. For the purpose of determining whether or not the deferment of any person is advisable, because of his status with respect to persons dependent upon him for support, any payments of allowances which are payable by the United States to the dependents of persons serving in the armed forces of the United States shall be taken into consideration, but the fact that such payments of allowances are payable shall not be deemed conclusively to remove the grounds for deferment when the dependency is based upon financial considerations and shall not be deemed to re-move the grounds for deferment when the dependency is based upon other than financial considerations and cannot be eliminated by financial assistance to the dependents. The President is also authorized, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, to provide for the deferment from service under this act in the armed forces of the United States of any or all categories of persons who have wives or children, or wives and children, with whom they maintain a bona fide family relationship in their homes. No deferment from such services shall be made in the case of any individual except upon the basis of the status of such individ-There shall be posted in a conspicuous place at the office of each local board a list setting forth the names and classifications those persons who have been classified by such local board.

(2) Anything in this act to the contrary notwithstanding, the President is authorized, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, to provide for the deferment, by age group or groups, from service under this act in the armed forces of the United States. of those persons whose age or ages are such that he finds their deferment to be advisable in the national interest: Provided, That the President may, upon finding that it is in the national interest terminate the deferment by age group or groups of any or all of the persons so deferred.

(k) (1) Any person who, while satisfactorily pursuing a full-time course of instruction at a high school or similar institution of learning, is ordered to report for induction under this act prior to his graduation from such school or institution, shall, upon his request, have his induction under this act postponed (A) until the time of his graduation therefrom, or (B) until he attains the twentieth anniversary of his birth, or (C) until he ceases to satisfactorily pursue such course of instruction, whichever is the earliest. The induction of any such person shall not be postponed under this subsection beyond the date so determined.

(2) Any person who, while satisfactorily pursuing a full-time course of instruction at a college, university, or similar institution of higher learning, is ordered to report for induction under this act after the beginning and prior to the end of one of his academic years, shall, upon his request, have his induction under this act postponed (A) until the end of such academic year or (B) until he ceases to satisfactorily pursue such course of instruction, whichever is the earlier.

(1) Nothing contained in this act shall be construed to require any person to be subject to combatant service (which for the purposes hereof includes training for combatant duties) in the armed forces of the United States who, by reason of religious training and belief, is conscientiously opposed to participation in war in any form. Religious training and belief in this connection means an individual's belief in a relation to a Supreme Being involving duties superior to those arising from any human relation, but does not include essentially sociological or philosophical views or a merely personal moral code. Any such person claiming such exemption from combatant service because of such conscientious objections whose claim is sustained by the local board shall, if he is inducted into the armed forces under this act, be assigned to noncombatant service as defined by the President, or shall, if he is found to be conscientiously opposed to par-ticipation in such noncombatant service, be deferred. Any such person claiming such exemption from combatant service because of such conscientious objections shall, if such claim is not sustained by the local board, be entitled to an appeal to the appropriate appeal board. Upon the filing of such appeal, the appeal board shall refer any such claim to the Department of Justice for inquiry and hearing. The Department of Justice shall hold a hearing with respect to the character and good faith of the objections of the persons concerned, and such person shall be notified of the time and place of such hearing. The Department of Justice shall, after such hearing, if the objections are found to be sustained, recommended to the appeal board that (1) if the objector is inducted into the armed forces under this act, he shall be assigned to noncombatant service as defined by the President, or (2) if the objector is found to be conscienticusly opposed to participation in such noncombatant service, he shall be deferred. If after such hearing the Department of Justice finds that his objections are not sustained, it shall recommend to the appeal board that such objections be not sustained. The appeal The appeal board shall, in making its decision, give consideration to, but shall not be bound to follow, the recommendation of the Department of Justice together with the record on appeal from the local board. Each person whose claim for exemption from combatant service because of conscientious objections is sustained shall be listed by the local board on a register of conscientious objectors.

No exception from registration, or exemption or deferment from service, under this act, shall continue after the cause therefor ceases to exist.

(n) No person shall be relieved from service under this act by reason of conviction for a criminal offense, except where the of-fense for which he has been convicted may be punished by death or by imprisonment for a term exceeding 1 year.

(o) In the case of any registrant whose place of employment is located outside the appeal board area in which the local board having jurisdiction over the registrant is located, any occupational deferment made or denied under subsection (i) of this section may, within 10 days after such deferment is made or denied, be submitted for review and decision to the appeal board having jurisdiction over the area in which is located the principal place of employment of the registrant. Such decision of the appeal board shall be final un-less modified or changed by the President, and such decision shall be made public.

(p) Where one or more members of a family were killed in action or died in line of duty while serving in the armed forces of the United States, or subsequently died as a result of injuries received or disease incurred during such service, the sole surviving son of such family shall not be inducted for service under the terms of this act.

SEC. 6. No bounty shall be paid to induce any person to enlist in or be inducted into the armed forces of the United States: Provided, That the clothing or enlistment allowances authorized by law shall not be regarded as bounties within the meaning of this section. No person liable for service in such forces shall be permitted or allowed to furnish a substitute for such service; no substitute as such shall be received, enlisted, enrolled, or inducted into the armed forces of the United States; and no person liable for service in such forces under section 4 shall be permitted to escape such service or be discharged therefrom prior to the expiration of his period of such service by the payment of money or any other valuable thing whatsoever as consideration for his release from such service or liability therefor.

SEC. 7. (a) The selection of persons for service under section 4 shall be made in an impartial manner, under such rules and regulations as the President may prescribe, from the persons who are liable for such service and who at the time of selection are registered and classified, but not deferred or exempted: Provided, That in the selection of persons for service under this act, and in the interpretation and execution of the provisions of this act, there shall be no discrimination against any person on account of race or color: Provided further, That in the classification of registrants within the jurisdiction of any local board, the registrants of any particular registration may be classified, in the manner prescribed by and in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the President, before, together with, or after the registrants of any prior registration or registrations; and in the selection for in-duction of persons within the jurisdiction of any local board and within any particular classification, persons who were registered at any particular registration may be selected, in the manner prescribed by and in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the President, before, together with, or after persons who were registered at any prior registration or registrations.

(b) Quotas of men to be inducted for service under this act shall be determined for each State, Territory, possession, and the District of Columbia, and for subdivisions thereof, on the basis of the actual number of men in the several States, Territories, possessions, and the District of Columbia, and the subdivisions thereof, who are liable for such service but who are not deferred after classification, except that credits shall be given in fixing such quotas for residents of such subdivisions who are in the armed forces of the United States on the date fixed determining such quotas. After such quotas are fixed, credits shall be given in filling such quotas for residents of such subdivisions who subsequently become members of such forces. Until the actual numbers necessary for determining the quotas are known, the quotas may be based on esti-mates, and subsequent adjustments therein shall be made when such actual numbers are known. All computations under this subsection shall be made in accordance with such rules and regulations as the President may prescribe.

SEC. 8. (a) The training under this act shall be administered and carried out on the highest possible moral, religious, and spiritual plane.

(b) It shall be unlawful within such reasonable distance of any military camp, station, fort, post, cantonment, or training or mobilization place, where training under this act is being given, as the Secretary of National Defense may determine to be necessary to the protection of the health, morals, and welfare of such persons who are receiv-ing training under this act and shall designate and publish in general orders or bulletins, to establish or keep houses of ill fame, brothels, bawdy houses, or places of enter-tainment which are public nuisances, or other like facilities detrimental to the health and morals of persons who are being trained under this act, or to receive or permit to be received for immoral purposes any person in any vehicle, place, structure, or building used for the purpose of lewdness, assignation, or prostitution within said distance determined by the Secretary of Defense or to knowingly rent, lease, or permit the use of any property for such purposes.

SEC. 9. (a) Any person inducted into the armed forces under this act for service, who, in the judgment of those in authority over him, satisfactorily completes his period of service under section 4 (b) shall be entitled to a certificate to that effect upon the com-pletion of such period of service, which shall include a record of any special proficiency or merit attained. The Secretaries of Army, Navy, or Air Force shall furnish to the Selective Service System hereafter established a report of separation for each person separated from active duty. In addition, each such person who is inducted into the armed forces under this act for service shall be given a physical examination upon separation and, upon his written request, shall be given a statement of physical condition by the Secretary concerned; Provided, That such statement shall not contain any reference to mental or other conditions which in the judgment of the Secretary concerned would prove injurious to the physical or mental health of the person to whom it pertains.

(b) In the case of any such person who, in order to perform such service, has left or leaves a position (other than a temporary position) in the employ of any employer and who (1) receives such certificate, (2) is still qualified to perform the duties of such posi-tion, and (3) makes written application for reemployment within 90 days after he is relieved from such service or from hospitalization continuing after discharge for a period of not more than 1 year-

(A) if such position was in the employ of the United States Government, its Terri-tories, or possessions or political subdivisions thereof, or the District of Columbia, such person shall be restored to such position or, if such position no longer exists, to a position of like seniority, status, and pay;

(B) if such position was in the employ of a private employer, such employer or his suc-cessor in interest shall restore such person to such position, or, if such position no longer exists, to a position of like seniority, status, and pay unless the employer's circumstances have so changed as to make it impossible or unreasonable to do so;

(C) if such position was in the employ of any State or political subdivision thereof, it is hereby declared to be the sense of the Congress that such person should be restored to such position or, if such position no longer exists, to a position of like seniority, status, and pay.

(c) If any such person is not qualified to perform the duties of such position by reason of disability sustained during such period of service but is qualified to perform the duties of some other position, then, in the case of paragraphs (A) and (B) of subsection (b) he shall (and in the case of paragraph (C) of subsection (b) it is hereby de-clared the sense of Congress that he should) be employed at such other position as may provide the nearest possible similarity in seniority, status, and pay.

(d) Any person who is restored to a posi-tion in accordance with the provisions of paragraph (A) or (B) of subsection (b) or of subsection (c) shall be considered as having been on furlough or leave of absence during his period of service in the armed forces, shall be entitled to all promotions, increases in pay, vacation rights not otherwise regulated by law, and accumulations of seniority to which he would have been en-titled had he been working for the employer during his period of service in the armed forces, shall be so restored without loss of seniority, shall be entitled to participate in insurance or other benefits offered by the employer pursuant to established rules and practices relating to employees on furlough or leave of absence in effect with the em-ployer, and shall not be discharged from such position without cause within 1 year after such restoration.

(e) In case any private employer fails or refuses to comply with the provisions of sub-section (b), subsection (c), or subsection (d), the district court of the United States for the district in which such private employer maintains a place of business shall have power, upon the filing of a motion, petition, or other appropriate pleading by the person entitled to the benefits of such provisions, specifically to require such employer to comply with such provisions and to compensate such person for any loss of wages or benefits suffered by reason of such employer's unlawful action: Provided, That any such compensation shall be in addition to and shall not be deemed to diminish any of the benefits of such provisions. The court shall order speedy hearing in any such case and shall advance it on the calendar. Upon application to the United States district attorney or comparable official for the district in which such private employer maintains a place of business, by any person claiming to be entitled to the benefits of such provisions, such United States district attorney or official, if reasonably satisfied that the person so applying is entitled to such benefits, shall appear and act as attorney for such person in the amicable adjustment of the claim or in the filing of any motion, petition, or other appropriate pleading and the prosecution thereof to specifically require employer to comply with such provisions: Provided, That no fees or court costs shall be taxed against any person who may apply for such benefits: Provided further, That only the employer shall be deemed a necessary party to any such action.

(f) In case the United States Government or any of its Territories or possessions, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia fails or refuses to comply with the provisions of subsection (b), subsection (c), or subsection (d) of this section and section 9 (b) (4), the United States Civil Service Commission is authorized and directed, upon finding that such failure or refusal is in violation of the said provisions, to require specific compliance with such provisions to require compensation to any person entitled to the benefits of such provisions for any loss of salary or wages suffered by reason of failure to comply with said provisions, less any amounts received by him through other employment or from unemployment compensation including readjustment allowances. The United States Civil Service Commission is authorized and directed to issue rules and regulations giving full force and effect to the provisions of this act governing restora-tion, and such rules and regulations shall have the force and effect of law; and it shall be mandatory for the agehcy concerned to take such corrective action as the Commis-sion recommends: Provided, That where any agency refuses to take the corrective action recommended by the Commission, the district court of the United States for the district in which the person entitled to such benefits was employed shall have jurisdiction, upon the filing of a motion, petition, or other appropriate pleading by such person so entitled, to require specific compliance with the rec-ommendation of the Commission and the provisions of subsections (b), (c), and (d) of this section by, and to enter judgment against, the United States Government or any of its Territories or possessions, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, to compensate such person for any loss of salary or wages suffered by reason of failure to comply with said recommendation and provisions, less any amounts received by him through other employment or from un-employment compensation, including read-justment allowances: Provided further, That any such compensation directed to be paid by the Commission or the court shall be in addition to and shall not be deemed to diminish any of the benefits of such recommendation or provisions, and shall be paid by the head of the governmental agency concerned out of appropriations currently available for salaries and expenses of the agency, and such appropriations shall be deemed available for such purposes. No fees or court costs shall be taxed against any person who may apply for such benefits. The court shall order speedy hearings in any such case and shall advance it on the calendar.

(g) The Director of Selective Service shall establish adequate facilities to render aid in the replacement in their former positions of persons who have satisfactorily completed any period of active duty in the armed forces of the United States.

(h) Any person who, subsequent to the effective date of this act and while it remains in effect, enters upon active service in the armed forces of the United States and is released under honorable conditions from such active service shall be entitled to all the reemployment benefits and other rights of this section, except that the 90-day period pre-scribed in section 8 (b) shall commence (1) in the case of enlisted personnel, from the date of termination of the first enlistment (excluding extensions thereof) entered into subsequent to the date of enactment of this act; (2) in the case of officer personnel, from the date of the third anniversary of reporting for active service subsequent to the date of on active service subsequent to the date of enactment of this act; and (3) in the case of officer and enlisted personnel who are dis-charged or released from active service prior to the afore-mentioned dates, from the date relieved from such service or from hospitalization continuing after discharge for a period of not more than 1 year.

(i) As between two or more persons entitled to be restored to the same position under the provisions of this act or of any other law relating to similar reemployment benefits, the person who left such position first shall have the prior right thereto, without prejudice to the rights of the other person or persons to be restored to a position of like seniority, status, and pay with the employer, if such position exists and is not occupied by person having greater seniority.

SEC. 10. (a) (1) There is hereby established in the executive branch of the Government an agency to be known as the Selective Service System, and a Director of Selective Service who shall be the head thereof.

(2) The Selective Service System shall include a national headquarters, at least one State headquarters in each State, Territory, and possession of the United States, and in the District of Columbia, and the local boards, appeal boards, and other agencies provided for in subsection (b) (3) of this section.

(3) The Director shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The Director shall receive compensation at the rate of $12,500 per year.

(4) The functions of the Office of Selective Service Records (established by the act of March 31, 1947) and of the Director of the Office of Selective Service Records are hereby transferred to the Selective Service System and the Director of Selective Service, respectively. The personnel, property, records, and unexpended balances (available or to be made available) of appropriations, allocations, and other funds of the Office of Selective Service Records are hereby transferred to the Selective Service System. The Office of Selective Service Records shall cease to exist upon the taking of effect of the provisions of this act: Provided, That, effective upon the termination of this act, and notwithstanding such termination in other respects, (a) the said Office of Selective Service Records is hereby reestablished on the same basis and with the same functions as obtained prior to the effective date of this act, (b) said reestablished Office shall be responsible for terminating any other outstanding affairs of the Selective Service System, and (c) the personnel, property, records, and unexpended balances (available or to be made available) of appropriations, allocations, and other funds of the Selective Service System shall be transferred to such reestablished Office of Selective Service Records.

(1) to prescribe the necessary rules and regulations to carry out the provisions of this

(2) to appoint, upon recommendation of the respective governor or comparable executive official, a State director of the Selective Service System for each headquarters in each State, Territory, and possession of the United States and in the District of Columbia who shall represent the governor and be in immediate charge of the State headquarters of the Selective Service System. The President may order to active duty with their consent and assign to the Selective Service System those officers of the Selective Service section of the State headquarters and headquarters detachments of the federally recognized National Guard of the United States and members of other Reserve components, and may employ such number of civilians as may be necessary for the administration of the na-tional and of the several State headquarters of the Selective Service System;
(3) to create and establish within the Selective Service System civilian local boards, civilian appeal boards, and such other agencies, including agencies of appeal, as may be necessary to carry out its functions with respect to the registration, examination, selection, assignment, delivery for induction, and maintenance of records of persons registered under this act, together with such other duties as may be assigned under this act, and shall provide for the classification of registrants under this act on the basis of availability for service. He shall create and establish one or more local boards in each county or political subdivision corresponding thereto of each State, Territory, and possession of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. Each local board shall consist of three or more members to be appointed by the President from recommendations made by the respective governors or comparable executive officials: Provided, That an intercounty local board consisting of at least one member from each component county or correspond-ing subdivision may be established for an not exceeding five counties or political subdivisions corresponding thereto within a State or comparable jurisdiction when the Director determines, after considering the public interest involved and the recommendation of the governor or comparable execu-tive official or officials, that the establishment of such local board area will result in a more efficient and economical operation, such intercounty local board within its area to have the same power and jurisdiction as a local board has in its area. No member of any local board shall be a member of the armed forces of the United States, but each member of any local board shall be a civil-ian who is a citizen of the United States residing in the county or political subdivision corresponding thereto in which such local board has jurisdiction, and each inter-county local board shall have at least one

division corresponding thereto included within the intercounty local board area. Such local boards, under rules and regulations prescribed by the President, shall have the power within their respective jurisdic-tions to hear and determine, subject to the right of appeal to the appeal boards herein authorized, all questions or claims with respect to inclusion for, or exemption or deferment from, service under this act, of all in-dividuals within the jurisdiction of such local The decisions of such local board shall be final, except where an appeal is authorized and is taken in accordance with such rules and regulations as the President may prescribe. There shall be at least one appeal board for each State. Appeal boards within the Selective Service System shall be composed of civilians who are citizens of the United States and who are not members of the armed forces. The decision of such appeal boards shall be final in cases before them on appeal unless modified or changed by the President. The President, upon appeal or upon his own motion, shall have power to determine all claims or questions with respect to inclusion for, or exemption or deferment from service under this act, and the determination of the President shall be final. No person who is a civilian officer, member, agent, or employee of the Office of Selective Service Records, or the Selective Service System, or of any local board or appeal board or other agency of such Office or System, shall be excepted from registration or deferred or exempted from service, as pro-vided for in this act, by reason of his status as such civilian officer, member, agent, or employee;

(4) to appoint and fix the compensation of such officers, agents, and employees as he may deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this act in accordance with the Classification Act of 1923, as amended: Provided. That the compensation of employees of local boards and appeal boards may be fixed with-out regard to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended: Provided further, That any offi-cer on the active or retired list of the armed forces, or any Reserve component thereof with his consent or any officer or employee of any department or agency of the United States who may be assigned or detailed to any office or position to carry out the provisions of this act (except to offices or positions on local boards or appeal boards established or created pursuant to section 9 (b) (3)) may serve in and perform the functions of such office or position without loss of or prejudice to his status as such officers in the armed forces or Reserve component thereof, or as such officer or employee in any department or agency of the United States;

(5) to utilize the services of any or all departments and any and all officers or agents of the United States and to accept the services of all officers and agents of the several States, Territories, and possessions, and subdivisions thereof and the District of Columbia and volunteer welfare organizations in the execution of this act;

(6) to purchase such printing, binding, and blankbook work from public, commercial, or private printing establishments or binderies upon orders placed by the Public Printer or upon waivers issued in accordance with section 12 of the Printing Act approved Janu-ary 12, 1895, as amended, and to obtain by purchase, loan, or gift such equipment and supplies for the Selective Service System as he may deem necessary to carry out the pro-visions of this act, with or without advertising or formal contract;

(7) to prescribe eligibility, rules, and reguthe armed forces, or for any other special service established pursuant to this act, of any person convicted of a violation of any of the provisions of this act;

(8) to procure such space as he may deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this act and Public Law 26, Eightieth Congress, approved March 31, 1947, by lease, pursuant to existing statutes. The provisions of the act of June 30, 1932 (47 Stat. 412), as amended by section 15 of the act of March 3, 1933 (47 Stat. 1517; 40 U.S. C. 278a), shall not apply to any lease entered into under the authority of this act;

(9) to determine the location of such additional temporary installations as he may deem essential; to utilize and enlarge existing installations; to construct, install, and equip; and to complete the construction, installation, and equipment of buildings, structures, utilities, and appurtenances, including the necessary grading and removal, repair, or remodeling of existing structures and installations; and, in order to accomplish the purpose of this act, to acquire lands, and rights pertaining thereto, or other interests therein, for temporary use thereof, by donation or lease, and to prosecute construction thereon prior to the approval of the title by the Attorney General as required by section 355, Revised Statutes, as amended;

(10) to utilize, in order to provide and furnish such services as may be deemed necessary or expedient to accomplish the purposes of this act, personnel of the armed forces and of Reserve components thereof, with their consent, and such civilian personnel as may be necessary, notwithstanding the provisions of section 14 of the act of May 24, 1946, entitled "Federal Employees' Pay Act of 1946" (Public Law 390, 79th Cong.) with respect to the maximum limitations as to the number of civilian em-

(c) The President is authorized to delegate any authority vested in him under this act, and to provide for the subdelegation of any such authority.

(d) In the administration of this act, voluntary services may be accepted.

(e) The Chief of Finance, United States Army, is authorized to act as the fiscal, disbursing, and accounting agent of the Director in carrying out the provisions of this act.

(f) The Director is authorized to make final settlement of individual claims, for amounts not exceeding $50, for travel and other expenses of uncompensated person-nel of the Office of Selective Service Records, or the Selective Service System, incurred while in the performance of official duties, without regard to other provisions of law governing the travel of civilian employees of the Federal Government.

SEC. 11. Under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the President, all funds appropriated for operation and maintenance under this act are also avail-able for the payment of actual and reasonable expenses of emergency medical care, including hospitalization of registrants who suffer illness or injury, and the transporta-tion, and burial, of the remains of regis-trants who suffer death, while acting under orders issued under the provisions of this act, but such burial expenses shall not exceed $150 in any one case.

SEC. 12. Any members of the Selective Service System or any other person charged as herein provided with the duty of carrying out any of the provisions of this act, or the rules or regulations made or directions given thereunder, who shall knowingly fail or neglect to perform such duty, and any person charged with such duty, or having and exercising any authority under said act, rules, regulations, or directions who shall know-ingly make, or be a party to the making, of any false, improper, or incorrect registration, classification, physical or mental examination, deferment, induction, enrollment, or muster, and any person who shall knowing-ly make, or be a party to the making of, any false statement or certificate regarding or bearing upon a classification or in support of any request for a particular classification, for service under the provisions of this act.

or rules, regulations, or directions made pursuant thereto, or who otherwise evades registration or service in the armed forces or any of the requirements of this act, or who knowingly counsels, aids, or abets another to refuse or evade registration or service in the armed forces or any of the requirements of this act, or of said rules, regulations, or directions, or who in any manner shall knowingly fail or neglect or refuse to perform any duty required of him under or in the execution of this act, or rules or regulations made pursuant to this act, or any person or persons who shall knowingly hinder or interfere in any way by force or violence with the administration of this act or the rules or regulations made pursuant thereto, or who conspires to commit such offense, shall, upon conviction in any district court of the United States of competent jurisdiction, be punished by imprisonment for not more than 5 years a fine of not more than $10,000, or by both such fine and imprisonment, or if subject to military or naval law may be tried by court material, and, on conviction, shall suffer such punishment as a court martial may direct. No person shall be tried by court martial in any case arising under this act unless such person has been actually inducted for the service prescribed under this act or unless he is subject to trial by court martial under laws in force prior to the enactment of this act. Precedence shall be given by courts to the trial of cases arising under this act, and such cases shall, upon request of the Attorney General, be advanced on the docket for immediate hearing.

SEC. 13. (a) Nothing in section 109 or 113 of the Criminal Code (U. S. C., title 18, secs. 198 and 203), in section 190 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 5, sec. 99), in section 19 (e) of the Contract Settlement Act of 1944 (U. S. C., title 41, sec. 119 (e)), or in the second sentence of subsection (a) of section 9 of the act of August 2, 1939 (53 Stat. 1148), entitled "An act to prevent pernicious poas amended, shall deemed to apply to any person because of his appointment under authority of this act or the regulations made pursuant thereto, as an uncompensated official of the Selective Service System, or as an individual to conduct hearings on appeals of persons claiming exemption from combatant or noncombatant training because of conscientious objections

(b) All functions performed under this act shall be excluded from the operation of the Administrative Procedure Act (60 Stat. 237) except as to the requirements of section 3 of such act.

SEC. 14. Notwithstanding the provisions of section 604 of the act of October 17, 1940 (54 Stat. 1191), nor the provisions of section 4 of the act of July 25, 1947 (Public Law 239, 80th Cong.), all of the provisions of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940, as amended, including specifically article IV thereof, shall continue in effect and be applicable as to all persons in the armed forces of the United States, including all persons inducted into the armed forces pursuant to this act, until such time as the 'Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940, as amended, is repealed or otherwise terminated by subsequent act of the Congress: Provided, That wherever under any section or provision of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940, as amended, a proceeding, remedy, privilege, stay, limitation, accounting, or other transaction has been authorized or provided with respect to military service per-formed while this act is in force by any person inducted into the armed forces under this act, such section or provision shall be deemed to continue in full force and effect so long as may be necessary to the exercise or enjoyment of such proceeding, remedy, privilege, stay, limitation, accounting, or other transaction.

SEC. 15. With respect to the persons inducted for service under this act, there shall be paid, allowed, and extended the same pay, allowances, pensions, disability and death compensation, and other benefits as are pro-vided by law in the case of other enlisted men of like grades and length of service of that component of the armed forces to which they are assigned. Section 3 of the act of July 25, 1947 (Public Law 239, 80th Cong.), is hereby amended by deleting therefrom the following: "Act of March 7, 1942 (56 Stat. 143-148), as amended." The act of March 7, 1942 (56 Stat. 143-148), is hereby made applicable to persons inducted into the armed forces pursuant to this act.

SEC. 16. Nothing contained in this or any other act shall be construed as forbidding the payment of compensation by any person, firm, or corporation to persons inducted or enlisted into the armed forces of the United States for service under this act, or to mem-bers of the Reserve components of such forces now or hereafter on any type of active duty, who, prior to their induction, enlistment, or commencement of active duty, were receiving compensation from such person,

SEC. 17. Any person inducted into the armed forces for service under this act shall, during the period of such service, be permitted to vote in person or by absentee ballot in any general, special, or primary election occurring in the State of which he is a resident, whether he is within or outside such State at the time of such election, if under the laws of such State he is otherwise entitled so to vote in such election; but nothing in this subsection shall be construed to require granting to any such person a leave of ab-sence or furlough for longer than 1 day in order to permit him to vote in person in any such election: Provided, That no person inducted into, or enlisted in, the armed forces for training and service under this act shall, during the period of such service, as a con-dition of voting in any election for President, Vice President, electors for President or Vice President, or for Senator or Member of the House of Representatives, be required to pay any poll tax or other tax or make any other payment to any State or political subdivision thereof.

SEC. 18. (a) The President is empowered, through the Secretary of Defense, in addition to the present authorized methods of purchase or procurement, to place an order with any individual, firm, association, com-pany, corporation, or organized manufacturing industry for such product or material as may be required by the armed forces, and which is of the nature and kind usually produced or capable of being produced by such individual, firm, company, association, corporation, or organized manufacturing industry. Under any such program of national procurement, the President shall recognize the valid claim of American small business to participate in such contracts, in such manufactures, and in such distribution of materials, and small business shall be granted a fair share of the orders placed, exclusively for the use of the armed forces or for other Federal agencies now or hereafter designated in this section. For the purposes of this section, a business enterprise shall be determined to be "small business" if (1) its position in the trade or industry of which a part is not dominant, (2) the number of its employees does not exceed 500, and (3) it is independently owned and operated.

(b) Compliance with all such orders for products or material placed pursuant to subsection (a) of this section shall be obliga-tory on any individual, firm, association, company, corporation, or organized manufac-turing industry or the responsible head or heads thereof and shall take precedence over all other orders and contracts theretofore placed with such individual, firm, company, association, corporation, or organized manufacturing industry, and any individual, firm, association, company, corporation, or organized manufacturing industry or the responsible head or heads thereof owning or operating any plant equipped for the manufacture of arms or ammunition or parts of ammunition, or any necessary supplies or equipment for the armed forces, and any individual, firm, association, company, corporation, or organized manufacturing industry or the responsible head or heads thereof owning or operating any manufacturing plant, which, in the opinion of the Secretary of Defense shall be capable of being readily transformed into a plant for the manufacture of arms or ammunition, or parts thereof, or other necessary supplies or equip-ment for the armed forces, who shall refuse to give to the United States such preference in the matter of the execution of orders, or who shall refuse to manufacture the kind, quantity, or quality of arms or ammunition or the parts thereof, or any necessary supplies or equipment for the armed forces, as ordered by the Secretary of Defense, or who shall refuse to furnish such arms, ammunition, or parts of ammunition, or other supplies or equipment for the armed forces, at a reasonable price as determined by the Secretary of Defense, then, and in either such case, the President, through the Secretary of Defense, in adidtion to the present authorized methods of purchase or procurement, is hereby authorized to take immediate pos session of any such plant or plants, and through the appropriate branch, bureau, or department of the armed forces to manufacture therein such product or material as may be required for the armed forces, and any individual, firm, company, association, or corporation, or organized manufacturing industry, or the responsible head or heads thereof, failing to comply with the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and upon conviction shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than 3 years and a fine not exceeding $50,000.

(c) The compensation to be paid to any individual, firm, company, association, corporation, or organized manufacturing industry for its products or material, or as rental for use of any manufacturing plant while used by the United States, shall be fair and just: Provided, That nothing herein shall be deemed to render inapplicable existing State or Federal laws concerning the health, safety, security, and employment standards of the employees in such plant.

(d) (1) The President is empowered. through the Secretary of Defense, to require all producers of steel in the United States to make available, to individuals, firms, associations, companies, corporations, or organized manufacturing industries having orders for steel products or steel materials required by the armed forces, such percentages of the steel production of such producers, in equal proportion deemed necessary for the expeditious execution of orders for such products or materials. Compliance with such requirement shall be obligatory on all such producers of steel and such requirement shall take precedence over all orders and contracts theretofore placed with such producers. If any such producer of steel or the responsible head or heads thereof refuses to comply with such requirement, the President, through the Secretary of Defense, is authorized to take immediate possession of the plant or plants of such producer and, through the appropriate branch, bureau, or department of the armed forces, to insure compliance with such requirement. Any such producer of steel or the responsible head or heads thereof refusing to comply with such requirement shall be deemed guilty of a felony and upon con-viction thereof shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than 3 years and a fine not exceeding $50,000.

(2) The President shall report to the Congress on the final day of each 6-month period following the date of enactment of this act the percentage figure, or if such information is not available, the approximate percentage figure, of the total steel production in the United States required to be made available during such period for the execution of orders for steel products and steel materials required by the armed forces, if such per-centage figure is in excess of 10 percent.

SEC. 19. (a) Every person shall be deemed to have notice of the requirements of this act upon publication by the President of a proclamation or other public notice fixing a time for any registration under section 3.

(b) It shall be the duty of every registrant to keep his local board informed as to his current address and changes in status as required by such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the President.

(c) If any provision of this act, or the application thereof to any person or circumstances, is held invalid, the remainder of the act, and the application of such provision to other persons or circumstances, shall not be affected thereby

(d) Nothing contained in this act shall be construed to repeal, amend, or suspend the laws now in force authorizing voluntary enlistment or reenlistment in the armed forces of the United States, including the Reserve components thereof, except that, whenever the Congress has declared that the national interest is imperiled, voluntary enlistment or reenlistment in such forces, and their Reserve components, may be suspended by the President to such extent as he may deem necessary in the interest of national de-

SEC. 20. When used in this act-

- (a) The term "between the ages of 18 and 31" shall refer to men who have attained the eighteenth anniversary of the day of their birth and who have not attained the thirty-first anniversary of the day of their birth; and other terms designating different age groups shall be construed in a similar
- (b) The term "United States," when used in a geographical sense, shall be deemed to mean the several States, the District of Co-lumbia, Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands.
- (c) The term "armed forces" shall be deemed to include the Army, the Navy, the Marine Corps, the Air Force, and the Coast Guard (when during World War II it served, or when in the future it shall serve, under the Department of the Navy).

(d) The term "district court of the United States" shall be deemed to include the courts of the United States for the Territories and possessions of the United States.

(e) The term "local board" shall be deemed to include an intercounty local board in the case of any registrant who is subject to the jurisdiction of an intercounty local board.

(f) The term "Director" shall be deemed to mean the Director of the Selective Service

(g) The term "organized unit," when used respect to a Reserve component, shall be deemed to mean a unit in which the members thereof satisfactorily participate in scheduled drills and training periods as pre-scribed by the Secretary of Defense.

SEC. 21. (a) Except as provided in this act, all laws and parts of laws in conflict with the provisions of this act are hereby suspended to the extent of such conflict for the period in which this act shall be in force.

(b) All of the provisions of this act, except the provisions of sections 1, 2, 4 (b), 4 (e), 8, 9, (a) (4), 14, 20 (b); and 22, shall become inoperative and cease to apply 2 years after the date of enactment of this act except as to offenses committed prior to the termination date.

(c) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

SEC. 22. Nothing in this act shall be deemed to amend any provision of the National Security Act of 1947 (61 Stat. 495).

SEC. 23. The Congress declares, in accordance with our traditional military policy as expressed in the National Defense Act of expressed in the National Defense Act of 1916, as amended, that it is essential that the strength and organization of the National Guard, both Ground and Air, as an integral part of the first-line defenses of this Nation, be at all times maintained and assured.

To this end, it is the intent of the Congress that whenever Congress shall determine that units and organizations are needed for the national security in excess of those of the Regular components of the Ground Forces and the Air Forces, and those in active service under this act, the National Guard of the United States, both Ground and Air, or such part thereof as may be necessary, together with such units of the Reserve components as are necessary for a balanced force, shall be ordered to active Federal service and continued therein so long as such necessity exists.

SEC. 24. This act shall be effective upon its enactment.

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, it has been decided to have a meeting of the conferees at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Therefore, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate disagree to the amendment of the House, agree to the conference requested by the House, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

Mr. TAYLOR. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Did the Chair correctly understand that the Senator from Idaho objects?

Mr. TAYLOR. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from South Dakota can make a motion to that effect.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, if that motion carries, will it displace the unfinished business?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is purely a privileged matter, and does not displace the unfinished business.

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, I now move that the Senate disagree to the amendment of the House, agree to the conference requested by the House, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. President, is the motion debatable?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is. Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. TAYLOR. I yield, on condition that I do not lose the floor.

Mr. WHERRY. Then, Mr. President, I wish to propound a parliamentary in-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. WHERRY. Is the motion debatable to exceed 5 minutes, under the rule which we are operating?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. This matter is entirely outside the Consent

Calendar, and the motion is debatable. Mr. WHERRY. It is a privileged matter, and the motion is debatable, just as any other motion would be?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator is correct.

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. GURNEY. I know that all Members of the Senate are anxious to have the call of the calendar completed. I assume that it will be finished in an hour.

That still will allow us to start the conference at 2 o'clock, possibly.

So I ask the acting majority leader if it will be satisfactory for me to with-draw my motion until the end of the calendar

Mr. WHERRY. I understand that until action is taken on a motion, that is the privilege of the one who makes the motion. Such a course is perfectly agreeable to me.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from South Dakota is in control of his motion, and he can withdraw it if he wishes to do so.

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, temporarily I withdraw the motion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion is withdrawn.

Does the Senator from Idaho withdraw his objection?

Mr. TAYLOR. I am happy to cooperate.

CARL PIOWATY AND W. J. PIOWATY

The bill (S. 2524) for the relief of Carl Piowaty and W. J. Piowaty was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Carl Piowaty and W. J. Piowaty are hereby relieved of liability for the payment of (1) any indebtedness, including interest, arising out of war crop advances made by the Regional Agricultural Credit Corporation of Washington, District of Columbia, to the said Carl Plowaty and W. J. Plowaty; (2) any promissory notes evidencing such indebtedness made by the said Carl Plowaty and W. J. Plowaty to the Regional Agricultural Corporation of Washington, District of Columbia; and (3) any judgments, including attorney's fees and court costs, obtained by the Regional Agricultural Credit Corporation of Washington, District of Columbia, against the said Carl Piowaty and W. J. Piowaty upon any such indebtedness or any such promissory notes: The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized and directed to cause any such promissory notes or other evidences of such indebted-ness to be canceled and to cause the acknowledgment of satisfaction of any such judgments.

AMENDMENT OF NATIONAL SERVICE LIFE INSURANCE ACT OF 1940 AS AMENDED

The bill (H. R. 6507) to amend subsection 602 (f) of the National Service Life Insurance Act of 1940, as amended, to authorize renewal of level premium term insurance for a second 5-year period, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 2754) to reorganize and simplify the procurement, utilization, and disposal of Government property, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair would like to make it plain that this bill is being called because it was put at the end of the calendar at the last call. Therefore it is not a bill in order in serial number, and the Chair wishes to be sure the Senate understands what has been called.

Mr. MILLIKIN. Mr. President, are there any other bills of the same character coming along?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. No.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, the unanimous-consent agreement was based upon the fact that the Senate would not go further back than Calendar No. 1504. If consideration of the bill which has just been called consti-tutes a violation of that agreement, I shall be forced to object, regardless of whether any other Senator objects, because there are other Senators who wish to have measures previous to Calendar No. 1504 considered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair completely agrees with the viewpoint of the Senator from Nebraska, and recognizes the validity of his objection.

Therefore, under objection, the bill will be passed over.

Mr. WHERRY. I thank the Chair. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the next measure on the calendar.

POSTHUMOUS CITIZENSHIP FOR VASO B. BENDERACH

The bill (S. 2662) conferring United States citizenship posthumously upon Vaso B. Benderach was announced as next in order.

INDIAN RESERVATIONS IN ALASKA

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, in speaking under the 5-minute rule, I wish to say that I desire to have the Senate return to Calendar No. 1421, Senate Joint Resolution 162. I hope the Senator from Nebraska will reserve the right to object, and will permit me to speak for 5 minutes on this matter.

Mr. WHERRY. Certainly. The Senator is speaking under the 5-minute rule, anyway,

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will the Senator repeat his request?

Mr. MAGNUSON. Yes; I ask unanimous consent that the Senate return to Calendar No. 1421, Senate Joint Resolu-tion 162, to rescind certain orders of the Secretary of the Interior establishing Indian reservations in the Territory of Alaska.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I reserve the right to object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Washington wish to be recognized for 5 minutes?

Mr. MAGNUSON. Yes.

Mr. President, several bills which were passed over at the last call of the calendar are not controversial. Some of them were passed over at the request of certain Senators who since have discussed the matter further, and now do not intend to object. In other words, there is unanimous agreement as to some of the

However, it seems now that because someone got mixed up with oleomargarine and butter, the Senate will give priority to other bills which were placed on the calendar later than the bills to which I have referred, which were reported practically unanimously.

If the Senate is going to take up and pass other bills on the calendar, I see no reason why the Senate cannot go back to the bills I have in mind. They are important, and their consideration will take only 15 or 20 minutes. As a matter of fact, if any priority is involved, the priority should go to the bills which were placed on the calendar ahead of the bills being called today.

I want the RECORD to show that Senate Joint Resolution 162 involves the whole economy of Alaska, and I want the RECORD to show where the objection comes from.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President-Mr. WHERRY. Just a moment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question before the Senate is the unanimous consent request of the Senator from Washington to proceed to the consideration of Calendar 1421, joint resolution (S. J. Res. 162).

Mr. MAGNUSON. I still have the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Washington has the floor for two more minutes.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President— Mr. MAGNUSON. I have the floor for 2 or 3 minutes, I think.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Washington has the floor.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I see no reason for propounding a unanimous consent request for the consideration of bills not objected to which have been on the calendar for weeks and months, and should have priority. There is no reason why the Senate should not take up important bills behind the bill where the call of the calendar started today. I want the RECORD to show and I desire to know where the objection comes from, to Calendar 1421, Senate Joint Resolution 162, which affects the whole economy of Alaska

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator's time has expired. Is there objection to the request?

Mr. MAGNUSON. As a matter of

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator's time has expired. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Washington?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I reserved the right to object, and I feel, because I did so, I should have 5 minutes at this time on the bill, to answer the distinguished Senator from Washington. Mr. CHAVEZ. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Mexico objects to what?

Mr. CHAVEZ. In order to inform the Chair, so he may be satisfied, I am objecting to the motion of the Senator from Washington. I hope the President understands.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Mexico objects. The Chair understood the Senator was objecting to the Senator from Nebraska having the floor.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, is the objection to my request?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Mexico objects to the request of the Senator from Washington.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, this is a bill that everyone agrees to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator's time has expired. The clerk will call the next bill.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President-The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the next bill, after which the Chair will recognize the Senator from Nehraska

VASO B. BENDERACH

The bill (S. 2662) conferring United States citizenship posthumously upon Vaso B. Benderach was recognized as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nebraska is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President. I merely want the RECORD to show that the distinguished Senator from New Mexico is making an objection to the consideration of Calendar 1421, Senate Joint Resolution

162. Is that correct? Mr. CHAVEZ. That is correct. The responsibility will be placed where it belongs.

Mr. WHERRY. Certainly. Now, that is the answer I would make to the Senator from Washington, in the event he needs an answer. I want to say further we have had the finest cooperation in the Senate and the reason we started with the consideration of Calendar No. 1504, House bill 5882, was because we left off at that number, and because every-body agreed to it in the unanimous-consent order. It is impossible now to go back, regardless of what the bill may be, without violating the confidence under which the unanimous-consent agreement was entered into. I know the Senator from Washington is aware of that. and will cooperate with me. If we should go back of Calendar No. 1504, after Senators had relied on the agreement, the procedure would be unfair.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHERRY. Just a moment. The Senator had his 5 minutes.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I should like to have 5 minutes more.

Mr. WHERRY. I shall yield to the Senator. We cannot go back beyond Calendar 1504 without violating the agreement under which the unanimous consent was entered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of Calendar 1768, Senate bill 2662?

Mr. MAGNUSON. Reserving the right to object

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Senator from Washington is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, of course I understand the position of the Senator from Nebraska. I understand the necessity for propounding unanimous-consent requests, but I also understand the reason we do not go back to certain bills which are important is because the Senator desires to close on Saturday night.

Mr. WHERRY. Oh, no. That is a very unfair statement.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Washington has the floor. Mr. MAGNUSON. I have the floor.

Mr. VHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MAGNUSON. I yield. Mr. WHERRY. That is a very, very unfair statement. When the unanimous-consent request was entered into, 3 days ago, I believe, the Senator was absent on business; of course, official business.

Mr. MAGNUSON. The Senator is very kind.

Mr. WHERRY. The Senator could have objected to it then, had he been present, but the Senator knows he has cooperated with the Senator from Nebraska many times, and that there are others who would like to do the same thing he desires to do. But it is impossible to do that and continue to enjoy confidence the leadership must maintain and must have with every Senator, if certain rights are to be preserved.

Mr. MAGNUSON. The Senator knows I discussed the matter with him. I cannot see the Senator's reason. I said to the Senator, "Why can we not go back to bills that are noncontroversial?" The Senator replied, "If we go back to those bills, we might get back to controversial bills, and we have got to close here Saturday night.

Mr. WHERRY. The bill is contro-

Mr. MAGNUSON. Those are his exact words. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate may be allowed to go back on the calendar to the consideration of noncontroversial bills.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Senator from Washington has made his request. Is there objection?

Mr. WHERRY. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator objects. A bill has been called by the clerk. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill S. 2662?

There being no objection, the bill (S. 2662) conferring United States citizenship posthumously upon Vaso B. Benderach was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Vaso B. Benderach, a Yugoslav flier, who served honorably with the Fifteenth Air Force of the United States, and who died on May 7, 1948, while a patient at Fitzsimons General Hospital, Colorado, shall be held and considered to have been a citizen of the United States at the time of his

STEFAN MAGURA AND MICHAL MAGURA

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2709) for the relief of Stefan Magura and Michal Magura, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment, on page 1, line 8, after the date "1948", to insert "upon payment of visa fees and head tax", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That, in the administration of the immigration and naturalization laws, Stefan Magura and Michal Magura, of Donora, Pa., who were admitted into the United States on temporary visas, shall be deemed to have been lawfully admitted into the United States for permanent residence as of April 29, 1948, upon payment of visa fees and head tax.

SEC. 2. Upon the enactment of this act, the Secretary of State is authorized and directed to instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct two numbers from the nonpreference category of the first available immigra-tion quota for Czechoslovakia.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HERMAN A. BENNINK

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1982) for the relief of Herman A. Bennink, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary, with an amendment, on page 2, line 1, after the word "act", to insert "and any period of residence of the said Herman A. Bennink outside the United States which is occasioned principally by his specialized study in Holland of the growing of American corn shall be deemed to bring the said Herman A. Bennink within the provisions of section 406 (b) of the Nationality Act of 1940", so as to make the bill

Be it enacted, etc., That, notwithstanding the provisions of section 404 of the Nationality Act of 1940 (relating to loss of nationby naturalized citizens), Herman Bennink, a naturalized citizen of the United States temporarily residing in Apeldoorn, Holland, shall not be considered to have lost his United States citizenship by reason of any period of residence outside the United States prior to the date of enactment of this act, and any period of residence of the said Herman A. Bennink outside the United States which is occasioned principally by his specialized study in Holland of the growing of American corn shall be deemed to bring the said Herman A. Bennink within the provisions of section 406 (b) of the Nationality

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CLARIS U. YEADON

The bill (S. 2382) for the relief of Claris U. Yeadon was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of the immigration laws, relating to the issuance of immigration visas for admission to the United States for permanent residence and relating to admissions at ports of entry of aliens as immigrants for permanent residence in the United States, that provision of section 3 of the Immigration Act of 1917, as amended (U. S. C., title 8, sec. 136 (c)), which excludes from admission into the United States "persons who have been convicted of or admit having committed a felony or other crime or misdemeanor involving moral turpitude," shall not hereafter be held to apply to Claris U. Yeadon (nee Claris U. Davis), the wife of Cecil S. Leadon, an American citizen. If she is found otherwise admissible under the immigration laws, an immigration visa may be issued and admission granted to the said Claris U. Yeadon under this act upon application hereafter filed.

GHETEL POLLAK KAHAN ET AL

The bill (S. 411) for the relief of Ghetel Pollak Kahan, Magdalena Linda Kahan (wife), and Susanna Kahan (daughter, 10 years old) was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as

Be it enacted, etc., That, in the administration of the immigration and naturalization laws, the Attorney General is authorized and directed to record Ghetel Pollak Kahan, Magdalena Linda Kahan (wife), and Susanna Kahan (daughter, 10 years old), as having entered the United States on August 21, 1945, for permanent residence. The said Ghetel Pollak Kahan, Magdalena Linda Kahan (wife), and Susanna Kahan (daughter, 10 years old), shall not be subject to deportation by reason of such entry.

GEORGE HANIOTIS

The bill (H. R. 4199) for the relief of George Haniotis was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FIRST, SECOND, AND THIRD NATIONAL STEAMSHIP COS.

The bill (S. 1691) for the relief of First, Second, and Third National Steamship Cos. was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, may we have a brief explanation of the bill?

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, this is one of the 1,200 bills considered by the committee, and my recollection of this particular bill is that it was referred to the Senator from Nevada IMr. McCar-RANJ, and on his suggestion, a thorough study was made. The purpose of the bill is to confer authority upon the Secretary of the Treasury to pay the three different steamship companies the balance of sums deposited by them in 1920. The bills have gone back and forth several times, as I remember. The committee considered the report of the Senator from Nevada, which is rather an exhaustive report for the Judiciary Committee to make on claims. I personally have not become thoroughly acquainted with the facts, because of the numerous bills we have had to consider. I believe possibly the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Smith] may have some of the facts. The purpose of the bill is to confer authority upon the Secretary of the Treasury to pay back the balance of certain sums deposited by the three companies when, under the law in 1920, they were building ships for the Government, and it is found that in equity and justice they are entitled to these sums, Mr. LUCAS. Do I correctly understand that the claim has been pending since 1920?

Mr. WILEY. It has been pending back and forth. It was in the Court of Claims. It has been in the courts. A complete recitation of the facts is found in the report.

Mr. LUCAS. Did the Treasury Department approve the claim?

Mr. WILEY. My recollection is that some department did not approve it. SEVERAL SENATORS. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will go over.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a reply, before asking that the bill go over?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Jersey is recognized.

Mr. SMITH. The matter was brought to my attention, and I introduced the bill. I have made an extensive study of the matter and have asked that a statement be prepared so the Senate would understand a little more of the detail of it. I regret that the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran] is not present, because he attended all the hearings.

Let me state that the purpose of the proposed legislation is to confer authority on the Secretary of the Treasury to pay the sum of $384,256.26 to the First, Second, and Third National Steamship Cos., which sum represents the balance due out of a deposit made in the year 1920 with the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation.

Over a period of years, four separate congressional committees have investigated the merits of this claim and have recommended remedial action thereon. In addition, the claimants have diligently pursued their remedies, both before administrative bodies and in the courts. In one instance it was necessary to take a collateral matter relating to the claim to the Supreme Court of the United States for a final, favorable determination.

The administrative agencies concerned have at various times interposed defenses to recovery by these claimants, and as the claimants have successfully met and overcome each ground of defense, the executive department has come forward with new defenses not previously raised. Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SMITH. Let me finish the statement, and then I shall be glad to yield for a question.

The Congress, recognizing the evident merit of the claim, submitted the case to the Court of Claims for a finding of fact and with special instructions as to the matters of fact to be developed. As a result of this proceeding, and based on the report to Congress, it was made clear that all of the defenses raised by the Government in previous years were without merit and it was so stated by the Court of Claims. This court, however, contrary to the instructions from the Congress, of its own volition, raised a new point and rendered judgment on the case on the theory that it was a matter of res adjudicata.

The Committee on the Judiciary, having taken all the afore-mentioned facts under consideration, are of the opinion that the companies are entitled to the refund in the amount stated in the bill and have so recommended to the Senate.

It will be noted that no allowance has been made for interest or other compensation to the companies for the long withholding of moneys rightfully theirs over a period of years by the Government.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SMITH. I am glad to yield to the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. TYDINGS. I should like to ask the Senator, in view of his statement that four separate committees have examined this matter, and recommended action, whether the amount involved in the pending bill is the amount involved in the preceding bills.

Mr. SMITH. That is my understanding, although I am not familiar with all the details. The report of the committee shows the facts in answer to the Senator's question.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

SEVERAL SENATORS. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

MAMMOTH CAVE NATIONAL PARK, KY.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 2096) to amend section 11 of the act approved June 5, 1942, relating to Mammoth Cave National Park, in the State of Kentucky.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, since the bill went on the calendar there has been a conference with interested parties, and the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARK-LEY] proposes an amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. At the proper place in the bill it is proposed to insert the following: "Provided, That no part of this authorization be used for road development or construction until after all the lands within the maximum boundaries, as authorized by the act of May 25, 1926 (44 Stat. 636), have been acquired by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise."

The amendment was agreed to.

PROHIBITION OF MAILING OF CERTAIN PROPAGANDA

The bill (S. 2339) to prohibit the mailing of propaganda disseminated by agents of foreign principals, unless the source of such propaganda is identified therein, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That whoever knowingly places or causes to be placed in any post office, or station thereof, or street or other letter box of the United States, or authorized depository for mail matter, to be sent or delivered by the post office establishment of the United States, any newspaper. magazine, pamphlet, circular, or other publication, published by or for any agent of a foreign principal, which does not have printed on the first page thereof in legible English characters (he statement, "This publication is published by ——, an agent of ——, registered with the Secretary of State under the provisions of the act entitled 'An act to require the registration of certain persons employed by agencies to disseminate propaganda in the United States and for other purposes', approved June 8, 1938, as amended.", shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both. The first blank space within the quotation marks in the preceding sentence shall be filled with the name under which the agent of a foreign principal is registered with the Secretary of State and the second blank space shall be filled with the name of the foreign principal of such agent. As used in this act the term "agent of a foreign principal" has the same meaning as it has when used in such act of June 8, 1938, as amended.

REFUND OF TAXES TO BREWERS ON BEER LOST IN BOTTLING OPERATIONS

The bill (H. R. 6808) to permit refund or credit to brewers of taxes paid on beer lost in bottling operations was announced as next in order.

Mr. ROBERTSON of Virginia. President, reserving the right to object, wish to call to the attention of the Senate the fact that the House, in February, I think, passed a bill to relieve churches of excise taxes on musical instruments, especially church organs. Since the bill was passed, I called it to the attention of the chairman of the Finance Committee. I have repeatedly written him about the bill since then, and I have personally conferred with him. I should like to take this occasion to ask the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee how it is that his committee has found an opportunity favorably to report to the Senate a bill to relieve brewers of the Nation of an excise tax, but has found no time to report to the Senate a bill to relieve churches of excise taxes.

Mr. MILLIKIN. Mr. President, there is certainly no desire on the part of the Senate Committee on Finance to discriminate against any church in connection with the tax on church organs, or otherwise. This bill, in substance, takes off a tax on something which does not enter commerce. That is the purpose of the bill. It relieves against taxes on a product which does not enter into commerce, and, therefore, there is no just ground for the tax.

Mr. ROBERTSON of Virginia. Does the Senator from Colorado take the position that there is a just ground to tax church organs now, when the tax was imposed, I think unintentionally, as a war emergency tax?

Mr. MILLIKIN. A tax exists on church organs which go into commerce. The chairman of the Finance Committee has repeatedly stated that he would like to eliminate all the excise taxes, or reduce many of them; but I think all of us more or less agree that once we open up that subject there are a great many amendments ready to pop up.

Mr. ROBERTSON of Virginia. May I ask the Senator why we cannot put a rider on any tax bill, if that is the only reason the committee did not report a bill relieving church organs of taxes?

Mr. MILLIKIN. I believe the reason why riders are not put on tax bills is because of a sense of restraint on the part of the Members of the Senate to realize that there is a large field of excise taxes which do injustice, and which ought to be eliminated or reduced when the opportunity presents itself.

Mr. ROBERTSON of Virginia. I call attention to the fact that I felt that every Member of the Senate would feel so deeply concerned over the welfare of our churches that a bill would be brought out to relieve the churches of the tax on organs. I thought that a decent sense of restraint would apply to the tax on church organs. I have been assured by numerous Members of the House, and even by Members of the Senate, that an amendment would be accepted in conference. I think we are all in favor of repealing the tax on church organs.

Mr. MILLIKIN. We are besieged by all sorts of requests to repeal excise taxes. We receive them from trunk and suit case manufacturers, telegraph companies, and various other companies. think the Senator is to be congratulated on his sense of restraint in the matter. Once we enter upon this field, we will get into a completely uncontrollable situation.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Virginia yield?

Mr. ROBERTSON of Virginia. I yield. Mr. BARKLEY. I am thoroughly sympathetic with the Senator's attitude in regard to this subject, but the Committee on Finance has felt that when we get into the field of excise taxes there is no way by which to limit it. We on the committee are all besought to relieve excise taxes on jewelry, furs, leather goods, and many other articles. In the first place, we have no way to consider that subject in the Senate until the House acts on a revenue bill. There is no way to prevent these amendments coming in on the floor, but the commit-tee has felt it would be better to wait until we get the subject of excise taxes generally before us before attempting to relieve any one item from the excise tax.

Mr. ROBERTSON of Virginia. I can understand the situation, but I thought it would be very well for the RECORD to show it so that the public would understand why it was that we could give tax relief to breweries, and were not in a position to do it for others.

Mr. BARKLEY. That comparison is not precisely accurate. This is a bill which refunds taxes already paid on the products of breweries which are wasted in the process of bottling, so that they never get into commerce, and therefore should not bear the tax.

Mr. ROBERTSON of Virginia. I do not wish to object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The objection is withdrawn.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I object.

Mr. MILLIKIN. May I ask the distinguished Senator from South Carolina if there is any explanation which could be made that might satisfy the Senator at this time?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I do not think so, on this bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made, and the bill will go over. INTERNAL REVENUE TAX ON IMPORTED BEER

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6162) an act to make imported beer and other similar imported fermented liquors subject to the internalrevenue tax on fermented liquor which had been reported from the Committee on Finance with an amendment, on page 2, line 8, after the word "shall," to strike out "also be subject to the war excise tax prescribed in section 1650 of the Internal Revenue Code", and to insert "during the continuance of the war-tax rate on fermented malt liquors prescribed in section 1650, be subject to tax at such rate in lieu of the rate hereinbefore prescribed."

EXCHANGE OF LANDS WITH SAN DIEGO, CALIF.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6633) to authorize an exchange of lands and interests therein between the city of San Diego, Calif., and the United States, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Armed Services with amendments, on page 1, line 6, after the word "Secretary", to insert "after receiving the written approval of the Attorney General as to the titles, leases, and other mutual conveyances connected therewith"; and on page 6, line 11, after the word "Navy", to strike out "and not used and occupied, or if in the event that said Navy shall fail to occupy and actually use said lands for such Navy purposes as are necessary in the maintenance of said United States Navy base within said Eleventh Naval District, then and in that event said lease shall terminate, be canceled and be of no further effect, and the city shall have the right to immediately reoccupy the lands so abandoned or the use of which by said Navy has ceased: Provided, That if and when any waterfront parcel covered by this lease shall no longer be required for naval purposes. its use by another branch of the armed services for purposes requiring water frontage shall be permissible hereunder." and"; and to insert "and shall cease to be used for a period of 2 years by any branch of the armed services of the United States for military or naval purposes, then and in that event, the said lease shall terminate, be canceled, and be of no further effect, and the city shall have the immediate right to reoccupy said lands.": and."

DELAWARE RIVER BRIDGE

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2667) to amend and supplement section 2 of the act approved August 30, 1935, relating to the construction and financing of toll bridges over the Delaware River, which had been reported from the Committee on Public Works with an amendment, on page 2, line 20, to strike out the proviso, as follows: "That the tolls for the use of any such bridge or bridges in any such project may be applied by said Commission, if and to the extent permitted by its contract with the holders of its bonds, to the payment of all or a part of the cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating any bridge or bridges now operated by said Commission free of tolls"; and on page 3, line 5, after the word "tolls", to strike out "or the rates of tolls shall thereafter be so adjusted as to provide funds not to exceed the amount necessary for the proper maintenance, repair, and operation of such bridge or bridges, and any bridge or bridges now operated by said Commission free of tolls", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 2 of the act entitled "An act to authorize the construction of certain bridges and to extend the times for commencing and/or completing the construction of other bridges over the navigable waters of the United States, and for other purposes," approved August 30, 1935, be, and the same is hereby, amended and supplemented by adding at the end thereof the following paragraph:

(e) Notwithstanding any of the foregoing provisions of this section or of any other act of the Congress, the Delaware River Joint Toll Bridge Commission of the Com-monwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey is hereby authorized (1) to fix and charge tolls for transit over any bridge heretofore or hereafter constructed by it across the Delaware River in accordance with the provisions of the original compact or agreement between said Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and said State of New Jersey which is set forth in section 9 of said act approved August 30, 1935, as amended, with the consent of Congress by the compact or supplemental agreement which is set forth in the act approved August 4, 1947; and (2) to unite or group any such bridges into a single project for financing purposes and to con-tinue to fix and adjust the tolls for the use of the bridges in such project and pledge such tolls in accordance with the provisions of said original compact or agreement as so amended: Provided, however, That after the cost of any such bridge or of the bridges in any such project shall be amortized, such bridge or bridges shall thereafter be maintained and operated free of tolls."

Mr. BUCK. Mr. President, may we have an explanation?

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. President, 22 years ago a bridge was constructed across the Delaware River between Philadelphia and Camden. The increased traffic requires the erection probably of another bridge. This bill merely grants authority to do that work. It relates entirely to financing, because it will be a toll bridge, self-liquidating.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendments of the committee.

AID TO THE BLIND

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6818) to amend title X of the Social Security Act (relating to aid to the blind) so as to provide greater encouragement to blind recipients thereunder to become self-supporting.

Mr. IVES. Mr. President, I have no desire to object to passage of H. R. 6818. Earlier in the session, I introduced legislation to amend the Social Security Act to provide more adequately for the blind persons of our Nation. I am thoroughly sympathetic with the purpose of this bill, and at this late day I have no wish to jeopardize prompt action upon it. It is my sincere regret, however, that the bill is so limited in scope. The present law deters blind people from becoming self-supporting because it requires that the amount of income earned apart from the social-security benefits be deducted from the aid received. H. R. 6818 improves this unfortunate provision, but H. R. 6818 must not be considered an adequate solution to the problem of assuring the blind that they may engage in satisfying and appropriate work without limiting their income by doing so. Of the 65,000 persons under the Federal program, it is estimated that only 300 to 400 will gain from the provisions of this bill which permits a blind person to earn $40 per month without reducing his benefits from the

When I introduced S. 2590, I felt that a substantial revision in the method of determining social-security payments to the blind should be made. Although I am in favor of H. R. 6818, I still feel that the law should be further liberalized either by the formulas in my bill or by the method which study will show to be most workable, fair, and liberal.

This measure is a short step in the right direction, and I would not imperil the chance of passing it by seeking to amend it when time is so short and human hours are at a premium. I do want to make it very clear for the record, nonetheless, that at the earliest opportunity I intend to press for further liberalization in the law so that blind persons may have every encouragement to be self-supporting.

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. President, I do not wish to object to the bill. As the distinguished Senator from New York has said, it is a step in the right direction. I also introduced a bill earlier in the session which would be more liberal, and which I hope may be enacted at the next session. I hope the pending bill will be passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the third reading of the oill.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DISASTER RELIEF

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2831) to authorize the Federal Works Administrator to coordinate emergency activities of Federal agencies in disaster areas, which had been reported from the Committee on Public Works with amendments.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, I do not object to the consideration of the bill, but as a member of the Committee on Armed Services, I may say that it has been called to my attention that the Committee on Public Works has reported an amendment which turns over the administration of emergency aid to the Secretary of National Defense. The Secretary of National Defense has a very limited office staff-in fact, it is too limited even to do the work connected with the national defense. The Committee on Armed Services is considering that subject, and it would be very unwise to impose on the Secretary of National Defense at this time the additional burden which the amendment of the committee would require. I hope the bill may be passed, because I think it has merit, without the amendment transferring the duties from the Public Works Agency, headed by General Fleming, to the Secretary of National Defense, Mr. Forrestal.

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, being conscious, like the Senator from Massachusetts, of the very understandable attitude of the Secretary of Defense, the chairman of the Committee on Public Works, the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. REVERCOMB], agreed to offer an amendment which would leave to the President the function of coordinating Federal activities and the selection from within Federal agencies of the particular agencies which in his opinion were best qualified to undertake any disaster work and relief work. He has agreed to offer an amendment which would leave to the President the function of coordinating Federal activities and the selection from within Federal agencies of particular agencies which in his opinion are best qualified to undertake any disaster work and relief.

Mr. President, I offer amendments to change the phrase "Federal Works Administrator" in the title of the bill, and the phrase "Secretary of National Defense" as it is found in several instances throughout the bill, to the phrase "President of the United States."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendments offered by the Senator from Washington, as he has just stated them.

The amendments were agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the first committee amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 2, line 10, before the word "activities", it is proposed to insert "relief."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, I wish to ask the Senator from Washington what the amendment he has just offered would accomplish.

Mr. CAIN. The amendment just offered by the Senator from Washington would charge the President of the United States with the responsibility which was originally assigned to the Federal Works Administrator under the committee bill. The President of the United States in his discretion can select either the Federal Works Administrator or the Department of Agriculture or the Department of Commerce, or the Department of Defense. as he sees fit.

fense, as he sees fit.
Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, does the Senator from Washington feel that this amendment would authorize the President to designate any other agency of Government to carry out this work?

Mr. CAIN. The bill is so written that whoever is charged with the responsibility of designating particular agencies and selecting others would have that authority, and it necessarily follows that this amendment will give to the President the authority which was intended for the Secretary of National Defense.

for the Secretary of National Defense.

Mr. AIKEN. With that understanding I think the bill is all right.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, as

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, as I understand, this is an authorization bill.

Mr. CAIN. Yes.

Mr. MAGNUSON. We expect to offer to the Congress today or tomorrow the bill containing appropriations to carry out this authorization or similar authorizations in disaster areas.

Mr. CAIN. That is the understanding of the junior Senator from Washington.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, I certainly hope this bill be passed. As I understand this is the only measure we now have which, if passed, will provide some Federal machinery to help in carrying on the work of clearing up and emergency repairing of the damage resulting from the present floods in Oregon. Washington, and Idaho, and will also provide machinery for giving emergency aid elsewhere in the event disasters result from hurricanes, tornadoes, earthquakes, or other natural disturbances. The provisions of the bill are limited to 1 year because the committee realized that there was not time to work out the program carefully, but it was thought we should give power to the Federal Gov-ernment to gather the supervision of all its relief activities under one head, and then to authorize the contracting of up to $10,000,000 worth of obligations to meet the cost of immediate relief activi-Without trying at all to go into permanent reconstruction, this measure will give some Federal assistance not only where it is needed so badly now, but in other places later, if needed during the year.

Last fall in Florida we found that after the terrible flood that occurred, there was needed some machinery through which the various Federal agencies could find unified leadership and could tie together their extremely worth-while activities, personnel, and facilities, and at the same time be supplied with funds to meet the emergency needs.

The bill represents considerable study. It is not in the form we want to make permanent, but it will provide some constructive machinery to operate in this field for the limited period of 1 year.

I hope the bill will be passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the next committee amendment.

The next committee amendment was, on page 3, line 3, to strike out:

(c) reconstruct, repair, restore, or replace facilities owned by Federal departments and agencies, for which purposes funds are not otherwise available; and

(d) make grants to States and local public agencies, including counties, cities, towns, districts, and other local public entities, to assist them in defraying the cost of emergency protection work, and the cost of repairing, restoring, reconstructing, or replacing public facilities owned by them: Provided, That no such grant shall be made to any local public agency unless the Administrator determines that such agency needs the grant and cannot otherwise defray such cost without creating an excessive tax or debt burden.

And insert in lieu thereof:

(c) make grants to local public agencies, including counties, cities, towns, districts, and other local public entities, to assist them in defraying the cost of emergency protection work, and the cost of temporary repair, restoration, reconstruction, or replacement of public facilities owned by them and necessary for public health and safety and maintenance of vital public services: Provided, That no such grant shall be made to any local public agency unless the Governor of the State certifies and the Secretary of National Defense determines that such local agency needs the grant and cannot otherwise defray such cost without creating an excessive tax or debt burden.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 4, line 12, after the word "this", to strike out "section" and insert "act."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on the same page, line 23, after the word "this", to strike out "act; and" and insert "act."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on the same page, line 24, to strike out "(e) To prescribe rules and regulations for the administration of this act."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 5, line 9, after the word "hereunder", to strike out "in order" and to insert "to the extent necessary."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 5, line 23, to strike out:

(b) In addition to any such appropriation, authority is hereby granted to the Federal Works Administrator to enter into contracts or otherwise to incur obligations, without regard to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes, for the purposes of this act in amounts not to exceed in the aggregate $10,000,000 at any one time.

And insert:

(b) Authority is hereby granted to the Secretary of National Defense to enter into contracts or otherwise to incur obligations, without regard to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes in amounts not to exceed in the aggregate $10,000,000, for the purposes of this act when funds appropriated therefor have been exhausted or are determined to be inadequate.

The amendment was agreed to.
The next amendment was, on page 6, after line 10, to insert a new section 7, as follows:

SEC. 7. The authority contained in this act shall remain in effect until June 30, 1949.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill (S. 2831) was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read:
"A bill to authorize the coordination of emergency and relief activities of Federal agencies in disaster areas, and for other purposes."

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, Senate bill 2831 has just been passed. ] am very glad it was passed, because it is a measure which was reported within the last few days after consideration had been given to it by the Committee on Public Works. It was found, as is shown by the report, that a measure of this kind was urgently needed in order to meet an emergency. The measure does not provide, however, for permanent relief or permanent construction, but its purpose is to meet those needs which arise suddenly throughout the country by reason of natural disasters. I will say that not only will it be of value in assisting in disasters of the nature described, but of disasters of any nature. The bill will be in effect for only 1 year. I am very glad indeed that the report of the Committee on Public Works has been approved by the passage of the bill.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REVERCOMB. I yield.

Mr. MORSE. I want to say to the Senator from West Virginia, who is chairman of the Public Works Committee of the Senate, and to his colleagues on that committee, and I say it in behalf of the Senators from both Washington and Oregon, that we deeply appreciate the fine and wonderful cooperation which the Senator's committee has given to us in respect to this bill.

Mr. REVERCOMB. I want to thank

Mr. REVERCOMB. I want to thank the Senator from Oregon and to say that the measure will be helpful no doubt to the Northwest, but it is a bill which covers the whole country.

CONVEYANCE OF LAND TO WASHINGTON COUNTY, ARK.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2849) to authorize the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs to convey a certain tract of land in the State of Arkansas to Washington County, Ark., which had been reported from the Committee on Finance with amendments on page 1, line 4, after the word "directed", to insert "subject to such terms and conditions as the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs may prescribe,"; and on page 2, after line 16, to insert a new paragraph as follows:

The deed shall reserve to the United States all interest in and to any oll, mineral, or fis-sionable material in said land, and shall pro-vide for reversion to the United States if the land ceases to be used for hospital purposes.

So as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs is authorized and directed, subject to such terms and conditions as the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs may prescribe, to convey by quitclaim deed to Washington County, Ark., without consideration, the following-described tract of land, which is a part of the lands of the Veterans' Administration hospital, Fayetteville, Washington County, Ark .:

A part of the southeast quarter of northeast quarter of section 9 and a part of the southwest quarter of northwest quarter of section 10, township 16 north, range 30 west, fifth principal meridian, more particularly described as follows: Beginning at the southwest corner of southeast quarter of northeast quarter of said section 9, running thence north two hundred feet; thence east five hundred and thirty feet; thence north fifty degrees eighteen minutes east two hundred and thirty-four and eighty-three one-hundredths feet: thence east seven hundred and forty-four and seventeen one-hundredths feet to the center of said United States Highway Numbered 71; thence south two degrees two minutes west along center of said United States Highway Numbered 71 three hundred and fifty and twenty-four one-hundredths feet; thence west one thousand four hundred and forty-two and forty one-hundredths feet to the place of beginning, containing nine and eighty one-hundredths acres.

The deed shall reserve to the United States all interest in and to any oil, mineral, or fissionable material in said land, and shall provide for reversion to the United States if the land ceases to be used for hospital purposes.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 5040) to amend the Contract Settlement Act of 1944 to provide that claims under section 17 must be filed within 6 months to be allowable, to stop further accrual of such claims, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (H. R. 6634) to authorize the issuance of a special series of stamps in honor and commemoration of Moina Michael, originator of Flanders Field memorial poppy idea, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ADJUDICATION OF CLAIMS OF CERTAIN PERSONS OF JAPANESE ANCESTRY

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 3999) to authorize the Attorney General to adjudicate certain claims resulting from evacuation of certain persons of Japanese ancestry under military order, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with amendments.

The amendments were, on page 1, line 3, after the words "jurisdiction to" to strike out "adjudicate" and insert "determine according to law"; on the same page, line 7, after the word "otherwise" to strike out "and is substantiated in such manner as the Attorney General may prescribe,"; on the same page, line 10, after the word "limitation" to insert 'as to amount"; on page 2, line 13, after the word "therefrom" and the period, to strike out "Existence or intervention of other causes affecting the damage or loss, including action or nonaction by the claimant or his representatives, shall be considered by the Attorney General in determining the amount of relief that will be fair and equitable according to the facts as they appear in each case.'

On page 3, line 3, after the word "or". to strike out "who is otherwise resident in a foreign country" and insert "by and on behalf of any alien who on December 7, 1941, was not actually residing in the United States;"; on the same page, line 15, after the word "amended;", to strike out "and"; on the same page, line 18, after the word "mental", to strike out "suffering" and the period, and insert "suffering; and"; on the same page, line 19, to insert "(5) For loss of anticipated profits or loss of anticipated earnings"; on page 4, line 1, after "(b)", to strike out "Any relative evidence having probative value shall be considered by the Attorney General in his inquiries.' the same page, in line 10, after the word "General.", to strike out "Any person appointed to examine witnesses may be authorized by the Attorney General to issue subpenas, to procure attendance of witnesses or production of documents, and to appoint an officer to serve the same."

REFUND OR CREDIT TO BREWERS OF CERTAIN TAXES

Mr. ROBERTSON of Virginia. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to return to order No. 1782, House bill 6808. for the purpose of offering an amendment which is agreeable to the distin-guished chairman of the Finance Committee [Mr. MILLIKIN] and agreeable to the Senator who objected to the bill when it was reached on the calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Virginia?

Mr. MILLIKIN. I simply wish to say that the agreement will confine itself to that amendment, and that I shall object to anything else that comes up in connection with the bill.

Mr. ROBERTSON of Virginia. Member tries to extend the bill I shall vote against such endeavor myself, but I cannot believe any Member will take the position that he wants to tax the church or to prevent the church from receiving the relief it seeks, by trying to place some other amendments on the

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. there objection to the request of the Senator from Virginia?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, a few moments ago I objected to this bill. I do not agree to the bill at the present time, but I do want to relieve church organs from the imposition of further taxes. For that reason I am withdrawing my objection at this time, with the understanding that there will be no further amendments.

Mr. MAYBANK. Mr. President, merely wish to state that since there was objection to the bill insofar as the liquor interests were concerned, I did not object, although I had intended to because objection had already been made. While regret to see the tax exemption of church organs as an amendment to this bill, I am a coauthor with the distinguished junior Senator from Virginia, and hope that the bill will pass. After all, churches need tax relief far more than some others. I had hoped we could have passed a separate bill but we have no chance at this late time in this session.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of House bill 6808?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6808) to permit refund or credit brewers of taxes paid on beer lost in bottling operations.

Mr. ROBERTSON of Virginia. President, on behalf of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. MAYBANK], the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. STEWART], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HILL], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. Johnston], the Senator from Maryland [Mr. O'CONORI, the Senator from Colorado [Mr. Johnson], the Senator from Georgia [Mr. Russell], and myself, I offer the amendment which I send to the The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Virginia on behalf of himself and other Senators. Because of the explanation already made, without objection the amendment will be printed in the Record at this point without reading.

The amendment was as follows:

On page 3, after line 7, to insert:

"Sec. 5. That section 3404 (d) of the Internal Revenue Code (relating to manufacturers' excise taxes on musical instruments) is hereby amended to read as follows:

"'(d) Musical instruments, but the tax imposed by this section shall not apply to musical instruments sold for the use of any religious or nonprofit educational institution for exclusively religious or educational purposes. The right to exemption under this subsection shall be evidenced in such manner as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may prescribe by regulations."

"SEC. 6. Section 3443 (a) (3) (A) (i) of the Internal Revenue Code (relating to credits and refunds) is hereby amended to read as follows:

"'(i) resold for the exclusive use of any State, Territory of the United States, or any political subdivision of the foregoing, or of the District of Columbia, or, in the case of musical instruments embraced in section 3404 (d), resold for the use of any religious or nonprofit educational institution for exclusively religious or educational purposes;".

"Sec. 7. The amendments made by sections 1 and 2 of this act shall be applicable with respect to sales made after the date of enactment of this act."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Virginia [Mr. ROBERTSON] on behalf of himself and other Senators.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the next bill on the calendar.

ELLEN HUDSON, ADMINISTRATRIX

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2726) for the relief of Ellen Hudson, as administratrix of the estate of Walter R. Hudson, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment on page 1, line 6, after the words "the sum of", to strike out "$15,000" and insert "$7,500", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Ellen Hudson, as administratrix of the estate of Walter R. Hudson, deceased, the sum of $7,500, in full satisfaction of the claim of such estate against the United States for compensation for the death of the said Walter R. Hudson as a result of personal injuries sustained by him when the automobile in which he was riding was struck by a United States Army vehicle, near Pittman, Nev., on April 4, 1943: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding.

Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LUTHER BROS. CONSTRUCTION CO.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6428) to reimburse the Luther Bros. Construction Co., which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Texas to hear, determine, and render findings of fact as to the amount of loss, if any, sustained by Luther Bros. Construction Co., of Fort Worth, Tex., under Reclamation Bureau contract No. 12r-15757 arising out of or attributable to the alleged failure of the Government to supply materials as provided for in said contracts.

SEC. 2. The court shall cause such findings to be certified to the Secretary of the Treasury, who is hereby authorized and directed to pay, out of any money not otherwise appropriated, the amount set forth in said findings to the Luther Bros. Construction Co.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

JAMES & PHELPS CONSTRUCTION CO.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2705) to reimburse the James & Phelps Construction Co., which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

Jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon the district court of the western district of Oklahoma to hear, determine, and render findings of fact as to the amount of loss, if any, sustained by James & Phelps Construction Co., Oklahoma City, Okla., Reclamation 3ureau contracts No. 12r-15920 and 12r-15994 arising out of or attributable to the alleged failure of the Government to supply materials as provided for in said contracts.

SEC. 2. The court shall cause such findings to be certified to the Secretary of the Treasury, who is hereby authorized and directed to pay, out of any money not otherwise appropriated, the amount set forth in said findings to the James & Phelps Construction Cr.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, the purpose of the bill is as follows: This contracting company had a contract to build a portion of an irrigation dam at the so-called Altus-Lugert irrigation project. The name has since been changed to the W. C. Austin project. Because of the failure of the Government to furnish both steel and concrete during the war, the work could not proceed. Under the contract, the Government was to furnish certain commodities. It did not furnish those commodities. The commodities could not be obtained. The purpose of the bill is to reimburse the contractor for the loss. As I understand, the bill is so drawn that the reimbursement may not exceed a certain amount. The amount to be allowed is yet to be determined, in the event that something is to be allowed. This is similar to another bill which passed the Congress a few days ago.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. As I understand, the bill only confers jurisdiction upon the district court to hear and determine the claim.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. That is correct.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I have no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GABEL CONSTRUCTION CO.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 1734) for the relief of Gabel Construction Co., which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Florida to hear, determine, and render findings of fact as to the amount of loss and damages, if any, sustained by Louis E. Gabel, an individual, trading as Gabel Construction Co., of Orlando, Fla., under contract No. NOY-9336 of the Bureau of Yards and Docks of the Department of the Navy arising out of or attributable to the alleged delay in supplying materials as provided for in said contracts: Provided, That the jurisdiction conferred by this section shall be confined to questions of fact.

SEC. 2. The court shall cause such findings to be certified to the Secretary of the Treasury, who is hereby authorized and directed to pay, out of any moneys not otherwise appropriated, the amount set forth in said findings to Louis E. Gabel, trading as Gabel Construction Co.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

PRODUCTION AND CONSERVATION OF STRATEGIC AND CRITICAL ORES, ETC.— BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 2756) to stimulate the production and conservation of strategic and critical ores, metals, and minerals in the interest of national defense was announced as next in order.

Mr. KEM and Mr. WILLIAMS. Over. Mr. MALONE. Mr. President, in the interest of saving time on this subject, I should like to make an explanation, if the Senator will withhold his objection for that purpose.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I am glad to do so.

Mr. MALONE. The bill as drafted is designed to supplement the existing Stock-Piling Act (60 Stat. 596, 50 U. S. C., sec. 98 et seq.) by stimulating the production and conservation of strategic and critical ores, metals, and minerals for stock-piling purposes in the interest of national defense, and to establish a mine incentive payments division within the Department of the Interior. It is the opinion of the committee that more metal is required immediately for stock-piling purposes and that a long-range conservation development and exploration program is vital to the national defense and security of this country.

The committee is deeply concerned over the reported shortages of strategic and critical metals in the military stock pile.

Mr President, I defer to the Senator from Colorado [Mr. MILLIKIN] for further explanation of the bill.

Mr. MILLIKIN. Mr. President, I think it is a matter of common knowledge in the Senate that, practically speaking, we have no stock piles of many strategic materials. We are now at the mercy of importations with respect to many of those materials. During the war we found that that was a very risky procedure.

I have managed on the floor of the Senate within the past year several bills to remove the duty from importations of certain minerals and metals-for example, zinc and lead. That points up the whole purpose of this bill. It emphasizes our critical domestic shortage of certain strategic materials, including the ones I have just mentioned.

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, will

the Senator yield?

Mr. MILLIKIN. I shall be glad to yield

Let us bring this bill into perspective with what we are doing in other fields. We are in process of passing draft legislation. We have already made enormous commitments for the maintenance and enlargement of our Military Establishment. We are making extraordinary expenditures in our foreign affairs in the hope that what we are doing along those lines will be an antidote to war.

All the things we are doing are perfectly futile unless they have the support of domestic stock piles and developed mineral resources. In an emergency, with our foreign supplies shut off, we could not move a wheel; we could not get our planes up; we could not make artillery or other armaments; we could not support these programs to which we are committed unless we have the necessary stock piles and developed mineral resources. We cannot rely on foreign imports.

This is a very modest bill intended to stimulate exploration, and to make it worth while to explore and develop strategic materials. I earnestly hope that Senators who objected to the bill will. in the interest of the national defense, and in the light of the emergencies which confront us, withdraw their objection, so that we may build up an adequate domestic supply of minerals and metals, not only useful for our military purposes but, I respectfully suggest, vital to our peacetime economic development.
Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, will

the Senator yield?
Mr. MILLIKIN. I yield.
Mr. McFARLAND. Is it not a fact that if these strategic metals and minerals were imported into the United States, we should be taking metals and minerals away from foreign countries where they are needed in our program to help them rehabilitate their cconomies and get on their feet?

Mr. MILLIKIN. It would have exactly that effect.

Mr. McFARLAND. This is the only way in which we can get a stock pile of strategic metals and minerals without hurting our own industry or the industries of foreign countries.

Mr. MILLIKIN. Mr. President, so far as the amount of money involved in the bill is concerned, it would be entirely inconsequential compared with the loss of only a few ships carrying to us strategic materials in the event of another war, which I hope we shall not have. We learned that lesson during the last war, when ships carrying metals and minerals which we needed in this country were torpedoed.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MILLIKIN. I yield to the Senator from Vermont.

Mr. AIKEN. It is my understanding that this metal subsidy is proposed in order to permit the continued exploration and development of known or probably known ores within the United States. As I understand, the subsidy is not to be spent to give those who already have well developed mines additional profits, but it is to be used for the purpose of increasing exploration and development of other mines in the country. mostly smaller mines. As I understand, the additional product to be derived as a result of this subsidy is to be used for stock piling, for the purpose of enhancing the security of the Nation.

Mr. MILLIKIN. The Senator is entirely correct.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator's time has expired. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Let the bill go over. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, am I entitled to recognition under the 5-minute rule? If so, I wish to say that although I do not know which Senator made objection to consideration of the bill, I still hope that the objection may be withdrawn and that action may be taken on the bill.

I shall take only a moment or two to quote from an editorial appearing in the June 15 issue of the Denver Post. The editorial says in part:

The United States still has huge underground reserves of strategic minerals but most of them are in the form of low-grade ores which are expensive to mine and to Marginal mines cannot operate profitably at present metal prices. Those prices are set in competition with higher-grade ore deposits in foreign countries. The United States needs all the metal it can get from abroad as well as all the metal it can produce at home.

Yet in the United States 13,000 mines have gone out of production since 1930. Colorado had 313 operating lead and zinc mines in 1939. Today it has only 70. Fifty-two Colorado mines closed in the last half of 1948 following the termination of the wartime premium-price plan for metals.

The failure of Congress to pass the Russell bill or some similar measure, will be a serious blow to the West. The greatest damage, however, will be to the Nation's longrange defense plans.

Mr. President, I certainly hope that the Senator who made the objection will permit this bill to be passed.

At this time I ask unanimous consent that the entire editorial be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD. as follows:

STRATEGIC ERROR

Congressional proposals to stimulate the mining of strategic minerals have become casualties of the rush to adjourn. In spite of pleas by Representative J. Edgar Cheno-WETH, Republican, of Colorado, the autocratic House Rules Committee has refused to put the Russell premium-payment program metals on the calendar for the few remaining days of the expiring session.

It seems strange that after voting billions for various defense purposes Congress would not find either the time or the inclination to vote a few million dollars to assure the country of an adequate stock pile of the metals would have to have if another war broke

The Stock Piling Act of 1946 has failed to fulfill its purpose. One reason is that it forbids the stock piling of metals which are in short supply for civilian consumption.

The United States still has huge underground reserves of strategic minerals, but most of them are in the form of low-grade ores which are expensive to mine and to Marginal mines cannot operate profitably at present metal prices. Those prices are set in competition with higher-grade ore deposits in foreign countries. The United States needs all the metal it can get from abroad as well as all the metal it can produce at home.

Yet in the United States 13,000 mines have gone out of production since 1930. Colorado had 313 operating lead and zinc mines in 1939. Today it has only 70. Fifty-two Colorado mines closed in the last half of 1947 following the termination of the wartime premium-price plan for metals.

The failure of Congress to pass the Russell bill, or some similar measure, will be a serious blow to the West. The greatest damage, however, will be to the Nation's long-range defense plans.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. President, I desire to concur in what the junior Senator from Colorado [Mr. MILLIKIN] has said with respect to the need for lead in our national defense. We are passing a draft law, which is a very drastic act, indeed, so we know something about the need for national defense. However, we need lead, not only for national defense but for our national economy. As a matter of fact, four factories of the National Lead Co. are forced right now to close their doors because they do not have enough lead to permit them to proceed with production. Not only that, but it is suggested that lead be withdrawn from the manufacture of ethyl gasoline and from the manufacture of batteries. Those are both important considerations to this country.

So I sincerely hope that the junior Senator from Missouri [Mr. KEM] will withdraw his objection, in view of the great need for lead in the national defense, and also the need for lead for our domestic purposes.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed at this point in the RECORD, as a part of my remarks, a brief statement on this question.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

The production of the strategic and critical metals and minerals from the mines of Colorado was necessary to furnish the sinews of war. The same is true of the mines of all the Western, Middle Western, Central, and Eastern States. A large percentage of these mines operated under the premium price plan, which was used during the war to get out greater production of war metals. On no other basis could they have operated.

The Eightieth Congress enacted legislation

The Eightieth Congress enacted legislation during its first session to continue this program to supply the metals necessary to meet the industrial requirements of the Nation. At the time, this legislation met the approval of Congress. Unfortunately the President felt that there was no immediate emergency, and also that there were certain objections to the legislation which justified a veto and also that there were certain objections to the legislation which justified a veto.

However conditions have changed to such an extent that it is obvious that legislation of this nature is vital for the national de-

In my book a stock pile of critical metals is the most vital part of our national defense and the need for building a reserve of strategic and critical metals for the purpose of meeting any emergency which may confront America must not be lightly set aside. Large appropriations have been approved by Congress for this purpose, but in spite of these appropriations, the stock pile of metals is very low—so low that in the national interest it is highly desirable that we enact legislation to stimulate the production, exploration, and conservation of our strategic and critical ores.

Conditions in the mining industry in my State are such that I feel there is a real need for this legislation today. For example, although the National Lead Co. advises me that it is shutting down four plants by reason of the shortage of lead. The second largest lead mine in Colorado has, within the last month, been forced to shut down. I refer to the Imperious Mining Co., at Creede, Colo. Ores which netted $1 to $3 a ton prior to the war are now mined at a loss to the company of from $2 to $5 a ton. Numerous examples of recent shut-downs of mines producing those metals which are needed, not only for stock-piling purposes, but for industrial requirements, could be given.

Illustrations of the benefits received under this plan are numerous and I desire here to cite only one. In Gunnison County, Colo., is located the Akron mine of the Callahan Zinc & Lead Co., Inc. It would still be an abandoned camp were it not for the benefits derived from legislation such as this. During the administration of the program a prosperous community has developed. There was a very large outlay of capital by the company which resulted in an operation contributing 700 tons of lead concentrates, and 1,300 tons of zinc concentrates per quarter to our peace and security requirements. Without this legislation this community may revert to a ghost town and the Nation lose vital supplies of lead and zinc.

Out of C13 mines receiving benefits in Colorado only 70 are in operation today, and many of these are depending upon Congress to reenact this legislation. This situation prevails throughout the mining camps of other States, and it is well for Congress to realize that in refusing to pass this legislation it is sounding a death knell to the independent small producing segment of the mining industry which, unfortunately, has the opposition of the big low-cost producers such as the St. Joe Lead Co., at Bonne Terre, Mo., and the Kennecott Copper Corp., which has a strangle hold on the copper industry with fabricating plants in Connecticut.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, on the point on which the able Senator from Colorado has spoken, I wish to say that my attention has been called to the very critical shortage of lead in the United States.

I wish to ask the distinguished junior Senator from Colorado whether this bill, if enacted, will increase to any appreciable extent, the supply of lead in the United States for commercial uses.

Mr. MILLIKIN. Mr. President, in my opinion the bill would increase the production of lead to a most appreciable extent.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Within what length of time would that increase be obtained? Can the Senator tell us?

Mr. MILLIKIN. I should say if the administrative set-up provided for in the bill gets under way promptly, mines that have the prospect of successful exploration or development would commence to get busy at once.

Mr. REVERCOMB. As I understand the situation, the bill is not in any sense a subsidy to going concerns or large companies, but in fact is to stimulate production from what are known as marginal mines—the small mines—and also to increase interest in the operation of new mining properties. Is that correct?

Mr. MILLIKIN. The emphasis of the bill is on the encouragement of exploration and development by small mines. Under the formula proposed in the bill, the benefits might reach beyond that; but I repeat the principal emphasis is on the smaller operations.

Mr. President, let me ask the Senator to yield long enough to permit me to make a statement.

If the Senators who have objected will not withdraw their objection, I wish to serve notice now that those of us who are interested in this bill will press to bring up the matter for debate, and we shall ask for, let us say, an hour's time, with an agreement to vote at the end of an hour.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I wish to thank the distinguished Senator from Colorado for making that statement. The Finance Committee went over this bill rather thoroughly and there can be no question as to the need to stimulate the production of strategic and critical ores and metals and minerals in the national defense. This should be done now. We should not pursue the same course that we pursued prior to Pearl Harbor, in reference to the stock piling of critical materials needed for national defense.

This bill is most important, and I am happy that the Senator is taking the position of preparing to have the bill called up at the proper time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection having been made, the bill is passed over.

The clerk will call the next measure on the calendar.

AMENDMENT OF TRADING WITH THE ENEMY ACT

The bill (H. R. 4044) to amend the Trading With the Enemy Act was announced as next in order.

Mr. CAPEHART and other Senators. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

Mr. MAGNUSON subsequently said: Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Has House bill 4044, Calendar No. 1802, been passed over?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It has been passed over.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I am sure the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Cooper] would like to have whatever Senator objected to consideration of the bill withhold the objection so that an explanation of the bill can be made.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Kentucky wish to be heard?

Mr. COOPER. I should like to be heard, if there is a chance of persuading the distinguished Senator from Indiana to withdraw his objection.

This bill has been for several months the subject of a great deal of work by a subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee and also by the full Judiciary Committee.

After World War I a Mixed Claims Commission was established to consider and determine claims asserted by citizens of the United States against enemy countries and alien funds held by the Alien Property Custodian. Almost 3 years have passed since the close of World War II, yet there is no agency of the United States constituted to receive claims of citizens of the United States against Japan and Germany, although approximately $260,000,000 of enemy funds are held by the Alien Property Custodian.

This bill proposes the establishment of a commission to which certain types of claims can be immediately referred for determination, and which is directed to recommend to the Congress procedures for receiving, hearing, and determining all types of war claims. The commission would consist of three members, and it would be required to make a first report to the Congress, not later than 6 months after its organization, setting out its recommendations as to the types and amounts of claims which should be considered by it, the priorities which should apply in the payment of claims, and suggested methods of administration and payment.

The bill does not provide for the immediate payment of any claims other than those which I shall now discuss.

The subcommittee and the full Judiciary Committee agree that there are three groups which should receive immediate consideration. The first group—some 1,308 in number—is that group of workers who were induced to go to Wake Island, Guam, and other possessions of the United States to construct military installations. They were captured, and those that lived were treated as internees or prisoners of war. The bill provides that they shall be paid under the contractor's cost-plus contract with the Government the amounts which were promised them in their contracts, excluding overtime. In addition, death and disability benefits are made available under the amended Longshoremen's Act. It is estimated these charges would amount to approximately $2,500,000.

The second group is made up of approximately 13,000 American citizens who were interned in the Philippine Islands and other possessions of the United States.

American citizens in other sections of the world were advised or directed to return to this country by the State Department before the war. Members of this group inquired if they should return from the Philippines to the United States.

They were not told to return, and lulled into security. They were caught when the war with Japan commenced, and for nearly three and a half years lived under most miserable conditions, but gave strength to the people of the Philippines. This bill would give them some relief. Each person over 18 will receive $50 a month and each person under 18 will receive $20 a month for the term of their detention. It is estimated that $20,000,000 would be required.

A third group is comprised of the 29,000 American soldiers who were captured by the Japanese and who were subjected for 3 years to brutal and barbarous treatment in contravention of the laws of war. The committee took complete testimony. General MacArthur's Chief of Staff, General King, testified that it was the design of the Japanese high command to starve these troops. We provide that if the Commission shall determine that the Japanese violated the terms of the Geneva Convention, which Japan announced it would observe, and which guaranteed certain standards of food, that for such violation the Japanese, out of the alien funds, shall be charged $1 a day for the violation. It is a small item in proportion to their injuries, and this item is estimated to cost $40,000,000. None of these claims will be paid from tax revenues of this country. They will be paid out of the Japanese and German funds held by the Alien Property Custodian. These people have waited too long and should have this inadequate measure of considera-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I wish to associate myself with the remarks of the able Senator from Kentucky. I was a member of the subcommittee, which spent many weeks on the We held hearings in Albuquerque, N. Mex., beginning as far back as last December. The hearings were conducted there, for the reason principally that most of the men involved came from the New Mexico National Guard, which participated in the horrible death march from Bataan. All the bill does is to set up a means of procedure whereby the former prisoners of war, internees, contractors' employees and our own American soldiers would have some slight recompense from the Japanese funds amounting to some $270,000,000, now impounded by the Alien Property Custo-

What we are doing is almost niggardly. We are for instance under the bill giving to the American soldiers who spent from 36 to 40 months under the most horrible conditions ever imposed by one man on another, in Japanese prison camps, compensation at the rate of $1 per day for their subsistence. That would be what it would have cost the American Government had they been in the American Army. We provide that a commission shall be set up similar to the Mixed Claims Commission which was created after World War I, with whom claims may be filed over and above the amounts received under the bill for maltreatment in violation of the Geneva Conference while in Japanese prisons.

The bill has been carefully considered for some weeks by a subcommittee of the Committee on the Judiciary. It is not perfect. The beneficiaries of the bill have waited a long time. The contractors' employees should get what they would have been paid had they remained at work instead of being confined in Japanese prisons. We also provide that civilian internees shall have a right to file claims again, over and above the provisions of the Geneva Conference. For instance, if a civilian were kept in an internment camp in Japan and a Japanese guard gouged out his eyes, it is provided that a claim may be filed for the destruction of the claimant's sight, in violation of the Geneva Conference. I could stand on the floor of the Senate for 2 or 3 hours reciting horrible instances of things that would nauseate Senators. It cannot be realized that one human being could treat another the way the Japanese treated our soldiers. The Japanese have $270,000,000 in this country. I think people within the specified groups are entitled to file claims for at least some slight recompense, to be paid out of that amount. I hope no one will object to the bill.

Mr. CHAVEZ and Mr. HATCH addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The junior Senator from New Mexico is recognized.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, I am sure the senior Senator from Indiana would not have objected to the bill if he had understood it. I know the senior Senator wants to do what is right by everyone. I am satisfied he wants to do his share at least to bring about some kind of equity to the men, especially military personnel, who went through the agonies of the damned and who suffered at the hands of the Japanese while in prison.

If the senior Senator from Indiana wants to have it on his conscience, it is all right with me. I know boys in my State who had hot wires driven clear through their feet. I know boys in my State who had nails driven into their heads. I know boys in my State who are blind. They are all former military prisoners of war. They are not only in my State but also in Illinois. In a little town just out of Chicago, in Peoria, in St. Joseph, Mo., in Salinas, Calif., and elsewhere these men can be found. I wish the senior Senator from Indiana wish the senior Senator from Indiana would go there and see the agony of those youngsters. Now, because the Committee on the Judiciary dares to advocate the establishment of a Claims Commission through which those boys would receive a little recompense, there are objections to the bill. I am sure if the Senator from Indiana would only go with me, I could take him to 200 of the men within a day, in the city of Albuquerque.

We pass laws here subsidizing industry, subsidizing the farmer, authorizing money for the relief of Europe, lut those who suffered in the Philippines must wait; the bill must be subject to an objection.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CHAVEZ. I yield.

Mr. CAPEHART. There are other phases of the bill than those to which the Senator referred, which caused me to object. I was about ready to suggest I should like to talk to the author of the bill and see if it could not be sent to the foot of the calendar for later consideration. However, since the Senator has taken it upon himself to make a speech directed at me, in very strong terms, I am not so sure that I wish to do that. I was not objecting to the phase of the bill to which the Senator refers, but there are other phases of it which I wish to have explained. There is to be another call of the calendar tomorrow, I hope, and I am sure I shall have no objections. If the Senator will only have a little patience and allow the bill temporarily to go to the foot of the calendar. I think we can get it straightened out.

Mr. CHAVEZ. I agree to that.

Mr. CAPEHART. I did not know until now that it was a sin to object to a bill, or at least to request an opportunity to look into it, if there was some question.

Mr. CHAVEZ. I know it is not a sin to object to a bill, but I do think it is a sin to object to a bill that is meritorious without knowing what the bill contains.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator's time has expired.

The bill will be temporarily passed over.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I hardly dare trust myself to speak on this subject. However, the horrors and injuries which my colleague has related are not one-tenth of the story.

I rise to express my thanks to the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Cooper] and the Senator from Washington [Mr. Magnuson], who took their Christmas holiday period last year to go to Albuquerque, where they heard the most horrifying stories they had ever heard in their lives, stories more horrible than any man had ever heard before. I trust no man will ever hear them again.

I express my thanks and appreciation to the distinguished and able committee which has performed this work and has reported the bill. Tomorrow I hope I may include my thanks to the Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART] for withdrawing his objection and permitting the bill to pass.

ESTATE OF L. L. McCANDLESS

The bill (H. R. 915) to confer jurisdiction upon the district court of the United States for the Territory of Hawaii to hear, determine, and render judgment on the claims of the executors and trustees of the estate of L. L. McCandless, deceased, as their interests may appear, against the United States of America, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELLA L. BROWNING

The bill (S. 2299) for the relief of Ella L. Browning was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Ella L. Browning, Bar Harbor, Maine, the sum of $3,552.50, in full satisfaction of her claim against the United States for compensation for damages to a swimming pool and stone terrace wall situated at Pointe d'Acadie, on Mount Desert Island, in connection with experimental work with ordnance materials conducted by the United States Navy at Bald Porcupine Island, Hancock County, Maine, in and after 1943, while such Bald Porcupine Island was occupied by the Naval Establishment under lease (NOy (R)-33877) executed by said Ella L. Browning, on September 15, 1943: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

HAWAIIAN DREDGING CO., LTD.

The bill (H. R. 6186) for reimbursement of the Hawaiian Dredging Co., Ltd., was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FIRST, SECOND, AND THIRD NATIONAL STEAMSHIP COS.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 1774, Senate bill 1691, for the relief of First, Second, and Third National Steamship Cos. I have conferred with all of the Senators who raised objections and asked to have the bill go over, and I think that now we are in the clear to have the bill passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1691) for the relief of First, Second, and Third National Steamship Cos., which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I should like to ask the distinguished Senator from New Jersey if he talked with the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. SMITH. I did not know the Senator from Minnesota had an objection.

Mr. WHERRY. It may be that I have the wrong Senator in mind. Perhaps it was the Senator from Vermont [Mr. AIKEN].

Mr. SMITH. The Senator from Vermont now assures me that there is no objection to consideration of the bill by any Senator who made objection at the time it was first called on the calendar. I have conferred with every Senator who I was told by my aide had objected. They have withdrawn their objections.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The committee amendment will be stated.

The amendment was, on page 2, in line 14, after the words "Fleet Corporation," to strike out "and (b) an amount on account of interest equal to the interest at the rate of 6 percent per annum upon the aforesaid sum from January 5, 1921. to the date of payment of the aforesaid sum; and (c) an amount on account of interest equal to the interest at the rate of 6 percent per annum upon the sum of $250,000 from January 5, 1921, to October 7, 1935, this being the date on which this sum was returned to the companies by the United States Shipping Board Merchant Fleet Corporation, a successor of the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, jointly or severally to the First National Steamship the Second National Steamship Co., and the Third National Steamship Co., corporations organized and existing under the laws of the State of New Jersey, as the bal-ance of the refund to said companies and as reimbursement and compensation to said companies the sum total of the following amounts, namely: (a) The amount of $384,-256.26, being the balance on account of certain sums deposited by or on behalf of those companies in the year 1920 with the United States Shipping Board and/or United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation and on account of certain further sums expended by said companies for and on behalf of the United States Shipping Board and/or the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation in the year 1920 in connection with the vessels Independence, Hoxie, and Scottsburg, then owned by the United States Government and/or the United States Shipping Board and/or the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SALARIES OF DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA SCHOOL TEACHERS, ETC.

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar 1708, Senate bill 2850, for the reason that the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Ball], who had objected, has authorized me to say that he has withrawn his objection. He thought the bill was a teachers' pay raise bill, which it is not. It is simply designed to correct certain inequities which developed through the operation of the teachers' bill passed by the Congress in 1847.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (S. 2850) to amend the act entitled "An act to fix and regulate the salaries of teachers, school officials, and other employees of the Board of Education of the District of Columbia," was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That article II of title I of the act entitled "An act to fix and regulate the salaries of teachers, school officers, and other employees of the Board of Education of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes", approved July 7, 1947, be and the same hereby is amended by striking out the following words and figures:

"CLASS 13—PRINCIPALS IN ELEMENTARY SCHOOLS WITH 16 OR MORE ROOMS, AND PRINCIPALS IN AMERICANIZATION SCHOOLS

"A basic salary of $4,300 per year, with an annual increase in salary of $100 for 10 years, or until a maximum salary of $5,300 per year is reached."

and inserting in lieu thereof the following:
"CLASS 13—PRINCIPALS IN ELEMENTARY SCHOOLS AND PRINCIPALS IN AMERICANIZATION SCHOOLS

"A basic salary of $4,300 per year, with an annual increase in salary of $100 for 10 years, or until a maximum salary of $5,300 per year is reached."

SEC. 2. Paragraph (ap) of section 6 of title III of said act is hereby amended by inserting the following at the end of said paragraph: "No longevity increases for placement as provided in this paragraph shall be granted to any probationary or temporary teacher, librarian, research assistant, counselor, or instructor in the teachers colleges appointed after June 30, 1948, to group C in salary classes 1 to 8, inclusive, in article I of title I, unless credit for such increases is based upon approved teaching or other service rendered after the master's degree had been conferred upon the appointee: Provided, That this limitation on placement credit shall not apply to appointments made from current eligible lists effective on July 1, 1948."

SEC. 3. Section 6 of title III of said act is further amended by inserting at the end thereof a new paragraph to be lettered "(ar)" and to read as follows: "Every permanent and probationary teacher, librarian, research assistant, counselor, and instructor in the teachers colleges in the employ of the Board of Education on June 30, 1947, who either possessed a master's degree on June 30, 1947, or shall have received a master's degree during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1948, and whose salary during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1948, was less than $3,500, shall be entitled to receive in lieu thereof a salary of $3,000 per annum plus longevity increases for placement in group C in salary classes 1 to 8, inclusive, in article I of title I, of $100 for each year of like service in the public schools of the District of Columbia acceptable to and approved by the Board of Education, including military leave and educational leave with part pay, subsequent to probationary appointment and prior to July 1, 1947, but for not more than the fifth year of such service, to be effective as of July 1, 1947, or on the first day of the month immediately following the date on which the master's degree was conferred, whichever is later, and shall be entitled to receive annual increases thereafter in accordance with the provisions of sections 5 and 7 of this act. The provisions of this paragraph shall not operate to reduce the amount of annual compensation of any teacher, librarian, research assistant, counselor, or instructor in the teachers colleges, below the amount of annual compensation received by him during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1948."

SEC. 4. (a) Paragraph (b) of section 21 of title V of said act is hereby amended to read as follows: "After the effective date of this act, the act entitled 'An act for the retirement of the public-school teachers in the District of Columbia,' approved August 7, 1946, shall apply to permanent employees of the Board of Education whose salaries are fixed by this act, and all references in said act to the District of Columbia Teachers' Salary Act of 1945, as amended, shall be interpreted to apply to this act. Nothing in this subsection shall require the recomputation of the annuity of any person retired under the act of August 7, 1946, prior to the effective date of the act of August 7, 1946, whose annuity is computed in accordance with the provisions of that act."

(b) This section shall be effective as of July 1, 1947. SEC. 5. This act, except as otherwise pro-vided herein, shall become effective on July 1,

GEORGE BAILEY

The bill (S. 1995) for the relief of George Bailey was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to George Balley, of Indianapolis, Ind., the sum of $115.12, in full settlement of all claims against the United States for loss or damages on account of property damage and minor personal injuries to Mrs. George Bailey, sustained as a result of a collision wherein his vehicle was struck by an Army vehicle in Indianapolis, Ind., on November 30, 1945, driven by an enlisted man in the Army of the United States not acting within the scope of his office or employment: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not execeeding $1,000.

NAVAJO-HOPI INDIAN ADMINISTRATION

Mr. WATKINS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 1666, Senate bill 2686.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, shall object if we return to all the bills which have been passed over.

The PRESIDEN'T pro tempore. The Chair is at the mercy of the Senate in that respect.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I object.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Over.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold his objection for a moment?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, the present act will expire on June 30 unless some action is taken. If it does expire, we shall have a critical situation existing with respect to Alaska shipping. However, if the Senator from South Carolina wishes to object and wishes to eliminate Alaska shipping, it is perfectly all right with me.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. wonder if there is any objection to the joint resolution being placed at the foot of the calendar?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the joint resolution will go to the foot of the calendar.

AMENDMENT TO MIGRATORY BIRD HUNTING STAMP ACT OF MARCH 16,

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2482) to amend sections 2, 4, and 8 of the Migratory Bird Hunting Stamp Act of March 16, 1934, which had been reported from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce with amendments, on page 2, beginning in line 5, to strike out:

And (3) by inserting before the last period in such subsection the following proviso: "Provided, That in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior not to exceed 25 percent, at any one time, of the total of the areas acquired in accordance with the provisions of this act, may be administered primarily as wildlife management areas not subject to the prohibitions against the taking of birds, or nests or the eggs thereof, as con tained in section 10 of the Migratory Bird Conservation Act of February 18, 1929 (45 Stat. 1222; 16 U. S.-C. 715i), as amended, except that no such area shall be open to shooting when the population of birds frequenting such areas or in the migrations utilizing such areas is on a decline and no newly acquired or newly established area shall be open to shooting until the same has been fully developed as a management area, refuge, reservation, or breeding

On pages 2 and 3, to strike out sections 4 and 5, as follows:

SEC. 4. Section 8 of said act is amended by inserting before the period at the end thereof a comma and the following: "and he may cooperate with the appropriate officials and agencies of any country which is a party to a treaty with the United States for the protection of migratory birds in the develop-ment and protection of such birds and their habitat, in such manner as he may deem advisable, including but not limited to the grant of funds to carry out such cooperative efforts."

SEC. 5. Section 5 of the Migratory Bird Conservation Act of February 18, 1929, as amended, is further amended by inserting the words "wildlife management and" immediately before the words "inviolate sanctuaries for migratory birds" as they appear therein.

So as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 2 of the Migratory Bird Hunting Stamp Act of March 16, 1934 (48 Stat. 451; 16 U. S. C. 718b), as amended, is further amended by striking the figure "$1" as it appears therein and inserting in lieu thereof the figure "$2."

SEC. 2. Subsection (a) of section 4 of said act is amended (1) by deleting the words "Not less than 90 percent shall be available", and (2) by inserting the words "wildlife management and," immediately before the words "inviolate migratory-bird sanctuaries" as they appear therein.

That the laws requiring retirement of Regular Army and Regular Air Force officers because of age shall not apply to officers of the Regular Army or Regular Air Force appointed in the grade of General of the Army pursuant to the act of March 23, 1946 (60 Stat. 59). The President may, in his discretion, upon the request of the officer concerned, restore to the active list of the Regular Army or Regular Air Force any officer of the Regular Army or Regular Air Force on the retired list who was appointed in the grade of General of the Army pursuant to the act of March 23, 1946 (60 Stat. 59). Officers appointed in the grade of General of the Army pursuant to the act of March 23, 1946 (60 Stat. 59), shall not be counted within the limited number of officers authorized to be serving on active duty in grades above lieutenant general as provided in section 504 of the Officer Personnel Act of 1947 (Public Law 381, 80th Cong.) unless they be serving as Chief of Staff or in command of any territorial or tactical subdivision of the Army or the Air Force.

Sec. 2. In addition to the number of officers authorized to serve after July 1, 1948, on the active list in the grade of General in the Army and Admiral in the Navy pursuant to sections 504 and 413 of the Officer Personnel Act of 1947, officers now on the active list of the Army in the grade of general whose dates of rank in such grade are between March 8, 1945, and April 15, 1945, inclusive, and of the Navy in the grade of admiral whose dates of rank in such grade are prior to April 4, 1945, may, at the discretion of the President, be continued in such grades until July 1, 1950, unless sooner retired and the total number of officers authorized by these sections to have the grade, rank, title, pay, and allowances of vice admiral or admiral and lieutenant general or general, is temporarily increased accordingly: Provided, That the provisions of this section in no way affect the status of the officer who may e serving as Chief of Staff in the Army on the effective date of this act.

INSTRUCTION AT NAVAL ACADEMY OF CERTAIN PERSONS FROM THE PHILIP-

The bill (H. R. 6698) to authorize the course of instruction at the United States Naval Academy to be given to not exceeding four persons at a time from the Republic of the Philippines, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, apparently the call of the calendar has been concluded. I should like very much if such an order could be entered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. call of the calendar has been concluded: and, for the record, the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business.

EXTENSION OF TERMS OF MEMBERS OF ATOMIC ENERGY COMMISSION

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 2589) to provide for extension of the terms of office of the present members of the Atomic Energy Commission.

OCEAN TRANSPORTATION TO ALASKA

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar 1817, Senate Joint Resolution 219.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, I shall have to object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from South Carolina objects.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, I have been requested to object until the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Langer] is back on the floor of the Senate.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, the call of the calendar has been concluded, and I think I shall make a motion that the Senate proceed to the consideration of this bill.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, is such motion in order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion is not in order under the unanimous-consent agreement

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, will not the Senator from South Carolina reserve his objection?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. An objection has been made and not withdrawn. Is there any other bill any Senator wishes to have the Senate return to?

DEVELOPMENT OF CIVIL TRANSPORT AIRCRAFT

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. President, I do not wish to have the Senate return to the consideration of the bill, but at the time Calendar No. 1507, Senate bill 2644, was called, it went to the foot of the calendar, and I now ask that I may be permitted to speak 5 minutes regarding the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator is entirely correct in his statement. The Senator asked that the bill be passed to the foot of the calendar, and the Senator from Maine is now recognized for 5 minutes.
Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. President, this is a measure reported as a result of the studies of the Joint Congressional Aviation Policy Board. The bill has been on the Calendar for some time, and there are at least one or two Senators who have some question regarding it, so that I shall not ask for its further consideration at this time. I did wish, however, to explain its purpose to the Senate, with the earnest hope that before the Senate recesses or adjourns there might be opportunity for its consideration.

Mr. President, under the present procedure the development of new types of transport aircraft is utterly impossible so far as private agencies are concerned. At the close of the war, with the optimism which prevailed, certain airplane manufacturing companies and air lines went forward, at an expense of 25 to 40 million dollars, with the development of the so-called prototype plane. They literally lost their shirt. The Govern-ment lost its shirt, because the Government was subsidizing the air lines.

It became perfectly evident to those studying this problem that there would be no further development of this type of aircraft unless some form of government development were undertaken, and what is provided in this bill seemed the most practical way.

I may point out that our English friends are now developing an 8-engine jet-type transport aircraft, presum-ably with our funds, which, if successful, will supersede all current aircraft in overseas work, and long-range craft.

Nothing comparable has been or can be undertaken by any private agencies in this country, because of the expense involved, and the utter hopelessness of coming out even. They could go for-ward and simply increase their demands upon the Government through the means of the existing postal subsidy, but they fully concur with the representatives of Congress that such a course would not be wise.

Therefore, Mr. President, this bill was developed, with the full cooperation of all Government agencies concerned and of all private agencies concerned, as the only practical means of proceeding. At the present time the Export-Import Bank has under consideration, and I understand possible commitment, a loan of $30,000,000 to the BOAC, or the British Overseas Airlines, for the purchase of 25 Constellations, which will exceed those possessed by any American company, and enable them literally to sweep the skies in this latest type of transport. Meanwhile they are evolving

I am not quarreling with this procedure, although I think it is extremely unfortunate, but I am saying that if the progress of American aviation in this field, both for military and civilian transport, is not to be halted, something must be done. Under the proposal, the prototype will be developed by the Government, and as far as further developments are concerned, it is anticipated that several thousand of these planes would be purchased by private industry, would be used in private industry, and would be instantly available in the event of any national emergency.

This is why it seems so wise that we should proceed in the way suggested, and I hope that before the next 24 hours are passed, we may get an opportunity for the consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Senator is not asking to have the bill taken up now?

Mr. BREWSTER. I am not. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will go over.

CLOTURE

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, am I entitled to 5 minutes under the rule? The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is nothing before the Senate at the moment.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Am I entitled to time on the bill of the Senator from Maine?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Yes. The Chair recognizes the Senator from California

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, shall take this 5 minutes of the Senate's time because it may be the last time for some hours I shall have opportunity to discuss the matter. At least according to the public press, it has been widely proclaimed or advertised that the Senate is to have the public's business blocked by a form of filibuster which in turn would hold up vital national-defense legislation.

I merely wish to point out to the Senate that very early this year, and last year, as a matter of fact, I introduced a proposed change of the Senate rules so that the Senate would be able to guard itself to a reasonable degree against a filibuster of the kind threatened. That resolution was not reported out of the Rules Committee, but a more moderate resolution was, one which had been submitted by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Saltonstall], which left the cloture rule as it is today, except that it provided that it might be applied to motions as well as measures.

Because neither of those measures has been acted upon, the Senate today finds itself in such a position that not even by a two-thirds vote can it apply cloture against a filibuster, unless it is a filibuster on a bill, and not merely on a motion.

It seems to me that in the closing days of a session of the Congress, when representative government itself is on trial, this power to block vital legislation of interest to the national defense, to completely obstruct the legislative processes of government, is too much power for any responsible person to want, and far too much power for any irresponsible person to have.

I certainly hope that at the earliest opportunity in the next meeting of the Senate, either later this year or at the beginning of the Eighty-first Congress, the Senate of the United States will proceed to amend its rules so that we will not be subject to this type of a situation. NAVAJO-HOPI INDIAN ADMINISTRATION

Mr. WATKINS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate return to Calendar No. 1666, Senate bill 2686, for further consideration. I understand the Senator who objected no longer objects and is willing to have the measure considered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Utah asks unanimous consent that the Senate return to the consideration of Calendar No. 1666, which the clerk will again state by title.

A bill (S. 2686) to establish the Navajo-Hopi Indian Administration, to provide for the rehabilitation of the Navajo and Hopi Indian Tribes, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs with the following amendments:

So as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That this act may be cited as the "Navajo-Hopi Indian Admin-istration Act."

DECLARATION OF POLICY

SEC. 2. The Congress recognizes the peculiar problems of the Navajo and Hopi Indians, growing out of social, political, and geographic conditions which make the planning and development of a program of rehabilitation for these tribes separate and distinct from that of any other Indians. Recognizing further that the reservations of these Indians have insufficient resources to adequately support more than approximateadequately support more than approximate-ly half of their population, it is hereby de-clared to be the policy of the Congress to bring about the assimilation of the Navajo and Hopi Indians into the general popula-tion under conditions which will permit the termination of Federal administration of their affairs at the earliest practicable date. To that end, and in order to carry out existing treatles with these Indians and to fully assure the recognition of their rights under the treaties, the provisions of this act are enacted.

ESTABLISHMENT OF NAVAJO-HOPI ADMINISTRATION

SEC. 3. (a) There is hereby established in the Department of the Interior as agency to be known as the Navajo-Hopi Indian Administration (hereinafter referred to as the "Administration") at the head of which shall be an Administrator who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and shall receive a salary at the rate of $12,000 a year. The Administration shall be separate and apart from the Bureau of Indian Affairs and the Commission of Indian Affairs and shall exercise its powers and duties under the direct supervision of the Secretary of the Interior. The principal office of the Administrator shall be on the Navajo Indian Reservation.

(b) The Administrator may, in accordance with the civil-service laws, appoint in the Administration and in accordance with the Classification Act of 1923 fix the compensation of, a deputy administrator and such other officers and employees as may be necessary to carry out the functions vested in the Administration, but so far as he deems it advisable may obtain personnel for that purpose by transfer from the Bureau of Indian Affairs of personnel in excess of the needs of that Bureau in the light of the transfer of functions to the Administration under the provisions of this act.

TRANSFER OF POWERS, DUTIES, AND FUNCTIONS TO THE ADMINISTRATION

SEC. 4. (a) Except as otherwise provided in this Act, all powers, duties, and functions of the Bureau of Indian Affairs and the Commissioner of Indian Affairs with respect to the administration of laws relating to Indians are, so far as they relate to the Navajo and Hopi Indians, transferred to and shall be exercised by or under the direction of the Administration and the Administrator.

(b) All records and property (including office equipment) of the Bureau of Indian Affairs and all personnel used primarily in the exercise of such powers, duties, and functions are hereby transferred to the Ad-ministration for use in the exercise of such powers, duties, and functions.

(c) The unexpended balances of appropriations, allocations, or other funds available for use in the exercise of such powers, duties, and functions are hereby made available to the Administration for such purpose.

TRANSFER OF HEALTH ACTIVITIES TO THE PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

SEC. 5. (a) All powers, duties, and functions, of the Secretary of the Interior, the Office of Indian Affairs, and the Commissioner of Indian Affairs relating to the conservation and improvement of the health, including sanitation, of the Navajo and Hopi Indians and to the maintenance and operation of hospitals, clinics, other medical relief activities, and preventive programs on the Navajo and Hopi Indian Reservations are hereby transferred to and shall be exercised by the Public Health Service and the Sur-geon General under the direction of the Federal Security Administrator.

(b) All personnel, records, and property

(including office equipment and living quarters) of the Office of Indian Affairs used primarily in the exercise of such powers, duties, and functions are hereby transferred to the Public Health Service for use in the exercise of such powers, duties, and func-

(c) All unexpended balances of appropriations, allocations, or other funds available for use by the Office of Indian Affairs in the exercise of such powers, duties, and functions are hereby made available to the Public Health Service for such purpose.

PROGRAM FOR REHABILITATION OF NAVAJO AND HOPI INDIANS

SEC. 6. The Administrator shall at the earliest practicable date prepare and submit to the Joint Committee hereinafter provided for a program for the rehabilitation of the Navajo and Hopi Indians in accordance with the policies and purposes of this act. In order to carry out that purpose, he shall proceed immediately to make surveys of existing educational, economic, and welfare facilities, highways, and water supply, and submit a report and recommendations for a long term economic, industrial, and cultural program of rehabilitation on or off the Navajo-Hopi Indian Reservations indicating the possibility of State participation in the program.

EDUCATION

SEC. 7. The Congress recognizes that education is one of the most important and diffi-cult aspects of the Navajo-Hopi problems. Pending the development of a general re-habilitation program, the Secretary of the Interior and the Administrator shall utilize to the fullest extent the provisions of existing law for the purpose of improving the educational opportunities of the Navajo-Hopi Indians and in addition thereto the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to enter into contracts with any State for the construction, either on or off the Navajo-Hopi Reservation, of additional school buildings and the furnishing of additional school facilities for the development of a suitable program for child and adult education and onthe-job training. The Secretary of the Interior shall have full authority to enter into arrangements with any such State in order to bring any educational facilities so author-ized within the State educational systems, so far as that may be practicable.

ORDERS, RULES, AND REGULATIONS

SEC. 8. All orders, rules, and regulations of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs relating to the powers, duties, and functions transferred under this act which are in effect on the date of transfer are hereby continued in effect until modified, superseded, or rescinded by the agencies to which such transfers are made.

JOINT CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE

SEC. 9. (a) There is hereby established a joint congressional committee to be known as the Joint Committee on Navajo-Hopi Indian Administration (hereinafter referred to as the "committee"), to be composed of two members of the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs of the Senate to be appointed by the chairman thereof, and two members of the Committee on Public Lands of the House of Representatives to be appointed by the chairman thereof. A vacancy in the membership of the committee shall be filled in the same manner as the original selection. The committee shall elect a chairman from among its members.

(b) It shall be the function of the committee to make a continuous study of the programs for the administration and rehabilitation of the Navajo and Hopi Indians, and to review the progress achieved in the execution of such programs. Upon request the committee shall aid the several standing committees of the Congress having legislative jurisdiction over any part of such programs, and shall make a report to the Senate and the House of Representatives, from time to time, concerning the results of its studies, together with such recommendations as it may deem desirable. The Administrator, at request of the committee, shall consult with the committee from time to time with respect to his activities under this act.

(c) The committee, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, is authorized to hold such hearings, to sit and act at such times and places, to require by subpena or otherwise the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such books, papers, and documents, to administer such oaths, to take such testimony, to procure such printing and binding, and to make such expenditures as it deems advisable. The cost of stenographic services to report such hearings shall not be in excess of 25 cents per hundred words. The provisions of sections 102 to 104, inclusive, of the Revised Statutes, shall apply in case of any failure of any witness to comply with any subpena or to testify when summoned under authority of this subsection.

(d) The committee is authorized to appoint and, without regard to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, fix the compensation of such experts, consultants, technicians, and organizations thereof, and clerical and stenographic assistants as it deems necessary and advisable.

(e) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary carry out the provisions of this section, to be disbursed by the Secretary of the Senate on vouchers signed by the chairman.

APPROPRIATIONS

SEC. 10. (a) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out any program for the rehabilitation of the Navajo and Hopi Indians developed under the provisions of this act or under other law, including the sum of $25,000,000 for surveys and for the immediate development of an educational program.

(b) There is also hereby authorized to be appropriated $250,000 per annum for the re-lief of the dependent children, the blind, sick, and disabled among the Navajo and Hopi Indians who are needy.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMENDMENT OF TRADING WITH THE ENEMY ACT

Mr. COOPER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate return to the consideration of Calender 1802, House bill 4044, to which the Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART] objected.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, I withdraw my objection, since the bill has been explained to me by the Senator from Kentucky.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Kentucky asks unanimous consent that the Senate return to the consideration of Calendar No. 1802, House bill 4044, which the clerk will state by title.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (H. R. 4044) to amend the Trading With the Enemy Act.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause, and to insert the following:

SHORT TITLE

SECTION 1. This act may be cited as the "War Claims Act of 1948."

WAR CLAIMS COMMISSION

SEC. 2. (a) There is hereby established a commission to be known as the War Claims Commission (hereinafter referred to as the "Commission") and to be composed of three persons to be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. At least two of the members of the Commission shall be persons who have been admitted to the bar of the highest court of any State, Territory, or the District of Co-lumbia. The members of the Commission shall receive compensation at the rate of $12,000 a year. The terms of office of the members of the Commission shall expire at the time fixed in subsection (d) for the winding up of the affairs of the Commission.

(b) The Commission may, in accordance with the provisions of the civil-service laws and the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, appoint and fix the compensation of such officers, attorneys, and employees, and may make such expenditures, as may be neces-sary to carry out its functions. Officers and employees of any other department or agency of the Government may, with the consent of the head of such department or agency, be assigned to assist the Commission in carry-ing out its functions. The Commission may, with the consent of the head of any other department or agency of the Government, utilize the facilities and services of such department or agency in carrying out the functions of the Commission.

The Commission may prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary to enable it to carry out its functions, and may delegate functions to any member, officer, or employee of the Commission. The Commission shall give public notice of the time when, and the limit of time within which, claims may be filed, which notice shall be published in the Federal Register. The limit of time within which claims may be filed with the Commission shall in no event be later than 2 years after the date of enactment of this act.

(d) The Commission thall wind up its affairs at the earliest practicable time after the expiration of the time for filing claims, but in no event later than 3 years after the expiration of such time.

JURISDICTION OF COMMISSION

SEC. 3. The Commission shall have jurisdiction to receive and adjudicate according to law claims as hereinafter provided.

EMPLOYEES OF CONTRACTORS

SEC. 4. (a) The Commission is authorized to receive, adjudicate according to law, and provide for the payment of any claim filed by any person specified in section 101 (a) of the act entitled "An act to provide benefits for the injury, disability, death, or enemy detention of employees of contractors with the United States, and for other purposes," approved December 2, 1942, as amended, or by the legal representative of any such per-son who may have died, for the amount by which (1) the total sum which would have been payable to such person by his employer (not including any payments for overtime), if such person's contract of employment had been in effect and he had been paid under it for the entire period during which he was entitled to receive benefits under section 101 (b) of such act, exceeds (2) the entire amount creditable to such person's account for such period under the provisions of such section plus any amounts paid to such person by such employer for such period or recovered by such person in any legal action against such employer based upon such person's right against such employer for such period under the contract of employment, including payments in settlement of the liability of the employer arising under or out of such contract. No claim shall be allowed to any person under the provisions of this section unless such person executes a full release to the employer and to the United States in re-spect to the liability of the employer arising under or out of the contract of employment, except liability for workmen's compensation benefits under the act of August 16, 1941, as amended (42 U. S. C. 1651 and the following), or detention of other benefits paid under the act of December 2, 1942, as amended (42 U.S. C. 1751 and the following). Any claim allowed under the provisions of this section shall be certified by the Commission to the Secretary of the Treasury for payment out of the War Claims Fund established by section 13 of this act.

(b) (1) The Secretary of State is hereby authorized and directed to cancel any obligation to the United States of any person specified in section 101 (a) of such act of December 2, 1942, to pay any sum which may have been advanced to or on behalf of any such person by the Department of State for the purpose of paying the costs of food and medical services furnished to such person during his period of internment by the Imperial Japanese Government or for the purpose of paying transportation or other expenses of repatriation.

(2) The Commission is authorized to receive, adjudicate according to law, and provide for the payment of any claim filed by any person specified in section 101 (a) of such act of December 2, 1942, for the repayment of any sum which may have been paid by such person to the Department of State in settlement of any obligation of the type referred to in paragraph (1) of this subsection. Any claim allowed under the provisions of this paragraph shall be certified by the Commission to the Secretary of the Treasury for payment out of the War Claims Fund estab-this paragraph shall be certified by the Companission to the Secretary of the Treasury for payment out of the War Claims Fund established by section 13 of this act.

(c) Section 102 (a) of the act entitled "An act to provide benefits for the injury, disability, death, or enemy detention of employees of contractors with the United States, and for other purposes," approved December 2, 1942, as amended, is hereby amended by striking out the proviso in such subsection and by substituting the following: "Provided, That the total compensation payable under this title for injury or death shall in no event exceed the limitations upon compensation as fixed in section 14 (m) of such act as such section may from time to time be amended except that the total compensation shall not be less than that provided for in the original enactment of this act: Provided further, That any amendment to such act, the effect of which is to increase the amount of benefits payable for injury or death, shall be applied in the administration of this section as if the amendment had been in effect at the time of the particular injury or death and the compensation (except funeral and burial expenses) in any case previously determined shall be adjusted accordingly in respect to the beneficiary entitled thereto under the act."

INTERNEES

SEC. 5. (a) As used in this section, the term "civilian American citizen" means any person who, being then a citizen of the United States, was captured by the Imperial Japanese Government on or after December 7, 1941, at Midway, Guam, Wake Island, the Philippine Islands, or any Territory or possession of the United States attacked or invaded by such Government, or while in transit to or from any such place, or who went into hiding at any such place in order to avoid capture or internment by such Government; except (1) a person who at any time volun-tarily gave aid to, collaborated with, or in any manner served such Government, or (2) a person who at the time of his capture or entrance into hiding was (A) a person within the purview of the act entitled "An act to provide compensation for employees of the United States suffering injuries while in the performance of their duties, and for other purposes," approved September 7, 1916, as purposes, approved september 7, 1916, as amended, and as extended; or (B) a person within the purview of the act entitled "An act to provide benefits for the injury, disability, death, or enemy detention of employees of contractors with the United States, and for other purposes," approved December 2, 1942, as amended; or (C) a person within the purview of the Missing Persons Act, as amended; or (D) a regularly appointed, enrolled, enlisted, or inducted member of any military or naval force.

(b) The Commission is authorized to re-

(b) The Commission is authorized to receive, adjudicate according to law, and provide for the payment of any claim filed by, or on behalf of, any civilian American citizen for detention benefits for any period of time subsequent to December 6, 1941, during which he was held by the Imperial Japanese Government as a prisoner, internee, hostage, or in any other capacity, or remained in hiding to avoid being captured or interned by such Imperial Japanese Government.

(c) The detention benefit allowed to any person under the provisions of subsection (b) shall be at the rate of $50 for each calendar month during which such person was at least 18 years of age and at the rate of $20 per month for each calendar month during which such person was less than 18 years of age.

(d) The detention benefits allowed under subsection (b) shall be allowed to the person entitled thereto, or, in the event of his death, only to the following persons:
(1) Widow or dependent husband if there

(1) Widow or dependent husband if there is no child or children of the deceased;

(2) Widow or dependent husband and child or children of the deceased, one-half to the widow or dependent husband and the other half to the child or children in equal shares; and

(3) Child or children of the deceased (in equal shares) if there is no widow or dependent husband.

(e) Any claim allowed under the provisions of subsection (b) shall be certified to the Secretary of the Treasury for payment out of the War Claims Fund established by section 13 of this act, and shall be payable by the Secretary of the Treasury to the person entitled thereto or to his legal or natural guardian if he has one.

(1) (1) Except as otherwise provided in this subsection, the provisions of titles I and II of the act entitled "An act to provide benefits for the injury, disability, death, or enemy detention of employees of contractors with the United States, and for other purposes," approved December 2, 1942, as amended, are extended and shall apply with respect to the injury, disability, or death resulting from injury of a civilian American citizen occurring while he was held by or in hiding from the Imperial Japanese Government, to the same extent as if such civilian American citizen were an employee within the purview of such act of December 2, 1942, as amended.

(2) For the purpose of determining the benefits extended and made applicable by paragraph (1)-

(A) the average weekly wage of any such civilian American citizen, whether employed, self-employed, or not employed, shall be deemed to have been $37.50.

(B) the provisions of such act shall be applicable whether or not any such civilian

American citizen was employed;

(C) notice of injury or death shall not be required; and limitation provisions with respect to the filing of claims for injury, disability, or death shall not begin to run until the date of enactment of this section; and

(D) the monthly compensation in cases involving partial disability shall be determined by the percentage the degree of partial disability bears to total disability and shall not be determined with respect to the extent of loss of wage earning capacity.

(3) The following provisions of such act

(3) The following provisions of such act of December 2, 1942, as amended, shall not apply in the case of such civilian American citizens: Section 101 (b), section 104, and section 105.

(4) Rights or benefits which, under this subsection, are to be determined with reference to other provisions of law shall be determined with reference to such provisions of law as in force on January 3, 1948.

(5) The money benefit for disability or death shall be paid only to the person entitled thereto, or to his legal or natural guardian if he has one, and shall not upon death of person so entitled survive for the benefit of his estate or any other person.

(6) The benefit of a minor or of an incompetent person who has no natural or legal guardian may, in the discretion of the Federal Security Administrator, be paid, in whole or in such part as he may determine for and on behalf of such minor or incompetent directly to the person or institution caring for, supporting, or having custody of such minor or incompetent.

custody of such minor or incompetent.

(7) No person, except a widow or a child, shall be entitled to benefits for disability with respect to himself, and to death benefits on account of the death of another.

(8) If a civilian American citizen or his dependent receives or has received from the United States any payments on account of the same injury or death, or from his employer, in the form of wages, or payments in lieu of wages, or in any form of support or compensation (including workmen's compensation) in respect to the same objects, the benefits under this section shall be diminished by the amount of such payments in the following manner: (A) Benefits on account of injury or disability shall be reduced by the amount of the same injury or disability; and (B) benefits on account of death shall be reduced by the amount of payments to the injured person on account of the same indury or disability; and (B) benefits on account of death shall be reduced by the amount of payments to the dependents of the deceased civilian American citizen on account of the same death.

(9) This subsection shall take effect as of December 7, 1941, and the right of individuals to benefits shall be held to have begun to accrue as though this subsection had been in effect as of such date.

PRISONERS OF WAR

Sec. 6. (a) As used in this section, the term "prisoner of war" means any regularly appointed, enrolled, enlisted, or inducted member of the military or naval forces of the United States who was held as a prisoner of war for any period of time subsequent to December 7, 1941, by any government of any nation with which the United States has been at war subsequent to such date.

(b) The Commission is authorized to receive, adjudicate according to law, and provide for the payment of any claim filed by any prisoner of war for compensation for the violation by the enemy government by which he was held as a prisoner of war, or its agents, of its obligation to furnish him the quantity or quality of food to which he was entitled as a prisoner of war under the terms of the Geneva convention of July 27, 1929. The compensation allowed to any prisoner of war under the provisions of this subsection shall be at the rate of $1 for each day he was held as a prisoner of war on which the enemy government or its agents failed to furnish him such quantity or quality of food. Any claim allowed under the provisions of this subsection shall be certified to the Secretary of the Treasury for payment out of the War Claims Fund established by section 13 of this act.

RELIGIOUS ORGANIZATIONS

SEC. 7. The Commission is authorized to receive, adjudicate according to law, and provide for the payment of any claim filed by any religious organization functioning in the Philippine Islands and affiliated with a religious organization in the United States, or by the personnel of any such Philippine organization, for reimbursement of expenditures incurred, or for payment of the fair value of supplies used, by such organization or such personnel for the purpose of furnishing shelter, food, clothing, hospitalization, medicines and medical services, and other relief in the Philippines to members of the armed forces of the United States or to civilian American citizens (as defined in section 5) at any time subsequent to De-cember 6, 1941, and before August 15, 1945. Any claim allowed under the provisions of this section shall be certified to the Secretary of the Treasury for payment out of the War Claims Fund established by section 13 of this act.

REPORT WITH RESPECT TO PERSONAL INJURY AND PROPERTY CLAIMS

SEC. 8. (a) The Commission shall inquire into and report to the President, for submission of such report to the Congress on or before February 1, 1951, with respect to war claims arising out of World War II, other than claims which may be received and adjudicated under the preceding sections of this act, and shall present in such report its findings on—the estimated number and amount of such claims, classified by types and categories; and

(2) the extent to which such claims have been or may be satisfied under international agreements or domestic or foreign laws.

(b) The report of the Commission shall contain recommendations with respect to-categories and types of claims, if any, which should be received and considered and the legal and equitable bases therefor;

(2) the administrative method by which such claims should be considered, and any priorities or limitations which should be applicable; and

(3) any limitations which should be applied to the allowance and payment of fees in connection with such claims.

(c) The Commission shall include in such report—

(1) such other recommendations as it deems appropriate; and

(2) such proposals for legislation as it deems appropriate for carrying out the recommendations made in such report.

(d) Such report, with accompanying evidence, shall be printed as a public document when received by the Congress. (e) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to imply that the Congress will enact legislation—

(1) adopting any recommendations made under this section with respect to the consideration or payment of any type of claim: or

(2) making any moneys, including moneys remaining in the War Claims Fund after the making of payments from such fund provided for by this act, available for the payment of such claims.

REPORTS TO CONGRESS

SEC. 9. Not later than 6 months after its organization, and every 6 months thereafter, the Commission shall make a report to the Congress concerning its operations under this act.

REMUNERATION FOR SERVICES IN CONNECTION WITH CLAIMS

SEC. 10. No remuneration on account of services rendered or to be rendered to or on behalf of any claimant in connection with any claim filed with the Commission under this act shall exceed 10 percent (or such lesser percent as may be fixed by the Commission with respect to any class of claims) of the amount allowed by the Commission on account of such claims. Any agreement to the contrary shall be unlawful and void. Whoever, in the United States or elsewhere, pays or offers to pay, or promses to pay, or receives, on account of services rendered or to be rendered in connection with any such claim, any remuneration in excess of the maximum permitted by this section, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more 12 months, or both, and, if any such payment shall have been made or granted, the Commission shall take such action as may be necessary to recover the same, and, in addition thereto any such claimant shall forfeit all rights under this act.

HEARINGS WITH RESPECT TO CLAIMS

SEC. 11. The Commission shall notify all claimants of the approval or denial of their claims, and, if approved, shall notify such claimants of the amount for which such claims are approved. Any claimant whose claim is denied, or is approved for less than the full allowable amount of such claim, shall be entitled, under such regulations as the Commission may prescribe, to a hearing be-fore the Commission or its representatives with respect to such claim. Upon such hearing, the Commission may affirm, modify, or revise its former action with respect to such claim, including a denial or reduction in the amount theretofore allowed with respect to such claim. The action of the Commission in allowing or denying any claim under this act shall be final and conclusive on all questions of law and fact and not subject to review by any other official of the United States or by any court by mandamus or otherwise, and the Comptroller General is authorized and directed to allow credit in the accounts of any certifying or disbursing officer for payments in accordance with such action

AMENDMENTS TO TRADING WITH THE ENEMY ACT

SEC. 12. (a) The fourth sentence of section 34 (a) of the Trading With the Enemy Act of October 6, 1917, as amended, is amended by striking out "those of other natural persons who are and have been since the beginning of the war residents of the United States and who have not during the war been interned or paroled pursuant to the Alien Enemy Act;".

(b) The Trading With the Enemy Act of October 6, 1917, as amended, is hereby amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 39. No property or interest therein of Germany, Japan, or any national of either such country vested in or transferred to any officer or agency of the Government at any time after December 17, 1941, pursuant to the provisions of this act, shall be returned to former owners thereof or their successors in interest, and the United States shall not pay compensation for any such property or interest therein. The net proceeds remaining upon the completion of administration, liquidation, and disposition pursuant to the provisions of this act of any such property or interest therein shall be covered into the Treasury at the earliest practicable date. Nothing in this section shall be construed to repeal or otherwise affect the operation of the provisions of section 32 of this act or of the Philippine Property Act of 1946."

WAR CLAIMS FUND

SEC. 13. (a) There is hereby created on the books of the Treasury of the United States a trust fund to be known as the War Claims Fund. The War Claims Fund shall consist of all sums covered into the Treasury pursuant to the provisions of section 39 of the Trading With the Enemy Act of October 6, 1917, as amended. The moneys in such fund shall be available for expenditure only as provided in this act or as may be provided hereafter by the Congress.

(b) The Federal Security Administrator is authorized and directed to estimate and certify to the Secretary of the Treasury the total amount which will be required to pay all benefits payable as a result of the enactment of section 5 (f) of this act. The Secretary of the Treasury shall, subsequent to payment of all claims certified for payment pursuant to sections 4, 5, and 6 of this act, transfer from the War Claims Fund to the general fund of the Treasury a sum equal to the total amount so certified by the Federal Security Administrator. No benefits shall be payable as a result of the enactment of section 5 (f) of this act until such time as such sum is so transferred.

(c) The Federal Security Administrator is authorized and directed to estimate and certify to the Secretary of the Treasury the total amount which will be required to pay all additional benefits payable as a result of the enactment of section 4 (c) of this act. The Secretary of the Treasury shall transfer from the War Claims Fund to the general fund of the Treasury a sum equal to the total amount so certified by the Federal Security Administrator.

(d) The Secretary of State is authorized and directed to certify to the Secretary of the Treasury the total amount of all obligations canceled pursuant to the provisions of section 4 (b) (1) of this act. The Secretary of the Treasury shall transfer from the War Claims Fund to the general fund of the Treasury an amount equal to the total amount so certified.

(e) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the War Claims Fund, such sums as may be necessary to enable the Commission to carry out its functions under this act.

PAYMENTS TO CERTAIN MEMBERS OF RELIGIOUS ORDERS

SEC. 14. In any case in which any money is payable as a result of the enactment of this act to any person who is prevented from accepting such money by the rules, regulations, or customs of the church or the religious order or organization of which he is a member, such money shall be paid, upon the request of such person, to such church or to such religious order or organization.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

OCEAN TRANSPORTATION TO ALASKA

Mr. CAPEHART, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to return to Senate Joint Resolution 219, Calendar No. 1817.

I ask for immediate consideration of that measure.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Indiana has asked immediate consideration of Senate Resolution 219, which the clerk will state by title.

The CHIEF CLERK. A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 219) to continue until December 31, 1949, the authority of the United States Maritime Commission to make provision for certain ocean transportation service to, from, and within Alaska.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I previously objected to the measure. now withhold objection so the Senator from Indiana may make an explanation of the bill.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, all I wish to say is that the bill would extend the provisions of Public Law 12, which expires on June 30, 1948. Unless the law is extended it will, in my opinion, create chaos with respect to Alaskan shipping at a time when we ought to strengthen our Alaskan facilities rather than weaken them. The bill is primarily an extension of Public Law 12. It does not in any way change the substance of Public Law 12. It is a bill on which the committee held extensive hearings. The committee gave much thought and much time to it. It was almost the unanimous testimony of those who came before the committee that the law should be extended as provided by the bill. Such extension was recommended by the Maritime Commission and by other agencies and individuals. I cannot understand why anyone should object to it.

I am glad to yield the remainder of my time to the Senator from Washington

[Mr. CAIN].

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, following the objection which was raised to Senate Joint Resolution 219 by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. JOHNSTON], he informed me and other interested Senators that he had entered an objection in the name of the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Langer]. Because of the importance of the passage of this legislation to Alaska and to the Pacific Northwest in general, I was authorized by my colleagues to endeavor to find the Senator from North Dakota, and find him I did, in fact, in the restaurant, where he was very willing to discuss his objection. The Senator from North Dakota told me that he had been approached during the course of this morning by an attorney from the Maritime Commission who wanted the Senator from North Dakota to object to the legislation. I said, "That sounds very unlikely. It ought to be impossible, because the bill was authored more by the Maritime Commission than by anyone else." The Senator from North Dakota believed he had remembered correctly that the gentleman who had come to him was an attorney, and that the basis of the attorney's objection to the bill was that the Governor of Alaska was in opposition to the bill.

At just about that moment there appeared on my right a Mr. E. L. BARTLETT, who is the Delegate from Alaska, and I was thus able to introduce the Senator from North Dakota to the Delegate from Alaska, Mr. BARTLETT, and the Senator from North Dakota said to Mr. BARTLETT, "Are you not in opposition to the bill, as I have been told that you were?" BARTLETT said, "I was. The Governor was opposed to it. We wanted a different bill, but we would like very much to have this bill in the absence of getting everything we wanted and thought we were entitled to."

The Senator from North Dakota then asked a point-blank question of Mr. Bartlett: "Can you speak for the Governor, for I still understand that the Governor does not want this bill in any way, shape, or form?"

Mr. BARTLETT's reply, as I best remember, was, "I am not qualified to speak for the Governor of Alaska."

The Senator from North Dakota, out of his willingness and desire to be of cooperative benefit to his associates, said, "Just as soon as I can I will put through a telephone call myself to try to determine from the Governor of Alaska if it is true, as stated by this representative of the Maritime Commission, that the Governor of Alaska is in opposition to a piece of legislation which you tell me the Delegate from Alaska and the Senators from the Pacific Northwest and the Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART] and the Maritime Commission and the shippers up and down that coast have been in complete and absolute agreement on for quite a long time.

As one Senator in company and in concert with my colleague, the senior Senator from Washington [Mr. Magnuson], I know that he agrees with me, that we hope, and hope deeply, that there is no slightest vestige of truth in the assertion made to the Senator from North Dakota that the Governor of Alaska is in opposition to the willingness and desire of people in the United States to be of real service to his Territory.

I am most grateful to the Senator from North Dakota for inquiring of the Gov-

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I want to join with my colleague from Washington in this matter. I also cannot help but remark that here is a measure that affects the economy of the Pacific Northwest and Alaska. Shipping is not what we would like to have it up there, but there have been arrangements made by the Maritime Commission to continue the present agreements from June 30. The bill would extend that authority only to February 28 of next year, when the Maritime Commission's authority expires, and Congress will have to look at the whole maritime picture.

Alaskan shipping could actually become chaotic if the bill does not pass before June 30. The committee has considered the matter. We have heard testimony. The subcommittee was unanimous in its report. The Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce was unanimous in its report. The Governor of Alaska and the Delegate from Alaska presented certain amendments. Those amendments were not adopted. Now they favor the bill. They would like to have their amendments agreed to.

Mr. President, it is a fine legislative procedure when a committee makes a study of the whole situation as it affects the economy of all of the Pacific Northwest, and reports a bill, that an attorney from the Maritime Commission comes into the picture and makes a statement which would raise objection to the bill on the floor. I cannot help but make such a comment now, because passage of the bill means so much to the Pacific North-

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MAGNUSON. I yield.

Mr. CAIN. With the permission of my senior colleague, I should like to address a question in this connection to the Senator from North Dakota, because we do not want, intentionally or otherwise, to do the Maritime Commission an injustice. The Senator from North Dakota told me that he recalled specifically that the attorney who came to him this morning, though he could not recall his name, was an agent from the Maritime Commission. It is difficult for me to believe or understand that, but obviously I can believe that the Senator from North Dakota meant exactly what he said on the basis of what was said to him. I wonder if the Senator from North Dakota will take another look at his memory as to who this individual was who came to him this morning.

Mr. LANGER. I may state to the distinguished Senator from Washington that what I told him was exactly the truth. I had not heard about the bill until after the call of the calendar had begun. I was called out of the Chamber by a gentleman who said he was an attorney for the Maritime Commission and he said that the bill, in his opinion. was not a good bill for the interests of the people; that the Governor of Alaska was opposed to it, as were some other individuals. I told the Senator from Washington that I would get in touch, by telephone, with the individuals to whom the gentleman from the Maritime Commission referred.

Mr. CAIN. My question was asked in order to be fair to the Maritime Commission, because it is the Commission's bill, and it would be reprehensible for an agent of the Maritime Commission to approach the Senator from North Dakota or any other Senator with such a suggestion.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, will the Senator from Washington yield?

Mr. MAGNUSON. I suggest the Senator speak in his own time. I have only 5 minutes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator has only one-quarter of a minute remaining.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Then I suggest that the Senator from Indiana ask for the floor.

Mr. CAPEHART. The Governor of Alaska came before our committee and asked that the bill be extended for 5 years.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Instead of the temporary period provided in the bill.

Mr. CAPEHART. Yes. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The time of the Senator from Washington has expired.

The time of the Senator from Indiana has expired.

Mr. CAPEHART. I yield to the Senator from Washington.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Senator from Indiana has no further time on the bill.

Mr. CAPEHART. Do I have no time at all left? I used only a minute of my time to speak. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator spoke and yielded to the Senator from Washington, and the 5 minutes allotted to the Senator from Indiana have expired.

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, I consider that this maritime measure is important and that it should be passed. I regret that objection is made. If there is one thing the people in Alaska need, it is proper transportation. I do not know what will happen to Alaska if this bill does not pass.

Mr. CAIN. Does the Senator wish to answer that question?

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McFARLAND. I yield. Mr. MAGNUSON. I want the Senator to know that the Delegate from Alaska is seated at the rear of the Chamber. I have talked with him and with the Governor of Alaska. They both approve the bill. I hope the Senator from North Dakota will accept the word of the subcommittee of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, and of the full committee, and of the Maritime Commission, the junior Senator from Washington, and myself, rather than that of some unnamed agent from the Maritime Commission.

This is vitally important to everyone in the Pacific Northwest.

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Washington has already spoken on this joint resolution.

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, how much time have I left?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, was objection made to the joint resolution?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection was made.

DOCTORATE OF LAWS FOR SENATOR HAYDEN

McFARLAND. Mr. President, recently the degree of doctor of laws was conferred upon my esteemed and distinguished colleague the senior Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN] by the University of Arizona. Knowing that Senators will be happy to know of this honor accorded to the Senator from Arizona, I desire to place in the body of the RECORD the citation and grant of the degree, together with the remarks of John D. Lyons, Jr., dean of the Law School of the University of Arizona, in the course of his presentation of the senior Senator from Arizona at the academic cere-

I wish to add, Mr. President, that this is an honor well and amply earned by my colleague. I have now worked with him in the United States Senate for a period of 71/2 years. Our associations have been most pleasant, and I have always considered it an honor and a privilege to be his colleague. Unfailingly kind and considerate of the views of others, he is always willing to be helpful in every way possible. He is a tireless worker and a man of great ability. He is loved by all who work with him.

Mr. President, it is with pleasure that I present this citation, grant, and the statement of Dean Lyons, to be placed in the body of the RECORD as part of my remarks.

Without objection, the citation and statement were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

> UNIVERSITY OF ARIZONA Office of the President Tucson

SENATOR HAYDEN-DOCTOR OF LAWS

Specialist in legislation affecting the Na-Honored citizen tion's natural resources. Honored citizen and highly respected public official over a period embracing half a century. Devoted statesman whose distinguished public career has been dedicated to the service of the State of Arizona.

I am pleased to confer upon you the de-gree of doctor of laws, with all the rights, privileges, and honors thereunto appertaining, and as evidence of this to present you with this diploma and invest you with the hood of this degree.

CITATION OF CARL HAYDEN BY JOHN D. LYONS, JR., DEAN OF THE COLLEGE OF LAW, ON THE OCCASION OF HIS PRESENTATION FOR THE HON-ORARY DEGREE OF DOCTOR OF LAWS CONFERRED AT THE FIFTY-THIRD ANNUAL COMMENCEMENT OF THE UNIVERSITY OF ARIZONA ON MAY 26, 1948

Mr. President, it is my very great privilege to present as a candidate for the honorary degree of doctor of laws one whose long and distinguished public career has been dedicated to the service of the State of Arizona.

A native son, he was born at Hayden's Ferry, now the city of Tempe, and educated at the Tempe Normal School and Leland Stanford University. Thereafter he em-barked upon a life of public service which at the close of his present term of office will have embraced half a century, the whole period of our statehood, and a decade of Territorial history.

His fellow citizens have honored him, and honored the democratic process, by electing him successively to the offices of town coun-cilman, county treasurer, sheriff, first Member from Arizona in the United States House of Representatives, and more than a score of years ago, to the United States Senate, where he has since served, and now serves, with notable distinction.

His services to the State have been various and unsurpassed. Particularly as a specialist in legislation affecting irrigation and Federal highways he has played a major role in the reclamation of her fertile acres and in opening her scenic, climatic, and industrial treasures to new citizens and visitors from over the world.

It has been said that a man is not honored by what he receives, he is honored by what he gives. In this high sense he of whom I speak is honored indeed. For though he has received at the hands of the citizens of his State the highest public trust within their power to bestow, he has returned to them the utmost in ability, integrity, and devotion. We hall him as a wise and devoted legislator, and the very prototype of the citizen of a democracy.

Upon recommendation of the faculty of the college of law, the general faculty of the university, and the board or regents of the university and State colleges of Arizona, I present the United States Senator from Arizona, Hon. CARL HAYDEN.

HOW TO MAKE DEMOCRACY LIVE-ES-SAY CONTEST CONDUCTED BY DREW PEARSON

Mr. IVES. Mr. President, every time I rise nowadays I feel apologetic if in any way I waste the time of the Senate or abuse my privilege of free speech on this

At a time like this, when there are vital questions still to be solved and vital work still to be done. I feel that each one of us should be most considerate with regard to the exercise of the personal rights and privileges which are ours, where individual action on our part affects other Members of the Senate and also the Members of the House of Representa-

I hold in my hand eight very brief statements which are of considerable consequence. They are statements to which Members of both Houses of the Congress may well direct their attention when the opportunity to do so is available. These are the prize-winning essays in the recent contest which was conducted by Mr. Drew Pearson on the subject of how to make democracy live. I understand that more than 125,000 persons participated in this contest and that 152 prizes were awarded. These eight brief essays are well worth reading. Every one of us can obtain a real inspiration from any one of them.

The names of the winners are as fol-

Mr. President, I have spoken to the other Senators in whose States these prize winners live; and all of them-the junior Senator from California [Mr. KNOWLAND], the senior Senator from California [Mr. Downey], the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. George], the junior Senator from Georgia [Mr. Rus-SELLI, the senior Senator from Connecticut [Mr. McMahon], and the junior Senator from Connecticut [Mr. Balbwin]-join me as I make this presentation of these particular essays for printing in the RECORD. In presenting them, I again call not only the attention of the Senate, but also the attention of the House of Representatives, to the fact that they are well worth the reading by every American.

So, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have them printed in the

HOW TO MAKE DEMOCRACY LIVE

(By Russell Mitcheltree, Scarsdale, N. Y.)

We, the people, can make democracy live, by living for democracy. First, let me—this man, this woman—cherish human freedom. Then let me, by word and example, inspire others to follow democratic ways.

As a citizen of my community, let me respect individual worth regardless of race, creed, color, position. Let me grant each person all his rights—religious, political, social, economic. Let me protect these rights—if need be, with my blood. Working for others, let me work well. Employing others, let me pay well. Applying good will at democracy's roots, I shall nourish life, liberty, happiness

As a citizen of my country, let me faithfully practice my citizenship, not lose de-mocracy by default. Let me advance these principles of welfare: That government is not a master, but an ever-progressing ally of man in his quest of food, health, home, education, security. That good public servants should be supported and unfit be replaced. That minorities must be heeded, lest unchecked power turn tyrant. That I am personally responsible for making democracy succeed, on election day and every day.

As a citizen of the world, let me help my country to help mankind. Untainted by selfish interest, let us aid any nation threatened or exploited. Being rich in God's plenty, let us feed the hungry. Being strong, let us lead earth's peoples to prosperity and peace.

Thus doing our duty at home and abroad. with justice, wisdom, courage, kindness, we shall win men's hearts and make democracy

HOW TO MAKE DEMOCRACY LIVE

(By Mrs. Martha Pitman, San Jose, Calif.)

I can help make democracy live because the best citizen is not the one who knows most but the one who cares most. Being a mother, I can teach my children to care about people, about those values essential to a democracy.

If I show my child that his rights and ossessions are respected, if I teach him to take his turn and do his share, if I make him feel loved and valued for himself, I'll be teaching him to believe in the inalienable rights of all people.

I will not train my child in blind obedience born of fear, for that makes dictators possible. I will expect only the conformity suitable to his age. I will not demand acceptance of all my opinions. I will tolerate the stress and strain of disagreement in order to encourage that free expression of ideas which enriches group life, and in order to further the self-discipline required for democratic living. My child can become truly democratic only by practicing that way of life.

By my example I will seek to show my child that democracy is worth all that it costs. I will obey the laws, even those I dislike. I will pay my taxes without evasion. I will be fair to people who differ from me in race, religion, or political philosophy. I will study my Government in order to vote intelligently. I will take time to serve my community.

If we parents care enough, we can make democracy live.

HOW TO MAKE DEMOCRACY LIVE

(By Perry LeFevre, Orangeburg, N. Y.)

Democracy is a way of life for the individual before it can be truly embodied in a government. Its root idea is the Golden Rule "Do unto others as ye would have them do unto you." To the degree that each of us embodies this principle in his own life to that degree we can make democracy live. It is our decision and our responsibility. In is our decision and our responsibility. In practice it will come to something like this:

Because I want to be treated as an individ-ual, not as a member of a particular race or class, I will treat others as individuals.

Because I want to be free to worship, to speak and write, to choose my own job, to have a voice in the government of my com-munity and Nation, and to criticize that government, I will strive that others may have that freedom.

Because I want to have my rights and liberties protected by law against those who would deny them to me I will work that others may have this same protection.

Because I want a fair chance in getting an education and in developing my talents I will try to help others to have this opportunity.

Because I want others to recognize my right to follow the dictates of my conscience I will recognize that right for them.

Because I want others to share the respon-sibility for maintaining these freedoms I, too, will work, strive, and give in order to do my part to make democracy live.

HOW TO MAKE DEMOCRACY LIVE

(By Leonard M. Skinner, Washington, D. C.)

To make democracy live I must begin with myself. Democracy can live only as cooperative individuals work together to give it life. My coworkers must be men of good will, judged by merit alone, not by creed, race, or nationality. I must develop an awareness of and respect for their opinions.

My home must be a democratic one. Each of its members learns to share fairly its responsibilities as well as its privileges. Hus-band, wife, and children must have time and opportunity to work with democratic organization within the community. Our home should be provided with current reading material dealing with events and issues of the day. At least a part of our radio listening time should be tuned to public affairs discussions.

My city and county governments, so little understood and so neglected, must be purified and strengthened by the zeal of its citizens for a good administration. Let no local election occur without our knowledge of candidates' records and the issues at stake. Then let us have the energy and intelligence to actually vote our convictions and encourage others to do likewise.

My interest in democracy, however, must not be narrow and provincial. My State, my Nation, and my United Nations need my interest and support. I must study the issues and write them my views, protest what I believe to be wrong, commend what I believe to be right.

I can hope, work, and pray for a revital-ized democracy, and I can make it begin with myself.

HOW TO MAKE DEMOCRACY LIVE

(By Rev. Alfred G. Fisk, San Francisco, Calif.)

Democracy, like good music, does not need argument, it needs rendition. The best way to make democracy live, is to live it. People are too much concerned about democratic rights; too little about democratic responsibilities. But the rights imply duties, and become empty unless practiced. De-mocracy is not a fact; it is a task. To make it live, we must:

1. Vote in every election—using our best intelligence, studying propositions and

2. Exercise our right of petition, letting our legislators and officers of Government know our convictions.

3. Promote community meetings for democratic discussion of civic and world problems.

4. Work through "good government" leagues-exercising eternal vigilance that political performance match profession.

5. Do an honest day's work. Parasites or shirkers fail in their responsibility to a democratic society.

6. Treat every man in personal relationships as an equal—without prejudice and without exploitation.

7. Finally, democracy—like peace—is in-divisible. The world cannot long continue half democratic and half totalitarian. To make democracy live here at home, our Nation and we as individuals must use our influence that it live throughout the world.

Democracy begins with the individual; it ends with the world. Each of us, you and I, your next-door neighbor and mine, must practice democracy. We must build little islands of functioning democratic life. The islands will grow and touch other islands, merging into greater units, becoming continents, becoming finally the world. If you and I, the last and least citizen, live democracy day in and day out, democracy will live.

SPECIAL VETERAN'S AWARD HOW TO MAKE DEMOCRACY LIVE

(By Robert P. Cort, Greenwich, Conn.)

When a man's car breaks down, he doesn't stand around and talk or indulge in wishful thinking. He fixes it.

When a man's democracy is not functioning as it should, mere talk and wishful thinking will have no more effect than it would have on his car. He must do something about And since democracy is a joint enterprise, he must arouse his fellow citizens to the urgency of the particular repair job that needs

To keep our democracy in good working re pair—a dynamic, satisfying way of life—every citizen must first of all keep informed on all government developments, local, State, national, international. He must carefully weigh this information with no prejudice in mind other than the goal of "the greatest good of the greatest number."

Finally, he must go into action. By example and precept, he must strive to overcome that deadly enemy of democracy—the spirit of "let George do it."

There are many ways of going into action. He must take his voting privilege seriously and, if need be, assist others to register and vote. Having voted, he must feel responsi-bility for keeping his elected administrators lawmakers informed of his considered opinions. He should contribute, in his own way, to public weal, whether it be through schools, scouts, philanthropies, forums, and the like; or even running for office to expose an intrenched gang of incompetents.

In short, the way to make democracy work is to work at it.

SPECIAL COLLEGE STUDENT AWARD HOW TO MAKE DEMOCRACY LIVE

(By Walter H. Mitchell, University of Georgia, Athens, Ga.)

Democracy is fundamentally a system of human relations. It is a way of life—a way in which people treat and deal with each other:

It means recognition of the fact that we can expect only as much freedom as we are willing to grant. It means insisting that the other fellow gets his rights just as you get yours. The loss of even one human right endangers all.

Democracy means rule of the majority but due regard for minority opinion. It means freedom of expression, for if decisions are to be based upon majority opinions the people must know and analyze differing opinions.

For every right there is always a corresponding duty. The right of free speech demands respect for the rights of others. It carries a responsibility for speaking the truth. The precious right to vote carries with it the duty to vote, and to vote intelligently. It is the duty of the individual to keep himself informed because the degree of good government we get depends upon the amount of information we have on which to base our decisions. It is our duty to take a constructively critical attitude toward democracy. Our greatest danger lies in complacency.

With belief in the dignity and worth of the individual and with faith in the ability of men to govern themselves, we, the people, can surely make democracy live.

SPECIAL HIGH-SCHOOL AWARD HOW TO MAKE DEMOCRACY LIVE (By Carol Breckenridge, Redwood City, Calif.)

As I read of the struggles to establish our form of government, I resolve to do my best to preserve it. I shall try never to become too complacent. Active, intelligent voting is one of the fundamental duties of all who want to make democracy live. An informed interest should govern my choice of candidates for public office. After election I should write my Congressman in order to let him know how I wish to be represented.

Quite apart from this active participation in making democracy live is another phase of obligation, more subtle, but equally important. It is building up within myself a deeper appreciation of the Bill of Rights and a willingness to make myself worthy of my Government. No system of representa-tive government can be better than the people whom it represents. Therefore, I shall resolve to use my glorious freedom of speech to express only those ideas which will help all mankind, and never abuse it by using words to gain selfish or unworthy aims.

Each individual thinks often of his privileges, but now is the time to think often of one's duties and responsibilities in maintaining our Government. No one is immune to the process of making our democracy live.

MASSMAN CONSTRUCTION CO .- CONFER-ENCE REPORT

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, I submit a conference report on House bill 2192, for the relief of the Massman Construction Co., and I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The conference report will be read.

The conference report was read, as

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 2192) for the relief of Massman Construction Company, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same.

ALEXANDER WILEY. FORREST C. DONNELL, Managers on the Part of the Senate. JOHN JENNINGS, Jr., ALBERT L. REEVES, Jr., FADJO CRAVENS, Managers on the Part of the House.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. there objection to the immediate consideration of the conference report?

There being no objection, the report was considered and agreed to.

PROMOTION OF NATIONAL DEFENSE-INCREASE IN PERSONNEL OF ARMED

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President. I ask that the message from the House of Representatives on Senate bill 2655 be again laid before the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair again lays before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives insisting upon its amendments to the bill (S. 2655) to provide for the common defense by increasing the strength of the armed forces of the United States. including the reserve components thereof, and for other purposes, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, I move that the Senate disagree to the amendments of the House, agree to the request of the House for a conference, and that the conferees on the part of the Senate be the following: The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. GURNEY], the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Saltonstall], the Senator from Oregon [Mr. Morse], the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS], and the Senator from Virginia [Mr.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, I should like to speak for a moment on the motion.

In my opinion, this measure is mandatory on the Congress, because of its importance to the national defense. In my opinion, if any debate in the nature of a filibuster now takes place on this simple motion to name conferees, it is not in accord with the best customs of the Senate, the House, or the Congress. If the measure were to be debated on its merits, that would be a different question. It has been debated on its merits. Senate has spoken. If conferees are appointed and the conference recom-mendation comes back to both Houses, and there are decisions of the conferees which are not to the liking of any Member or group of Members, no matter what the size of that group, the merits of the question can again be debated. But to use a parliamentary maneuver to stop the naming of conferees is clearly outside the high ideals which the American people hold for the doings of their Con-

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GURNEY. I yield.

Mr. TOBEY. I am entirely in sympathy with the point of view of the Senator from South Dakota as he has expresed it. In this connection I point out to him the words of wisdom given us by the junior Senator from California [Mr. KNOWLAND] half an hour ago with reference to Senate rules which make such a thing possible. The Senate has made its own bed, and now it must lie in it. I think we need a few horrible examples of filibusters by one, two, three, or four men crammed down our throats to bring the Senate and the country to the realization of the crudeness, rudeness, and wickedness of the Senate rules, and the rules of Congress in general, which allow one, two, or three men to set aside and nullify the democratic processes and keep the representatives of the people from voting on these issues.

Therefore, while I am in sympathy with the remarks of the Senator, we have made our bed, and now we must lie in it. If we want to rectify these things, let us take the bull by the horns and adopt adequate rules, as recommended by the Senator from California and others, and clean house. In that way we can retain the respect of the people.

[Manifestations of applause from the galleries.]

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Demonstrations in the gallery are not allowed under the rules of the Senate.

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, I hope my motion will be agreed to.

AMENDMENT OF IMMIGRATION ACT OF 1917—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. REVERCOMB. A conference report is a privileged matter; is it not? The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator is correct.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Then at this time I desire to call up the conference report on House bill 3566, which is at the desk, and to ask for its immediate considera-

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. WHERRY. The motion made by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. GURNEY] was that the Senate disagree to the amendment of the House to the draft bill, agree to the request of the House for a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate. Is not unanimous consent required to set aside that matter, for the purpose of having the Senate take up a conference report?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, unanimous consent would be required for that purpose.

Is the Senator from West Virginia requesting that the motion be laid aside. and that the conference report be taken

Mr. REVERCOMB. I ask that the conference report on House bill 3566 be taken up at this time, and that the pending motion be temporarily laid aside.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none. Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, let me ask what the conference report relates to.

Mr. REVERCOMB. It is the conference report on House bill 3566, which amends the immigration laws with respect to reports by the Attorney General upon extension of stays of aliens who are in this country under temporary permits. The conference report has been agreed to by the House of Representatives, and has just been sent to the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, let me say I am inclined to think that I shall not object to this particular request to lay aside the motion of the Senator from South Dakota and take up the conference report referred to. But I think it is only fair to point out that I am not going to sit here and have the danger of a filibuster on the motion of the Senator from South Dakota hanging over our heads and in effect placing us in a position-in fact, we actually are in such a position at the present moment, if I interpret the situation correctly-of conducting business in the Senate of the United States by way of sufferance.

We have to face the issue as to whether we are going to go ahead with the appointment of conferees on the draft bill. It is my judgment that there is nothing else that is more important today than meeting this issue, which deals with the national security of our Nation. I speak as one who as a member of the Armed Services Committee was not in complete agreement with every section of the bill as reported to the Senate from the committee; but I sought to have the bill amended in certain respects. I was successful as to some of those amendments, and unsuccessful as to others; but the majority of the Senate ruled as to the type of draft bill which the Senate wished to send to conference; and I intend to support the majority of the Senate in doing all I can to see to it that the draft bill goes to conference, and that we receive from the conference the best military manpower legislation possible, in order to meet what I consider to be a great emergency need confronting our Nation at the present time.

Mr. President, I wish to say now, as I said briefly the other day, that the action we take on this matter will be heard around the globe, and there are millions of people in friendly countries who will look to see whether we are going to keep faith with the promises we have clearly made, it seems to me, and whether we intend to enforce the peace and give the peoples of the world who are making a fight for freedom an opportunity to have success in that fight.

Therefore, although I shall let this one piece of business be transacted, I wish to state that it is the last piece of business I shall allow to be transacted until we meet the question as to whether we are going to agree to have the requested conference on the draft bill which, in my judgment, pertains to the very security of our Nation. It seems to me that now is the best time and this is the best place to fight that battle.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. there objection to the request of the Senator from West Virginia?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I appeal to the Senator from Oregon about this matter. I wish to say here that it was our plan. if I may state it now, to have the Senate adopt two or three conference reports as to which there is no controversy, and also agree to a request for a conference. One of those matters relates to a road bill. I think it will take us only 10 minutes to complete action on the supplemental independent offices appropriation bill, which must be passed and go to con-

Then I would be agreeable to continuing under the program of having debate on the motion to agree to the requested conference.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, does the conference report relate to the displaced

Mr. REVERCOMB. This is not the report on the displaced persons bill.

Mr. President, it has just been brought to my attention that the conference report which has been under discussion was agreed to by the Senate on the 15th instant, although it has just been agreed to by the House of Representatives.

Therefore, I withdraw the request.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed, without amendment, the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 37) requesting the President to proclaim February 1 as National Freedom Day.

The message also announced that the House had severally agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the following bills of the House:

H. R. 3190. An act to revise, codify, and enact into positive law, title 18 of the United States Code, entitled "Crimes and Criminal

H. R. 3218. An act to authorize an emergency fund for the Bureau of Reclamation to assure the continuous operation of its irrigation and power systems;

H. R. 4272. An act to provide for the pro-curement and supply of Government headstones or markers for unmarked graves of members of the armed forces dying in the service or after honorable discharge therefrom, and other persons, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 5710. An act to amend the act entitled "An act to expedite the provision of housing in connection with national defense, and for other purposes," approved October 14, 1940, as amended.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 418) to provide for water-pollutioncontrol activities in the Public Health Service of the Federal Security Agency and in the Federal Works Agency, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 2242) to authorize for a limited period of time the admission into the United States of certain European displaced persons for permanent residence, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3735) to authorize and direct the Secretary of War to donate and convey to Okaloosa County, State of Florida, all the right, title, and interest of the United States in and to a portion of Santa Rosa Island, Fla., and for other purposes.

PROMOTION OF NATIONAL DEFENSE-IN-CREASE IN PERSONNEL OF ARMED

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. pending question is the motion of the Senator from South Dakota that the Senate disagree to the amendment of the House to the draft bill, Senate bill 2655; agree to the conference requested by the House, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATIONS FOR INDEPENDENT OFFICES, 1949

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I wish to propose one further unanimous-consent request, if I may do so. I feel it is very necessary that the supplemental independent offices appropriation bill be considered at this time.

So I ask unanimous consent that the pending business, to wit, the motion of the Senator from South Dakota relative to having the Senate agree to the requested conference on the draft bill, and so forth, be temporarily laid aside, and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 6829.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. McMAHON. Mr. President, reserving the right to object—and I shall not object-let me inquire whether the proposed action, if taken, would result in the displacement of the business now pending.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Not under the terms of the request.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I wish to ask the Senator from Nebraska a question. Will he explain to me just what procedure has to be followed in regard to the conference report to which he has referred in order to have it finally disposed of?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I have referred to the supplemental appropriation bill for the independent offices, which is ready for consideration and passage by the Senate. This will be the first time the bill has been considered by the Senate. It is the appropriation bill.

Mr. MORSE. The Senator does not refer to a conference report, then?

Mr. WHERRY. No. I shall later ask unanimous consent for the consideration of other conference reports. They can be taken up at any time, for they are privileged matters.

But this is the last appropriation bill which must be considered, and I thought it wisest to have the Senate consider it now, before entering into prolonged discussion of the motion of the Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. MORSE. If we do not consider the bill now and if we get into a pro-Mr. MORSE. longed discussion of the motion of the Senator from South Dakota, we may find ourselves in a position tomorrow or tomorrow night when there will not be time even to take action by way of a conference on the bill.

Mr. WHERRY. That is correct. Mr. MORSE. I hope I can at least demonstrate, in a very short period of time, that I can adjust myself to new facts as I discover them.

Mr. WHERRY. I thank the Senator. Mr. MORSE. I am not going to object to this one.

Mr. WHERRY. That is wonderful. Mr. MORSE. However, I am beginning to say I do not like the idea of having to work under the sufferance of what apparently amounts to a threatened filibuster being held over my head.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I want to thank the Senator from Oregon. assure him I shall cooperate with him in every way to expedite action on the question, after the appropriation bill is disposed of.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. there objection to the request of the Senator from Nebraska?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6829) making supplemental appropriations for the Executive Office and sundry independent executive bureaus, boards, commissions, and offices, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Appropriations with amendments.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the formal reading of the bill be dispensed with, that it be read for amendment, and that the amendments of the committee be first considered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I desire to make a 5-minute preliminary statement to explain the bill.

Mr. EASTLAND. Let us have a quorum call.

Mr. WHERRY. We do not need it. Let us proceed to the consideration of the committee amendments.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will proceed to state the committee amendments.

The first amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the heading "Atomic Energy Commission," on page 3, line 14, after the word "periodicals", to insert "(not to exceed $8,000)"; in line 15, after the word "expenses", to insert "(not to exceed $1,842,000)"; and in line 16, after the word "authorizations", to strike out "$501,850,000" and insert "$521,850,000."

The amendment was agreed to. Mr. EASTLAND. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Eighty-nine Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

The clerk will report the next committee amendment.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Housing Expediter," on page 5, line 10, after the word "Expediter' insert a colon and the following additional proviso:

And provided further, That as to cases involving the functions transferred to the Office of the Housing Expediter by Executive Order 9841, section 204 (e) of the Emergency Price Control Act of 1942, as amended, shall be considered as remaining in full force and effect during fiscal year 1949.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McMAHON. Mr. President, I have had a conversation with the Senator from Kansas [Mr. REED], and he states he does not object to returning to the item of $521,850,000, the total appropriation for the Atomic Energy Commission. I ask the Senator if that is cor-

Mr. REED. That is correct.

Mr. McMAHON. I ask unanimous consent to reconsider the vote by which the amendment on page 3, line 16, after the word "authorizations", to strike out "$501,850,000" and insert "$521,850,000" was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the vote on the amendment will be reconsidered, and the amendment will be considered to be pending at the moment before the Senate. Does the Senator wish to be recognized?

Mr. McMAHON. I do.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Connecticut is recognized.

Mr. McMAHON. Mr. President, I should like to address a question to the chairman of the subcommittee, asking him to explain to me, if he will, where the $28,000,000 cut has been made in the appropriation. The Senator stated the House cut the appropriation $48,000,000 and according to the report the Senate committee has increased it $20,000,000, leaving a net reduction of $28,000,000. I should like to ask the Senator how that was arrived at by the Appropriations Committee.

Mr. REED. The budget estimate for the Atomic Energy Commission was $550,000,000. The House bill provided $550,000,000. $501,850,000. The Senate committee appointed a subcommittee. The full committee, after considering the matter, recommended that the House figure be increased by $20,000,000. In addition to doing that, we removed some restrictions which had been imposed upon the Atomic Energy Commission in the matter of the use of its funds. With the removal of the restrictions and allowing more flexibility to the Commission in the use of its funds, it was the opinion of the subcommittee and the full committee that the Atomic Energy Commission could perform all of its functions with the amount allowed.

Mr. McMAHON. I should like to invite the Senator's attention to the fact that in the House it was suggested that the appropriation for basic research should be reduced by approximately 14 percent. Did the subcommittee or the full Senate committee have any deliberations upon that action?

Mr. REED. We are trying to let the Atomic Energy Commission use its funds with the utmost flexibility and in the way it deems best. We have not undertaken to reduce the funds in any particular category by any particular percentage.

Mr. McMAHON. I will say to the Senator that although I am on the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy I cannot vouch for every dollar in the request for an appropriation. I do know, however, that its budget estimates were arrived at as a result of the Commission conferring with the advisory board provided for by statute under which it operates. budget was arrived at as a result of conferences between the Advisory Board, the industrial concerns which operate the project, and the Commission itself.

I was disturbed by the House report which had an amazing line in it to the effect that they did not want to interfere with the amount of research, but they thought that the amount of research could be well reduced on items other than those which cover basic research and research for peaceful purposes. Apparently there is a belief in some quarters that we can have research for weapons. for instance, and research not for weapon purposes, and can put them in different categories. Of course the Senator from Kansas knows, I am sure, after listening to the testimony, that that is impossible.

I protest against an uninformed, unconsidered, and what I consider, to be a reckless exercise of power to reduce a budget estimate for an agency of this character, which is as vital, if not more vital to national defense, than any other item in our defense. I cannot help but think of the appropriation which went through the Senate in the naval appropriation bill. It contained $125,000,000 for one airplane carrier. I am informed that that is only a down payment. Before it is fully equipped the amount will be approximately $200,000,000.

I certainly think that this reduction. which unfortunately has been confirmed in part by the Senate Appropriations Committee, is to be very much deplored.

I will say, in conclusion, on my own responsibility that there is no one in this Congress who has considered the budget who has approached the matter with an eye to carrying forward a program which the people in charge of it say is absolutely necessary to our national defense.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President. will the Senator yield?

Mr. McMAHON. I yield to the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I may say to the Senator that I heard much of the discussion concerning the Atomic Energy Commission. I was present when this matter was discussed. The House cut the amount for the use of periodicals down to $50. The Commission last year spent $8,000 for periodicals. The Senate committee restored that amount. The Commission asked for $1,842,000 for travel, and we gave them that, or very nearly that much. The House reduced the appropriation $48,000,000. The Senate restored $20,000,000 of that amount and eliminated many of the restrictions concerning the use of the funds. Atomic Energy Commission told us that if those restrictions were released and they were given more freedom in the use of their funds, it would help them and would make it less expensive for the Government, in the long run. So, we felt, that by reducing the restrictions and restoring half of what was eliminated by the House we were giving them practically all the money they could use and all they had asked for. The restrictions are very much less, and the funds are within $28,000,000 of what they asked for. In other words, they have the funds appropriated to use for research, housing, and every other incidental administrative expense, without the restrictions under which they have operated in the past few years. As one member of the committee who supported the chairman in connection with the question, I felt we were giving the Commission all they could use or were entitled to use, and that they would be satisfied with the result.

Mr. McMAHON. Mr. President. I do not wish to embarrass the committee or any Senator who is a member of it, but I should like to know how long the budget was considered in the Appropriations Committee. What was the total length of time given for consideration? not think it was over 2 hours, was it?

Mr. REED, Oh, yes. There were 2 days of hearings at which all the witnesses were heard. The Atomic Energy Commission, in addition to the cash appropriations is given general contract authorization for $400,000,000, which is the full amount of contract authorization which the Commission requested. That appears on page 12 of the committee's report.

Mr. McMAHON. I should like to quote a sentence from the House committee report:

The committee also believes that an adjustment can be made in the item for research in the nonweapon, nonbiological, and nonmedical phases of the research and development program.

In other words, as I read it, they must cut down on basic research out of which possibly new and great discoveries will come forth, and concern themselves only with atomic weapons. With that spirit and that belief, I certainly cannot find myself in agreement. I therefore move that the committee amendment be amended by striking out "$521,850,000" and inserting "$550,000,000" in lieu thereof.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Clerk will state the amendment offered by the Senator from Connecticut.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 3, line 16, it is proposed to strike out "$521,850,000." and insert "$550,000,000."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Connecticut to the amendment of the com-

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the next amendment of the committee.

The next amendment was, under the heading "United States Maritime Com-mission," on page 5, line 20, after the word "Commission," to strike out "$68,-360,775" and insert "$69,360,775."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 6, line 3. after the word "exceed", to strike out "$10,600,000" and insert "$11,600,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 6, line 18, after the numerals "1948", to insert a colon and the following acditional proviso:

Provided further, That the Commission may expend amounts to acquire the vessels Mariposa and Monterey and materials and equipment in conjunction therewith on hand or committed for and expend the amounts necessary to complete the vessels, if required for the development and maintenance of the commerce of the United States and for use of the United States in time of war and national emergency, from any amounts available within this limitation.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 8, line 16, after the name "New York", to strike out "Pass Christian, Miss."

Mr. EASTLAND. Mr. President, should like to have an explanation of that committee amendment.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, there was estimated by the Bureau of the Budget this year for maritime training the sum of $6,868,000. The House increased that somewhat. In the course of the hearing of officials of the Maritime Commission Admiral Smith, its chairman, appeared and I asked him:

Did you agree with the Budget on the estimate it made originally?
Admiral SMITH. Yes, sir.

Senator REED. That you can get along on that?

Admiral Smith. We can if we leave Pass Christian out of the picture. It was damaged last September by the hurricane. * * * I was not present when that was discussed before the House committee.

Mr. President, Pass Christian was not included by the budget. The Maritime Commission, through its chairman, says they can get along without the school. It is not now in operation. It will take $600,000 to open it up and place it in operation. The cadets at Pass Christian have been transferred to the main cadet school at Kings Point, N. Y., and they are getting along reasonably satisfactorily, I should say.

Mr. EASTLAND. Mr. President, the House hearings show that the Maritime Commission did request this school. The distinguished Senator from Kansas says that the cadets have been transferred to Kings Point, N. Y., where they are getting along all right. That is a school which cannot be operated the year round. The school at Pass Christian is a school which can be.

Mr. REED. I beg pardon; the Senator from Mississippi certainly does not mean to say that the Kings Point Academy cannot be operated the year round.

Mr. EASTLAND. That is the testimony of Representative Boggs, from Louisiana, before the House committee. Further, on a per capita basis the school at Pass Christian can be operated more cheaply than any other school.

Mr. President, let me state what is involved. A few years ago the United States Government bought a fine hotel on the Gulf Coast of Mississippi named "Inn-By-The-Sea." It was one of the nicest hotels in the southern part of the United States. That hotel was converted into this school. A hurricane occurred last fall which damaged the property. The estimates show that it will take about $75,000 to repair the buildings. The buildings are permanent structures, and the Government today has an investment there of $2,000 .-It is proposed that we junk that investment, when we should operate the school, because, the hearings show, it can be operated more cheaply on a per capita basis than any other school of the Maritime Commission.

Mr. President, in the southern part of the United States, on the Gulf of Mexico, there is the second port of this country, the port of New Orleans, which is served by this school. The great port of Houston, Tex., is served by this school. The great port of Mobile, Ala., is served by this school, and the State of Florida is served by this school.

It seems to me that this part of the Gulf coast area is entitled to this institution, and that it is very poor business on the part of the American Government to junk an investment of $2,000,000 and turn it over to the War Assets Administration where it would be sold in all probability for 30 or 40 or perhaps 50 thousand dollars. It is poor business to junk that school in order to operate a school where it will cost more money per capita to give the students the same training they would get on the Gulf coast, in an area where the climate is ideal, and where all the facilities are available.

Mr. President, I do not ask the Senate to act on my statement alone, but to reject the amendment.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, we get along with one Army cadet school at West Point, N. Y., we get along with one naval cadet school at Annapolis, Md. Whoever said it was not possible to operate the Kings Point Merchant Marine Academy in New York the year round clearly did not know what he was talking about. I was chairman of the Board of Visitors this year. We went to Kings Point last month, spent a couple of days there, and went over the whole training program. The cadets who were at Pass Christian before the hurricane have been transferred to New York, and we have one successful operating merchant marine cadet school.

I do not want to see this property junked, any more than does anyone else. Our committee and the Board of Visitors this year-and, incidentally, there were more Democrats on it than Republicans-are not quite happy about the whole program, and we are holding a further meeting of the Board of Visitors as soon as we are relieved from the present pressure.

The Maritime Commission chairman testified that the Pass Christian School was not necessary, the Bureau of the Budget did not include it in its estimates, and we have provided in the bill the exact amount of money the Bureau of the Budget estimated was necessary for the training school.

Mr. EASTLAND. Mr. President, the Senator stated that the person who said that the Kings Point School was not operated the year round did not know what he was talking about. The testimony before the House committee appears on page 725 of the hearings on the supplemental independent offices appropriation bill for 1949. I quote from the testimony of Representative Boggs:

There is a very good reason for this economy. The school—operates the year round with outdoor activities. They can get out on the Gulf of Mexico and Bay St. Louis and perform the necessary maritime functions in the dead of winter. They cannot do that at Kings Point.

Mr. REED. The Senator certainly is not undertaking to say it is not possible to operate the school at Kings Point the year round. Of course, the climate is more severe in New York.

Mr. EASTLAND. They cannot get out on the sea at Kings Point the year round, and the object of the school is to get maritime training, which can be done on the Gulf Coast.

Mr. REED. The Pass Christian school has been limited in its use heretofore, I think, to the first year of training only. The Kings Point school has a complete course. The Pass Christian institution has been operated on the basis of 1-year students, the first year student course, if my recollection serves me correctly.

The only question is whether or not we wish to spend $600,000 to use a school that is not necessary. The Maritime Commission has testified it can get along without it, and it was not included by the Budget in the estimate.

Mr. EASTLAND. Mr. President, the Maritime Commission has recommended an appropriation for this school. The recommendation is in the House hearing, and I submit it is certainly the part of economy to make the appropriation. Here is a $2,000,000 investment which can be put back into its original shape for $75,000, and then we will have a school that will cost less to operate than any other maritime school in the country. If this amendment shall be defeated, and the Pass Christian activity carried on, the Government will actually save money. I cannot see the point in taking a meat ax and deliberately striking down an installation for no good reason whatever. The program is one which will actually save money to the Treasury. I ask the Senate to reject the committee amendment.

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED. I yield.

Mr. STENNIS. We have a situation in which the Maritime Commission has asked for a continuation of this school. We have a situation in which the facts show that certainly it is far easier to have a continuous year-around training of all types and kinds at Pass Christian than at the other school. We have the undisputed evidence that the per capita training cost at Pass Christian is less than at any other institution.

No survey has been made and no special inquiry has been made to review those facts. We are called upon now more or less to adopt a change of policy in the few fleeting minutes of the last dying hours of this session of the Congress. This school, as I understand, has one of the very finest records in the Nation, and maritime training was something that came to the rescue and filled in the breach in a most wonderful way during the war. I understand that splendid training has been continued. I believe that if it had not been for the act of God, or the circumstance of a storm which partly damaged this place and requires some repairs, that this matter would never have come up, or that the appropriation for the Pass Christian station would not have been stricken out. The comparatively small sum of $60,000 is required to salvage a $2,000,000 physical equipment.

What is now proposed to be done by the amendment is not based on a complete investigation, not on any determination to change the policy or change the kind of training, not on any rule of necessity. I submit that it is not on the basis of a rule of reason that in the few remaining hours of the present session of Congress, it is proposed to delete appropriations for this school from the bill. I hope the Senate will seriously consider the matter and give due credit to the splendid record made at Pass Christian, and the wonderful advantages that exist there.

As has previously been said, the station serves the ports all the way across from Texas to Mobile, Ala. I hope the Senate will not be too hasty in its action. I hope we will consider the matter seriously, and, in view of the very fine record that has been made, and the very fine service being rendered, the Senate will permit this station to continue. As I understand, $60,000 is required for repair, and of course then there will be another amendment providing $620,000 for operations.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED. I yield.

Mr. ELLENDER. I notice on page 8 of the bill that aside from the Pass Christian School there is one at Kings Point. N. Y., and another at Sheepshead Bay, New York, N. Y., one at St. Petersburg, Fla., and one at Alameda, Calif. Did the committee give consideration to those various schools?

Mr. REED. Yes.

Mr. ELLENDER. For instance, how does the one at Sheepshead Bay compare with the one at Pass Christian?

REED. The Sheepshead Bay School is quite a different school and operated for different purposes than the Pass Christian School. The Sheepshead Bay School is what is called a refresher school, where short courses are taken by men already in the service.

Mr. ELLENDER. Which of the schools named conduct the same classes of teaching as at Pass Christian? Mr. REED. The Kings Point.

Mr. ELLENDER. And that is principally to supply the port of New York?

Mr. REED. Oh, no; that is a United States school.

Mr. ELLENDER. I understand that, but it is located there, I suppose, because of the port of New York?

Mr. REED. I suppose it was located near the largest port of the United States so that its cadets could have the advantage of actual training and contact with shipping.

Mr. ELLENDER. Nearby?

Mr. REED. Yes.

Mr. ELLENDER. How does the Alameda, Calif., school compare with that of Kings Point?

Mr. REED. That is a very similar school.

Mr. ELLENDER. That, I presume, is located near San Francisco and San Diego?

Mr. REED. I am not very familiar with the Alameda school.

Mr. ELLENDER. The Senator knows, does he not, that the port of New Orleans is the second largest in the country?

Mr. REED. It is a very large port.

Mr. ELLENDER. Yes; it is the second largest in the country. Why would it not be advantageous to have a school developed there so as to train the seamen as is done at New York and on the Pacific coast?

Mr. REED. In answer to the Senator from Louisiana I will say that we are able to train all our Army officers at one academy, that at West Point, N. Y. We are able to train all our naval officers at Annapolis, Md. I do not know of any reason why, by the same token, we cannot train all our merchant-marine officer force at Kings Point, N. Y.

Mr. ELLENDER. Following that argument then, why not strike out all the others and leave just one at Kings Point,

Mr. REED. I am not sure that in the end when we come thoroughly to overhaul the matter of merchant-marine training something of that kind may not be done. We are not proposing that now. The Pass Christian School is not in operation. Its buildings were damaged. The Bureau of the Budget did not increase the amount, and the Chairman of the Maritime Commission says they can get along without it. That is the situation.

Mr. ELLENDER. I understand from the record that the Maritime Commission has recommended it. Is that not true?

Mr. REED. I do not know, but they did not recommend it to our committee.

Mr. ELLENDER. I think it is shortsighted on our part to eliminate the Pass Christian School for the present. Why not keep it in operation so that later on, if it is the intention of the Congress to have but one school, Pass Christian might be selected for the reasons assigned by the distinguished Senator from Mississippi [Mr. STENNIS]?

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, in reference to the position of the Maritime Commission with respect to the continuation of the school and its work at Pass Christian, Miss., permit me to say that on page 726 of the House hearings there appears a copy of a letter addressed to Hon. James H. Webb, Director of the Bureau of the Budget, Washington, D. C., under date of May 7, 1948, just a little over a month ago. The letter was written to Mr. Webb by Hon. W. W. Smith. Chairman of the Maritime Commission. Among other things Chairman Smith had this to say about the Pass Christian School:

Your attention is invited to the fact that there have been material changes in the international situation since the Bureau of the Budget acted upon our request for the restoration of the cadet school at Pass Christian. The President has approved a program for building additional vessels which will require additional trained personnel for their operation. Secretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan, in an eight-page statement given before the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries in its survey of the status of the American merchant marine relative to the world situation presently facing this country, declared that those responsible for the administration of our readiness program are conscious of the necessity of scrutinizing closely the present condition of our merchant marine in order to determine what its shortcomings may be from the standpoint of national security.

Then Chairman Smith proceeded to say:

In order to carry out, during fiscal year 1949, an appropriate program in the operation of the cadet school at Pass Christian the Commission recommends that the fol-lowing additional budget provisions should

There is the recommendation, Senators, of the Chairman of the Maritime Commission, speaking for the Commission a little more than 30 days ago.

Mr. EASTLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HILL. I yield.

Mr. EASTLAND. Of course it is our policy to build up and maintain a merchant marine. It is necessary for the defense of the country. Is not this installation of great benefit to the port of Mobile, in the Senator's State?

Mr. HILL. The installation is of great benefit, of course, to the port of Mobile, the port of New Orleans, and other ports.

Mr. EASTLAND. I was about to ask the distinguished senior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER] if the installation is not a great benefit to the port of New Orleans

Mr. ELLENDER. I so stated a moment ago in answer to the distinguished Senator from Kansas.

Mr. EASTLAND. It could not be filled if it were necessary to send to the State of New York for personnel.

Mr. HILL. The Senator knows that the State of New York is thousands of miles away from the Gulf area. The Maritime Commission recommends continuance of the operation of this school. Secretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan emphasizes the importance of the merchant marine of the United States to our national security. He emphasizes also the importance of closely scrutinizing the entire question before any action is taken which would in any way be detrimental or harmful to our American merchant marine.

This question came before the House Committee on Appropriations. We know how thoroughly the subcommittee of the House Committee on Appropriations study all questions before them. subcommittee of the House Committee on Appropriations held hearings on this subject. It did exactly what the Secretary of the Navy said should be done. It scrutinized this proposal. After the hearings, and after consideration of the facts, the committee recommended continuation of the school.

Why should the Senate, without any opportunity to examine the question fully, overrule the Maritime Commisthe House Committee on Appropriations, and the House of Representatives, without any basis for such action?

What I am pleading with the Senate this afternoon to do is to permit this item to remain in the bill, where it was placed by the House. Then, as the distinguished chairman of the Senate subcommittee has suggested, at some later date the entire program of the Maritime Commission cadet training can be gone into. We can look into the entire situation. But there is no opportunity to do that today. On the other hand, we know that the training at the Pass Christian School is the lowest in per capita cost. We know that because of the wonderful climate, year-round training can be carried on in a way that it cannot be carried on at other training places. know that the Government has between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000 invested in properties there. If those properties are closed down and turned over to the War Assets Administration, what will that mean? It will mean that they will be sold for probably nothing more than salvage value, which will not amount to a We ought to preserve this property and continue the training. We ought to carry on this program, as the House decided, and as the Maritime Commission has recommended, at least until we have had an opportunity to study the entire subject.

Mr. EASTLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HILL. I yield.

Mr. EASTLAND. The argument made by the distinguished Senator from Kansas [Mr. REED] is that the hurricane has closed the school. The cost of restoring it to its original shape is only incidental and minor. The real question at issue is that the school is operated more cheaply, and the men are trained more cheaply than at any other place. We are running off after a minor item, to pick up a dime and put it in our pocket while throwing dollars away with the other hand. It is not economy. It is bad business.

Mr. HILL. If we reject the action of the House, and, without having gone into the subject, proceed to adopt the committee amendment, we shall be pennywise and pound-foolish.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BALDWIN in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment on page 8, line 16. [Putting the question. 1

Mr. ELLENDER, Mr. PEPPER, and Mr. HILL addressed the chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. "ayes" have it, and the committee amendment is agreed to.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, a point of order. The Senator from Louisiana was seeking recognition.

Mr. PEPPER. So was the Senator from Florida.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the vote just announced be reconsidered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico asks that the vote just taken be reconsidered. Without objection-

Mr. ELLENDER. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I move that the vote by which the committee amendment was agreed to be reconsidered.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, I did not hear any Senator vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Chair thinks it is fair to say that the Senator from Florida was on his feet as the Chair was putting the question. Without objection, the vote by which the committee amendment was agreed is reconsidered, and the Chair recognizes the Senator from Florida.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, the Chair is very kind. The Senator from Louisiana was also seeking recognition. I wonder if I may yield for a moment to the Senator from Louisiana, because I am looking up an item in the record.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, I had asked for recognition in my own right.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Louisiana withdraw his suggestion of the absence of a quorum?

Mr. ELLENDER. I do.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana is recognized.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, I desire to invite the attention of the Senator from Kansas to a few paragraphs from a letter addressed by W. W. Smith, chairman of the Maritime Commission, to Hon. HALE Boggs, a Member of the House, in which he states specifically:

The Maritime Commission believes that this school should be restored and continued in operation. There has been a change in the international situation which in our opinion makes its operation more than ever neces This change has occurred since the matter was considered by the Bureau of the

Since the hurricane damage occurred, we have maintained a small staff at Pass Christian to salvage as much of the loss as possible. It was necessary to maintain the staff, in any event, for maintenance and custody until a disposition of the property was deter-This staff has accomplished repair mined. work to the extent that only $100,000 additional funds are now necessary to complete the work. Since it would require several months to complete the work and since our next class of cadet-midshipmen is scheduled for admission on September 1, 1948, we would have only 10 months' operation during the fiscal year 1949 and this would require $500,000, so that if the school is to be restored and operated during that fiscal year, an appropriation of $600,000 will be necessary, This information will be made available to the House Committee on Appropriations if that committee so requests.

That letter was dated May 6, 1948. Under date of April 9, 1948, I personally addressed a letter to Hon. RICHARD B. WIGGLESWORTH, chairman of the subcommittee on independent offices of the House Committee on Appropriations. which, in a measure, gives my views on this question. I stated to him as follows:

MY DEAR CONGRESSMAN WIGGLESWORTH: This is with reference to a proposal to appropriate moneys for the restoration and maintenance of the United States Merchant Marine Cadet School at Pass Christian, Miss., which is currently being considered by your subcommittee. I should appreciate it if you would consider this letter as a statement of my views in the matter and include it with other testimony which will be considered by the members of your subcommittee.

The facility at Pass Christian is located between two major seaports. New Orleans and Mobile, and it is only about 300 miles distant from Houston and Galveston. It can be easily reached by land, sea, and air. The cli-mate there is ideal for year-round training and is considered superior to the areas where northern installations are situated. This school is the only one of its type located in the South, and we are anxious it be restored on a permanent status.

Young men who have been trained as cadet-midshipmen proved conclusively their capability to serve efficiently and effectively in the United States Navy, and I understand that about 45 percent of the strength of the United States Merchant Marine Naval Reserve is made up from graduates of the Cadet

We feel that the added stress that is being placed now on national defense and adequate training should make it imperative that facility be restored and maintained, and we in the Gulf States are very hopeful that your subcommittee will be able to take favorable action in this matter.

Mr. President, as I indicated a moment ago, we intend to build up our merchant marine. In order to have an effective merchant marine, it is necessary to train cadets. As I stated a moment ago, I notice that near the great port of New York there are two schools; there is one on the California coast; and on the Gulf coast we have five large ports, including New Orleans, the second largest port in the country. I think we are deserving of a school of that type.

Mr. President, I ask that the Senate sustain the House in voting on the amendment.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I should like to have the attention of the able Senator from Kansas relative to the amendment.

WATER POLLUTION CONTROL ACTIVITIES IN PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE—CONFER-ENCE REPORT

Mr. MALONE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to present a conference report on Senate bill 418.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, let me ask the Senator from Nevada whether he contemplates requesting having the Senate take action on the conference report at this time, or is he simply presenting the report.

Mr. MALONE. I do not insist on action at this time.

Mr. DONNELL. I may say that if the Senator is asking for action on the conference report now, in view of the objection of the Senator from Oregon a while ago, and in view of the fact that he is not now on the floor, I would feel constrained to object to a request for action on the conference report at this time.

Mr. MALONE. I do not ask for action on it at this time; I simply submit it.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator the subject of the conference report?

Mr. MALONE. It is the stream-pollution conference report.

So, Mr. President, I submit the report. The conference report submitted by Mr. Malone, and ordered to lie on the table, is as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 418) entitled "An Act to provide for water pollution control activities in the Public Health Service of the Federal Security Agency and in the Federal Works Agency, and for other purposes" having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House, and agree to the same with amendments as follows:

EXECUTIVE AND INDEPENDENT OFFICES SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATIONS, 1949

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6829) making supplemental appropriations for the Executive Office and sundry independent executive bureaus, boards, commissions, and offices, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, and for other purposes.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I should like to have the attention of the Senator from Kansas for a moment.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I have discussed this matter with the Senators who have spoken on it. I have agreed to accept an amendment, as follows: To insert in the bill the sum of $75,000 to be used in the repair of the Pass Christian buildings which were destroyed or damaged by a hurricane. That amount is reported to the committee as being sufficient to put the property in usable condition. Then we shall leave for further consideration the question of operation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands that the Senator from Kansas modifies the committee amendment accordingly.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, that amendment pertains only to Pass Christian; does it?

Mr. REED. Yes.

Mr. PEPPER. Will the Senator from Kansas kindly tell us what was the House appropriation for the whole maritime training fund?

Mr. REED. The budget estimate for maritime training was $6,868,000. The appropriation for this year was $7,320,-000. As the House passed the bill, it provides for an appropriation of $8,131,080.

The Senate committee adopted the Budget figure, and has used the Budget figure, which will be increased by $75,000 because of the agreement just made.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator please tell us what reductions will be necessary because of reducing the figure from $8,131,080, as approved by the House, to $6,868,000, as recommended by the Bureau of the Budget and by the Senate committee? For example, one of the schools is at St. Petersburg, Fla. There are many other of these training schools. I wonder what the plan or pattern is and what the reason for the action of the Senate committee is.

Mr. REED. The main reason, and the subject of most of the consideration, was the fact that the Budget estimated a certain sum as necessary and sufficient, and the committee has worked under that proposal. Of course, to that sum should be added the amount of the agreement just made.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I realize there are many times when the committee follows literally the recommendations of the Bureau of the Budget, and there are other times when the committee is not very much persuaded by the recommendations of the Bureau of the Budget. I think it has generally been the policy of the Congress to wish to see for itself what are the issues in connection with an appropriation, and to determine for itself what the need is and what the merit is, without slavish, obeisant regard to what the Bureau of the Budget may recommend.

I should like to have the Senator from Kansas tell me how much of a reduction in the training program of the Maritime Commission will be caused by the proposed cut from the House figure of $8,131,080 down to $6,868,000, the latter amount being considerably lower than the appropriation and expenditure for the present year.

Mr. REED. I cannot tell in just what schools and to what extent reductions will be made. Obviously it is impossible to operate as extensively if the appropriation is made as recommended by the Bureau of the Budget, instead of as passed by the House. Of course, a larger amount would permit more extensive operations.

How the proposed decrease will affect St. Petersburg, the Senator from Kansas cannot undertake to say. Certainly it will not close down St. Petersburg.

Mr. PEPPER. Then I am afraid we shall have to decide for ourselves whether it will be wise to make a reduction in the amount as voted by the House, or whether we shall say that the amount of the appropriation shall be $6,868,000 simply because the Bureau of the Budget recommends that amount.

The Senator has already said there was no accurate weighing of this program and no determination of where cuts should be made or why.

Mr. President, we have ships laid up in various parts of the United States, and they are available for emergency The Congress is now in the midst of the consideration of a draft bill. We have made colossal expenditures for national defense purposes. Expenditures for maritime training are as much a part of national defense expenditures as any other expenditures we are making, because we cannot fight a war and have a secure country unless we have an adequate merchant marine: and we cannot have an adequate merchant marine unless we have sufficient men to man the ships; and of course they cannot effectively man the ships unless they are trained for that task.

We now have under consideration the maritime training program. I am afraid that the significance and importance of the maritime to the national defense program has not been fully appreciated.

If the Senator will permit me to do so, I should like to recall to his mind that last year, had it not been for the House of Representatives, many of these maritime training schools would have been closed. It was only because of the determined fight made by the House of Representatives that, for example, we were able to retain the splendid maritime training school at St. Petersburg, Fla. It would have been closed a year ago if our distinguished committee had been the one to determine whether it should survive or should not survive.

So, when this year the House, again in recognition of the importance of this maritime training program, has tried to provide for sufficient men to man the ships that are stored and also the ships that are being built, we now find that our committee says, "We have simply taken the Budget recommendation, and that is what we are offering to the Sen-When the committee says that, I say that if the House of Representatives-which has been a friend of this program and has made a careful study of it, as the record shows, and has heard the maritime people, who have given their reasons for the continuation of this program without curtailment-recommends a larger appropriation, then I see no reason, simply because the Bureau of the Budget recommends a smaller amount, for us to follow slavishly the Budget recommendation.

It is my opinion that we should support the amount as carried in the bill as passed by the House, and that we should provide for that figure in the bill. I shall address myself to that subject.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield to my able colleague.

Mr. HOLLAND. I wish to ask my colleague if it is not true that the cut made by the Senate committee in the appropriation as passed by the House is a cut of more than 20 percent in the amount of the appropriation for the training program.

Mr. PEPPER. It is.

Mr. HOLLAND. Is it not also true that the European recovery and relief measures which have been passed by the Congress require, among other things, the return to commission and to active work of many ships of the Maritime Commission which have been lying idle.

Mr. PEPPER. That is correct. The Senator is absolutely correct. Mr. President, in the Record, Admiral Knight, appearing before the House committee, testified they would need these men, need them trained, in order to man the ships we are building and those which are tied up today awaiting an emergency. What sort of forethought and foresightedness would we execute and exhibit here if we built the ships and then did not have trained men to operate them? How would it be possible to have a merchant marine and depend upon drawing in men who were not known to be qualified to man those ships to meet the emergency? Why have ships and not lave the men to man the ships? Obviously it is a blow at our national security and our national defense, if we do not sustain a program of this minimum financial proportion that may be so meaningful to the security of the country should an emergency occur.

Mr. President, my colleague and I, in our State, and I am sure other Senators in some other States where these different schools are located, have visited the training schools. If they never saw a ship, what the Maritime Commission is doing in making the young men better Americans would justify every dollar of the investment. The young men volunteer. They come into the schools. They are given training in the manning of ships in maritime operation. At the same time, they are given character building: they are given health building: They are better Americans. I never saw a finer group of young men than I have seen in the training schools, who are training themselves to be able to man the merchant marine of America.

Mr. President, there have been many times in our history when we have been short-sighted in our maritime policy. There have been times when we have let our merchant marine shrink to nothing. There have been times when American goods could not be carried in American bottoms, and we were dependent even for the movement of our fighting men upon the ships of our Allies. We have seen the fallacy and the folly of such policies as that in the past few years. Fortunately before World War II we started to build up our merchant marine again. I am afraid there have been some who have been willing to let it disintegrate too rapidly. But what does it mean to have the ships if we do not have the men? And, Mr. President, if we are to have men, we want trained men to man those ships. It is said we had men in the merchant marine during the war. Yes; we had 125,000 of them I believe. They have scattered to the four winds of the country and of the world, and we are not going to call back the old soldiers again; we are training new men to make secure the defense of the country.

The total program as recommended by the House of Representatives for all these schools, for all attributes of the program, would cost only $8,133,000. Yet this cut, as my able colleague has pointed out, means a diminution of 20 percent. That will mean boys will have to go home from the training school. They will not be able to learn the tasks they came there to skill themselves in.

I sincerely hope and believe it is wise policy, Mr. President, I believe it is a sound contribution to the national security, I believe it is good judgment, I believe it is a good investment, to follow again this year as we reluctantly did last year the lead of the House of Representatives, which made a special study of the program, having taken prolific testimony on the subject. They tell us that $8,133,000 is needed. I hope the amended committee amendment will not be adopted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment, as amended. Without objection, it is agreed to. The clerk will state the next committee amendment.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, the Chair does not mean that he has disposed of the question to which I was addressing myself without a vote, does he?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is upon agreeing to the committee amendment, as amended. [Putting the question.] The Chair is in doubt.

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. Pr≋ident, a point of order.

The PRESIDING, OFFICER. The Senator will state the point.

Mr. STENNIS. We had agreed on the Pass Christian matter. My inquiry is, Does the amendment now under consideration affect it?

Mr. REED. It does not.

Mr. PEPPER. No.

Mr. WHERRY. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Kansas a question. There is some little confusion apparently about the over-all appropriation and the amount for the restoration of the buildings at Pass Christian.

I think we all agree that in some appropriate manner there will be $75,000 added to the amount of the committee amendment, will there not, to take care of the restoration of the buildings at Pass Christian?

Mr. REED. There was quite a bit of confusion and I did not clearly understand the Senator's question.

Mr. PEPPER. I merely wished to be sure that we were clear about what the procedure was. The able Senator from Kansas had agreed with the Senator from Mississippi and others interested in Pass Christian School that he would consent to a $75,000 addition, I assume to the amount recommended by the Senate Committee on Appropriations for the restoration of the damaged buildings at Pass Christian.

Mr. REED. Yes.

Mr. PEPPER. In order to accomplish that I suppose the Senator would amend the $8,133,000 figure and add $75,000 to it.

Mr. REED. Seventy-five thousand dollars, added to whatever figure is in the bill. I do not recall the exact amount.

Mr. PEPPER. Add $75,000 to the figure in the bill?

Mr. REED. Yes.

Mr. PEPPER. That can be voted upon after we determine the larger question or it can come first, whatever the Senator from Mississippi may prefer.

Mr. REED. It has been accepted.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, there are two problems. One is the operation of the schools, and the other is the restoration of the building. Merely to restore the building does not mean the school will be there, of course. I am sure, if we carry this program forward as we should, what should be done is to add $75,000 to the amount agreed upon for the program. If we agree upon the larger amount, then $75,000 for construction should be added. If we agree to the smaller amount, the same addition should be made to restore the school.

Mr. REED. If the amendment of the Senator from Florida is defeated, as I hope it will be, that will not affect the agreement.

Mr. PEPPER. That is correct.

Mr. President, a few Senators have just entered the Chamber. Is it the pleasure of the Senate to have a yea-andnay vote?

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I should like to have about 3 minutes to state the

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED. I do not know that I have the floor. I think the Senator from Florida has the floor.

Mr. PEPPER. I was saying, before some of the Senators came into the Chamber, that the House of Representatives had made a careful study of the question of the maintenance of the maritime training program. Not only did the House committee make a study, but it took lengthy testimony. I have a great many pages of the testimony here. The House Committee on Appropriations went into detail in connection with the maritime-training program. The House approved an appropriation of $8,133,000 for the entire training program.

With all respect to the Senate Appropriations Committee, when the matter came before that committee the committee took only half a page of testimony. They merely asked the officers regarding the budget estimated. The Budget had recommended $8,686,000. Of course the Maritime Commission spokesmen had to say that they agreed to the Budget figure. They could not say anything else. But they did not say that it was an adequate figure, or that that was the figure which should be allowed.

The question is whether we should take the House figure of $8,133,000, or whether we should take the Budget estimate, with only half a page of consideration and testimony given to the whole subject.

Mr. President, this is a nationaldefense program. Hundreds of our ships are laid up all over the country for use in an emergency. It is short-sighted not to train the men to man those ships. That is what the program is intended to do. We are making a 20-percent reduction in the training program, which I submit is a danger to our national security and a very serious blow at the efficacy of the whole maritime program and the effectiveness of the maritime strength of the Nation. That is the reason I am contending, Mr. President, that the House figure of $8,133,000 should be preserved and that the Senate committee amendment reducing the amount 20 percent should not be adopted.

IIr. REED. Mr. President, I shall take only about 2 minutes, and then I should like to have a record vote.

The subcommittee and the full committee met the Budget's full figure. Budget rejected some recommendations of the Maritime Commission, but in this bill we gave the full Budget figure for maritime training.

In addition, when Admiral Smith, the Chairman of the Maritime Commission, was before our committee, I asked him:

Did you agree with the Budget on the estimate it made originally?

His answer was, "Yes, sir."

I then asked him, "Can you get along on that?

And he answered in the affirmative. That is found at page 80 of our hearings.

The Senator from Florida is talking about a common seaman school, not an officer school at all, down at St. Petersburg, Fla. They now have a 6-months' course, and probably they can get along with a 3-months' course. The young men go to that school when they are out of

Mr. PEPPER. I ask for the yeas and

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I do not care to discuss this amendment, but I do desire, in the closing hours of the session, to call to the attention of the Senate the serious lack of common seamen in the United States. The situation is so bad that we were required, at the last session, to pass a law waiving the prohibition against employing alien seamen to serve on American ships. Many of our ships have to be manned with alien seamen. There is not an officer demand, but there is a demand for common seamen. Whether the school is the answer or whether apprenticeship is the answer, I do not know, but few of our young men are taking to the sea. I do hope we are cognizant of the situation. I am going to vote against the amend-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 9, line 4, in the committee amendment, to strike out "$6,868,000" and insert "$6,943,000, of which $75,000 shall be available for restoration or repair of buildings at the training station at Pass Christian, Miss."

Mr. REFD. Mr. President, that is the committee amendment as amended. I understand the Senator from Florida has moved to substitute some other figure.

Mr. PEPPER. No, Mr. President; we are merely opposing the committee The committee amendamendment. ment would make the cut from the House figure of $8,133,000 to $6,686,000. We are merely opposing the committee amendment. The question is on the committee amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The year and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll. Mr. WHERRY. I announce that the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. Bush-FIELD], the Senator from Kansas [Mr. CAPPER], and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Longe] are necessarily absent. If present and voting, the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Longe] would vote "yea."

The Senator from Kentucky [Mr. COOPER], the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Langer], the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. McCarthy], and the Senator from Iowa [Mr. WILSON] are detained on official committee business. If present and voting, the Senator from Iowa [Mr.

Wilson] would vote "yea."

Mr. LUCAS. I announce that the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY], the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. KILGORE], the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKellar], and the Senator from Texas [Mr. O'DANIEL] are absent on official business.

The Senator from Georgia PMr. George] is absent because of a death in his family.

The Senator from Nevada [Mr. Mc-CARRAN] and the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] are necessarily absent.

The Senator from Utah [Mr. Thomas] is absent by leave of the Senate, having been appointed a national delegate by the President to the annual conference of the International Labor Organization, meeting in San Francisco, Calif.

The result was announced-yeas 61, nays 19, as follows:

So the committee amendment on page 9, line 3, as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, may I ask that the clerk read the language now in the bill, including the agreement reached respecting Pass Christian, so that we may be sure that it is taken care of.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the amendment as modified.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 9, line 3, it was proposed to strike out "$8,133,080" and insert in lieu thereof "$6,943,000, of which $75,000 shall be available for restoration or repair of buildings at the training station at Pass Christian, Miss."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair asks the junior Senator from Kansas if he desires to have restored in line 16 on page 8, the three words which were stricken out "Pass Christian, Miss."?

Mr. REED. I am glad the Chair called attention to that. The words were stricken out. They should be restored.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. In the light of the amendment just agreed to, the words should be restored. Without objection, the vote by which the committee amendment on page 8, line 16, was agreed to, is reconsidered, and without objection, the words "Pass Christian, Miss." will be restored.

The clerk will state the next committee amendment.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Veterans' Administration," on page 15, line 10, after the word "character", to strike out:

For the purpose of this proviso, training for the purpose of teaching a veteran to fly in connection with his business or occupation in which he is now engaged or for which he is training shall not be considered avocational or recreational.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was on the same page, in line 14, after the language stricken, to insert the following:

For the purpose of this proviso, education or training for the purpose of teaching a veteran to fly and related aviation courses shall not be considered avocational or recreational when the veteran certifies that he has selected aviation education or training for use in connection with his existing or contemplated business, occupation, or educations

Mr. GREEN. Mr. President, I ask the junior Senator from Kansas if he will not accept a minor amendment in the committee amendment on page 15, line 17, after the word "certifies" to insert the words "under oath." The reason I ask the Senator whether he will accept that amendment is because there are two schools of thought as to this matter. Some believe the Veterans' Administration has been too strict in construing the language of the existing law, and in its requirements as to those who may take this aviation course, and believe that it should be more liberal. Others believe to the contrary. Those who think it should be liberalized have suggested the language now in the amendment. But if a certificate should be taken as the basis of a man's right to take a course like this, the suggestion has been made that the certificate ought to be under oath.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The senior Senator from Rhode Island asks that on page 15, line 17, in the committee amendment it be amended by inserting after the word "certifies" the words "under oath."

Mr. REED. There will be no objection to that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Rhode Island to the committee amendment on page 15, line 17.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The committee amendment as amended was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 17, line 22, after "part VII," to insert "and payments authorized by part IX."

The amendment was agreed to.
The next amendment was, on page 18, after line 8, to strike out:

SURPLUS-PROPERTY DISPOSAL

Effective August 31, 1948, the War Assets Administration shall cease to exist as an agency of the Government, and its affairs, functions, and responsibilities shall thereafter be disposed of and liquidated in accordance with the following:

(1) All right, title, and interest in surplus real property and all right, title, and interest in notes, mortgages, and contracts of sale or lease in connection with surplus real property shall be transferred to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to be held and disposed of by such Corporation in accordance, except as provided herein, with the terms of the Surplus Property Act of 1944, as amended;

(2) All aircraft and aircraft parts shall be transferred to the Department of the Air Force to be held and disposed of by such Department in accordance, except as provided herein, with the terms of the Surplus Property Act of 1944, as amended;

(3) All personal property (other than aircraft and aircraft parts), except such as may be necessary to the liquidation of the War Assets Administration or the exercise of the functions transferred herein shall be transferred to the Bureau of Federal Supply, Treasury Department, to be held and disposed of by such Bureau in accordance, except as provided herein, with the terms of the Surplus Property Act of 1944, as amendated.

(4) Except as necessary to the administration of the functions herein transferred to the Department of the Air Force, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and the Bureau of Federal Supply, all administrative property, records, and accounts of the War Assets Administration shall be transferred to the Treasury Department for liquidation of the affairs of the War Assets Administration;

(5) Such administrative property, records, and personnel of the War Assets Administration as determined by the Director of the Bureau of the Budget to be necessary to the administration of any of the functions herein transferred shall be transferred to the agency to which such function is transferred: Provided, That the right to retention in employment by the Government of the personnel so transferred shall be neither greater nor less than such right would have been had the War Assets Administration continued as an independent agency of the Government;

(6) The provisions of section 9 of the Reorganization Act of 1945 (Public Law 263, 79th Cong.) shall apply to the transfers effected by this paragraph in like manner as if such transfer were a reorganization of the agencies and functions concerned under the provisions of that act;

(7) Priorities and preferences provided for in the Surplus Property Act of 1944, as amended, shall not continue beyond August 31, 1948, as to the disposal of personal property but shall continue as to the disposal of real estate;

(8) The agencies herein authorized to dispose of surplus personal property may, after August 31, 1948, transfer any of such property without charge to any other agency of the Government if such property, by such transfer, can be put to public use by the transferee agency;

transferee agency;
(9) The agencies herein authorized to dispose of surplus property shall proceed with due diligence and use all reasonable means within the purview of this act and the Surplus Property Act of 1944, as amended, to accomplish such purpose at the earliest practicable date and shall report to the Committees on Appropriations of the Senate and the House of Representatives at the end of each month as to progress made;

(10) The Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of the Air Force, or the Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation may authorize the abandonment, destruction, or donation to public bodies of personal property herein transferred to their respective agencies which has no commercial value or the estimated cost of care and handling of which would exceed the estimated proceeds from its sale:

(11) The Surplus Property Act of 1944, as amended, shall not apply to property of the Government which has not been declared surplus under the terms of such act as of the date of enactment hereof and any such property determined to be surplus shall be disposed of in accordance with the terms of other existing law.

For administrative expenses in connection with the functions herein authorized to be administered by the War Assets Administration, the Treasury Department, the Department of the Air Force, and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, to be available for the same purposes as the appropriation for salaries and expenses, War Assets Administration, fiscal year 1948, and whenever in such appropriation the title "War Assets Administrator" appears it shall be construed to include his successor as to any of the functions herein transferred, $50,000,000, from the special fund account in the Treasury as provided for in the First Deficiency Appropriation Act, 1946, to be allocated as the Director of the Bureau of the Budget may determine: Provided, That the sum herein provided may be obligated during the period ending August 31, 1948, with respect to the War Assets Administration, and during the period ending March 31, 1949, with respect to the other agencies involved.

And in lieu thereof to insert the following:

SALARIES AND EXPENSES, WAR ASSETS ADMINISTRATION, SPECIAL FUND

Salaries and expenses: There is hereby appropriated from the special fund account in the Treasury as provided for in the First Deficiency Appropriation Act, 1946, not to exceed $90,000,000 for the fiscal year 1949 for necessary expenses of the War Assets Administration established by Reorganization Plan Numbered 1 of 1947; for allocation or reimbursement by the War Assets Administrator to Government agencies designated by the Administrator as disposal agencies by or pursuant to law, and for payment to Government agencies designated by the Administrator for rendering special services in connection with the disposal of surplus property, in such amounts as shall be approved by the Bureau of the Budget; and for allocation or reimbursement to owning agencies for the care and handling (including pay and allowances and subsistence of military and naval personnel) of surplus property subsequent to the filing of a declaration of surplus covering such property with a dis-posal agency designated by the Administrator, or, if the Administrator prescribes procedures whereby declarations of surplus are made at approximately the time of disposal or removal, subsequent to notice by the owning agency to the disposal agency that property has been determined to be surplus and is subject to such procedures, such funds to be available for personal services in the District of Columbia; fees and mileage of witnesses at rates provided by law for witnesses attending in the United States courts (28 U. S. C. 600c); payment of claims pursuant to section 403 of the Federal Tort Claims Act (28 U. S. C. 921); services as authorized by section 15 of the Act of August 2, 1946 (5 U. S. C. 55a), and other special services and reports by contract without regard to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes, amended, including real estate brokers and appraisers at rates of pay or fees not to exceed those usual for similar services; health service program as authorized by law (5 U. S. C. 150), (not to exceed $73,000); acceptance and utilization of voluntary and uncompensated services; printing and bind-ing; expenses of attendance at meetings of organizations concerned with the work of the Administration; procurement of supplies, equipment, reports, and services in connection with the care, handling, and disposition of surplus property without regard to the provisions of section 3709 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, upon determi-nation by the Administrator or by any official designated by him for this purpose that such method of procurement is necessary; purchase and procurement of reports of experts or consultants or organizations thereof; advertising, including radio time; maintenance, operation, and repair of aircraft in the Territories and possessions in connection with disposal activities and, in the continental limits of the United States in connection with the disposition of aircraft air airports; acquisition of buildings, lands, leaseholds, and other interests therein, and temporary use thereof for the care, handling, and disposition of surplus property; payments to States, or political subdivisions thereof of sums in lieu of taxes accruing against real property declared surplus to the Administration by Government corporations; advance of funds to Administration cashiers and collection officials upon furnishing bond, for the purpose of handling cash transactions and making change at surplus property sales: Provided, That any employee of the War As-sets Administration is authorized, when designated for the purpose by the Administrator, to administer to or take from any person an oath, affirmation, or affidavit, when such instrument is required in connection with the performance of the functions or activities of the War Assets Administration: Provided further, That the Administration may procure by contract or otherwise and furnish to governmental employees and employees of Government contractors at the reasonable value thereof food, meals, subsistence, and medical supplies, emergency medical services, quarters, heat, light, household equipment, laundry service, and sanitation facilities, and erect temporary structures and make alterations in existing structures necessary for these purposes, when such employees are engaged in the disposal of surplus prop-erty, or in the preparation for such disposal, at locations where such supplies, services, equipment, or facilities are otherwise unavailable, the proceeds derived therefrom to be credited to this appropriation: Provided further, That notwithstanding any other law to the contrary, the War Assets Administra-tor shall establish and maintain a priority for the benefit of small business in the purchase and disposal and distribution and use of surplus real and personal property. The War Assets Administrator shall implement this small-business priority by appropriate regulation, and the relative order of this priority with respect to other priorities estab-lished by the Surplus Property Act of 1944, as amended, shall, with respect to personal property follow disposals to veterans and States and political subdivisions and instrumentalities thereof, and with respect to real property, follow disposals to former owners, provided for in the Surplus Property Act of 1944, as amended: And provided further, That section 15 of the Surplus Property Act of 1944, as amended, is amended by adding the following subsection at the end thereof:

(c) Notwithstanding any other provisions of law and in furtherance of rapid absorption of surplus personal property into the domestic economy, and of disposition of surplus personal property in a manner to preclude insofar as possible financial expense to the Federal Government in the care, handling, and disposition of such property the Administrator may authorize without regard to priorities or preferences disposals of such property in such manner and quantities as he deems requisite to the best interests of the economy and the Government in effecting rapid and inexpensive disposals of surplus personal property, securing the most appropriate fair value under the circumstances, and affording to the extent he deems feasible an appropriate opportunity for the acquisition of such property in accordance with the existing provisions of this act."

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I want Senators to have a clear understanding of what we did respecting surplus property disposal. The House terminated on August 31 the War Assets Administration so far as the disposal of surplus property was concerned, and it divided up the functions among four different agencies, the Treasury Department, I believe the Public Works Administration, the Department of Commerce, and perhaps one other.

There was unanimous opposition in our committee, and everyone who appeared before our committee was opposed to that proposal, so we have restored the previously existing situation. The House gave the War Assets Administration $50,-000,000 to continue until August 31. We have added $40,000,000, making a total of $90,000,000, which met the requests of the War Assets Administration. It our thought that we should carry on as we are doing now until we get further along in the disposal of property

The War Assets Administration has always complained of the slowing down in its work of sale and distribution of property by virtue of the many priorities. By the time they got down to the priorities, frequently their buyer was gone. So we have removed those priorities, except that we leave a priority for veterans, for States, and for small business.

Also, in the matter of personal property only, we have given the Administrator some discretion when he can sell personal property at a fair price to the Government and get rid of it. It is highly important that we go along as fast as we can in cleaning up the surplus-property situation.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED. I yield. Mr. O'MAHONEY. Is it not a fact that the committee was of the unanimous belief that to split up the War Assets Administration at this time would only result in maladministration and loss to the Government?

Mr. REED. That was our opinion, and the basis of our action and recommendation.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. So the committee amendment is an amendment which is designed to save money to the Government and to prevent inefficient handling of what remains of war surpluses?

Mr. REED. That is correct.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I ask the Senator whether or not in his judgment it would be desirable to have a yea-and-nay vote on this amendment?

Mr. REED. I think not. There was no opposition. As a matter of fact, the opinion in the subcommittee, the full committee, and I believe in the Senate, is either unanimous or almost so.
Mr. O'MAHONEY. I should like the RECORD to show that there was no dispute in the Senate Appropriations Committee, and that we are unanimous in the opinion that the Senate amendment represents the efficient and economical thing to do.

Mr. REED. That is correct.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment on page 18, beginning in line 9.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "General provisions," on page 28, line 6, after the numerals "1949," to insert "and shall be available for examination of appropriation estimates in the field.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That completes the committee amendments. The bill is open to further amendment.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I see that the Senator from Vermont [Mr. AIKEN] has entered the Chamber. The Senator and I join in offering an amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have stated. We have discussed this amendment with the Senator from Kansas [Mr. REED] and I think there is no objection.

Mr. REED. It will be accepted, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky on behalf of himself and the Senator from Vermont [Mr. AIKEN] will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. At the proper place in the bill it is proposed to insert the following new heading and a new paragraph to read as follows:

RURAL ELECTRIFICATION ADMINISTRATION

Salaries and expenses: For an additional amount for salaries and expenses, Rural Electrification Administration, fiscal year 1949, including the objects specified under this head in the Department of Agriculture appropriation bill, 1949, $450,000, such sum to be in addition to amounts otherwise appropriated for such fiscal year.

PRESIDING OFFICER. question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] on behalf of himself and the Senator from Vermont [Mr. ATKEN 1.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have stated. I ask the Senator in charge of the bill if he will accept it and take it to conference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Michigan will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 11, line 19, after the date "1946", it is proposed to insert the following: "And provided further, That such authority to make allowances shall, in the case of vessels of the C-4 type, include authority to make allowances for the cost of converting such vessels to vessels of such other types as the Commission may deem to be desirable for the purposes of the domestic or foreign commerce of the United States or the national defense, in an amount not exceeding 75 percent of the purchase price of such vessel, and in addition to expend out of the moneys herein appropriated for new ship construction, reconditioning, and betterment, such amounts as may be further necessary to accomplish such conversion: Provided, That the purchaser shall repay the amount so expended in accordance with the provisions of section 509 of title V of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended, and any other provisions of said title to the extent applicable."

Mr. REED. Mr. President, the Maritime Commission has on hand a number of vessels of this type. It is a unique type, not suitable for either freight or passenger service, as the vessels are now.

Last year when we were handling this bill a desire was expressed on the part of people in the Great Lakes section to get one of these vessels up into the Great Lakes. In last year's bill we inserted a provision which would permit the Maritime Commission to make such adjustments and changes as would accomplish that purpose. This year the question did not arise in the committee. It arose

I am perfectly willing to accept the amendment of the Senator from Michigan, to be inserted as he indicates, and take it to conference to see what we can do with it.

Mr. McMAHON. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

McMAHON. Does Mr. not amendment constitute legislation on an appropriation bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair rules that it is an item of appropriation to carry out the existing law. In other words, it is an item within the general provisions of the bill.

Mr. McMAHON. If I correctly understand, Mr. President, the Senator from Kansas stated that this suggestion was made to him last year in the form of a bill.

Mr. REED. No. When we considered the bill last year we wrote into the bill a similar provision, so far as the Senate was concerned. Last year we had considerable discussion of the methods of disposing of these vessels through the Maritime Commission, and we placed such a provision in the bill.

Mr. McMAHON. How much will this operation cost?

Mr. REED. We are to be paid for the vessels. It will not cost us anything.

Mr. McMAHON. It will not cost the Treasury anything?

Mr. FERGUSON. It will cost the man who buys the vessel. The money will be put up by the Maritime Commission, and then repaid, and the Maritime Commission will get out.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. When the Chair announced his ruling, he was misinformed as to the full nature of the amendment. Upon an examination of the amendment the Chair is of the opinion, and so rules, that the point of order raised by the Senator from Connecticut is well taken.

Mr. *FERGUSON. Mr. President, I hope the point of order will not be pressed, because this will be a means for the Maritime Commission to sell one of these vessels for at least half a million dollars. The money to be put up by the Maritime Commission will be repaid, over and above the half million dollars for the vessel. Representatives of the Maritime Commission explained in the testimony that the Commission has on hand a number of these vessels. I do not now recall the exact number, but I think it is either 14 or 17. There is no market for them unless something like this can be accomplished.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I hope the Senator from Connecticut will not press the point of order. The Maritime Commission has a number of these vessels. I do not know the exact number, but the Commission has a number of them on hand, and anything it can get for them at this time is of advantage to the United States Treasury, and not of disadvantage.

Last year a desire was expressed by people in the Great Lakes area to get one of these vessels up there. Those interested were going to pay half a million dollars, or three-quarters of a million dollars for it.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, I have just looked at the record. The number, instead of being 14, is 44.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I ask the Senator from Connecticut not to press his point of order. There would be no advantage to anyone in doing so. It would be a disadvantage to the Treasury, in that we would not be able to get rid of one of these vessels which are lying idle and unsalable.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President. I should like to inquire of the Senator from Kansas whether they are to be sold under the provisions of statutory law, or whether this amendment relaxes that law in any degree.

Mr. FERGUSON. This would relax the law only so far as concerns allowing the Commission to put the vessel back in shape so that it could be used. The sum to be paid by the Commission for that purpose would be charged to the vessel.

Mr. RUSSELL. In addition to the statutory limit of sale?

Mr. FERGUSON. No. This would cut the statutory limit to the extent of the amount necessary to repair the vessel. The Maritime Commission would get the statutory limit less the amount it cost to repair the vessel. However, in this case it would get at least half a million dollars.

Mr. McMAHON. Mr. President, why does not the concern to which the Maritime Commission proposes to sell the vessels buy them as is and itself make the repairs?

Mr. FERGUSON. This is one of the cases in which that cannot be done.

Mr. McMAHON. Why not? Mr. FERGUSON. It would cost about $2,000,000 to put the vessel in shape and take it where it is to be used.

Mr. McMAHON. The Senator's proposal is that we authorize the Maritime Commission to spend $2,000,000; is it?

Mr. FERGUSON. No, it would cost the company $2,000,000, and the Government $1,000,000, making the total $3,-

Mr. McMAHON. So the proposal is to spend about $1,000,000 to put the ship in shape. After it is put in the shape the purchasers want it to be in, how much will the Government receive?

Mr. FERGUSON. $500,000, plus what the Government pays for putting the ship in condition.

Let me read the language of the act which applies:

Provided further, That hereafter the Commission may make allowances to the purchasers of vessels for the cost of putting such vessels in class, such allowance to be determined on the basis of competitive bids, without regard to the provisions of the last paragraph of section 3 (d) of the Merchant Ship Sales Act of 1946.

The difficulty is that under the words "putting such vessels in class", although money can be spent for that purpose today, that will not suffice in this instance, because in this case it is desired to make a new kind of vessel out of the ship, so that it can be used on the Great Lakes. That presents a distinction from the work involved in putting a vessel in class. There is a distinction between putting a ship in class and reconverting a ship.

Mr. McMAHON. What is meant by "putting in class"?

Mr. FERGUSON. As I understand, "putting in class" means to bring a ship from its present condition up to the standard required under the Maritime Commission Act for operating it in the same category for which it was built.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, should like to ask whether it is perfectly clear from the terms of the amendment that it applies to only one vessel.

Mr. FERGUSON. That is all-to 1 out of 44.

Mr. McMAHON. Very well, Mr. President, I withdraw the point of order.

Mr. REED. I thank the Senator. The PRESIDING OFFICER. question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON].

The amendment was agreed to. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to further amendment.

If there be no further amendment to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment of the amendments and third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third

The bill was read the third time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill having been read the third time, the question is, Shall it pass?

The bill (H. R. 6829) was passed.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, request a conference thereon with the House of Representatives, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to: and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. Reed, Mr. Bridges, Mr. Brooks, Mr. Cordon, Mr. GREEN, Mr. RUSSELL, and Mr. Mc-KELLAR conferees on the part of the

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Maurer, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed, without amendment, the following bills of the Senate:

S. 2281. An act to provide for an air parcelpost service, and for other purposes; S. 2554. An act to promote the common defense by providing for the retention and maintenance of a national reserve of industrial productive capacity, and for other purposes; and

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 129) providing for a joint committee composed of members of the Senate and the House Public Lands Committee to make an investigation of our island possessions in the Pacific and trust territories, and report back recommendations for legislation providing for civil government.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to a concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 213) authorizing the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, House of Representatives, to have printed for its use additional copies of the hearings held before a special subcommittee of said committee, current Congress, relative to investigation as to the manner in which the United States Board of Parole is operating and as to whether there is a necessity for a change in either the procedure or basic law, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

PROMOTION OF NATIONAL DEFENSE-INCREASE IN PERSONNEL OF ARMED FORCES

Mr. KNOWLING OFFICER. Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, a

Senator will state it.

Mr. KNOWLAND. What is the pending business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. pending business is the motion of the Senator from South Dakota that the Senate disagree to the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 2655) to provide for the common defense by increasing the strength of the armed forces of the United States, including the reserve components thereof, and for other purposes; that the Senate agree to the conference requested by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, a further parliamentary inquiry.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. KNOWLAND. I understand that no other business is permissible except by unanimous consent, until the pending business is disposed of.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Chair so undertands.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, if the pending business is the motion, are we ready to vote on the motion?

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, I understand that the Chair has ruled that no other business can be taken up at this time except by unanimous consent. I was about to move to call up the conference report on the displaced persons bill.

Under the circumstances. I ask unanimous consent that at this time that conference report may be considered.

Mr. KNOWLAND. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER MARTIN in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from South Dakota that the Senate disagree to the amendment of the House to the so-called draft bill, agree to the conference requested by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. President, I intend to speak on this motion. At the time when I announced my intention of doing so, I was taken to task by several Senators who said that I would have to answer for my actions. I am perfectly happy to answer for my actions to anyone concerned, especially the people of the United States. They have a vital stake in the matter now being discussed.

Mr. President, we are considering a fundamental change in our American way of life. Never have we had peacetime conscription. The question is whether our Nation is to be militarized or whether it is to remain a great, free nation, as it has been for, lo, these many years, in fact, since our country was founded.

If speaking out against military conscription and against the militarization of our country carries any blame with it, I am perfectly willing to accept it; but I believe such opposition will be considered a credit to anyone who opposes such a move. I am happy to accept any blame, because I feel it will redound to my credit that I oppose this measure. As a member of the new party that is appearing on the American scene, I am happy to accept responsibility for trying to delay or defeat this peacetime con-scription measure. If the two old parties want the responsibility of instituting peacetime military conscription, they are perfectly welcome to it, so far as I am concerned and so far as the new party is concerned.

I hold in my hand a brochure prepared for the Senate Appropriations Committee, Mr. President. It is a rather elaborate affair. It is getting a little dogeared now, for I have been quoting from it at length; but it is on slick paper, and it is full of maps, diagrams, charts, and what have you. It was prepared by the Office of Naval Intelligence. I do not believe anyone would contend or could contend that the Office of Naval Intelligence is a "red" outfit of any kind or a Communist-front organization or anything of the sort.

This brochure was not for public consumption. I do not believe it is top secret, or anything of that sort; but it was not released to the press. It is very interesting. Of course, it was meant for the eyes of Senators alone, and the ordinary person was not supposed to see it. Let me read the first paragraph in this book or brochure. The Senate Committee on Appropriations, or it may have been the Finance Committee-I am not certain about that, at the moment-was considering the question of strategic stockpiling; in other words, the accumulation of materials which are scarce in this country. The proposal was that such materials be accumulated so that we would have them on hand in case of an armed conflict. Here is what the brochure has to say in the first sentence:

Realistically-

That means, "Let us not kid each other; this is just between the Navy and the Senators; let us be perfectly frank about this business." That is what that means—

Realistically, all wars have been for economic reasons.

That means that all wars have been fought because somebody expected some material gain from the wars. The last two world wars were fought for economic reasons. The German cartelists and militarists started those two wars in the hope of conquering the world militarily, so they could exploit it economically and become rich. This is what is said here:

To make them-

We will read the preceding sentence again, in order to get the sense of this:

Realistically all wars have been for economic reasons. To make them politically and socially palatable—

"Palatable" is the word, Mr. President. That means so it will taste good, "just like what it ain't"—a sort of cod-liveroil preparation with vanilla extract in it.

To make them-

Meaning wars—politically and socially palatable—

So the suckers will like them.

Ideological issues have always been in-

What is said there, Mr. President, is that you just cannot get common folks to fight for colonies, for markets, for raw materials, for sources of cheap labor. You just cannot get them roiled up enough to fight; so what is to be done about it? "Ideological issues have always been invoked."

Mr. President, you cannot get folks mad enough to fight for Standard Oil investments in Saudi Arabia; it just will not work. So what is done? Well, to get the common people mad enough to fight a war, they are told the Catholics are going to get them if they don't watch out. If the people live in a Catholic country, they are told that the Protestants will get them if they do not watch out, or that the Jews are going to get them, or the Mohammedans, or at any rate somebody is going to get them. That seems to get folks mad enough to fight. If they think somebody is going to tear down their church or burn their capitol building or something like that, that makes them mad enough to fight. Well, the statement goes on to say, here:

Any possible future war will undoubtedly conform to historical precedent.

Any war that may come will be fought for the same reasons I have enumerated here—for markets, raw materials, profits, cheap labor, Standard Oil investments in Saudi Arabia—something along that order.

Mr. President, I should like to remind my listeners that Russia has very little reason to fight a war for economic reasons. It says here all wars are fought for that reason, and that any future war will be fought for that reason. Russia has much territory. Russia has many people. Russia has great quantities of raw materials. Russia does not want any markets, because Russia does not want to sell anything, it does not have a profit economy. All the Russians want to do is to produce things to be consumed at home. So the Russians do not have that compulsion to fight wars. Nobody gets rich from war in Russia. They shoot profiteers over there, or did until recently. They have now abolished the death penalty in Russia, which is quite a forward step I would say. Of course we continue to hear about all the people that are getting killed or who are going to get killed in Russia. Possibly it was merely said they were going to abolish it; I do not know.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question, please? Mr. TAYLOR. May I yield without prejudice to my rights to the floor?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator may.

Mr. TAYLOR. I yield to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. WHERRY. Several Senators, I may say to the Senator from Idaho, have inquired as to how long we may run tonight. I am not making this inquiry for any other purpose than to enable me to begin to line up the program. Could the Senator tell me how long he feels he might speak on this subject?

Mr. TAYLOR. I do not "feel" right now, I must say to the Senator from Nebraska. I have no idea. I have been thinking this thing over and I cannot arrive at a conclusion in my own mind just what to do. If I thought I could talk long enough so that the folks would have to go up to Philadelphia and just drop the whole business, I would talk that long, but that is quite a way off. I understand they do not have to leave until Monday morning or Sunday night, or some time along there. I doubt very much if I could hold out that long. I think the Lord is on my side, but even he might not sustain me for that length of time. [Laughter.]

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to a further question? Mr. TAYLOR. I am happy to yield for another question. Mr. WHERRY. If the Senator were in my place, what would he tell inquiring Senators about the session tonight?

Mr. TAYLOR. I would pass the buck to Taylor, if I were the Senator. [Laughter.]

Mr. WHERRY. If the Senator will yield further, I may say I cannot pass the buck any longer, so I may just as well tell all those who are here, and state for the RECORD, anyway, that we expect to stay here late tonight, in view of the Senator's statement—and possibly later than that. We merely want Senators to be prepared.

Mr. TAYLOR. The Senator from Nebraska could not be speaking to the Senator from Idaho, could he?

Mr. WHERRY. The Senator will be here, too, will he not?

Mr. TAYLOR. I do not know. I say I have been unable to make up my mind just what to do here. The Senator sees that there is much talk about rules and about abusing privileges and one thing and another, unless it is to the advantage of someone to circumvent a rule. But early in the afternoon, shortly after I made an announcement of my intention to speak, I got a hunch, for no good reason-nobody said a word to me; it just dawned on me-that the conferees were not waiting for any authorization. they were conferring. I made inquiry. I am afraid that is what has happened; they have gone into conference without any authorization from the Senate. Some time when I collapse or decide to quit, they will bring the motion to hold a conference out of one hip pocket, and when that is agreed to, they will bring the conference report out of the other hip pocket, and the whole thing will be over. Of course, my scheme had been to talk this afternoon and make them postpone their conference until tomorrow, when I would be rested up and could begin again. . I might then last until the Philadelphia convention forced a cessation of things here and moved hostilities hence. But we shall have to make up our mind later about how long we are going to talk. There are some things want to say about this, anyhow.

I was talking about the quotation from the brochure prepared by the Office of Naval Intelligence for the Senate Appropriations Committee which was considering the question of strategic stock-piling. It says:

Realistically, all wars have been for economic reasons. To make them politically and socially palatable, ideological issues have always been invoked.

As I said, Mr. President, you cannot get folks mad enough to fight about markets or materials and cartel involvements all over the world; so ideological issues are raised. As I said, those issues may be with respect to Catholicism or Protestantism or the Jewish question, or Mohammedism—anything to scare the people with something of that kind.

In this connection, Mr. President, it is the same ideology that Adolf Hitler used. He used communism as his bogeyman and was going to defend the world against it. The Germans formed their Axis, and one thing and another. We are using the same old Hitler bogyman—Russia. Watch out, or the Communists will get you. That does not seem to scare people sufficiently, so every few days, for the past year or two, we have had a new crisis, on paper. I remember the first crisis was when we had to help the Turks and the Greeks. No one got very excited about it, so there was a new crisis brought up. There was an invading army coming down from Yugoslavia which would take over Greece in short order, if we did not get there in time. Of course that army evaporated into thin There was a certain date before which we had to pass a bill, or the world would find itself in chaos. We passed the bill, and they finally received their money.

I remember there was some talk about the Russians being in Iran. They were there originally as part of the war strategy. They overstayed their welcome, and the matter was called to the attention of the United Nations. Without even a verbal shot being fired, the Russians packed up and went home. They left the oil there, incidentally. If they were out to conquer the world, I think they would have remained there. I think if I were a Russian and wanted to conquer the world, I would have stayed there. But the Russians went home.

Maybe it does not mean anything; maybe it is not significant. It was a victory for the United Nations that the Russians went home. They did not want to be condemned by this great new organization.

I remember when they were trying to stir the Russian-Iran situation to a crisis pitch. It was said there was an army coming down from Russia. It was mechanized; it had tanks and everything. It was coming right into Iran, according to the big headlines. But that was the last we ever heard of it. The headlines dropped them, and they evaporated somewhere, and never showed up again.

Of course, Mr. President, the press of America is in this propaganda, hook, line, and sinker. They are controlled by the big fellows who expect to profit from the armaments program, so they are glad to blow up these phoney scares. The latest scare we had was the submarine scare. There were submarines everywhere; the place was overrun with them. I was in California at the time the scare started. One paper had a headline reading "Submarine sighted off coast." One submarine was seen close to shore. The others had been over on the other side of the Pacific, but this newspaper found a submarine right close to the shore. After the banner headline clear across the top of the page, it narrowed down to one column, which said: "Thought to be a United States submarine maneuvering."

We are told that Russia has a big land army, and it would appear that it is going to march right across the ocean, and land in the United States. Russia does not have any ships to speak of, so I do not know how her army could get here

Hitler burned down the Reichstag, blamed it on the Communists, and got the folks really scared. In this country we have one crisis after another. I think it will turn out like a vaccination for smallpox. We have so many crises we will become immune one of these days. and then the Red scare will not work any more. A new crisis is brought up and no one pays any attention to it, like the boy who hollered "wolf" once too often. But that is still their line—"The Communists will get us." Russia is devastated, but fact is not taken into consideration. If they do not get us mad enough to fight through that means, they will produce some day a document saying that the Russians are short of women and they are going to take all our women back to Russia. Then I suppose everyone will be mad enough to fight. If I believed that, I would be mad enough to fight. But I am not sucker enough to fall for that propaganda. We will hear that some of these days, mark my words.

We are getting ready to fight somebody—not "someone" anymore, but Russia. Even our Air Secretary comes to Congress and says that we have planes that can bomb the heart of Russia and return. No longer is it a question of who is the enemy or a potential enemy. It is made plain that it is Russia.

We are getting into an armament economy, turning over a large portion of our productive capacity to the manufacture of guns, tanks, airplanes, spears, and everything else, I guess. The funny part of it is, Mr. President, that we have hundreds of atomic bombs, and recently I learned from very high authority that if 250 of our present-day atomic bombs were exploded there would be no place on earth that would be habitable. We already have it in our power to kill everyone on earth. All we have to do is to detonate atomic bombs in one place, and the whole world will become so radioactive that no one can live.

Yet we are asked to draft our boys and put them into uniform. As I said the other day, I cannot see what difference it makes whether they die in uniform or in their B. V. D.'s. It does not make much difference. We are going to die, anyway. We have the bombs. I do not believe anyone will be able to stop the explosions of them when once we get started. So it strikes me that this draft business is pure idiocy.

If I knew what the conference report contains I might cease and desist. It is all ready, I suppose. If I thought the Senate had accepted the House amendment not to draft anyone until next January, that would be all right, because next January I believe we shall have a Congress elected on a platform opposing peacetime military training, and we can repeal the law before it ever gets started. But inasmuch as I do not know what has been put into the conference report, I shall have to go on and talk for a while.

Mr. President, I have here a copy of today's Washington Star, which contains an article written by Mr. David Lawrence, who is a rather conservative columnist. In fact, he publishes a magazine for businessmen to read. His article deals with the question of conscription. He says:

Delay in draft law unlikely to weaken diplomacy of United States.

We have been told that if we did not draft our boys, Secretary Marshall would be in a weak position. Of course I think he is in a weak position anyhow. He has been, ever since he became Secretary of State. He had no business being Secretary of State in the first place. He was a good general and he should have remained that.

I quote again from David Lawrence, the headline:

Administration failure to show its need leaves Congress hesitant.

In other words, he says that they have not proven or shown conclusively that we need a draft law, so the Congress is not very excited about passing one. He proceeds:

Outwardly the controversy over what kind of a draft bill to pass could be mistaken for a conflict of interest between isolationists and internationalists or between advocates of preparedness and opponents of larger armament.

I am not an opponent of adequate preparedness, Mr. President, but I am opposed to militarizing this Nation, and the scale at which we are going at it now can result only in the militarization of this country. It is sort of like dope, the more you get the more you want. You see, they start building all these billions of dollars' worth of guns, then the profits of the industrialists depend on guns, the wages of the workers depend on guns, then they are for the armament program, and it is more difficult to stop it. Every factory that is opened up to producing armaments makes it that much more difficult ever to get out of the armament business, ever to make a really sincere effort to try to attain peace in the world, because it becomes a vested interest. I am opposed to militarizing this country, getting it into the predicament into which Hitler got the German people, because people's morale and their moral sense of right and wrong become dulled after awhile. They realize that their livelihood depends on guns, and they have to rationalize around until they convince themselves that they must have the guns so that they can make more guns to make more profit, and there you go.

David Lawrence goes on to say:

But no such definitions or cleavages can be justified. The truth is that the President and the Secretary of State have failed to make out a case for the need of peacetime conscription. This means that just ahead of a national election Members of Congress of both parties are hesitant to vote for a draft.

I had not noticed that, Mr. President. I wish it were true. They voted for it, and they will vote for anything now-adays if you just put a little antired label on it.

To return to David Lawrence:

This may be called plain politics, but it is at the same time the manner in which the electorate reacts irrespective of partisanship. There are as many Democrats as there are Republicans who fear the consequences of a draft bill on the attitude of voters.

Many of them are going to be surprised about the consequences of a draft bill in the attitude of the voters. I promise them that.

It isn't as if there were a war in progress into which America might suddenly be drawn. The threat of war with Russia has been dramatized again and again but without conviction.

That is David Lawrence I am quoting. He proceeds:

The House of Representatives, during its debate on the draft bill, tossed around one report that the Secretary of State did say war was possible and another that he said there was no pressing emergency. Whatever he said was said in an executive session and serves only to underline how uninformed the American people are as to what is the nature of the military crisis that confronts them.

The diplomatic relations between Russia and the United States have, of course, been strained but the Russian "peace offensive" successfully disseminated the impression that war isn't likely in the immediate future. The American Government's rejoinder to the "peace offensive" was weak and clumsy, and hence the draft bill suffered.

Much more important as an influence in retarding the draft law from being passed in the form desired by the armed services was the propaganda attributed to the supporters in Congress of the 70-group Air Force. Over the protests of the President and his Secretary of Defense, Congress appropriated more money than was requested in order to put into being a 70-group air force.

I may say, Mr. President, that practically every appropriation bill that has come through the Senate the last few days, when so many appropriation bills have been coming through, practically every one that was of a military nature the Senate increased over what the House appropriated. In the past the Senate has been known as the conservative body, as the body more cautious, at least more careful, what they put their name to. It used to be said that the House of Representatives would pass legislation which they knew was unconstitutional, which they really did not want passed. They would pass it so that they could go out and talk to the folks at home about what they had voted for, and they had confidence that the Senate would reject the legislation, or modify it, and make it constitutional, would be more careful and more thorough in their approach. They cannot say that any longer. The Senate "ups" the ante on every item for guns and greater expenditure of the people's money in the European recovery program. Any place they can spend it they are all for spending

I now go back to David Lawrence:

The explanation heard in the corridors of the Capitol was that by voting more planes there would be no need of a draft. As a sheer matter of exchange, many Members were willing to spend more dollars than to vote to tear up the lives of the younger generation and interrupt their schooling and their working careers with 2 years of military service.

Those are the words of David Lawrence, not mine, Mr. President, "tear up the lives of the younger generation." I think that is well put.

As it turns out, Congress voted the 70-group Air Force and still has been confronted with a demand for a draft bill. Many Members have hesitated to go along with the peacetime conscription because they honestly believe an air force can do everything.

I believe so, too, Mr. President. In fact, we do not even need an air force. All we need is some bombs, just put them out on a high hill and explode them all, and we have them licked, everybody dies. Of course, we die, too, but we do not get licked. Everybody is dead, so we do not need even an air force.

I should certainly prefer appropriating money for a 70-group air force than to draft the boys.

David Lawrence continues:

They have been told by some overenthusiastic airmen that both an army and a navy is relatively inconsequential and that, if only enough airplanes are provided, American security will be assured.

While we are on the subject of airplanes, I think one of the most statesmanlike proposals that has been made in America for a long time was made by Henry Wallace at the Madison Square Garden meeting a while back, when he offered the suggestion that our airplane factories should be taken over and operated by the Government, because, as Mr. Wallace pointed out, they are not an economic proposition in peacetime. They cannot survive and make profits. object of private industry is to make The airplane factories cannot do so without orders for military planes, and, of course, when they depend on orders for military planes they will spend a great deal of their money in hiring experts and lobbyists to keep the war hysteria stirred up and try to secure more orders for military planes to manufacture. That being the case, I think the proposal made by Mr. Wallace certainly should be adopted. It would go a long way toward lessening the pressure for war crisis which can only result in war eventually.

Mr. Lawrence in his article continues:

Now, the ground forces feel themselves in need of a draft law to supply the enormous numbers of men needed to handle the installations and mechanical work at the bases where airplanes take off and land.

While the armed services have each been eager to get their necessary appropriations, it does seem nevertheless that not a very strong case has been made for the draft—at least one strong enough to convince Congress, many of whose Members still feel that a mild draft law with a deferred date will accelerate recruiting and bring the necessary personnel into the armed services long before the actual need for war service will arise.

I understand the House measure contains a provision which would defer the draft until next January. That would make it nonsensical for us to pass a draft law now, because we would be passing a law which would take effect during and impose on the prerogatives of the next Congress. The next Congress will convene in the coming January.

The House bill also contained an amendment, if I have been correctly informed, directing someone, I do not know who, to put on an all-out campaign to induce young men to volunteer. Iam all for that, Mr. President. Whatever men we need, let us pay them for their service. We do not draft policemen to police Washington, D. C., or Podunk, back home. If we cannot obtain policemen for $1,200 a year we pay them $1,500, or if we cannot obtain them for $1,500 a year we perhaps raise their pay to $2,000 or $2,400. We hire policemen and pay them what they are worth. But when we want soldiers to protect us in peacetime, lo and behold, we will just yank the boys off the street and say, "Get into uniform. Some of us are busy, and we will select you."

I return to David Lawrence and read: Since war isn't regarded as imminent, a draft law that takes effect after election isn't likely to weaken the diplomacy of the United States. For the important fact psychologically is that there is to be a peacetime draft.

Of course what Mr. Lawrence wants us to do is to pass a draft law and keep it lying around so as to scare the boys by the threat that we are going to draft them if they do not watch out, and if they do not enlist. It would be perfectly dishonest, of course, to pass a draft law and put it into effect in peacetime.

Mr. President, there have been a number of political speeches made on the floor in the last few days. Yesterday the Chamber was well decorated with charts and one thing and another which were placed all about the room. It was the most attractive decoration of the Chamber I have seen. The charts showed how folks voted on measures-the Democrats and the Republicans. An interesting thing about it was that most of the votes were cast back yonder when Roosevelt was President. Those who presented the charts were not very proud of the votes taken since Roosevelt passed on. It is not the same old Democratic Party that it used to be when he was its leader. That is why I decided to go with Henry Wallace. As I said at the time I did so, I did not leave the Democratic Party. The Dem-cratic Party simply left me. I still believe in the same things I believed in when I was elected on a pledge to support Franklin D. Roosevelt but the Democratic Party has left those principles, so I will stay with those principles even though it is necessary to organize a new party to fight for those principles.

Since other folks have set forth their party platforms, have stated what they believe in, we may as well have the benefit of the record and show what the new party believes in.

First and foremost we believe in keeping the peace. Inasmuch as we have looked and have seen that we have enough bombs to kill everyone in the world, including ourselves, we fail to see the percentage in starting a war. No one is going to win. We are all going to die if a war were to come. In fact I think it would be much more sensible if, instead of spending billions of dollars to draft our boys, and to build tanks-and we are going right on building atomic bombs—we should locate some big caves. perhaps the Mammoth Cave, and put lead doors on the openings into it so the radioactivity could not come in, and if there was any way in the world to purify atmosphere, to take radioactivity out of it-I do not know whether there is, but I guess there is not-we might install machinery to blow fresh air, decontaminated air into the Mammoth Cave, and then select about a half a dozen young couples who have just gotten married, and set them up to housekeeping in Mammoth Cave so when all of the rest of us are killed, they can hold out there for a few years, whatever time it will be until the earth will become decontaminated, and then they can emerge and proceed to repopulate the earth. That would be a more sensible course to Incidentally it would be very gratifying to me if that were done, because doubtless some couples would be chosen from the largest name groups, which would be the fairest thing to do, and they would probably begin with the Browns, the Smiths, the Joneses, and I think the Taylors would get in about sixth, someplace along there, so the name of "Taylor" would be perpetuated after the fracas was all over. I do not set myself up as a candidate for the job, however.

We were saying that the new party does not believe there is any percentage in getting into a war, and that we should keep the peace. We do not believe that there has been a genuine effort made to get along with Russia. Quite the contrary. It is our conviction that the cartelists, the monopolists, and the miltarists have taken over the control of the country and that many of them actually want war, and they feel that the Russians do not have the bomb, I guess, and that we can drop 240 bombs, if not 250, and maybe whip the Russians and rule the world and exploit its people.

There are others who want to remain generals and admirals and majors and colonels and monopolists and cartelists, and profit. They want to keep up the war tension so they can go ahead with the armament program. So we do not feel that a genuine effort to keep the peace has been made by arriving at an understanding with Russia. Therefore we contend that the election of Henry Wallace would be practically the only sensible way for us to reach an agreement with Russia, because Henry Wallace is the only man of sufficient stature to aspire to the Presidency of the United States, who has not fallen for the lure of cheap publicity to be gained in the reactionary press by denouncing Russia every day of the week, and trying to blame all our troubles on communism. You can name any prospective candidate you want to and they are all in on this propagandist scare against Russia and denouncing Russia. How does anyone expect them to make an about-face and save face, Mr. President? They cannot do it. Henry Wallace has held himself above those things. It is not because Henry Wallace loves Russia. We see that propaganda everywhere. Henry Wallace would not trade one spadeful of the soil of Iowa, where he was born, for all the ground in Russia. I am confident of that. I know him pretty well. But he has been big enough to resist the temptation to climb on the red smear bandwagon. Believe me, Mr. President, it took some pretty serious thinking on my part to make up my mind to go with Henry Wallace. I knew what the result would be. I was elected to the Senate over what most people would have considered insurmountable obstacles. It is fine to be a Senator. It is the best job I ever had, anyway I look at it-from the standpoint of salary, prestige, or anything else. It is wonderful.

But I have three boys. They must be educated. When I am out of the Senate I do not know what I shall do. I spent my earlier life in the theatrical profession. I cannot go back to it. One cannot drag three small boys around the country. They must go to school. So I do not know what will happen to me when I am out of the Senate.

For that reason it was pretty serious when Mr. Wallace asked me to join in this great effort to save the world from extinction. That is what it amounts to. If I had not thought so, I might not have gone with him. But I felt that that was the issue that was involved; that we were being taken toward a war which could mean only, in all probability, the end of life on this planet. So I joined Henry Wallace. There are more important things than my political security, my political future, or my economic security.

Those things are the welfare of everyone's sons, including my own. That is why I am opposed to the draft bill. It just does not make sense. It only adds to the danger of war. As I have said, we can kill everyone anyway, so why draft the boys and take us along this militaristic road?

However, for the benefit of those who are convinced that we must fight Russia, let me say that I believe that we would be much better off with Henry Wallace as President if it ever came to a showdown and we did have to fight Russia. I am not conceding for a moment that we are going to have to fight Russia. do not believe we will. At the present time there are millions of American people-and I am one of them-who are not convinced that an honest effort has been made to seek a rapprochement with the Russians. But if we were dragged into a war with Russia this country would be very much divided. There would be a lack of enthusiasm for any such efforts; and that is very important. Napoleon said that morale is to numbers as 3 is to 1. It would be very important that we have a united country in case of war.

If Mr. Wallace were to become President, and he made an all-out effort to reach an agreement with the Russians and failed, then the people of America would know that everything possible had been done in a genuine spirit of cooperation and with a real desire to get along with the Russians. Then the common people would be behind any such effort if it had to come about. We do not have to worry about the monopolists, the cartelists, and the military men. They cartelists, and the military men. do not like Wallace, but they would be all for a war even with Wallace running it. So I think the best hope of the American people for peace and the best hope of coming out best is the election of Henry Wallace. I do not know how we are going to come out best in a war; but at least we could all die united under Henry Wallace, in case we got into a fracas.

So for war or peace, I am convinced that Henry Wallace is the best man for the job. Of course, Mr. Wallace's detractors say that he is a "screwball," a seer, and one thing and another. It is said that he could not stand up to Stalin, that Stalin is a smart fellow. Perhaps Stalin is smart, but I contend that Henry Wallace himself is pretty smart.

Henry Wallace was the greatest Secretary of Agriculture we ever had. He did more for the farmers of America as Secretary of Agriculture than was ever done for them before or since. Aside from that, Henry Wallace has done more for the farmers by developing his hybrid corn than has any other person who ever lived in all history. His hybrid corn, with its fabulous yields, has put millions of dollars of actual cash money into the pockets of American farmers during the past few years.

But the hybrid corn which Henry Wallace perfected is like a mule. It will not reproduce. You have to buy the seed from Henry every year. I contend that any man who can figure out a scheme like that is no fool. I never heard of Joe Stalin figuring out anything half that smart. At the same time, it is a very humanitarian thing. Henry has become well-to-do from it, and at the same time it helps the farmers. In fact, Henry Wallace is a successful man by any standard—even the one most commonly applied in these great United States, the one of financial success.

Henry Wallace is a success financially. He is a great scientist. Some will try to prove that he is crazy because he has hobbies, like throwing the boomerang. Throwing the boomerang is no crazier

Throwing the boomerang is no crazier than chasing a golf ball all over. It is smarter, in fact. You do not have to chase the boomerang. You do have to chase the golf ball. Henry Wallace is a good boomerang thrower. One day he threw one which hit a Hearst reporter, and it looked like an accident.

I believe that Henry Wallace can and will reach an honorable agreement with the Russians. We are not for peace at any price. Our detractors will say that we are groveling cur dogs, and this, that, and the other thing. Nothing like it at all. We believe that this can be done honorably, and that the Russians will be glad to go home and stay at home, if we will go home and stay at home, and if they have reason to believe that we will stay home. At the present time, with all our preparations for war, how can the Russians have any confidence that we would go home or stay at home? There are many reasons why they should want to stay at home. They have vast resources. They live better in peacetime than they do in wartime, due to the nature of their economy. They would like to develop their country. So I am convinced that we can have peace honorably, and that is the main objective of our new party.

What will we do on the domestic front? Whenever it has been suggested that we take care of the old people or build schools or hospitals, the argument has always been raised, "We cannot afford it. It will bankrupt the Nation." Is not that funny, Mr. President? But now we can appropriate billions and billions and billions of dollars for armaments, and billions and billions and billions of dollars for Europe, and no one worries as to whether or not it is going to bankrupt us. It is, but people do not seem to worry about it, because they are getting profits out of it, and they do not worry about anything so long as they are getting profits. Their philoso-phy is to let the next generation take care of the mistakes they make. If they can only get their hands in the old profit bag and get theirs now, they are satisfied. So they no longer say, "We can-not do these things because it would bankrupt the country." When we start our program for domestic betterment of this great Nation and it is said, "You are going to bankrupt the country," we are going to say "Nuts! We saw what you spent for armaments."

We will call off the armament program as soon as we reach an agreement with the Russians. They will have to call theirs off, too, but, of course, we shall be just as well off relatively if they have no guns and we have none. In fact, we shall be a great deal better off, because then we shall have a few months to live while we get ready. As it is now, everyone can be killed without notice. It is very bad. There is no peace of mind.

The other day I read that our mental hospitals are becoming filled with crazy people. They are all going "nuts" because they do not know what day the bombs are going to drop on them. should stop spending all these billions of dollars for armaments, and should use some of that money-not all of itto make ours a better country in which to live.

For instance, suppose we were to use a few of those billions of dollars to have a health program, under which we would build hospitals and would train doctors and would make it possible for poor sick people, or sick people who are poor, whichever way one wishes to state it, to call in a doctor and have a checkup before they get sick, and thus stay well. Certainly it would be better to have such preventive methods used rather than to have people wait until they were really sick before they called Would not that be better than this fool draft law which I have been discussing? After all, it takes healthy people to be good soldiers. We found that out in the last war. We could hardly get enough boys to carry the guns that had to be carried. Many of the young men of our country were found to have had rickets or some other disease or trouble which made it impossible for them to carry guns and serve as soldiers.

Mr. President, I remember that when I was in California not long ago I saw piles of oranges 10 feet high and half a mile long-not one pile, but many piles. If someone had taken one of those oranges, he would have been arrested and charged with stealing. Yet we have had many children in our country suffering from rickets. We must not allow that to occur any longer, or else our people will go Communist or something worse.

These big fellows realize that: but instead of seeing to it that the people have enough money with which to buy the things they need and require, they propose an armaments program. They suggest that billions of dollars be used to buy guns. Of course, when great quantities of guns are made, other articles will be scarce: Frigidaires and automobiles, for instance, will be scarce. That is the whole idea behind this armaments plan. Those who are behind it are not afraid of Russia; they know Russia is not able to attack anyone. They are simply using Russia as a bogeyman,

But the new party would have a health program, and would use some of the money-which otherwise would be spent for guns—for the welfare of the people of America. Mr. President, would not that be a good idea? After all, the guns will be useless after the earth is blown up by the 250 atom bombs.

Mr. President, do you not think it will be better to have more schools and better schools and increase the salaries of the school teachers, so that they can live decently and so that the teaching profession will attract our average citizens? What a sad spectacle the situation today is, Mr. President. Almost everyone makes more money than the school teachers do. Not long ago I was in There is a great deal of gambling out there. The girls running the gambling tables have to be quick at figures, of course, so as to be able to figure up the percentages. It seems that nearly every one of the girls running the gambling tables in Las Vegas and Reno is a former school teacher. Think of That is a sad commentary on present-day America-dissipating our wealth all over the world; spending billions of dollars for armaments that are absolutely useless, because we have enough bombs to kill everyone, in the first place.

Do you not think it would be a good idea to do as the new party advocates? Instead of spending money on useless armament projects, and thus degrading mankind, as they must, with their promise of destruction and the destruction of the morale of the people, do you not think it would be much better to build homeshomes for veterans, at least? Let us not draft any more of our young men until we build homes for the veterans of the last war. The only way they will get homes will be to have the Federal Government build the homes.

Incidentally, Mr. President, where are ne homes? Where is the housing bill? the homes? Some Members of Congress are greatly worried about drafting the boys, but they are not worried about the housing They have kicked that around and kicked it practically to death, and I guess it has been finished before now.

But, single-handed, I am trying, to stop this despicable business of militariz-ing our Nation.

The new party would build homes, not only for veterans, but for all Americans who need homes. Only a fraction of the money which is being spent so lavishly and so hopelessly for armament and for co-called aid to fascism all over the world would be required for the building of homes which our new party advocates.

Mr. President, how about some legislation for civil rights?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. TAYLOR. I yield for a question. Mr. WHERRY. I am wondering whether the distinguished Senator will permit a vote on the motion to disagree to the amendment of the House to the draft bill, agree to the conference requested by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses, and for the appointment of conferees, and then let the conferees work out whatever provisions they might work out, and report to the two Houses. Then the Senator of course could use his own judgment as to whether the conference report would be accept-

Mr. TAYLOR. The Senator from Nebraska does not have to beat about the bush. Let him find out what the conferees have agreed upon, and write it on a piece of paper, and bring it around here and let me look at it, and if it is O. K., I will agree to let the conferees be appointed, so as to make it official.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, that is quite an assignment. Of course it is not

I respectfully submit to the distinguished Senator that when the conference report comes back, if the provisions of the report do not meet with the approval of the Senator from Idaho, certainly there will be ample time for him to continue the speech he has already begun, but the procedure I suggest would give us the authority to have the conference report presented as quickly as pos-

Mr. TAYLOR. That is what I do not want to have done.

Mr. WHERRY. An additional reason for making this request is that there are five conference reports which should be adopted. One is on the highway bill, another is on the Interior Department appropriation bill, another is on the displaced persons bill, and there are several others. I believe that between the time when a vote would be taken on the motion to disagree to the amendment of the House, agree to the requested conference, and to appoint the conferees on this measure, and the time when the conference report would be presented, there would be ample time to consider the other conference reports.

Thereafter the Senator would have the same opportunity he has now, but we would have expedited the transaction of the work before us, and of course thereafter the Senator could continue to make the speech he is making now. I think that is a very fair proposal, and it should command the Senator's utmost consid-

Mr. TAYLOR. I have no objection to having any measure except the draft bill considered. If Senators wish to lay aside the draft bill temporarily, and take up and pass everything else on the calendar, that will be entirely satisfactory to me, and I shall vote "aye."

Mr. WHERRY. Of course, the Senator from Idaho overlooks the fact that until the vote is taken on the motion to agree to the requested conference and appoint conferees, officially there can be no conference on the draft bill. If it were not for the fact that when the conference committee returns with its report, the distinguished Senator will have the same opportunity that he has now, I would not even make the suggestion to him, because I have always cooperated with the distinguished Senator; I think he will agree with me as to that.

I am simply making this suggestion in order to expedite matters generally.

The Senator's speech could be continued or resumed the moment the conference report came back. If the provisions of the conference report are not acceptable to the Senator, of course he can speak in the same way that he is speaking now. In the meantime, the conferees will have concluded their deliberations and we could also have considered and agreed to the other conference reports.

So I submit the request to the Senator. I think it is a very fair proposal, and does not in any way prejudice or take away the rights the Senator has now to oppose whatever is submitted by the conference.

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. President, I merely wish to say that my object in talking now is to split my remarks into two segments.

Mr. WHERRY. Of course, the split has already been made.

Mr. TAYLOR. But not enough of a

I had in mind talking now; and it was my hope that when, later, the conferees were appointed, they would not be able to get their conference report back until morning. But I think they have "pulled a fast one" on me. I am afraid they have already conferred. As I have said, if anyone wishes to sneak to me a copy of their report, or the main provisions of it, and let me look at it, I may decide to call this off. But until then, I think I shall proceed for a while.

Anyway, I have not gotten into the RECORD all the program of the new party, and I want to get all of it in the RECORD.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I was busy. Did the Senator make a proposition? If so, I did not hear it.

Mr. TAYLOR. No, I did not proposition anybody. I want to say I have the highest regard for the Senator from Nebraska. In fact, he is such an estimable gentleman I wish he would join the new party. [Laughter.]

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I tried to accomplish something anyway. I hope the Senator will consider it.

Mr. TAYLOR. The Senator from Nebraska should make clear what he said.

Mr. WHERRY. I say, I hope the Senator will consider the matter as he proceeds. I am satisfied, I may say with all respect, that the Senator would not be prejudicing his rights, he would have the same opportunity to continue his speech after the conference report comes back, if the conference report comes back. Even though the conference report might not be satisfactory in all its phases, it might appeal to the Senator in such a way that he would feel he could accept it. Until the conference report comes back, I submit the Senator has to anticipate what may happen.

Mr. TAYLOR. My statement was that the Senator from Nebraska was such an estimable gentleman I wish he would join the new party. The Senator perhaps did not hear me say that, for he replied, "I tried." [Laughter.] I simply did not want him to be left on a spot here.

I was discussing civil rights. Nothing has been done, when there are millions of Americans who live from day to day all their lives in an inferior status. They are not Americans; they are second-class citizens. All over this country I have been traveling back and forth, and I wish that people who have race prejudice in their hearts and who feel that Negroes must be kept in an inferior position could have traveled with me and have met the Negroes I have met.

Indeed, Mr. President, in many places I have stayed in the homes of Negroes, for the good and sufficient reason that in many places rooms will not be rented to Mr. Wallace or myself, because we are sympathetic with the Negro people; much less will rooms be rented to anyone whose skin is a little dark.

A very strange thing happened last fall, I believe it was. There was a Negro gentleman who put on a turban, one of those Hindu turbans. He toured all over the South, being received with high honors, bowed to and scraped around, simply because he wore a turban. It was not known that he was a Negro. People thought he was a Hindu. You see, they cannot tell by looking at people, so I suggested, I do not see why they do not just put turbans on all Negroes and let it go at that, and they would all be entitled to equal rights.

But we met some wonderful people, Negroes, all across the country, smart, intelligent, educated. It only goes to show what could be done if all Negroes had equal opportunity. Of course the demagogues get up and say, "Well, I don't want my daughter to marry a Ne-Well, no one is suggesting that anybody's daughter or anybody's son marry a Negro. We merely want them to have equal opportunities at jobs, equal opportunities to get a meal, to go into a place and eat, and jut be treated like everybody else; that is all. I do not think that would cause any more intermarriage or mixture of the races than goes on now. But we would have a civil rights program.

The new party would have a civil rights program. In fact, we believe in equality for all Americans. We have several Negroes running for Congressional seats. We have down in Georgia a Negro candidate for the United States Senate. The new party would repeal the Taft-Hartley law and enact sensible labor legislation. Incidentally we ought to have $1 an hour as a minimum wage, which is another thing we advocate.

The new party would take care of our old people with just a few of the dollars we are spending for guns now. We are not suggesting any new appropriations; we would just divert some of these billions that have been appropriated for guns and for European recovery-which they do not need. We would see that our old people under present conditions have at least $100 a month. They should have that much, and we are for it, and we would see that they got it. The new party would formulate a farm program to work through the United Nations. There was a world food program figured out here, and we spurned it, we would not have anything to do with it. We would not make friends by that action, Some of the other nations thought very poorly of us. But we would figure out a farm plan, working through the United Nations. In fact, the new party plans to work through the United Nations always, every time there is a possibility to build up the United Nations. We are for it 100 percent. We would work through the United Nations in figuring out a farm program that would not only give our farmers a decent return on their labor and investment, but even more important I believe to the farmers-I have talked to many of them, I was raised on a farmeven more important, at least as important as the fact he would get a decent monetary return, then through the United Nations we could figure it out so the farmer would always know that every mouthful of food he raised went to feed some hungry person somewhere in this hungry world, because there are people all over the world, millions of them, who never have a full belly. We would correct that condition to the best of our ability, while helping our farmers at the same time.

Then of course, Mr. President, we want to assure the American people there would be no Mundt-Nixon bill, there would be no curtailing of civil liberties, anybody's right to speak or to say anything he thought, so long as he did not advocate violent overthrow of the government. If I had my say about it I would see that there was a town hall built in every community in America that does not have one, with a Federal charter, a stipulation, "built by the Federal Government," and anybody could use that hall, just pay for the lights and the heat and a little depreciation, and use it to say anything he pleased at any time he pleased, and be assured of full police protection. That one thing, Mr. President, would do more to head off any foreign ideologies or foreign subversive schemes than any other thing I can possibly think of. As long as we let people blow off steam, and as long as one fellow can go to the community hall tonight and advocate communism, if he wants to, or socialism, and another fellow, the next night, can go there and advocate a certain kind of capitalism, or anything he wants to advocate, so long as they do not advocate changing our government by force and violence, that is the greatest safety valve of all.

Of course people have to have something to eat, a minimum, at least. They must have opoprtunities to educate their children, and must have a fairly decent place in which to live. Those things are minimum requirements, which any government, under any way of life, must provide for if it expects to survive. We could do all of the things I have mentioned, and there would still be billions of dollars kicking around, which we are now spending for guns. We could make substantial payments on our national debt. It is important that the national debt be reduced and paid off as rapidly as possible, because the burden of interest is unbearable. However, instead of paying off the debt, we are spending billions for guns for Europe and are reducing taxes. Of course almost all of the reduction in taxes goes to the benefit of persons with a great deal of money. It is almost criminal, in fact. They do not want the debt paid off. It is the biggest racket they ever had. So let the debt remain large. Reduce taxes. We could make substantial payments on the debt, and then, after that, out of the billions of dollars being squandered everywhere, we would have enough left to have a real tax reduction. We could see that the common folks received the most of it, the ones who need it the most. They do need it, desperately, Mr. President. Prices are all out of proportion to the amount of wages which workers are receiving. They receive a wage increase, and then the producers raise the prices of their articles sky high, or out of all proportion to the actual cost of the wage increase, and the workers are worse off than they were before. Today I saw an advertisement in a newspaper of a 1949 Ford automobile for $1,995. That is almost $2,000 for a Ford automobile. The Ford Co. used to apologize if it charged $700 or $800.

Another thing which the new party would like to make plain is this: We believe that the Jewish people are entitled to a home land in Palestine, and we would be foursquare on that proposition, instead of shilly-shallying, backtracking, or double-crossing, as we have been in our foreign policy. In fact, this bipartisan foreign policy of ours should be ashamed to go by the name of foreign policy. We control the United Nations because we are dishing out billions of dollars all over the earth to phony cardboard Fascist governments, and we control the votes of the United Nations. Along came Palestine, and we were in favor of partition. Everyone agreed, including the Russians. Then the Arabs kicked up a little bit, so Mr. Forrestal, a representative of the oil companies, said, "We cannot afford this. Our oil is in danger." So we called off partition. Then we wanted a trusteeship. We did not ask the United Nations to figure out a new plan; we just figured out a trusteeship. We wrote it up and handed it to them and said, "Debate this a reasonable length of time, and the answer is "Yes." So they did that. We told the Jews not to set up a State, that we would not approve of it. But they established it anyway, and there was a fait accompli. So Mr. Truman, without even telling our representatives at the United Nations, recognized Palestine in 10 or 15 minutes. Our delegate to the United Nations was left standing there when word came over that the United States had recognized Palestine. The other delegates asked him, "Has your Government recognized Israel?" He said, "I do not know what my Government is doing." He was right. The whole world laughed right in the faces of our representatives.

Never has the prestige of this country fallen so low as it is at this time. I can assure the Senate that with the new party, under the leadership of Henry Wallace, the people will know where we stand. There will be no shilly-shally and double talk, one thing today and another thing tomorrow. Mr. Wallace is a forthright man.

Mr. President, many people are opposed to the draft bill. I have seen many of them across this great Nation. I have here a clipping from the New York Times of March 19, 1948, which says:

Cardinal Dougherty calls peacetime UMT menace to health and morality of youth.

The article goes on to say:

Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, ranking prelate of the Catholic Church in this country, declared today he is unalterably opposed to peacetime universal military training.

The spiritual leader of a million Catholics

The spiritual leader of a million Catholics in the Philadelphia Archdiocese stated the following reasons:

"First, it is against the traditions of this country.

"Second, where it is in existence is precisely where most wars have taken place."

Of course, Mr. President, that is a fact. All the countries of Europe have military training, and they were always getting into wars because they were always ready for war. Then it remained for us to go in and settle the proposition. We won, after all the countries with military training got the stuffing kicked out of them. We are now trying to follow their example, and it does not make sense.

The article continues:

Said training would remove young men, at a critical age, from their home surroundings and safeguards.

That is a true statement, Mr. President. The most terrible thing about it is that it will take young men out of school, and once they are out of school they seldom return. They will not return unless we provide many inducements, similar to those in the GI bill of rights.

The article continues:

It would throw them, with all their inexperience and without adequate safeguard, into frightful temptations calculated to undermine their morality and physical health.

Of course that has been proven, also, Mr. President. I have a very good friend in Idaho who had a boy who joined the Army. The boy was a little wild, to be sure, and when he got away from home and was over in Germany it was not long before he was shipped back in a box, feet first. He had drunk some wood alcohol, and that was his finish. His father had managed to keep the boy under control as long as he was home, but when he got away from home he did not last long.

I read further:

Experience shows that even military officers are frequently corrupt and a bad example to those under them.

This is Cardinal Dougherty speaking, I hasten to say, lest some Senator jumps up and calls me a Communist.

Here is what the Cardinal says:

Venereal disease would rise in a frightful degree and break down the health of future fathers of families.

No one can deny that. Past experience has proved it to be so.

The expense of universal military training would involve annually millions, if not billions of dollars to be paid by the taxpayers.

There seems to be no need in this country

There seems to be no need in this country of universal military training, which is boosted most by soldiers, particularly Army officers, who covet promotion and higher salaries.

Of course that is true, Mr. President. Army officers want to remain officers. They want to be promoted. All we have to do in order to appreciate their position is to try to put ourselves into their position. Suppose we had spend our lives becoming Army officers, and all of a sudden peace should break out. That is the way it is being referred to in the papers now, Mr. President. They say there is danger that peace might break out. But suppose peace broke out and the Russians and this country agreed that there would be no more war. Would not those Army and Navy officers be in terrible shape? They would be wore off than I would be if I were out of politics. They do not know another thing in the world except being generals. No wonder they want to remain generals.

Cardinal Dougherty goes on to say:

Finally, the chances are that hereafter battles will be fought in the air, rather than on foot; and in that case large armies will not be needed.

As I say, this article was written in March 1948, so it may be that Cardinal Dougherty had not heard yet that we have hundreds of atomic bombs, and that the war would not be fought in the air, if all we had to do was to set off our bombs and wait for everyone to die.

Cardinal Dougherty also observed that "certain groups are opposed in conscience to war and consequently to preparations for war"; and this is not only true of Quakers but also of many mothers of other religious beliefs.

Of course they are opposed to it, Mr. President, if we can just get word to the American people, if we can tell them how utterly stupid this whole business of preparing great armies, costing millions of dollars for tanks and arms of one kind and another, when we have the bombs just to end it all, how silly it is. I am afraid there are going to be a lot of folks who vote for this draft who will not be back here next fall, and then we will vote to repeal it.

Mr. President, I have said that I think it is possible for us to get along with Russia. Recently, when we had our peace scare, when the Russians took us at our word, when Gen. Bedell Smith, our Ambassador to Moscow, delivered that note, the Russians took us at our word and said they wanted to discuss this matter to talk about peace. We assured them we did not mean it, that we were just kidding, just being polite. At that time there were several accounts in the press, none of them played up, they were played down, in fact, over on the second or third page, telling about what happened in Russia when it looked as if we might have some peace talks.

Here is an article to which I wish to call attention though it does not deal with this particular matter. I had these articles printed in the Congressional Record, and that is why I am quoting from the Record. This is a dispatch from Moscow by Eddy Gilmore, Associated Press correspondent. He is a very reliable correspondent. He had been in this country some time, and he had just gone back to Moscow. This is what he had to say on returning to Moscow:

Returning to the Soviet Union from the United States one is struck by the absence of war talk among the Russian people. One simply doesn't hear any.

He does not say that there is very little war talk: he says one is struck by the absence of war talk in Russia. "One simply does not hear any." That is pretty strong language, a pretty broad statement. How different that is from what we hear in this country. The papers day in and day out are hammering away at us that we may have war most any day. Prominent men make inflammatory statements, average citizens take it up, of course, as they are wont to do when their leaders make such statements. The average citizens say, "We had better fight those Russians." Get in a taxicab or a barber chair and you can hear statements like that all too often.

Mr. Gilmore proceeded to say:

In Berlin the United States press department told me I'd better take a Russian-speaking Amercian officer from the liaison section with me to the Soviet airdrome to catch the plane.

"We'll give you a military escort, too,"

You see, all they can think of is military, military. He continues:

Showing up at 2 a. m. I was met by a liaison officer who said if it was all the same to me he wouldn't go along into the Soviet

I told him I spoke Russian and it wasn't necessary.

With a German chauffeur, four suitcases a typewriter, and a small dog I had purchased my little daughter, I set out. Halfway to the Russian zone we were overtaken by American military police.

"We will escort you," said one of the men.

"Why?" I asked.

"Well, you never can tell," said the man. About 100 yards from the Soviet zone the military police car halted.

"This is as far we go," said the man next to the driver. "We'll wait here. If your driver doesn't come back, we'll know you and he have had it.'

This was not cheerful talk for so early in the morning.

I am still quoting Eddy Gilmore.

About 200 yards down the road in the Soviet zone was a road block. A young Russian soldier stepped out and held up his

"Where to?" he asked.

I told him

"Got any documents?"

I told him, "No—just an American pass-port with a Soviet visa." He examined them by the headlights.

What about documents for the feep and driver?" he asked.

Yesterday was Sunday." 'Don't have any. "Oh, well," said the guard, "I guess every-thing is all right."

This certainly was not very ominous.
At the airport gate it was the same story. Again I got through with no trouble.

Mr. President, I am constrained to stop here and comment. He got into Russia with little or no trouble, yet we know that statements have been made recently that we are appropriating "Fund X," unspecified millions of dollars, for fifth-column activities in Russia and in nations friendly to her. Yet they let Mr. Gilmore right through.

Mr. President, if the Russians stated publicly that they were going to do such a thing as that we would be scared to death. We would not let Eddy Gilmore back into this country even after he had been to Russia. But they let him in with no great trouble. He continued:

"Here's your ticket," said the official. "We are not charging you for the dog. He can ride free."

There were 11 Soviet officers behind me. One suggested I should accompany him to have some tea.

After tea we discovered there was some

"To the friendship of our countries," said a young major returning to Moscow from an assignment in Berlin.

"To peace between our countries always," I proposed. All 11 officers drank the toast at

Here is the final paragraph in this article from Moscow by Eddy Gilmore:

Despite the Berlin tension in the American headlines and war talk, I heard not one word of that in Moscow. I'll wait 24 hours, I said to myself, and talk to more Russians. This I've done. Not one has mentioned war or the possibility of it.

Yet, Mr. President, we are being fed war propaganda. The situation is so serious, to hear people tell it, that we have to draft our boys and provide bil-lions for armaments. This is the greatest crime that was ever perpetrated upon humanity, the misleading of the American people into the idea that they have to fight Russia. There are millions of them coming to accept that idea. they become indoctrinated enough, they cannot be stopped.

As the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] said recently, the American people cannot continue indefinitely hating someone without doing something about it. When we are told we are in grave, imminent danger of attack from Russia, the people cannot continue in that strained way forever. They will insist on doing something about it sometime.

I have here another article which bears the date line Moscow on the day the exchange of notes took place, when it looked like there was some hope that we might have peace. The article was published, I believe, in the Washington Star of May 11. The date line is Moscow, and this is what it says:

Russians crowded five and six deep in front of newspaper bulletin boards today to read a Russian-American exchange of notes which they hoped might lead to better relations.

Did anyone see anything like that in America? I did not. Did anyone see people crowding 5 or 6 feet deep in front of a bulletin board to read the good news that maybe there was a chance that they were going to have peace? Well, they did in Russia. They must really want peace over there. I continue reading:

Laboring men in overalls, shawled mothers with babies in their arms, white collar workers and Army officers stood patiently awaiting their turn to read the three full columns of a Tass Agency dispatch on the exchange. As they read they nudged each other and made such comment as "Good eh! Good."

For the first time in months many of them beamed at those among them who obviously were foreigners.

That is something people understand. An elderly subway construction engineer said "Molotov will get together with you folks yet. You just see."

Well, unfortunately Mr. Molotov has not gotten together with us yet, so that Russian who wanted peace—he did at least, whether Molotov does or not-his hopes are not going to be realized, Mr. President.

No, I believe it is possible to get along with Russia. If you do not think so you might just as well go out and start digging your own grave with an automatic device to dump the dirt in upon you after you get in, because that will be our fate if we continue with this "get tough" foreign policy. If war comes we will all be killed at once, and there will be no one to bury us.

Mr. President, I should like to know why all the rush to jam this legislation through when nothing has been done about housing, nothing has been done about civil rights. There are many, many things which should have been done which have been left undone. Nothing has been done about a minimum wage. We are spending billions of dollars for useless armament.

Out in the Northwest they tightened up on everything else, spending less money for all good things. Out in the Northwest big floods have practically washed our country away. I have been agitating for a Columbia Valley Authority since 1938. Do Senators know what they called me because I wanted a Columbia Valley Authority like the TVA, to develop our Northwest, to prevent the possibility of these floods which have just cost us millions and millions, and many lives? Do Senators know what they called me because I wanted a Columbia Valley Authority? They called me a Communist. I was called a Communist before I began to run with Wallace. Since I have run with him is not the first time I have been called a Communist. I have been called a Communist for years, and it used to worry me a great deal, because I was not a Communist, and had not even read any Communist literature. Of course, after I had been called a Communist for a while my curiosity was aroused for that reason, and I started to study up on the subject, to see what it was all about.

The people called me a Communist in 1938. At that time I ran for Congress. and I was called a Communist because I wanted to develop our resources. I denied the charge. In every speech I made I said I was not a Communist. I denied the charge indignantly and righteously. I was defeated. I came fourth in a field of nine candidates in the primary.

In 1940 I was nominated to be United States Senator, and people began calling me a Communist again. They had not paid much attention to me until I received the nomination, because no one thought I would receive it. After I received it, however, they began calling me a Communist again. All the political experts told me I must jump on that charge, I must deny it. I did jump on it, and I was defeated again by 14,000 in the general election.

In 1942 I was again nominated to be United States Senator, and people again began calling me a Communist, and the political advisers said: "Don't let them get away with that. That is murder."

So I again denied the charge that I was a Communist. In every speech I made I told the people I was not a Communist, but again I was defeated.

In 1944 I again ran and was nominated to be United States Senator. Again people had not expected me to receive the nomination, but after I received it they began calling me a Communist again, and the political smart boys said: "Do not let them get away with that. Jump on that charge. If you do not, it will ruin you." I said: "The 'H' with them. I am not going to pay any attention to them. I am just going to tell the people what I am. If they want to think I am a Communist, it is just too bad." I did not even mention the charge. People just yelled "Communist" at me at the top of their voices, but by golly I was elected, Mr. President.

So we are not going to worry about this Communist smear in the new party. That is all those who are against us have to say about us. We have all the truth on our side.

We say it is idiotic to appropriate millions of dollars for useless armament, when we can destroy the world with the atom bomb we have. It is even foolish to continue making more bombs, Mr. President, because if we explode the bombs we have, we will all be dead. So why make any more. Why not quit making more of them now that we have the ultimate, the acme, here in this country. We can rub out Europe with the bombs.

Then there is the Marshall plan; yes; the Marshall plan. That is the biggest fake that was ever perpetrated on the American people. I have before me a clipping from the New York Times, and the headline of the article is: "Europe feels pangs of overproducing."

In other words, they have surpluses over there, so in order to help them out we start dumping our own on them. That is a fine idea-appropriate $6,000,-000,000 to dump some surpluses on them when they have overproduction of their own. Of course they are hard up. The people do not have any money. So we will send them free stuff. That will be better. Over there goods are manufactured, but the people do not have any money with which to buy what is manufactured, so the result is they must shut down their plants. We have gone crazy. If the Marshall plan is the best plan we can figure out the capitalists might just as well move out and private enterprise will be on the way out. If we cannot figure some way under private enterprise and capitalism, whatever you want to call it, so that it can distribute the good things we can produce, what good is it to continue to produce?

I think we can figure out these things. We can figure out a way to keep a large part of our private economy. We may have to socialize the monopolies. They are bigger than the Government. They run the Government. We may have to socialize them. We may have to socialize the rails, communications, and steel. Look at steel, Mr. President. We have had a steel shortage for years, and not a thing has been done about it. Everything is dependent upon steel, yet it is kept scarce. Steel should be socialized.

It is a monopoly. It is a basic industry. Too many genuine little enterprise undertakings depend upon steel for us to permit steel to be monopolized and kept scarce. The people should own it.

I mentioned rails. Coal is a joke. It is basic. We must have coal. Whenever there is a strike, what happens? The Government takes over-a fakeand runs up a flag, but the same boys continue to draw the profits. The same boys operate the industry. A couple of colonels move in and take a bottle of Old Taylor with them, and that is the extent of the occupation. Let us be honest about these things. We need some socialization in this country if we are to keep any private enterprise at all. But if we do not, if we let scarcities persist, there will be no private enterprise. Right now little-business men are in terrible shape. Anyone who has a sheet-metal-working shop is in tough luck. He cannot get sheet metal, and he must close up. Does anyone suppose that that makes him love private enterprise, when he is put out of business? No, sir.

We are in favor of real private enterprise, for a modest-sized establishment, especially when a man owns his own business and actively manages it. could arrive at some just yardstick to determine when an industry should be publicly owned. We have that task to do, or we shall have another depression. starvation in the midst of abundance, and communism. That is what Henry Wallace and I want to head off. Those who claim to be the best friends of private enterprise, those who call Henry Wallace and GLEN TAYLOR Communists, are the worst enemies of private enterprise, and actually, in practice, the very best friends of communism.

It is said that the Communists are going to support Wallace and TAYLOR. The pink ones, the ones who are about the color of this pad on my desk, may do so. Incidentally, that pad is a Senate pad. I did not order it especially. It was placed on my desk. I think that ought to be investigated. It is very pink. The pink Communists, the ones who really believe in democratic processes. may vote for Wallace and Taylor, and probably will. But the real red Communists, the ones who want revolution, will not do so. I have stated this on the floor of the Senate previously, but it will bear repeating, because perhaps some others will read it in the RECORD: The real red Communist will vote for the most reactionary candidate he can find. Of course he would probably be a Republican. So the real Communists will be voting Republican.

I told this story on the floor of the Senate about a year ago, but it will bear repeating: Before I came to the United States Senate I worked in a war plant. That was the last job I had before I came here. I worked as a sheet-metal mechanic in a war plant. I worked at a bench, I was not a foreman. I was merely a mechanic. There was a fellow working with me who was a welder. He was a nice fellow. He had a little country place, with a small acreage. His wife lived there, and he would go back home over the week end. He would tell me about the little acreage he had, with walnut trees, orange trees, and one thing and another on it. We argued politics. He hated Roosevelt. That was in 1943, before Roosevelt was elected for the fourth term. He would cuss Roosevelt. I would say, "Denny, how can you talk that way? Roosevelt is the best friend the workingman in America ever had. He saved us at a time when we were on the verge of chaos."

He would reply, "No; that Roosevelt—blah, blah, blah—the blankety-blank so-and-so." As I say, the Presidential election was coming up. This welder who worked with me said: "I hope that Taff is nominated on the Republican ticket. That is the man I am for." I would say, "Denny, how can you be for a man like Taff? You know his record. He is a conservative and a reactionary."

Since then, of course, the Senator from Ohio has been called a Communist, but that was because he wanted to build houses for the people. However, I could not convince my coworker. He was for TAFT; and if he could not have TAFT he wanted BRICKER. We would argue frequently. I would say, "You cannot mean that. You work for wages. Those fellows are not your friends."

Finally, after we had argued for several weeks, one day he laid down his welding torch and spit out a chunk of tobacco. He was a big red-faced Irishman, a very fine appearing man. He looked at me, grinned, and said, "Do you know why I am for Taft and why I hate Roosevelt?" I replied, "No; I have not been able to figure it out. It really has me worried." He said, "Well, sir, I am a Communist. We were just ready for a revolution, and that so-and-so Roosevelt came along and spoiled it all. He patched things up and ruined the revolution. If we can just elect that fellow BRICKER we will have a revolution inside of 2 years."

So that is where the Communist vote will really go—to the most reactionary candidate the Communists can find. Indeed, if I were a Communist I would follow that line of reasoning. It makes sense. If you want a revolution, that is the way to get it. Do not vote for Wallace and Taylor, because we will do as Roosevelt did. We will patch up the machine and make it work—perhaps we can make it work even better than Roosevelt

Mr. President, this bill should be subjected to the most searching examination of any bill that has ever passed a peacetime Congress. It should be considered by the country, by the people throughout the country, who have not had time to express themselves in connection with the sudden move to substitute the peacetime draft for the earlier proposal of universal milbary training. That is the principal reason why I am opposed to the passage of the bill at this time. I think it should be fought out in the campaign. Let those who run for office say, "I am for the peacetime draft," or "I am opposed to the peacetime draft, and let the people decide on that basis.

Hardly any Member of this body was elected on the platform of voting for a peacetime draft. We had just got out of the war when this Congress was elected. We had no thought of drafting men again. But things have moved fast since Mr. Roosevelt left us, and here we are again. So I believe that this bill should go over so as to let the people determine whether or not they want to elect a Congress pledged to vote for the draft. In that were done, I should not object. I do not object to what the people want, if I am sure they are getting what they want. That is all right; but from what I have seen in traveling around the country, I have not found very much sentiment in favor of a peacetime draft. One can always find young men who will say, "If they need me, I am ready to go." But the issue to be fought out here is. "Do we need them?" I would be ready to go if I thought I were needed. If we were in danger, or were attacked, I would be perfectly happy to go to war-I would not be happy; I would be perfectly willing to go. Let us put it that way. I would be glad of the opportunity to serve my country. Naturally, I would not be happy to walk off and leave my family. But the question is, "Is it necessary?" I come back to the argument which I mentioned before, that with the bombs we presently have we can kill everybody. What sense does it make after that to have any more preparations for war?

Another issue which should be fought out before the people is the question of equality in the armed services. As it is now, Negroes are segregated in the armed services. They are told that they are going out to fight for freedom; yet there is no freedom, no equality. They are made mess boys, cooks, stewards, and waiters, and placed in the most dangerous positions. On board ship they are down below, in the kitchen or somewhere else, and when the ship is torpedoed they have no chance to get out.

I think this whole matter should be gone into very thoroughly. The President's commission to study the proposition recommended that segregation in the armed forces should be abolished, and that everyone should be treated equally. But that makes no difference at all to the committee; they report a bill which contains nothing at all to stop segregation. The able and courageous Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Langer] fought valiantly here for equal-rights amendments and antidiscrimination amendments to the draft bill. After the various amendments have been made, and particularly after the proposed amendments to ban discrimination have been rejected by both Houses, I thing this question of segregation should be gone over again at this time.

I wish to speak of three main points in considering the draft legislation.

The first is that the proposed draft legislation presented to the Senate, by failing to provide against segregation and discrimination, does violence to the principles of Americanism and even to the principles on which such legislation must be based.

The second point is the objection to the draft as a peacetime instrument of policy in the United States.

The third point I should like to discuss is based on the simple facts of our international position, which in my estimation render a draft law unnecessary, and in fact make it necessary for us in the interest of peace to refuse to enact such a law.

Mr. President, the distinguished chairman of the Armed Services Committee has resolutely opposed all the amendments, offered on this floor by the Senator from North Dakota— amendments which I have supported to end discrimination and segregation in the armed forces. The chairman of the committee has even gone so far as to oppose his own majority leader on the proposed amendment to bar the payment of poll taxes by inductees. From reading the RECORD of the debate and the vote on that issue, I would gather that there was some kind of gentleman's agreement among the leaders of both parties not to press for any amendments which would protect the civil rights of Negro inductees. One might also gather the impression, from the fact that the Senate approved only one of the amendments offered by the Senator from North Dakota, that the Members of this distinguished body could squeeze out approval of a ban on the payment of poll taxes, but could not find the necessary degree of approval to eliminate the terror of lynching or the vast, subtle terror of discrimination against the members of the armed forces who happen to be of another color. I do not know how to argue any better the merits of those antidiscrimination amendments, which have been turned down by the Senate; but in turning down those amendments. the Senate and the chairman of the Armed Services Committee have done violence to any system of draft or of military training which has ever been urged in recent times. It is the chairman of the Armed Services Committee and the Members who participated in the gentleman's agreement to vote down the antidiscrimination amendments, who are introducing new and extraneous matter into the subject of military train--not the few Senators who support antidiscrimination as a part of the system of military training.

I see that the distinguished junior Senator from California [Mr. Know-LAND] has been appointed to ride herd on me while I occupy the floor here. He is a very likable gentleman, and his wife is a very lovely lady. My wife is very fond of her.

By way of diversion, let me recall that recently when I spoke, the junior Senator from California rose to his feet and very heatedly denounced me as a tool of Stalin, or something to that effect. I should like to read what I said after he got through denouncing me.

Since that time, of course, we have been on excellent terms. I may say for the benefit of anyone who is listenings that that is one of the good things about the United States Senate: A Senator may call another Senator a tool of Stalin, or almost anything else—although that is the worst thing that a person can be called nowadays—but later both Senators will meet in the cloakroom and will not even mention the incident, and will go on as if it never occurred. Of course, that is a good thing.

The strange thing about all this, Mr. President, is that although I have made several speeches here, and although on many occasions Senators have risen to denounce what I have said, they have never denounced anything specifically. They have said that my speech sounded as if Stalin wrote it, or something of that sort; but they never say that what I said is not a fact, or that they would like to argue with me about some report on Russia, or they do not say that what I said must be a lie. They never say anything of that cort. They simply say that I sound like a Bolshevik-they say that in general terms. Sometimes after I have finished speaking, Senators will enter the Chamber and will denounce me, even though they did not hear what I said. Sometimes they say that although they did not hear what I said, it must have been bad.

When the Senator from California denounced me, I said:

I thank the Senator from California.

Mr. President, what could be more polite than to thank someone for denouncing you?

Then I said:

I may say that his remarks will probably rate a great deal more attention than anything I have had to say here today.

In other words, I said that his denunciation of me for denouncing our foreign policy would get more attention than all the facts I had cited and all the statements I had made about what a rotten foreign policy we have had and about how the American people are being duped and deceived.

It has previously been pointed out on this floor that under the European recovery program, $10,000,000 of the taxpayers' money is to go to the newspapers for their work in selling the Marshall plan to the people of America, so it is no wonder that the newspapers favor the Marshall plan, and it is no wonder that they are against me when I oppose the Marshall plan; and, of course, it is no wonder, under those circumstances, that the newspapers give the Senator from California a "break" in the press when he denounces me.

I had some of my office force look through the newspaper accounts to see what the press had to say about my speech that day. The Senator from California took about 2 minutes to denounce me, whereas I talked for quite a while and presented a great many facts and figures and charges.

Let me read excerpts from some of the newspaper accounts.

Here is an article which appeared in the New York Times:

KNOWLAND BLASTS TAYLOR IN SENATE—TAYLOR ASSAILED FOR TRUMAN BLAST

Senator Knowland, Republican, of California, denounced Taylor-

And so forth. Here is another:

KNOWLAND TURNS WRATHFUL BLAST AT TAYLOR JIBES

Senator Knowland, Republican, of California, today—

And so forth. It would be nice to be on the other side, Mr. President, where you can just get up and denounce a guy for 1 minute, and you get all the headlines. In the position I occupy, of trying to tell the people the truth, you can talk until you are black in the face-I would not want that to happen and be discriminated against [laughter] but you can talk until you are blue in the face, let us say-we will compromise on blueand you do not get a word-just the folks who denounce you get all the publicity. They get into the papers all they had to say, but you do not get any.

Republican hits blast at Truman-Senator KNOWLAND sees TAYLOR'S attack aid to

I wonder what this one is. Oh, this one gets off the subject a little bit. I will save these and quote from them a little bit later, here. I have been looking for these; I lost them; they got mixed up with Knowland. I will put those aside. But I have a great many more here, showing how the press treats a thing like this. Somebody will probably get up and denounce me when I am through today, and they will steal all the thunder. Here we are, getting back, now:

KNOWLAND DENOUNCES TAYLOR FOR SLURRING TRUMAN, FORRESTAL

Senator Knowland, Republican, California, today wrathfully denounced-

Another headline:

TAYLOR assailed by Senators for aid to Kremlin—Denounced by Knowland and Mc-Mahon for attack on Truman and Forrestal.

McMahon got in on that one a little bit. That is the Herald Tribune. Here is one from the Des Moines Register:

GLEN TAYLOR calls names, receives a stiff rebuke.

Well, thank the Lord, I got my name in the paper that time.

Senator WILLIAM F. KNOWLAND replies-

And so forth. I got my name in the other one. This, from the Oregonian:

Senator castigates TAYLOR for criticism of Truman.

Senator WILLIAM F. KNOWLAND, Republican, California, Wednesday wrathfully de-nounced Senator GLEN TAYLOR * *

This, from the San Francisco Examiner:

Senator Knowland raps Taylor-Speech assailing Truman branded Kremlin aid.

The Philadelphia Inquirer:

Blast at Truman stirs Senator row. Senator William F. Knowland wrathfully denounced Taylor for slurring Truman, For-

I do not know what paper that is, it is a Washington Associated Press dispatch. St. Louis Post-Dispatch:

KNOWLAND backs Truman against Taylor

Is it not funny, Mr. President? Just the other day, because I took Mr. Truman to task for his poor handling of our foreign policy and for his militaristic collaboration with Republicans and the pouring of our money down rat holes, giving it away all over the world, Sena-"He is tors got up and denounced me. "He is our President, right or wrong. We are standing foursquare behind our President." But then Mr. Truman goes out West, and they give him some spurs, and he says, "Let me at Congress." And then Congress calls him all sorts of names. The same boys called me names the other day because I did not like what Harry was doing, and now they are trying to see who can outdo each other, and see who can call Truman the worst names. They even called him a gamin. I do not know what that means, but it must be awful.

The St. Louis Democrat:

KNOWLAND blasts TAYLOR for aid to Kremlin.

Well, I guess I am giving aid to the Kremlin. I do not want us all to get killed, Mr. President, and that is a kind of favor, to help everybody live. course, I cannot help them without helping us. That is the bad part of it, the way a lot of people look at it we are all going to live together, and we are all going to die together, so when I speak for peace, it is for everybody.

The Los Angeles Examiner:

TAYLOR scored by KNOWLAND-Attack on Truman stirs California Senator.

My, how the attacks will fly on Truman pretty soon, when they really get into the campaign.

Here were some clippings I saved a while back. This was when a New York school wanted to bring its pupils down here on a vacation, and they could not come because they had some Negro pupils-honor students-who had won a trip. They could not come to Washington because there was no place for them to eat down here, and they could not find any place to sleep in the Nation's Capital. They would be discriminated against. So our little children got their first lesson in discrimination when they planned to make a trip to the capital of the greatest democracy on earth.

The New York Herald Tribune writes about it, saying it is a national disgracewhich it is. I am teaching my children that there is no difference between people: some just happen to be born with one color of skin, some with another, and that they are not to treat people differently on that account. The sad part of it is that here in Washington the schools are segregated and there is nothing I can do about it. It is being driven home to my children that there is some reasonsomething the matter-because the colored children go to one school and they go to another. In Idaho we do not have that problem; all children go to the same schools. I am opposed to it, and just as soon as I can get around to it I am going to introduce legislation to see if something cannot be done to end discrimination at least in the Nation's Capital. But perhaps I had better read the article before I read the editorial. It says:

Washington race segregation cancels New York schoolboys' trip.

Hotels bar 4 Negroes who are among 51 honored for safety patrols.

All will see the Yankee game instead of visiting the Nation's Capital.

A Washington sightseeing tour by 51 outstanding New York schoolboys, including 4 Negroes, was called off yesterday by Dr. William Jansen, superintendent of schools, because of segregation practices in the Nation's Capital. Dr. Jansen decided to keep the children home on learning that it would be impossible in some instances for schoolmates to dine together in Washington.

Can you imagine that, Mr. President? Here these school children came down to the Nation's Capital, or had planned to, and then for them to go to eat, and have somebody say, "No, you stay back, you stay out, you cannot come in. You have got to go some place else to eat," would be a fine thing.

He said, in the statement canceling the

The youngsters will go to the ball game in-The youngsters will go of the stead, after receiving medals today as prestead, after receiving medals today as prestead and the receiving medals to a prestead and the receiving medals to a prestead and the receiving medals are received as a prestead and the receiving medals are received as a prestead and the receiving medals are received as a prestead and the received medical and the rec viously planned from Mayor O'Dwyer. The boys, 8 to 14 years of O'Dwyer. The boys, 8 to 14 years old, picked as high-caliber school safety patrolmen for public and Catholic parochial schools, were going to Washington for the week end as guests of the Automobile Club of New York, an affiliate of the American Automobile Association. To honor them and 15,000 other patrolmen, Mayor O'Dwyer proclaimed today School Safety Patrol Day. The auto-mobile club tried for the last 2 weeks to obtain a hotel reservation, but without success, according to William J. Gottlieb, presi-He said he called repeatedly and was told that it is not the custom to put up Negro and white guests together, so the club's board of directors voted Wednesday to propose a local program. Dr. Jansen, who consulted about it, agreed and issued the statement. Naturally, a representative-

I do not know whether I have the rest of this particular clipping or not, but anyhow he said that they naturally could not come to Washington. Here it is:

A special citation was to have been given by Truman today.

They were going to see the President and have a big day, but they had to call it all off and stay in New York.

I want to say this for New York, whatever else anybody else may say about it. As a child, I know, out West I thought of New York as just the hellhole of iniquity. I thought if you went there you just had to keep your hand on your hip pocket to keep from getting your wallet picked out. That was where all the city slickers were. But those people in New York City certainly have a greater appreciation of what it means to live in America than people any place else in our country, for the simple reason that so many of them have come from foreign countries where our freedoms are unknown, so they are very tolerant up there. They do not have segregation, discrimination, and one thing and another.

The New York Herald Tribune had an editorial regarding this regrettable incident. It said:

Another shameful reminder arises of the custom of segregation in the Capital of the United States. Fifty-one New York school boys from 8 to 14 years old were going to Washington to see the sights. Picked out as honor members of school safety patrols, they were the guests of the Automobile Club of New York. This was a tribute to merit.

The article goes on to say that one can imagine their joy and elation, their excited anticipation of Washington.

But what happened, Mr. President? Forty-seven of the schoolboys were completely acceptable in the National Capital, but four of them were not allowed to stay at the same hotel as their classmates, or eat with their friends, attend theaters, or go other places together.

The article goes on to say:

They are Negroes. In Washington the color of a boy's skin sets him vastly apart. Segregation is the rule in our Capital. The whole trip had to be called off. We think it is about time that Washington, our National Capital, lifted itself above the re-gional as a national district, as a world capital. It belongs to all the people. Segregation is not an all-American custom. crimination does not belong in the District of Columbia. The humiliation of these poor New York school boys was a national disgrace.

Yes, Mr. President, a Negro cannot go into the Senate restaurant and eat, here in the Capital of what we are happy to call the greatest democracy on earth. We forget that a great majority of the people on this earth have colored skins, and that when we discriminate we make more enemies in 5 minutes than all the Marshall plans-of course, the Marshall plan is making enemies, too, but even if it is as good as it is said to be, we, when we discriminate, make more enemies in 5 minutes than the Marshall plan could make, if it were good, in a hundred years. As soon as I can find the time I shall do something about discrimination in the Nation's Capital. I do not want my children to be brought up to feel that they are better than someone else because their skins are a different color. I do not believe that in the Capitol Building itself there should be discrimination. If I cannot end it in any other way, I will hire a Negro to work in my office and will take him to the restaurant to eat. If he is not permitted to eat in the restaurant, we will set up a card table out in the hall and dine there every day, just to call attention to the rottenness that goes on in the Capital of the United States. It is time something should be done about it. We shall not accomplish anything by adopting planks in party platforms.

Mr. President, speaking of the Republicans coming back here, they may come back if I can talk long enough to stop this draft bill. They will have a nice, shiny, new platform, inflated with a lot of things that have no business being there. They will make promises to the Negro people. What will they do if they come back and go into session? They will have to do something about their platform. They cannot say to the Ne-We are going to end discriminawent back; why didn't you do something about it then?" They will come back from Philadelphia with a new platform in their pockets.

The new party has done something. Henry Wallace has gone down South, where there were never mixed meetings before, and has held mixed meetings. The police came and tried to make the people segregate, and they just said, "Make us." They did not make them. I did not come off quite as well as did Henry. I got put in jail. But I am going back where I came from, and we will hold meetings, and the police will either put us in jail, or we will continue to hold meetings. That is the only way we can do anything about these things. It did not even soak in on me, Mr. President, for a time. To be sure, the Negroes in Idaho all live in one community. There are not very many. There are approximately 500. Four hundred of them are in Pocatello, the city in which I live. I never thought to look into the matter to see whether the Negroes had to live in one community, or whether it was their choice, because it was a small problem in Idaho. The significance of the question is not realized until we see many Negroes and what goes on in America in connection with them. I am glad I found out how poorly treated they are. They constitute a great segment of our population. The new party will do something about it before the election, by calling attention to the situation, apprising Americans of what goes on. The best argument against segregation, for anyone who has not given it serious thought, is to put yourself in the other fellow's place. There is a play on Broadway concerning an old southern planter, in fact, a southern Senator. By some freak of magic the southern Senator is turned black, and he finds out what it is like to have a black skin. He changes his mind about a great many things, in short order. All we have to do is to put ourselves in the other fellow's place and imagine how we would like it if we went along the street and could not get anything to eat because our skin was not the right color. I think that is all we have to do in order to realize that it is not right. Any right-thinking person, who claims to be a Christian, certainly, or who claims to be just a decent person. cannot favor such things going on in this country. They must be changed. Both the old parties have promised changes for many years. They write the same things in their platforms every time. I do not think the southern Democrats had anything to be worried about when Mr. Truman issued his statements on civil rights. I think it was only a little campaign propaganda. But the boys have got so used to jumping on anything like that, they could not resist the temptation. They started jumping on the statement, and the little boys back home saw what was going on, and they started jumping, too, and the situation got out of control. It got beyond them, and they found themselves in a very embarrassing position. They went out and do not know how to get back in. But they will be back in the Democratic Party, Mr. President, because they knew all along that no one meant it; they were only

Both of the old parties must shoulder responsibility for the Taft-Hartley law. There were about as many Democrats as Republicans who voted for that vicious bill. I said at the time that it would be used to break the unions, and they are being broken at this time. Both the old parties have to take responsibility for all that has been done, which is not much. Much that they have done has been bad. They must also take the responsibility for a great many things that have not been done in this Congress.

Just the last couple of days they have had two or three votes of that nature. The American people were greatly surprised in 1932 at the strength of Roose-They are going to be more surprised at the strength of Henry Wallace in 1948

Mr. President, a while ago I started reading some material I had prepared on this question of civil rights, and I shall continue with it. I got sidetracked.

The chairman of the Armed Services Committee and the acting minority leader, the distinguished Senator from Illinois, would have us believe the opposite. But let us examine the facts. They argue that the Committee on Armed Services rejected proposals for ending discrimination and segregation in the armed forces and having done so, the Senate must abide by that rejection. I do not question the wisdom of the members of the committee—but I must state flatly that their judgment is completely

The draft legislation arose first from the attempt to impose universal military training for the youth of the country. Since this proved to be highly unpopular, the Congress moved to combine a degree of universal military training with a new proposal for a draft. The basic document on which the whole program rests is a report of the President's Advisory Commission on Universal Military Training. Let us go to that document and see what it has to say on the subject of discrimination in the armed

The President's Commission states in its report that the fundamental principles of a program of military training

First, that is must be universal in its application.

Second, it must provide equality of privilege and opportunity.

Third, it must be a responsibility of the American people as a whole, rather than the exclusive or even principal responsibility of the military authorities.

I ask that Senators examine these fundamental principles, as set forth by the distinguished civilians, headed by President Compton of the Massashusetts Institute of Technology, who made this report. Every single one of these principles-the report calls them "fundamental" principles, and I stress the word "fundamental"-fairly cries out for the end of discrimination and segregation in the armed services.

Discrimination and segregation violates every one of these fundamental principles. The Commission says that a program of military training must be universal in its application to all persons of a given age or status, and the obligations which it imposes on each must be substantially equal. The Commission says that it is of the essence of democracy that the obligations of citizenship should not be exclusively those of persons who choose to consider them, but they must be shared commonly by all without favor or discrimination.

I am quoting from the report of the Commission. That is what they had to say about a draft law. Those who drafted the law have not gotten one of the good recommendations of this Commission. All they did was say "The Commission recommended a draft," so they drew a law. But they did not put anything of the myriad restrictions, guaranties of freedoms, anything the Commission recommended at all. So when I speak, I am speaking not only against the silly idea of drafting our boys in peacetime when we are all going to die anyhowit does not make any difference whether one has on a uniform or not-I am also speaking to prevent further insults, further hurt being done to certain of our American citizens whose skins are offcolor. I at least will not inflict upon them the compulsion of serving in the armed establishment where they have to submit to flagrant discrimination, where they are made flunkies and bus boys. We will at least leave them out in the open, where they do not have to go and be discriminated against if they want to keep away from it.

How does the distinguished chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee propose to square a ban on discrimination in the armed forces with that essential principle of democracy? How can the obligation to serve be equal if some men are to be set aside and given a moral quarantine? How can the Army and the Navy and the Marine Corps and the Air Force justify its numerous clauses against Negroes, its attempts to keep Negro enlistments within a definite low number—sometimes to zero in number in some branches—and expect there to be equality in obligation?

I charge that it is not we who demand an end to discrimination who are raising extraneous issues but the Members of the Senate on both sides of the aisle who are parties to the gentleman's agreement who are raising extraneous issues by fighting against the ban on discrimination and segregation.

I come now to the second principle advocated by the President's Commission as "fundamental" to any program of military training. That principle is that a program of training must provide equality of privilege and opportunity for all those upon whom this obligation rests. The first principle was equality of obligation. The second principle is equality of opportunity and privilege. Let me quote directly from the report of the Commission:

Neither in the training itself, nor in the organization of any phase of this program, should there be discrimination for or against any person or group because of his race, class, national origin, or religion.

How quick they are to quote this committee when they see we need a draft, and how conveniently they have forgotten all the other recommendations which would have made this some semblance at least of an American proposal.

Segregation or special privilege in any form should have no place in the program.

Those, Mr. President, are the words of the President's committee to investigate the necessity of a draft. They are not my words.

To permit them-

That is, segregation and special privilege—

To permit them would nullify the important living lesson in citizenship which such training can give.

Imagine, Mr. President, what will happen to boys from out in my part of the country, Idaho, where we do not have segregation, where we have very few Negroes in fact, but where boys are not brought up to believe that someone else is inferior to them, or to believe like Hitler taught his boys that they belong to a superior race. The boys from my part of the country do not have any of that feeling. Then they are drafted into the Army and there it is drilled into them-"These Negroes are not as good as you are. They will wait table on you, shine your boots, carry out your slop cans," and one thing and another. "You are something special, son. You are a little better than they are." The are a little better than they are.' young boys in the Army will get that idea, and it is awfully hard to get it out of It is sort of pleasant, if they do not think too deeply on the subject, to enjoy this feeling of superiority to someone else. It is terrible to think that such boys are going to be drafted into the Army and inculcated with such beliefs. They have got to stay where they are put in the Army. If they do not like what is told them, that others are inferior to them, that this boy whose skin is black must do menial service, that the white boy must let the colored boy wait on him while he sits down to eat, there is nothing they can do about it.

I return to the report:

Nothing could be more tragic for the future attitude of our people, Mr. President, and for the unity of our Nation than a program in which our Federal Government forced our young manhood to live for a period of time in an atmosphere which emphasized or bred class or racial differences.

There it is, Mr. President. The same committee that recommended the draft also recommends these other things. But now, Mr. President, we have a draft, and we have none of these other things in the bill, none. The Commission has placed its finger on the heart of the program before us. It explicitly condemns segregation and discrimination. It goes further than mere condemnation, however. It insists that an integral part of the program of military training must be nonsegregation and nondiscrimination.

I deeply regret, Mr. President, that we must continue to use so many negative words to express such a positive concept. But I do not have the time now to fence about words. The important thing is that the Commission which made a complete survey of the problem tell us that no program could be worth while unless equality of privilege and opportunity matches equality of obligation.

Here, Mr. President, we ask—we insist, we do not ask, that the boys serve. We tell them they must serve, and then we segregate them, and discriminate against some of them, give them the menial jobs, the bad jobs, the tough jobs. We place a mark upon them even if they have been raised in a colored community and have been kept away from actual evidences of segregation. Now we force them to subject themselves to that kind of treatment when we have the opportunity in this draft law to start breaking down these prejudices. Superstitions is what they are, Mr. President.

The Senate Armed Services Committee denies this proposition absolutely and unequivocally. They tell us in effect, Mr. President, that a ban on segregation and on discrimination is superfluous, is a luxury, something added, something new. But if we are to take the Commission's report at face value, the very opposite is true. The committee which removes the ban on segregation and discrimination is removing the heart of the program. It is destroying one of the essentials of the program as propaganda by various groups to gain the adherence of the American people.

Whom are we to believe, Mr. President, the members of the Armed Services Committee who insist on segregation and discrimination, or the members of the President's Commission who tell us that segregation must go in any democratic army? It is a fundamental test of our democracy. It is not a question of believing one set of authorities over another. It is a question which we must answer as Democrats, with a small "d", I hasten to add, and if we answer that question in the light of our history as a Democratic Party there can be but one answer for the Members of all parties-no army that serves a democracy can be anything but a fully democratic army.

Perhaps it is not the intention of the Senate to establish an army for a democracy and built on democratic lines to serve democratic purposes. In fact, Mr. President, I have come to have serious doubts about the intentions of some people in this country toward our democracy, when I see them even considering a bill like the Mundt bill; when I see them start us down the road of an armament economy like Hitler did; when I see them carelessly throwing charges against Russia, propaganda, day in and day out, as Hitler did; when I see the Congress overwhelmingly pass the Taft-Hartley law over a veto even; when I see a loyalty order, under which people can be dismissed from Government service without even charges being filed against them, just some vague statement made that for unknown reasons which cannot be revealed their services are terminated.

When I see all these things certainly I begin to wonder a little bit about democracy in this country, whether some people really believe in it or not. Anyone who criticizes the bipartisan foreign policy is branded as a Red, as a stooge of Stalin, and one who makes such a brash charge can secure all the headlines, while the charges made and documented against our foreign policy receive no attention whatever.

I do not know what is going to be done. Something has to be done about the press of this country, Mr. President. We now insist that the radio give both sides of every argument. We have got to have a law of some kind to see that the press does the same thing, because there is no other way to get the truth to the people. They are getting bilked and hoaxed, and a great disservice is done to them by the Marshall plan, under which billions of dollars are given away supposedly for buying good will, when really, Mr. President, what we are doing is buying ill will.

Actually the American taxpayers are paying for the enmity of all the rest of the world, enmity which they are buying with this Marshall plan money because, as I read the other day from the New York Times, the statement was made flatly that Europe feels pangs of overproducing. The article went on to say that they are destroying food in Holland. that in Italy they are destroying fruit-Italy with the lowest standard of living in Europe.

Factories are being closed down or slowed down over Europe. Even in Germany goods are piling up in warehouses. Yet after knowing those facts, the Senate goes ahead and appropriates $6,000,-000,000, raising the House $1,000,000,000. The Members of the House are getting kind of scared.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CAIN in the chair). Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from North

Mr. TAYLOR. I am afraid I cannot yield without prejudicing my rights to the floor.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, under the rules of the Senate, I think there is no question but that the Senator can yield for a question, but I am going to ask that the rules be strictly enforced and that there be question and answer, and not a speech.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, in view of the unwarranted statement made by the Senator from California, I decline even to ask a question.

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. President. I am very sorry. I should like to yield to the Senator from North Dakota. I think he is the most courageous Senator on the floor when it comes to speaking his mind and saying what he thinks, regardless of the "red smear" which is going on. He says what he thinks at any time he feels like it. The Senator from North Dakota is a great man.

The only way to judge greatness. I have found in the Senate, is to judge a man by how much guts he has, not how much knowledge he has, because there are many smart men here who do not have the courage to vote their convictions. They know that they are voting wrong. I have seen them do it. A man like that, no matter how much brains he has, is not a great man. I say that a man is great who votes his convictions, regardless of what the consequences may be to himself. By that standard the Senator from North Dakota is the greatest man in the United States Senate at the present time. Of course, we never include ourselves when we are speaking of these things.

The Senate Armed Services Committee-we might as well go ahead with the Marshall plan, so long as we were talk-ing about that. The Marshall plan is certainly a fake and a "phony," but can anyone get the press to print it when he says things like that?

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. TAYLOR. I yield for a question. The Senator from California [Mr.

KNOWLAND I is busy.

Mr. LANGER. A short time ago the Senator mentioned factories being torn down. I ask the distinguished Senator from Idaho whether that includes fertilizer factories?

Mr. TAYLOR. I did not know about them being torn down to so great an extent. They are simply closing them and not operating them, because they have overproduction, which, of course, is underconsumption. But they are probably tearing down fertilizer factories. I do not know what they are doing. Senator can think of anything that is crazy, and asks me, I will say that they are probably doing it, because the Marshall plan is the ultimate of nonsensical asininity.

We are appropriating billions of dollars of the taxpayers' money to ship goods to Europe when the United States News and World Report, a conservative publication edited by David Lawrence, tells us that there is overproduction in Europe, and that goods are spoiling in warehouses. Yet we appropriate billions of dollars of the taxpayers' money to send more goods to Europe. If they have not sense enough to distribute what they have, I do not believe that we should send them any more. If they have so much that they are closing their factories and not distributing their products because the people do not have the money, is that any reason why we should be suckers and send them the money with which to buy their own goods, so that they will not starve to death? That is the height of something or other. But it is going on, Mr. President.

I am beginning to think that the reason for the Marshall plan is this: I have repeatedly charged that our cartelists. our big monopolist, and the militarists are in cahoots to take up where Hitler left off. They feel that they can do what he failed to do, namely, conquer the world and exploit it.

The Marshall plan is part of their scheme to try to get control of the economy of the world without fighting, if they can. The plan has two objects. One is to remove potential surpluses from the American market. We were just on the verge of having plenty of everything in this country at reasonable prices. They had to figure out something to stop that, so the Marshall plan was devised. The taxpayers are buying goods and paying for them, and we are shipping them to Europe. In that way it is not easy for our people to buy, and that keeps prices The people pay for the samples sent abroad, and prices are kept up at home, so that we must pay $3,000 for a $1,500 automobile that we cannot get. some scheme, is it not, Mr. President? We tax the American people to ship goods to Europe, which makes them scarce at home, so that the people must pay two prices for what they can buy at home.

The American worker has already paid for the Frigidaire which is not in his house, because it or some other product made of the same material has been shipped to Europe as a sample of what our cartelists have to ship. We are sending free samples to Europe, where surpluses already exist. Of course, European industrialists cannot compete with our free goods, so they are going to have a hard time getting money. allows our boys to get the markets, because the factories over there are closed. We give the Europeans free samples to show them what we have to sell, and the European industrialists cannot get their factories started.

If that makes friends, I do not know much about human nature. But that is the way the Marshall plan is working. It is helping reaction in every corner of the globe. In any place where we cannot find any scoundrels in business, we set them up in business so that we can help them. We are losing friends all over the world.

At the same time we are heading straight toward war, with our anti-Russian propaganda. That must be kept going, because the minute that stops, the whole plan collapses; the armament program collapses; the Marshall plan collapses; the people will not appropriate the money for all this tomfoolery, and the whole scheme collapses. It all depends on anti-Russian propaganda. But the newspapers are doing a good job. We just got through giving them $10.000. 000 for it. I suppose another appropriation will come along pretty soon, because newspaper publishers are not suckers. They will not keep it up forever. They have learned that they can get paid for it. They will start easing off one of these days and we shall have to appropriate more money for them. That may operate to end the racket, because the people will become angry and will not appropriate the money, and the newspapers will not print the propaganda unless they get paid for it, so it may be a good thing that that is happening.

We had to have the Marshall plan because we were faced with abundance here at home. That would not solve the problem, so we had to have an armament program, to take workers out of useful production and put them in useless production. We tax the people to pay for armaments. That makes profits for the boys. It keeps everything scarce. so that the people can be charged two prices for automobiles, washing machines, and other things that are manufactured for them.

The Marshall plan is the most colossal hoax ever perpetrated on a people. The only reason it is possible is that no longer is there a free press in America such as we once had, in which editors could sit down and write their honest-to-God opinions. There are so few editors nowadays who can write what they think that it is pitiful. A publisher is a big-business man, and he tells the editor what to write. Let us not kid ourselves. The policy extends even to small newspapers in Idaho. I used to say that there were 11 daily newspapers in Idaho, and that they were all against me but one, which was neutral. As I say, I used to say that. I cannot say it any more. Since I joined Henry, they are all against me.

The last time I was in Idaho I went to see the editor of the once neutral newspaper. He had always been pretty friendly.

He said, "GLEN, I was with you on the Greek proposition, when it was proposed to appropriate money for the Greeks. I was with you because I thought it should have been handled through the United Nations. But I wrote a couple of editorials about it."

Mind you, Mr. President, this was in a town of 10,000 people. This editor said, "I wrote a couple of editorials about it, and three of my best advertisers came in and told me that I had better cut it out." They saw what the Marshall plan would do for them. It would keep things scarce, and keep the boom booming. They told this editor that he had better cut it out; and he said to me, "I cut it out."

I did not blame him. But we must stand up somewhere and fight. I know many persons who feel that they ought to be in this fight with me—particularly on this vital issue, although I did not have that in mind when I spoke. What I had in mind was that they feel that they should be with Henry Wallace and Glen Taylor in this fight, and they are not there because of economic considerations. They sneak around and hand us $50 for the campaign, and say, "We are with you, boys, keep up the good work. But if I come out openly for you, our business will suffer."

We need them worse than we need the $50. We need a few people with intestinal fortitude and leadership to stand up and be counted. There are many of them, but they are afraid to be counted. That is understandable, because all over the country people are losing their jobs because they come out openly for Henry Wallace. College professors, ministers of the Gospel—it is getting so that we can hardly get a preacher to pray for us at all, anymore, at our Wallace-Taylor meetings, because they lose their jobs. That has happened time and again.

In one town those who were planning the meeting went through the entire telephone book trying to find a preacher to pray for us when the meeting was opened. The only one they could find who would pray for us was a Russian Orthodox minister. All the rest of the ministers were afraid to pray for us. But that Russian Orthodox minister was not afraid of being smeared as a "Red." He was willing to pray for us; but we did not have guts enough to let him do it, so we had to go without being prayed for.

Mr. President, very often we make arrangements with ministers to open our meeting with prayer; but they they call up, shortly before the meeting, and say, "I am sorry, very sorry; I am mortified and humiliated; I am tremendously embarrassed; but I cannot come to open your meeting. I hope you will understand." Of course we understand, because the situation is that their influential parishioners put the heat on them and tell them they had better not come to pray for our group or else they will lose their jobs. Mr. President, that is some Christianity, is it not? Ministers are not allowed to come to open our meetings with prayer and to pray for our poor benighted souls. One would imagine that if we are as bad as we are said to be, all the ministers would be encouraged to come and pray for our souls, but that is not the case.

Even the labor leaders are against us. Never was a group of people so sold out as is the group of laboring people in this country, Mr. President. The labor leaders are afraid of the Red smear. They want to protect their $25,000-ayear jobs. The bug has got them. So we have the sorry spectacle of the labor leaders being afraid to support a party that they know is their party. The workers are flocking to our party, but the leaders are like a lot of hens that have hatched out ducklings and do not know what to do about it. Mr. President, there will be more new labor leaders hatched out in the next year or two than there have been in many, many

But, Mr. President, the rank and file of labor are with us, and many of the labor leadership are openly flouting the mandates of the hierarchy, and are attending our meetings and are joining us.

Many others are joining us, too. As I have said before, doctors, dentists, ministers, businessmen, and many others are openly advocating our party and are making statements in favor of us, even though they know that by doing so they may lose their jobs. It is easy to see why so many people are now joining us and are openly declaring themselves in favor of our new party, because anyone who thinks at all and realizes the danger the United States is in with this armament economy, and this drive toward war, and this foreign policy that has lost us all our friends, and the Marshall plan that is supposed to get us new friends, and the bipartisan coalition that is bankrupting our Nation by profligately throwing away our substance all over the world-when people see those things, they are very eager to join our new party. In fact, many people are so dis-gusted with just one of those things, that that is enough for them. But anyone who gets to the bottom of it all and sees how messy the whole business is, will, very naturally, if he has any fortitude, come out in favor of Henry Wallace, because the new party is the only one that is opposed to those things. The other parties just try to outdo each other in hollering, 'Me, too!" when they say they are opposed to Russia; and they draw up fancy platforms about helping the Negro and everyone else, but they do not do anything about helping any of them.

Mr. President, South America has even gone by the board; we have even lost our friends in South America. Mr. Roosevelt had what he called the good neighbor policy down there; he made many friends there, and the South Americans were feeling very kindly toward us. But now we have lost them all. Sumner Welles says so. Every expert says so. What a flasco the Bogota Conference was. We told the South Americans that we were going to appropriate half a billion dollars to loan to them, and so we expected them to get up and cheer. But they just sat there. It made Marshall awfully mad because they did not get up and cheer when he told them that we were going to loan them some money. But they are just too smart for us. They see us giving away billions of dollars in Europe, and they wonder why we should not give them a few dollars also.

Then we tried to get the South American countries to pass laws and even to change their constitutions so as to protect our investors, so that our businessmen could invest their money there and be sure they would get it back again. The Mexican representative rather told us off. He said they were happy to have us invest our money in Mexico if we wanted to do so, but he said they did not need any laws to protect our investors. He said that what they needed were laws to protect their people from our investors. IAr. President, when I read that statement in the newspapers I was delighted. I like anyone who stands up on his hind legs and says what he thinks. I sent that man a telegram-or perhaps it was a cablegram: I am not sure which it was-and in it I said, "Congratulations, sir. I admire anyone who stands up for his own rights. I want you to know that not all Americans are imperialists, and I want you to know also that there are millions of Americans who still believe in the good-neighbor policy of Franklin D. Roosevelt.'

In reply, he sent me a very long telegram. I have been so busy recently that I have not had time to get it translated, so as to find out what he had to say. If my secretary is around here, I will tell him to get that telegram and have it translated, so that I can read it and see what he had to say. But it must have been good; he would not have made it so long if he had been saying anything bad.

But that is the situation. We are losing our friends right and left-even such friends as Canada-because of our arrogant, imperialistic policies of exploita-All over the world that is going on-the use of the Marshall plan as a guarantee of profits for our monopolists and cartelists abroad. The foreign currencies are no good, so our monopolists and cartelists go abroad and use promises of business to come to inveigle those foreign businessmen into giving our fellows an interest in their businesses-a controlling interest, many times; and then we do business in foreign currencies. But when it comes time to cash in, in dollars, that cannot be done, because the foreign countries have no dollars. So our taxpayers cough up through the Marshall plan to pay the representatives of our monopolists and cartelists in good, old, hard American dollars, or at least in greenbacks. You see, I come from the West, and in the West we see lots of silver dollars. It seems strange, after being here in the East, to return to the West and see a complete change from greenbacks to hard dollars.

Mr. President, if we hired people to think of Rube Goldberg devices by which we could lose friends and deinfluence people, we could not do a better job than we are doing with this Marshall plan. and our get-tough foreign policy, and our backing of Fascists and reactionaries all over the world, and our scuttling of the United Nations. We were the first ones to really deal a serious blow to the United Nations. I pointed out earlier in my talk how the Russians went into Iran. as part of the war strategy, and how they overstayed their welcome. The matter was brought to the attention of the United Nations and the Russians went They did not even wait for a verbal blast by the United Nations; they went home because they did not want to be condemned by this great new Organization set up to keep peace in the world; so they went home. That was really the first problem the United Nations had to deal with. One time at bat, and they scored a hit. It was not long after that until the Englishmen and Frenchmen were in Syria and Lebanon. They held those countries as protectorates from World War I. They were supposed to go home and give those people their freedom, but they, too, overstayed their welcome, and do not forget that. We can always remember the bad things the Russians do, but the Englishmen and Frenchmen stayed in Lebanon and Syria, when they were supposed to get out. That was brought to the attention of the United Nations, and England and France almost fell over each other to see who could get out of the Near East first, from Syria or Lebanon. They did not want to be the first ones slapped down by the United Nations. People still respected the United Nations then, because it was new and its potentialities were unknown. So that was the second and third time at bat for the United Nations, second and third hits. That is pretty good—three times at bat, and three hits.

Then along came the Greek proposition. The country was in chaos in a struggle between left wing elements and monarchial adherence. In between was a big group, by far the biggest group of Greeks who were democrats, moderates, believing in some socialism probably, but they wanted a democratic form of government. They did not want commu-nism, and they did not want a king. But, instead of asking the United Nations to go in and seal the border and hold free elections, we said, "We will handle this; just get out of the way, United Nations. This is Uncle Sam who is going to take The Englishmen bowed out over now." of Greece. They could not afford to stay there. They knew they would make "suckers" out of us and that we would take on those countries. So we went on into Greece. I opposed it at the time. I said the United Nations should handle the matter. We were told "The United Nations cannot handle this. The United Nations is an infant in swaddling clothes." I remember hearing that statement on the floor. Of course an infant only grows by being fed and by being allowed to exercise. So I said, "The United Nations could handle it." Many arguments were raised against it; it was said the United Nations did not have any money. Well, I said, "We are going to spend the money anyway, so why not give it to the United Nations and let them spend it? They are in Greece, and if it turns out well, it will help the United Nations; if it turns out bad, we will not be to blame."

I may say, Mr. President, that there was a high official of the United Nations in Washington at that time. I cannot name him because the poor sucker would probably lose his job. We run the United Nations, as I have said. He would probably get fired if I stated in the Senate that he was here. But he is a big shot in the United Nations, suffice it to say. We heard he was down here, so I called him and asked him if another Senator and myself, or two other Senators and myself, could see him and talk to him about this Greek proposition. He said, yes, we could see him, but to come into the place one at a time and by separate doors. He did not want anybody to know we had been there seeing him. He was afraid. So we went there and sneaked into the place to see him, like Bolsheviks with a bomb in each hip pocket. We asked him about the Greek problem, "Can you handle it?" He said, "We have got to handle it. If we do not. if they take it away from us, it will practically be a death blow to the United So we asked him questions. Nations." We said, "They are saying you have not got any soldiers up there." He said, That is right, but where there is a will there is a way." He said, "We can get enough soldiers to seal that border, picking up a few here and there from the small nations, if need be. We would not have to arm them, we would not have to clothe them; all we would have to do would be to feed them and just put an arm band on them saying, 'United Nations,' and nobody would shoot one of them any more than anybody would think of shooting a Canadian mounted policeman or a Texas ranger." They just do not do that, because they know what would happen to them, and that is the way it would have been with the United Nations. That is the way he explained it. I said, "I will go back and tell those fellows up there that you can handle it." He said, "No, you cannot quote me. If they ever found out I had seen you, I would lose my job." So we had to come back here and listen to these folks saying, "Well, they have not got any money, have not got any soldiers, the United Nations is weak and impotent," and all this and the other.

So the Greek proposition was put through, appropriating some $500,000,-000. I think it was supposed to be $200,-000,000 for food and other products useful to the people and $100,000,000 for guns. At the time, we said it would turn out to be more guns than butter, and sure enough they hardly got them working when they started changing the ratio from day to day, taking a little of the butter money and putting it over into the gun department. It finally wound up about four bits for bread and $3.50 for guns. That is about the way $3.50 for guns. That is about the way it wound up. Anyway, we spent $300,-000,000 in Greece, and when the thing came up to be done over here, a while back, and we were asked to give them another $175,000,000, I thought, that will take a week of debate anyhow, because it took about 10 days last year, on the first installment. On the floor, here, the President pro tempore of the Senate, the Senator from Michigan IMT. Vandenberg!, the famous bipartisan architect of chaos, here, was asked on the floor of the Senate how many guerrillas there were when we appropriated $300,000,000, and said "13,000." He was asked "How many guerrillas are there now, a year later, after we have spent $300,000,000?" He said, "26,000." We spent $300,000,000, and there are twice as many guerrillas now as there were when we started. I thought it would take a week to debate this thing anyhow, so I went to New York.

I will tell you, Mr. President, where I went and why I went. I went to New York to address a meeting welcoming the Russian Ambassador to this country. Nobody else of any consequence at all in the United States would appear on the platform with him. They were afraid they would be smeared red, so I decided I would go up and welcome the Ambassador. I am talking for peace and I wanted to get along with Russia. I figured the least I could do was let him know that at least there was one American above the rank of a garbage collector who would speak to him. So I went up and spoke on the same platform with him. Incidentally I figured out an idea to sort of help relations a little bit. To help out the program, I had made arrangements for a little girl at the Russian Embassy to record a Russian song in Russian, and my son 12 years old recorded Home on the Range, and then we gave the little girl that record and she gave us the Russian record. My boy learned the Russian song and the little Russian girl learned Home on the Range. Each one sang the other country's song at the dinner. They made a big hit. But I guess those kids will be put in concentration camps as soon as things are fixed the way some people want them.

I thought it would take a week, at least, to debate the new contribution to Greece and Turkey. I went to New York to make a speech, and the measure was brought up and passed in 3 hours, without even a roll-call vote. We gave away $300,000,000. There were 26,000 guerillas compared to 13,000 the year before. That did not affect the situation at all. I never saw so much confidence in spending money as that which I have seen exhibited in this Congress in the past few months. The only rule we have here is to bring prosperity to all the world. We like to give folks things which, in many cases, they do not need and do not want.

We went ahead in Greece. It was the most serious blow that had been suffered. That was the beginning of the decline of the United Nations. It went from bad to worse. The Greek episode is the most despicable chapter in American history. We can hardly pick up a newspaper without seeing in it every day that hundreds of Greeks have been lined up and shot. It got so bad that even the British protested—those old experts at shooting people. Of course it was not because we were shooting people, but that we were shooting too many. They did not like our bad technique. They figured out how it was possible to shoot fewer people and get better results. We should let them handle that shooting business for us in Greece. All the liberal-minded Greeks are being killed. The leader over there has become so bold that the other day he had one of our newspaper men shot. I hold no brief for the press, but I like the newspapermen themselves, and do not want them to get shot. God knows they suffer enough for writing the stuff they have to write, without being shot. But they are being shot in Greece for writing things that they do not want them to write. That is worse than Hearst treats them.

In Greece a newspaperman by the name of George Polk was recently murdered. He was no Communist, Mr. President. In fact, I think he was sort of a conservative man. He wanted to tell the truth. Do not misunderstand me, Mr. President. The press tells the truth some of the time; the only difficulty is that it has so much junk mixed with it that it is like trying to eat mush and milk and keep them separated. It is difficult to find out what is the truth. Polk wanted to get the truth, so he made arrangements to go up and see for himself. He soon began receiving threatening telephone calls from the police, calling him a Communist, and saying that he was going to be shot if he did not watch out. He disregarded the threats. He was a good newspaperman, in every sense of the word; he would go any place he thought he should go. He was the sort of fellow who, if he thought he ought to be for Wallace, would be for him, regardless of the consequences. He never came back, Mr. President. His body was found floating in the harbor at Saloniki. The police conducted an investigation. They immediately announced that the Communists had killed him, in spite of the fact that Polk had written letters to Drew Pearson, and there were many reasons to believe that he had been killed by the Fascists or the Nazis. His wife is not permitted to leave Greece. Other persons are being held there because they may know too much.

Mr. President, if it had been the Communists who had killed him they would have been only too glad to have the whole thing spread out for the world to see. But because of the scoundrels we are dealing with over there, in this black chapter of American history, the whole thing is hushed up. They can even get away with the murder of an American newsman who has tried to tell the full truth. The truth is, Mr. President, that there are many people, not only in Greece, but in other places, who do not want the American people to know the truth. I do not know what will happen. I guess George Polk will go down as a sort of George Hill of the newspaper game. That will be about the end of the matter. Poor George, I knew him

Mr. President, I have an article here regarding the murder of George Polk, and I ask that it be printed as part of my remarks at this place in the RECORD. Let the folks read about it and see what a rotten deal poor George got.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD,

[From Frontpage magazine for June 1948] THE MURDER OF GUILDSMAN GEORGE POLK

On May 16, 1948, the body of George Polk was washed ashore at Salonika, Greece. Polk, a member of the Newspaper Guild of York and Middle East correspondent for the Columbia Broadcasting System, had been shot in the back of the head and his hands and feet were bound with twine. had been reported variously as missing for a week, as in the water for a week. He was in Salonika attempting to arrange a meeting with Markos Vafiades (General Markos), leader of the Greek guerrillas.

The Greek police immediately began questioning suspected Communists. An unnamed Government official said "we are 1,000 percent sure that Communists killed Polk." Public Prosecutor Christos Moustakis, in the words of the Associated Press, said "police words of the Associated Press, said excluded the possibility Mr. Polk had been slain by right-wing extremists." Not a single rightist was interrogated.

An open and shut case, evidently. Perhaps.

But against whom?

On May 20, 1947, Seymour Freidin of the New York Herald Tribune, who had been out-spokenly critical of the Greek Government, was suddenly and without explanation refused permission to board a Greek airliner at Athens for Crete. Freidin reported from Athens the next day that "pro-government elements of the press and political quarters charged, without attribution, that this cor-respondent was a Communist." Commented Freiden: "This type of intimidation has been employed by government quarters in the past, in the hope of whittling correspondents critical of the government down to size."

One week later Robert Vermillion of the United Press was attacked as an "American journalist of the Communist creed" by the Greek War Minister George Stratos, after Vermillion described a visit to the Greek guerrillas.

On March 5, 1948, Homer Bigart of the Herald Tribune was denounced by the Roy-alist newspaper Ethnikos Kiryx as an "instrument of Moscow." The paper demanded censorship of all foreign correspondents. Bigart had criticized the wholesale executions by the government of former resistance fighters.

William L. Shirer, noted radio commentator, summarized the situation in a newspaper article on February 22, 1948: "Our correspondents in Greece work under great dif-ficulties. * * The Greek Government obstructs their work in dozens of ingenious ways. It stoops to having agents spread ma-licious slander about correspondents whose stories displease it.

"I am surprised that the President and Congress are not more concerned * * * tactics which the Greek Government has used in an attempt to prevent American newspapers and radio from publishing and broadcasting the truth.'

Radio, Shirer noted, was a specific target of the Greek attempts at suppression. On December 21, 1947, the Athens Government announced that thereafter all radio scripts of the American correspondents would have to be submitted and approved before they could go on the air.

Just where did George Polk fit into this chronicle of struggle between the Greek Government and American newspapermen who found it less than perfect? In December 1947 Polk wrote a comprehensive article for Harper's magazine, summarizing his impressions of Greece. He described Napoleon Zervas, the former Minister of Public Order and a power in the royalist-dominated government, as a "professional gambler and unscrupulous politician" whose activities, "pub-lic and private, are even more sinister than when he participated in four prewar Greek political revolutions." Polk cited a secret American official document as noting the "dictatorial and Fascist tendencies" exhib-ited by Zervas in his "ruthless campaign against the opponents of the Government, no matter what their political convictions."

Polk dealt mercilessly and in detail with the fantastic abuses of the Greek economic system, which mainly favors special indi-

On December 22, 1947, Polk wrote a letter of protest to the Herald Tribune against a series of articles on Greece by Maxwell Anderson in that paper. Anderson had reported that he heard virtually no charges of outright injustice against the Greek Government. Responded Polk: "Greeks continually complain of outright injustice on the part of their extremely corrupt and inefficient Government; of outright injustice in the distribution of food, the imposition of taxes, the levying of their soldier sons into military service, arrest of persons without constitutional processes of law, the failure to release from concentration camps may persons now

So much for Polk on the Greek Government. How did the Government feel about him?

The Harper's article drew a protest to CBS from Greek officials in the United States. month later, when Polk in a broadcast referred to some Greek cabinet ministers as "semifascists," the Greek Minister of Information in the United States, Nicholas Lely, demanded radio time to answer him. Lely statement and a rebuttal by Polk were carried by CBS.

At that time-September 1947-Polk was "resented in high places in the Athens gov-ernment," according to an article by Marquis W. Childs in the New York Post of May 19, 1948. Wrote Childs: "Polk told me of the effort to smear him as a Red or pink. realized he had made enemies because of his criticisms of the failures and stupidities of the Athens government."

On February 3, according to CBS commentator Edward R. Murrow, Polk "in a private letter said there were a number of vague hints that somebody is likely to get hurt." More recently, Polk wrote Drew Pearson that he was having great difficulties with the Creek government who did not want him to interview the guerrillas. And less than 3 weeks before his death, Polk told Constantine Argyris of the Christian Science Monitor that he had received telephone calls denouncing him as a Communist and declaring:

'We are going to kill you."

It may be pure coincidenceslated to return to the United States very soon. His visit would have coincided with that of Dwight Griswold, chief of the United States mission in Greece, who left Athens May 16 to report to Washington on the further needs of the Greek Government. Com-ments Marquis Childs: "Rumors persist of a new build-up to be launched from Athens and Washington-a build-up of the need for United States troops in Greece. What Polk might have said and written when he re-turned to the United States could have interfered with that build-up." Or, as Murrow put it, "George Polk probably knew more about Greece than any other American re-porter there. He was coming home. He was murdered. It may be that he knew too much."

Obviously, the Right had reason to fear Polk. But does it seems logical that the Greek Communists, whose newspapers are suppressed and whose radio cannot reach overseas, would assassinate a man who was trying to report their story?

Indispensable to this account is the role played by official representatives of the United States in Greece. On May 2, 1948, Mr. Griswold joined the Rightist press of Greece in attempting to discredit Homer Bigart. He wrote a lengthy letter to the Herald Tribune, challenging Bigart point after point. This evoked a response by Constantine Poulos, veteran Middle East correspondent of the Overseas News Agency, who termed Griswold's letter "an obvious attempt to shake the confidence of the newspaper and its readers in the correspondent." In conclusion, Poulos wrote: "We may be sure that Mr. Griswold's letter, already published in the Athens press, will serve to encourage the extremists."

All this leads to two unmistakable con-

(1) A full investigation of the murder of George Polk by a qualified team sent out from the United States, is necessary, and at once. It is utterly unrealistic to expect that the police of Salonika will do an honest and thorough job. The entire Greek police force is notoriously loaded with former members of the Nazi-organized Security Battalions. It is fantastically Rightist in membership, and is led by Royalists; it can hardly be expected to bring in findings damaging to the Right. The Greek Prime Minister, Sophoulis, has offered the assurance that every effort will be made to solve the case—"if it was not an accident." An accidental bullet hole in the base of the skull!

The investigation cannot be carried out by American representatives on the spot, because they have demonstrated their incapacity for forthright action and their essential lack of sympathy with the correspondents.

An American citizen, and a representative of our free press, has been murdered. It is the responsibility of our Government to uncover the entire story. Every aspect of the matter must be explored, including Polk's recently completed manuscript of a book on the Middle East and any light that might be contributed by Mr. Griswold on his return.

on his return.

(2) There must in future be full guarantees of protection for United States correspondents overseas, in line with the United States backed resolutions at the UN's "Freedom of the Press" conference in Geneva. The Greek government must be made to cease encouraging its Royalist press to incite acts of violence. Correspondents must be permitted to go where the story is, without hindrance or censorship and with adequate protection.

The United States is quick to defend the interests of its businessmen abroad. Are its newsmen, the eyes and ears of the country, less important? They are the real American ambassadors; they report direct to the people. The murder of George Polk is in every sense a gesture of contempt for the American people; it must not pass unnoticed.

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. President, the situation is becoming pretty bad when we are losing all our friends all over the world. The Russians fear and distrust When it is considered who is running the country, it is enough to drive them frantic with fear. It is a wellknown fact that between World Wars I and II our boys learned the cartel business from Hitler's boys, and helped to finance Hitler in his rise to power, with the understanding that he would fight Russia. One of the men who was helping to finance Hitler in order for him to fight Russia is now our Secretary of National Defense, former president of Dillon, Read, a Wall Street financial house which helped to finance Hitler. Our Under Secretary of the Army is Mr. Draper, a former vice president of the same firm. He was very active in making arrangements between our monopolists and Hitler's monopolists. We were going to decartelize Germany. Mr. Roosevelt established a program and people were appointed to carry it out. They went over after Mr. Roosevelt died, but most of them came home and said they could not do much decartelizing. All the men with any pride and sincerity of purpose came home. One of them is a member of our new party. He lives in Maryland. He said he wanted a little honest government, so he joined the new party.

The decartelizing of Germany has been called off. Mr. Draper recently went to Germany to get the matter straightened out. There is a man by the name of Hawkins in charge of the decartelization in Germany. He is Mr. Draper's son-in-law. Mr. Draper set up the cartels in the first place, and now his son-in-law will decartelize them. So the matter is in good hands.

The Russians see what type of people have control of our country, a stranglehold on it—Admiral Lahey, Fascist sympathizer, the President's right hand officer in the White House; Mr. Dulles, and all these people who are running this bipartisan foreign policy. As I say, they have all tried to outdo each other by seeing who could say the most vitriolic things about Russia. All we ever heard about it is the Red fifth column in this country, how they have tried to subvert our Government. Perhaps they have, I would not argue the point, but I cannot remember one prominent American who has ever been subverted by the Reds, any Cabinet member, general, anybody of any particular consequence at all. But the western capitalists, the big money boys of the West, financed the fifth column activity in Russia between the wars so successfully that we all remember that along about 1937 the Russians had to take most of their generals and cabinet members out and shoot them. They had been subverted with promises of bribes and promises of power to come when the Communist government was overthrown. If they had been that successful in this country we would have some reason to be excited and worried. But they have not been.

What do we find? In this country there is a great witch hunt, and the newspapers are whooping it up day in and day out, all our prominent citizens making statements about Russia, that we have to have bombs to bomb Russia. And what do we find about Russia? If we can believe Eddy Gilmore of the Associated Press, there is no war propaganda in Russia, none, none at all. If we can believe the other article I read, the people over there want peace, they are willing to stand many feet deep in front of a bulletin to read about peace, or any possibility about peace.

Mr. President, if it is being a tool of Joe Stalin, as the able Senator from California accused me of being a while back, because one gets up and tells these truths, even if they never go any further than the Congressional Record, or the gallery, or the Senate, if it is being a Red if you let the American people know they are being lied to deliberately, deceived, duped—if it is being a tool of Stalin, all right, I am willing to accept the charge.

Mr. President, I have here an editorial from the New York Post. The headline on it is, "November Casualty." It is a tribute really to the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Langer]. It mentions the fact that he brought into question the sincerity of his party in their extravagant promises to the colored people and the meagerness of their delivery on those promises. It says:

The Republican Party doesn't keep its promises.

Of course, if they had just put the Republican and the Democratic parties in, they would have had something. The Republicans do not, nor do the Democrats. That is why I am a new-party man right now.

"The Republican Party doesn't keep its promises," Senator WILLIAM LANGER, Republican, of North Dakota, charged angrily on the Senate floor when his colleagues killed one after another of his civil rights amendments to the draft bill.

No, they have no qualms at all, Mr. President. It is miraculous. They will sit right here and vote down these civilrights amendments one right after another, and then they will just hurry up to Philadelphia, as soon as I get through talking, and write some more platforms, some more planks, telling the Negroes what they are going to do for them. Then, if they have to come back here next week, if I hold them up, they will come back and make some more promises.

Back in 1944, when there was another election to be won, the GOP platform promised legislation to end discrimination in the armed forces.

Of course they did. So did the Democrats, for that matter. Let us be honest about it.

But events have shifted and swept yesteryear's pledges away. The Republicans now know that they need produce only token legislation to outdo the Democratic record. Accordingly, they have come across with one small amendment which bars levying a poll tax on soldiers.

Mr. President, the irony of that amendment, the one which provides that they cannot levy a poll tax on soldiers, is that there are only two States which have a poll tax on soldiers, if I am not mistaken. They have all gotten so gentlemanly that they do not have a poll tax on the soldiers. But this amendment in itself does not allow the boys to vote unless the State sets up the machinery for them to vote. So the whole amendment is just a fake and a farce, just a scheme to try to fool somebody, that is all.

The article further says, speaking of the Republicans:

Apparently they plan to point to this pitiful gesture as proof positive that they are the friends of the American Negro.

We're not convinced. And we'll bet that the voters aren't, either.

They are not, Mr. President, nor are they convinced that the Democrats mean it. They do not believe Mr. Truman means it when he talks about civil rights. The New York Pcst editorial proceeds:

It is a matter of record that the Republicans approved drastic gags to limit debate which might allow antisegregation and antidiscrimination measures to get a foothold on the Senate floor. When cloture wouldn't work, the GOP went even further by sanctioning three motions to shelve "the pending question" which stopped discussion instantly.

The excuse offered for these steamroller tactics was simple: The southern Democrats threatened to filibuster if any serious attempt was made to attach a Negro bill of rights to the draft legislation. The Bourbons, if they ever got started, could drone on uninterruptedly until the scheduled June 19 adjournment.

Is it not so, Mr. President? My goodness, how excited they get when the southerners are going to filibuster on anti-lynch or anti-poll-tax bills. They get worried about it. So they ditch the whole business and say, "We will have no part of those southerners, they are tough customers."

You did not know my father came from the South, did you, Mr. President?

Anyhow, they steer clear of southerners. I do not believe they are any more afraid of them than they are of me, but the bill they do not like is a bill to benefit common people, an antidiscrimination bill, to give everybody equality, something good. They are not anxious to pass that kind of stuff. They seize any excuse they can find to dodge it-and the excuse is that the southerners will filibuster, and that is a good excuse, and they dodge it. But GLEN TAYLOR, Henry Wallace's Vice Presidential candidate, does not want the boys of America drafted. He wants a good thing, he wants the country to stay free, not be militarized. So that is out. They cannot do that at all. They are not afraid of him. They will break his filibuster, you bet your life. They will not compromise with him at all. So they will just sit it out. But they will not have any trouble with the southerners. They will not bring up anything they do not like. I have a good notion to help the southerners the next time they have a filibuster.

Let us get back to the New York Post editorial:

Ostensibly in the interests of coaxing some necessary and long-neglected legislation out of the Senate, the party leaders apparently decided not to provoke the lily-white statesmen into their act.

But it's interesting that when Senator TAFT, with an eye to future campaign oratory, decided that the Republicans had better adopt at least one civil-rights measure, he was able to squeak the anti-poll-tax amendment through the Senate.

Mr. President, it is disgraceful that the anti-poll-tax amendment should be the one picked out of all seven amendments the Senator from North Dakota offered. They picked that one amendment, the anti-poll-tax amendment, which does not affect the soldiers of any but two States, and in those two States the provision will have no good effect unless the States enact enabling legislation of some kind. So what was done about the poll tax does not mean a thing. Mr. TAFT can go out and talk now about how they outlawed the poll tax; that the soldiers can no longer be charged a poll tax, and a lot of Republican spokesmen will forget that it was only the soldiers who were covered by that legislation; that they just outlawed the poll tax respecting the soldiers. Yes, they will go out and talk about it, and then the southerners can go down South and talk about how they stopped anything in the equal-rights program going through the Senate. They can say, "True, they got a little antipoll tax through which does not affect anybody, but we sure held them up."

So it was a happy thing for everyone concerned, the Republicans are happy, and my lovable southern colleagues are happy.

Let us see what the New York Post further had to say:

Rather makes you wonder if the Senate couldn't have been induced to approve most of Langer's measures—

Sure, Mr. President, I wonder if they could not have been induced to approve most of them—if only the GOP had made a determined effort to live up to its 1944 campaign promise.

Yes, Mr. President, it is going to be awfully tough on them to come back here after the convention, I just cannot see them doing it. If they do they are going to have to deliver. They will go to Philadelphia and write some new, fancy promises, and they will have to deliver on them; so if I should have to talk here for 2 or 3 days it would be awfully embarrassing to them. I do not think I will make it, but I might.

The Post continued:

We'll never know. And neither will the boys who may be forced to serve in the Jim Crow outfits of our mighty democracy's defense army.

fense army.

The Republican's tactics may have been tawdry. Yet the turncoat antics of so-called "liberal" Democrats, who have no known allegiance to the for-whites-only rule south of the Mason-Dixon line, deserve equal censure.

With the exceptions of Senator Harley Kilgore (Democrat, West Virginia), and Henry Wallace's running mate, Glen Taylor (Democrat, Idaho)—

I apologize, Mr. President, I had not read the editorial before—honestly I had not. I did not know that my name was in it. Someone handed it to me and I placed it on the desk. I hate to brag on myself, but I appreciate this recognition, however, by the New York Post. We will read that over again:

With the exceptions of Senator Harley Kilgore (Democrat of West Virginia), and Henry Wallace's running mate, Glen Taylor (Democrat of Idaho), the Democrats voted solidly with the Republicans to discrard Langer's proposal that the draft bill contain a ban on race discrimination.

There is the record, Mr. President. There is the answer. There is the reason why the Negro people are not going to be fooled by the promises of tweedledum and tweedledummer any more.

The editorial continues:

And Senator Scott Lucas, Democratic whip even had the effrontery to denounce Taft's belated move to write the anti-poll-tax ban into the bill. Lucas baldly stated that Taft had upset a previous agreement—a "gentleman's agreement."

A gentleman's agreement, Mr. Presi-

Lucas badly stated that TAFT had upset a previous agreement—a gentleman's agreement, we suppose you'd call it—to table all civil rights amendments. Thirty Democrats voted against the anti-poll-tax measure.

The Democrats may have been dutifully following the lead of their party standard bearer, Harry Truman.

I think they were, Mr. President. That is what I said a while ago. I think the southerners just got way off base when they got all excited about Harry's message. He just did not mean a thing by it, and I think there was nobody more surprised than Harry when the southern boys started jumping down his throat, and they got him on a spot where he could not back down and they could not back down. Of course, now they are all coming back and sneaking in the back door of the tepee, sort of. I am afraid that is the fact.

The Senator from North—or South—you are South, are you not? You are from South Carolina.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. IVES in the chair). Is the Senator from Idaho yielding to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. TAYLOR. No, sir. I was just addressing the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. Johnston]. He was remonstrating in an undertone that they were not going back into the tent, but if anybody wants to bet me, I will bet that the southerners will be back in there with Harry before this thing is over.

I read further from the New York Post:

The Democrats may have been dutifully following the lead of their party standard bearer, Harry Truman. The President is apparently so anxious to gain his party's nomination that he is refusing to antagonize the Southern delegates by ordering the end of racial discrimination in Government agencies and in the armed services.

What about that, Mr. President? Mr. Truman a while back told them to cut out segregation in the armed services. He told them to do so a couple of times. No one did a thing about it. I wonder whatever became of that order.

The Post continues:

Once the President implied that he would. But that was before leading Democrats talked seriously about replacing him with another candidate, one more acceptable to all wings of the party.

Civil rights is becoming a casualty of our November elections. We would hint to the Democrats, Senators, and Harry Truman alike, that there may be another casualty close to home, unless they challenge the Republicans' meager performance and come through with a record which will convince the voters that Democrats don't consider some citizens "second class."

Well, there is no challenge from the Democrats or the Republicans on civil rights.

The only assurance respecting things that really matter to the American people—the question of actually keeping alive, Mr. President, the question of civil rights, of equal rights, of nondiscrimination, the only chance that labor has to survive which is as an organized entity, the only chance the old people have of getting a square deal, the only chance the soldiers have of getting homes—witness what is going on in the Senate today, the scuttling of the housing program—the only chance the United Nations has to survive, the only chance Israel has of getting a square deal, the only assurance that the monopolists and the cartelists will get what is coming to them—the only guaranty or assurance of any of these things is a victory for the new party in November and the election of Henry Wallace as President of the United States.

Mr. President, we all remember that awhile ago when Mr. Truman—it was not Mr. Truman, either; it was Gen. Bedell Smith, our Ambassador to Moscow—they are all generals. Look them up. We find generals from Patagonia to Korea, all the way across the world. Our Ambassadors everywhere are generals. At any rate, Mr. Bedell Smith delivered a note to Molotov telling him how tough we were, how powerful we were, but that if they wanted to talk things over the door was always open. Mr. Molotov said, "All right; let us talk."

Our diplomats and statesmen hastened to explain that the last sentence in the note, to the effect that the door was always open, was simply diplomatic finery. It did not mean any more than the President's message on civil rights. We had not meant a thing by it. The door was not really open. We were still tough, and might become tougher, and did not even want to talk about it.

How did the newspapers over the world report the occurrence? People all over the world were very much thrilled and happy that we were offering a chance to make peace in the world, but we told them, "No; we do not even want to talk about it. The door is not open at all." I believe that the handling of our foreign policy—and, remember, it is a bipartisan foreign policy—is the most disgraceful chapter in all American history. Never has there been such stupidity in such high places.

This is what the New York Herald Tribune of May 14 had to say:

French people still hope for cold-war truce. Mix-up on United States-Soviet talks causes disappointment. London press pessimistic.

(By Walter Kerr)

Paris, May 13.—The excitement caused by the Moscow radio's report of possible negotiations between the United States and Soviet Union died down in Paris today, leaving most Frenchmen disappointed, but still hopeful that something may come of it.

Mr. President, we threw cold water on the hopes and aspirations of the whole world.

This is the way the Washington News reported it. The headline says, "Truman chills Reds' reception of peace offer."

The second heading over the article is: Truman ignores peace bid.

How the President of the United States has the nerve to tell the people that if they will only reelect him he will keep the peace by becoming tougher with everyone, I do not see. I have never heard of keeping the peace by becoming tough with anyone. A man must be pleasant with his neighbors if he wants them to be pleasant with him. He cannot swagger around like a big bully and expect his neighbors to love him.

Returning to the article about the French people—

No one any longer anticipates bilateral talks in the immediate future, but most newspaper commentators still call for some sort of an arrangement that could bring an end to the cold war.

The French people are not happy about the cold war. They do not feel so cock-sure about it. They do not have atom bombs. They are right in the middle, so to speak. They have no ocean to protect them. They are not so happy about our cold war.

While the excitement was on it was hot, and it is now known that French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault reacted sharply and angrily before a full explanation was laid before him. Private citizens tired of the cold war feel a little let down by the turn of events.

I suppose they were. I know that I was. I thought to myself, "At last those fellows are getting a little sense. They are realizing that war means the end of all of us, so they are going to be a little more moderate. They are going to see if we cannot come to an understanding." My hopes rose, and then they were dashed, just as were the hopes of the good people of Europe.

The heading on the next article is "Pessimism in London."

LONDON, May 13.—Confusion and pessimism marked comment today on the 3 days of exchanges between Moscow and Washington.

The London Times said the hope of a Soviet-American conference for the discussion of differences has been dashed. It blamed both the United States and Russia for what it called a bewildering episode. Russia, it said, had a right to believe that Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith meant something more than a conventional expression when he told Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov that the door was always open to discussion. But instead of rushing to the radio with an announcement that she had accepted a bid to negotiate, Russia should have inquired quietly just what the Americans had in mind, said the Times.

That was the reaction abroad when we withdrew our offer to talk things over. Everyone was disappointed, and I am sorry to say that the Russians came off better than we did in the explanations, charges, and countercharges which ensued.

It seems that Mr. Truman has little regard for Gallup polls, when he refuses to talk with the Russians. The Gallup poll of May 1 says:

Majority in favor of world peace parley.

Do you think it would be a good idea or a poor idea for President Truman to call an international meeting with Stalin and heads of other nations to work out more effective plans for peace? A good idea, 63 percent; poor idea, 28 percent; no opinion, 9 percent.

That is the result of the Gallup poll.

Let us see what the reaction was to our action when we recognized Israel on such short notice. The press had this to say:

United States action shocks delegates to UN. Many are resentful because of unexpected shift from backing of trusteeship.

As I have said, we had given them this trusteeship. We told them to talk it over awhile, and then come back with the right answer, "Yes." But then we kicked the pegs out from under them by recognizing Palestine. They did not like it.

I have before me an article by George Barrett; I believe the article appeared in the Washington Post. It says:

UNITED STATES ACTION SHOCKS DELEGATES TO UN-MANY ARE RESENTFUL BECAUSE OF UNEXPECTED SHIFT FROM BACKING OF TRUSTEESHIP

(By George Barrett)

Anger, incredulity and shock, mixed finally with relief, made the General Assembly session at Flushing Meadow last night the most stirring United Nations meeting to date as a result of the United States recognition of the new state of Israel.

new state of Israel.

Delegates, officials and the small crowd of visitors were dumbfounded by reports of the Washington announcement and few believed it at first.

it at first.

Press bulletins flashed the news to the corridors and the story raced through the Assembly hall shortly after 6 p. m. while the delegates were still voting on the Jerusalem trusteeship resolution. The first reaction was that someone was making a terrible joke, and some diplomats broke into skeptical laughs.

However, even before Dr. Philip C. Jessup of the United States was able to make the news official in a statement, the delegates were slowly beginning to believe it. Dr. Guillermo Belt, of Cuba, referring to an earlier indication that the Soviet Union would recognize the new Jewish state, commented sarcastically that apparently Russia knew more about what was going on in Washington than the United States delegation did.

MANY DELEGATES RESENTFUL

There was considerable resentment among many of the delegations over the way the United States had pushed so vigorously for a trusteeship agreement in United Nations debates while apparently intending all the time to approve partition by recognizing the new state of Israel.

This feeling soon began to give way in some delegations to one of relief that the United States had at last come out firmly after what many of them believed was a long display of indecision.

Most of the remarks heard around the corridors were too caustic to be attributed to the authors.

Imagine that, Mr. President. The representatives of the United Nations made such remarks that they could not even be printed in the newspapers—such remarks about our foreign policy, about our vacillation, our wiggling and waggling, back and forth.

I read further from the article:

One delegate asked another for the United States position on Palestine and was told by another diplomat that he did not know because he had not seen an announcement for 20 minutes.

Imagine that—making fun of us to that extent, saying that they did not know what our foreign policy was, because they had not seen a dispatch for 20 minutes.

I read further:

During the Assembly debate Prince Faisal al-Saud, of Saudi Arabia, the chief Arab delegate, sat alone in a corner of the public lounge, with his aides reporting to him from time to time. He refused to comment on the United States recognition move, but he turned to an aide and exclaimed: "So what!"

turned to an aide and exclaimed: "So what!" Sir Carl Berendsen, of New Zealand, remarked tartly that he was "Just dizzy; that's all: just dizzy."

Dr. Abba Hillel Silver, head of the American section of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, was surprised and delighted by developments

"This is marvelous," he said of United States recognition. "This is what we've been praying for.'

Of course, there were many Jewish people who were delighted at that particular moment, but they should have waited until several days later, for things have not been so good for the Jews over there since then, and goodness knows what will happen to the Jews before these matters are straightened out.

I read further:

It had been a long day of confusion for most of the delegates, who began their Politi-cal and Security Committee session at Lake Success, then hurried to the 5 p. m. plenary meeting of the Assembly.

Mr. President, let me refer now to an article which I quoted a while ago. The article is entitled "Britain Intercedes for Doomed Greeks." Mr. President, it caps the climax when the British have to ask us please not to shoot so many poor Greeks. Of course, I always save news-paper articles such as these, because some of these things sound so fantastic that people will not believe them unless you are able to show them the newspaper accounts. For instance, no one ordinarily would believe that the British are trying to keep us from shooting so many poor Greeks. Many people do not read the newspapers very carefully; so many people will say, "Oh, the British are so bloodthirsty that they would not intercede to help the Greeks." So we have to show such people articles such as this one in order to let them know what really is happening.

Mr. President, the Turks did not help us during the war, but we have given them great quantities of guns. My ear-liest recollection of the Turks is that when I was a kid, I was told about the Turks' massacring the Armenians, and I thought the Turks must be terrible people. But we have gotten too bloodthirty for the Turks, Mr. President. I never thought I would live to see the day when that would happen; but we have sent the Turks so many guns, that the other day they sent us a note in which they said, "Please, if you do not mind, we have gotten enough guns, and now we would like something to eat."

Mr. President, I read now an article by William Philip Simms, entitled "Palestine Pendulum"— a very appropriate name for what is going on with respect to our policy in regard to Palestine.

Mr. Simms says:

The United States is doing so many flipflops on Palestine and in the foreign field generally that both Embassy Row and Capitol Hill are dizzy and bewildered.

Mr. President, this bipartisan foreign policy of ours is a strange, strange thing; and it is a wonder that both the Republican and Democratic Parties have adhered to it for so long. Either the Democrats or the Republicans could have gotten out from under this foreign policy of ours long ago, and could have left the other side with the darnedest hot potato that anyone ever saw. But they are loyal, Mr. President; I will say that. They refuse to get out from under.

The article further says:

White House, State Department, our For-eign Relations committees of Congress, delegation at the United Nations and envoys abroad each seems to be functioning separately without often knowing what the others are doing.

Of course, Mr. President, he gives them credit for seeming to be functioning and operating. Of course, that implies that something is going on, that someone has some idea of what is going on. Personally, I think it is just a madhouse. I read further:

President Truman's recognition of Israel, the new Jewish state in Palestine, for in-stance, seems to have caught the State Department, our delegates at Lake Success and the world in general wholly by surprise.

Shortly before the White House acted.

State Secretary George Marshall was quoted as having advised both Arab and Jewish leaders in Palestine to avoid hasty action when the British mandate expired at midnight on May 15. Specifically he warned them against any "political change"—that is, against proclaiming sovereign states.

Midnight in the Holy Land is 6 p. m.

Israel was proclaimed Washington time. independent at 6:01 p. m. Friday, our time. At 6:11 p. m., President Truman approved recognition and it was made public a few minutes after.

It was 10 minutes later. I read further:

At the State Department reporters began to ask questions. The answer was invariably: "No comment." The lid had been clamped on-it is said, by Secretary Marshall.

That is a pretty good scheme: If you cannot think of anything to say, and are at an utter loss, just keep your mouth shut, I guess.

I read further:

At Lake Success it was even more embarrassing. Report of the White House ac-tion circulated around the General Assembly table from mouth to mouth. Presently Francis B. Sayre (deputy in the absence of his chief, Warren R. Austin) was asked for a fill-in. Blushingly he had to admit that all he knew was what he had seen on the ticker.

American policy on Palestine has been swinging like a pendulum for a long time. Everyone has complained about it-British, Arabs, Jews, the UN, and others alike,

In 1946—to go back no further than that an Anglo-American committee presented the Morrison plan for partition of Palestine into Jewish and Arab provinces within the British mandate. Jews, Arabs, and the United States turned it down.

In 1947, a special UN committee proposed partition into independent states. such strong backing from the American delegation that some characterized it as a scan-dal. Washington was charged with using pressure to put partition across.

Then, last March, the United States took the opposite stand. It announced against The move came as a bombshell. In fact UN members called it just that. Zionists seemed stunned. Some wept. Dr. Chaim Weizmann, former head of the World Zionist organization and now first President of Israel, denounced the trusteeship plan which the United States now favored as an impossible solution.

State Secretary Marshall is believed to have engineered the switch. Fear of what might happen to world peace if independent Jews and Arabs started war before the UN had either the strength or the organization to handle it is thought to have influenced him. At any rate, he openly expressed his approval of the shift, describing it as only an "interim measure" to be taken "without prejudice" to any eventual political settlement.

So great was the opposition in this country, and in the UN, however, that of late the United States has stressed it less and less, putting major emphasis on a truce between Arabs and Jews until some all-round settlement satisfactory to all could be devised.

Which is where matters stood last Friday at 6 p. m. Then, at 6:01 came another Pales tine bombshell. Coming on top of the Smith-Molotov incident of only a week ago, British, French, and other friends of the United States are more than taken aback. one foreigner at Lake Success expressed it:

"If this sort of thing keeps up, we may be pardoned if we begin to wonder soon who makes American foreign policy and who can really speak for it."

That is what Mr. William Philip Simms thinks of our foreign policy. It is really something, Mr. President.

The Washington News wrote an editorial about Mr. Truman's handling of our foreign policy. I think it is legiti-mate to discuss all these things in order that all may understand why they should not vote for a draft now at this time. It is necessary for them to understand all the other silly things that have gone on before they will believe how silly the present bipartisan coalition that is ruining this country can really be. So these things are all pertinent to building up the testimony on tall fronts. Under the heading, "Irresponsible," the editorial

President Truman's handling of American recognition of the new state of Israel was irresponsible. Regardless of the merits of the policy, the method was inexcusable.

The President made a momentous decision affecting the security of the United States, the fate of the United Nations, and the peace of the world, without sufficient consultation with the State Department, the defense establishment, and our allies.

What moved the President we do not know. Whether he was thinking of Jewish votes in the November election, as his critics charge, or whether he was trying to beat Russia to decision which the has not yet taken, or whatever his motives, he made his sudden move in the most costly manner.

He left the State Department demoralized, the Defense Department unprepared, our UN delegation helpless, and our foreign allies feeling they had been double-crossed.

Less than 24 hours before proclamation of the state of Israel, which was followed in 21 minutes by Truman recognition, the Israelite foreign minister-designate announced that Secretary Marshall had warned the Jews against such a step. The White House now claims that Secretary Marshall and Undersecretary Lovett were notified of the Truman change in policy in advance—how long in advance is not said. Other State Depart-ment officials and our UN delegation, representing American policy on Palestine, knew nothing of it.

Our delegate in the Palestine session of the UN had to confess he had no information. He had to telephone Washington to find out, and then belatedly confirm the fact to the UN to the accompaniment of general ridi-

The London and Paris governments, with which President Truman was supposed to be working for a peaceful Palestine settlemen within the UN, were not informed; nor were our ambassadors abroad who were negotiating.

Foreign governments are saying that the United States cannot be trusted and that American diplomats cannot be believed when they represent American policy.

When the President kicks in the teeth America's allies, not to mention his own official representatives—

I think he ought to, Mr. President. I think he is very smart, kicking all these folk in the teeth. They seem to like it. The Republicans come right back for another helping of bipartisan baloney. Let him kick them around. It says:

When the President kicks in the teeth America's allies, not to mention his own official representatives, he is injuring our closest foreign relations at a time of world peril. If it were necessary to turn the entire Moslem world against us and jeopardize our defenses in the Middle East and north Africa, it certainly was not necessary to insult the British and French Governments—the two largest Christian powers in the Moslem world, upon whose friendship we are now even more dependent.

We are not here discussing the merits of recognition of Israel. But in any case no major American foreign policy, much less a reversal, should ever be decided suddenly and without careful preparation at home and abroad. By violating that rule of government and of common sense, President Truman has brought ridicule and reproach upon America.

If the President had taken his position openly and stood for it consistently, he would have won respect at least. As it is, he has earned distrust for his country.

I have here an article by Eleanor Roosevelt, Mr. President. I am sorry to say that it is hard to keep up with Mrs. Roosevelt lately. We cannot tell on which side of an issue she will be. One day she will condemn Russia and the next day she will condemn us, over the same issue, practically. But, nevertheless, she does have a good argument on this particular issue of the note which Mr. Bedell Smith delivered to Mr. Molotov. She says, "Why should we have to deny we want peace?" That is the heading which appeared in the Washington Daily News of Monday, May 17. The article is dated New York, Sunday. She says:

I am not quite sure I feel very happy over the barrage we have felt it necessary to put out to deny Soviet accusations that we were making a move for peace.

That is the way I felt about it, Mr. President. Why should we feel compelled to deny that we were even open to talk the matter over at all?

Mrs. Roosevelt goes on to say:

I thought whatever was said, we were the ones who felt the need for further conversations. As a matter of fact, most of us knew the U.S. S. R. couldn't make any one, except their own people, believe that. Perhaps their own people needed a little encouragement. Nevertheless, why should we feel it neces-

Nevertheless, why should we feel it necessary to deny so vehemently that we intended to make a move for peace when heaven knows everything that we do in these days is directed toward that end? We do not want the Russians to think that we are afraid of them and are coming hat in hand to beg for more conversations.

But I can't see why we have to deny that we try to bring about better understanding between us.

In fact, Mr. President, very few people approved of our stand when the Russians said they wanted to talk peace. If I recall correctly, I believe Walter Lippmann and nearly all the other experts on foreign affairs said we made a terrible mistake in stating to all the world that we did not even want to talk about peace, and that it was only an accident. I think Sumner Welles commented on how terribly incompetently the whole matter had been handled.

Mr. President, I was mentioning awhile ago our foreign policy based on the United Nations and wanting to work through the United Nations. The New York Times of May 6, 1948, quotes Sir John Boyd Orr, noted Britisher, as saying:

Full stomachs are the answer to communism, but the United States won't or can't understand this. The United States talks about Russian misuses of the veto, but the United States itself has vetoed, and therefore destroyed, a world plan to feed the world without a blueprint, and we were ready to go ahead. Then America said, "No."

Yes, Mr. President, some people are forever berating Russia and never saying anything about what we do. It is just too ridiculous. None of us is per-If we would just realize that we should give the Russians credit for the decent things they do, if they were only publicized widely, the situation would be much improved. We have been told that there is no war propaganda in Russia. That was the statement of Eddy Gilmore. If we would let the people know such things, and then go to the Russians in good faith and tell them we will be glad to go home and stay there, if they will do the same, and that we would be glad to get rid of our weapons if they will do the same, we could do all of those things with no appeasement.

I was recently in Detroit. It was on the day after the exchange of notes, and there was an editorial in the Detroit Free Press, which is quite a famous newspaper. The heading of the editorial is as follows:

Shall we drift into war because we lack leadership?

Of course, Mr. President, we have the leadership of a bipartisan coalition, presumably the best brains of both old parties. But if they have not made a mess of things I never saw one. If we had leadership we might do something sensible. In November, of course, the American people will choose Henry Wallace as their leader, and then we will get on the right track, establish peace in the world, and work out a sensible program at home, using a few of the billions of dollars we have appropriated for guns to make this a better country in which to live.

But to get back to the editorial in the Detroit Free Press, there is a picture of Mr. Stalin seated at a table. Across from him is Uncle Sam, with his silk hat on the table, but there is no head protruding from the figure of Uncle Sam. On his brief case are the words, "Blundering United States diplomacy. No head"

That is correct. The bipartisan policy has no head. If we elect Henry Wallace we might make the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Langer] our Secretary of State.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. TAYLOR. I will yield for a question, but not for the acceptance of the proposal.

Mr. LANGER. Is the Senator in favor of the pay raise?

Mr. TAYLOR. Yes.

Mr. LANGER. I might take the job. Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. President, there is a caption under the cartoon in which Uncle Joe is pictured as trying to talk to a headless Uncle Sam regarding our foreign policy. The caption is:

Even Joe must be slightly confused.

I guess he is. The article says:

This newspaper confesses complete bafflement over American policies in relation to foreign affairs.

Who does not, Mr. President? Who is not completely baffled? The article goes on to say:

Stark tragedy faces a might nation that is without guidance.

Too true. It goes on to say that our leaders are dealing with the destinies of the human race, and we must needs stand by helplessly in a terrior of contradiction.

That is correct, Mr. President. We are likely to get into war by using this technique of scaring people and trying to get an armament economy fastened on the Nation, trying to get the Marshall plan to dump our surpluses abroad. We are liable to be scared right into war, and that means the end of life on this planet, of course.

Mr. President, I want to make it plain that this is a quotation because some-body is likely to jump up and call me unpatriotic, a stooge of Stalin, or something, so I want to make it plain that this is quoted. It says:

General George C. Marshall is a valiant old soldier whose years have been spent in selfiess service to his country but he is not trained in the arts of diplomacy.

I have said that before, and folks thought I was almost a traitor even to question General Marshall's fitness to be Secretary of State. It continues:

To add to the fused confusions, he is not master of the State Department, but must wait on the opportunistic vagaries of President Truman, who is thinking of precinct votes instead of the single universal issue that confronts all mankind.

And so we have before us this utterly mad contention:

If we make a gesture of peace toward Russia it will be taken as a sign of weakness, so we must not do that.

On the other hand, if Russia makes such a gesture, then we must reject it because the rulers of Russia are not to be trusted under any circumstances.

That is what we have been told, Mr. President. The Detroit Free Press points out how ridiculous it is, how it can only end in disaster, because there is no way out. It continues:

This makes war inevitable because it makes it impossible for the two mightiest powers on earth ever to get together.

on earth ever to get together.

We here present the three major problems this Nation has before it with the Soviet Government's position a major factor in each issue

1. There is the movement to bring about a meeting of minds between Moscow and Washington.

2. There is the Palestine question with Russia and the United States alone going along parallel lines.

3. There is the ending of the efforts in the United Nations to bring about understanding on the regulations of atomic energy. And with that failure the sudden announcement by Washington of far mightler weapons of war in connection with the atom.

Mr. President, we have much better weapons now.

The subhead is "Russia and the Wallace letters." The article states:

Henry Wallace is, to our way of thinking, an utterly naive man in whom erratic emotions have entirely supplanted balance.

I read that because I want to go on and read the rest. They say he is "nuts" and then they agree with him.

His foreign policy, as outlined at his recent appearance in Olympia, is unrealistic as the play fantasies of a little child.

Nevertheless, we do not believe that Henry Wallace's habit of living in a dream world constitutes reason for rejecting the response which his letter to Joseph Stalin has produced.

You see, they say Henry is crazy, and then they say, "Well, by golly, his letter to Stalin got an answer, and we think we ought to do something about it." They will forgive you for saying Henry is crazy, because if you mention Henry nowadays and do not say he is crazy at the same time, the Un-American Activities Committee puts you on its list, and the free press does not want to get on the list, so they say Henry is "nuts." Then they say he is all right. The article continues:

True, the exchange can be attributed to political maneuvering in a campaign year. Wallace wrote his letter as a private citizen—but a private citizen endeavoring to get himself elected President.

I just do not believe that. I believe Henry Wallace is absolutely sincere. If he thought it would best serve the interests of this country for him to get out of this race, anything he thought would be for the best, he would do it; but he thinks, and I think, and millions of other people think, that the only way for our country to get out of this morass of confusion and false policy is to elect Henry Wallace President of the United States. He would be perfectly willing to give it up if he thought it would be the best thing.

I read further from the article:

Stalin's amicable reply could be a shrewd Kremlin maneuver on behalf of the Wallace candidacy. By making it appear that the Wallace letter laid a cornerstone for international accord, canny old Joe Stalin doubtless c.n help Wallace's nonvestigial political chances.

And the Kremlin certainly would be extremely elated to have Henry Wallace in the White House. Any enemy of the United States would.

Of course, that statement, Mr. President, is absolutely unwarranted, that any enemy of the United States would want Henry Wallace in the White House. But, as I say, they have to say these bad things about him because they are saying that perhaps he is not crazy after all. I read further:

All these things are realized, but we can't go on forever looking for a hidden-ball trick and turning down all overtures. At some point we must sit down with the Russians and discuss formulas for living and letting live.

In other words, they say that Henry is right, after they have called him all the names they can think of,

The only alternative is eventual war. We can't exist forever in a diplomatic stale-mate—the fancy camouflaging name for which is "cold war."

What we fear is that the point is rapidly passing where any chance remains for sitting down across the table from the Russians and making an honest effort to wipe out the oppressive, constant threat of a shooting war.

That is right, Mr. President; the Detroit Free Press is absolutely right in that. The time is passing, the time will eventually come when there will be no turning back. We will have gotten so tough that we will just have to go on being tough. Our people will be sold on the idea that anybody who speaks kindly of the Russians or to the Russians is a traitor, and there will be no hope then of ever getting along with the Russians.

The article continues:

Worse, as we drift on and the administration fumbles and postures, we are losing both world confidence and world respect.

Events are making us and not the Russians the obdurate ones; the ones who shout "No" to every proposal. No propaganda skill is necessary to make our antics appear to dash all hope that peace can be realized.

This is a very severe indictment of this bipartisan foreign policy that is being so blithely accepted and promulgated and continued by the press of both the old parties. It says:

All you have to do is to tell the unornamented story. Over the rest of the world it can't help but make us look like the badies and the Russians the goodies—to borrow film studio terminology.

Though it was kept from Americans many, months—

Officia-

Mind you, Mr. President-

Though it was kept from Americans many months—

The Americans do not get the truth any more unless it suits somebody's purpose to let them find it out; just like they are not finding out the truth about this newsman who was murdered over in Greece. They have hushed it all up because they are afraid that we will find out the truth, and get mad at the Greek Fascists we are supporting and might not give them any more money. So they hush the whole matter up.

Though it was kept from Americans many months, as far as back as last January the Russians made diplomatic approaches. Contact was arranged through Robert Murphy, our political adviser to Gen. Lucius Clay in Germany.

Statements were made that these overtures had been made. Our State Department denied it flatly. Later it comes out that it did happen. They just lie to us. The people in charge of our country, the bipartisan coalition, have no responsibility to the democratic traditions of this country at all, Mr. President. They keep information from us and let us have it to suit their purposes.

The editorial continues:

They (the Russians) sought a meeting between Premier Stalin and President Truman and were willing to stage it on neutral ground—in Stockholm. It was even hinted that such a conference might cancel what Russia considered the necessity for steps it has since taken in Czechoslovakia and Finland.

There you are, Mr. President. In other words the Russians told us, "We want to talk things over; we would like to arrive at a peaceful settlement with you; but if you will not talk to us we are going to have to take certain measures in Czechoslovakia and Finland." And we said, "Well, we are not going to talk. We do not care what you do." So Russia did what she did, and then we are flabbergasted and profess great surprise and shock at what happened.

What the Detroit Free Press is saying not what I am saying, Mr. President is that we sold out Czechoslovakia and Finland. If we had been willing to sit down and discuss these differences, and call off the cold war, there might have been a chance of stopping what happened there.

The editorial continues:

Secretary Marshall rejected the whole proposition, and it is even rumored that Murphy found himself in bad for having made even preliminary moves toward the accord.

Is not that a sad commentary on the state of affairs in the handling of American foreign policy? If some well-meaning fellow even sounds out somebody on the possibilities of peace he is ostracized and made a villain, and probably will lose his job. We do not even want to talk peace to anybody. We are just tough. We have got the atom bomb with which we can kill everybody in the world. We have got all the oil, and are doing fine.

The editorial continues:

Then only last week, it was revealed that our Moscow diplomat, Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith, had delivered to the Kremlin a note which outlined our position, and in so many words told the Russians that we stood ready to meet with them at any time.

Like Murphy, Smith found his action promptly disowned and discredited. When the Russians accepted it in what ought to have been accepted as good faith, official Washington promptly steamed itself up over what it said was a breach of protocol.

They said it was not cricket for the Russians to publish Bedell Smith's note. I guess they forgot that just a little while ago we printed a lot of secret papers, and it was said that it was the first time in all history that one nation had printed secret documents about another nation that was supposed to be friendly to it at the time. But we printed them and broke all precedents. Yet we got all excited because the Russians would print a note we sent them telling them that we would be glad to talk peace. I do not see what is secret about that.

Russia has published the contents of Smith's note and the Kremlin answer.

That is all it was.

In the midst of this artificially induced heat, State Department spokesmen spouted balderdash about the Russians having misunderstood what we meant. They couldn't have. Here are Ambassador Smith's words:

"As far as the United States is concerned, the door is always open for full discussions and the composing of all differences."

Mr. President, I think this discussion of foreign affairs, our refusal to discuss peace terms with the Russians to end the cold war, are very pertinent to this question of the draft. If we could make peace with the Russians there certainly would be no need for this idiotic draft. There is no need for it any more, because we have enough atom bombs to kill everybody in the world, so I do not see that it makes any difference whether we draft them first or kill them first.

The editorial continues:

If Stalin wasn't thoroughly confused and suspicious after that incident, he was a minority of one.

That is right. The whole world wondered what in the world was going on

All the rest of the world assuredly was (confused).

Now, taking the Wallace letter as his springboard, he has made another overture. And it ill behooves the Government of this country to remain aloof because it is easy to cite possible ulterior motives.

That is right. Simply because Henry Wallace thought it up they figure it cannot be any good. When they think that, they ought to think about hybrid corn, Mr. President. Wallace thought that up, and it is pretty fair.

It can't help but be known to readers of this page that we have no friendship for Henry Wallace-

No: after reading the first of the article we gather that-that as a public figure we regard him as being of such light weight that he wouldn't register on an apothecary's scale.

That is pretty light. I read an article recently by, I believe, Mr. Reston, of the New York Times, published in the Times magazine pointing out some fallacies of our foreign policies, and even Mr. Reston, who is a conservative through and through, felt impelled, after he had gotten a few paragraphs into his article. to devote a paragraph to denying that he was a Communist, saying that he was not a Communist.

And so it is. If you are going to write anything about Henry Wallace and suggest that he has any good sense at all, then you have got to write two paragraphs for every one in praise of him, saying that he is idiotic completely, but something happened here, and Wallace had a fool idea which worked out pretty

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Idaho yield?

Mr. TAYLOR. No, sir. I am just trying to find my place. All right; here we go. The editorial says:

But in the matter of our relationships with Russia and the prospect of bettering them. Henry Wallace is, after all, a private citizen. And if any private citizen in this Nation—no matter what his own standing or competence-wrote a letter that brought a diplomatically favorable response from the Kremlin that would urge that the opportunity this afforded be seized upon.

Naturally, it is necessary to go into any negotiations with our eyes open.

The whole purpose of any diplomatic parleying is to obtain your own ends. And only the hopelessly innocent will suppose that the opposition isn't equally selfish.

The process is not one of attaining clean, complete victory for either side, but somehow to adjust the claims and aspirations so that there will be no need to set armies marching. Compromise has to be accepted.

Nor is honest compromise anything like appeasement. It is a measure to avoid war by creating a reasonably equitable even if not perfect condition. Yet the administration and our diplomacy persists in only one task-that of ferreting out darksome explanations for why the Russians should want to make a try for mutual understand-

Never give them credit for one honest motive-one sincere wish to bring about peace in the world. Just keep plugging on the old propaganda that the Russians are no good at all. If Eddy Gilmore writes an article saying that there is no war propaganda in Russia, put it over on the third page somewhere.

Better men would make the try and desist only after they discovered the trick—if there was one to be discovered.

That makes sense. That is exactly the program Henry Wallace has in mind—to try sincerely, all out—to reach an agreement with the Russians. After that there is plenty of time to fight. We have not tried.

They would be willing to subscribe to the belief of Benjamin Franklin that "there never was a good war or a bad peace.'

For, by their every act and word, the mouthpieces for the White House

I interpolate to say the bipartisan mouthpieces in our foreign policy—make it apparent that they believe the only solution of our relations with Russia is to maintain two armed camps.

e cannot do that forever, worse luck.

Not only is life in an armed camp uncomfortable. The perpetuation of two of them makes war inevitable. When nations have differences to settle and one of them refuses to talk it over-to show even the beginning of good will and high purpose—the ultimate means of settlement can't be anything else but battle.

Our Washington leadership prefers to invite that rather than concede that Henry Wallace has been the instrument for giving us still another opening to make peace with

They finally got around to saying it. After condemning Henry to keep themselves in the clear, so that they would not lose all their advertisers, they become pro-Wallace. After taking him over the coals, they finally say:

Our Washington leadership prefers to invite that rather than concede that Henry Wallace has been the instrument for giving us still another opening to make peace with the Soviets.

If the men in the Kremlin are feeling dizzy, we don't blame them. More, we thing they probably share their dizziness with most of America.

Henry Wallace surely is not the only one who is dizzy, if he is, trying to keep up with our foreign policy.

RUSSIA AND THE PALESTINE ISSUE

The world may share a sense of bafflement when it contemplates the United States and Russia, acting through the United Nations, as the apostles of peace in an effort to force a truce upon Israel and the Arabs.

It is not so unusual, perhaps, that power powers should be seeking a peaceful settlement, as it is a strange contradiction that they should select the UN as the vehicle.

The United States made the first move. sking the Security Council to intervene to the extent of demanding that both the Jews and Arabs cease firing within 36 hours and rest on their arms in the positions each how

Out of the big five members of the Security Council, only Russia gave immediate approval and support to the American pro-

We have, as a result, the picture of the two greatest and most powerful nations on the earth which have long made the UN the battleground for their own cold war, joining hands and standing alone in favor of a principle which none of the other member nations have so far accepted.

That, however, is not the only contradiction in the situation.

Last Friday, President Truman rushed his announcement of this Nation's recognition of the new state of Israel.

It was done without reference to the United Nations to which the whole problem of Palestine had been previously referred.

On each point which this country had placed before the UN, beginning with the question of partition, President Truman has reversed himself by resorting to ex parte measures, completely bypassing UN.

And now, after following the same course, and after Israel's independence has become recognized fact, the administration in Washington seeks peace in Palestine through an appeal to the Security Council.

Considering our wavering, our emotional-ism, and our side glances toward political expediency, it is not to be wondered at that the other member nations treat our new proposals cooly and wrap themselves protectively in a wait-and-see attitude. It must be as puzzling to them as to see Russia and this country, allied within the Security Council, working together for peace. With dissension between Russia and the United States within the UN having all but wrecked that organization; with a clique of vocal Members of the United States Senate demanding in effect that Russia be expelled from the UN, it is proper to ask what ma-chinery we now have to enforce our demands for an armistice in Palestine.

Mr. President, recently there has been a rash of resolutions introduced in the Senate, presumably to strengthen the United Nations. I started it in 1945. shortly after the atomic bombs had fallen, on October 24, 1945. I decided that the United Nations, in view of the atom bomb, was inadequate, so I introduced a resolution calling upon the Senate to go on record as asking the President to call a meeting of the United Nations with the object of changing the United Nations into a federated world government. a real republic patterned after what ours used to be like. I say "used to be like" advisedly, Mr. President.

I went around trying to persuade Senators to act with me as sponsors of the resolution. They would read it and say, "That is a good idea. It is the only solution. We must have something strong." I would say, "Do you want to sponsor the resolution with me?" They would say, 'No. It is a good idea for you, but not

I am afraid that one thing most Senators fear more than anything else is being called an idealist-getting out on a limb a little ahead of the parade. Most of them are like a gentleman in the French Revolution. He saw the mob going down the street. He looked out the window and said, "There goes the mob. I am their leader. I must follow them."

I do not feel that way. I drafted the resolution. I could not get any Senators to sponsor it with me, so I introduced it on October 24, 1945.

Last year I decided to introduce another resolution, not quite as broad, merely strengthening the United Nations to make it possible for them to enact, interpret, and enforce world law. I took that around and showed it to some people—not to Senators. They said, "Wait; we want to get you some cosponsors on this resolution."

So I waited from about March to July, and kept on asking what was going on, all the time. Finally, after an endless amount of work, they got several Senators to act as cosponsors of the resolution. Of course, they simply took my resolution and presented it as their own—these cutsiders—and got other Senators to act as cosponsors. Those who presented it to the other Senators were afraid that if they presented it with my name on it, that would ruin its chances, because, after all, ain't I a friend of Joe's? Then after they got those Senators to endorse it, they let me put my name on the bottom of it.

Then they decided they would go see Secretary of State Marshall about it. After seeing him, they came back with it; but by that time the insides had been cut out of the resolution, and there was nothing left of it but the beginning and the end, and it meant nothing at all by that time. However, they introduced it

So I went ahead and introduced a good resolution, and I got some sponsors for it in short order.

Now they have introduced another group, this year; but this year these resolutions are not designed to strengthen the United Nations. They are not designed to keep peace in the world. These new resolutions are part of the bipartisan scheme just to kick Russia clear out of the family of nations, out of the United Nations, out of everything. The resolution that was passed here the other day was a sorry thing. We argued first that it was simply arming us to fight Russia, but we were assured that was not the case at all, but that it was a good resolution.

How did the press play it up the other day? They knew the truth; you cannot fool them. They said, "Senate Authorizes Arms for Europe." They knew what it was.

Mr. President, there are many people who pay lip service to the United Nations, but do not really care anything about the United Nations. They are in favor of destroying it, because the cartelists and the monopolists and our home-grown Junkers, the militarists, see the profits to be made by prolonging this cold war and making it possible to ship goods all over the world—free samples by which our industrialists will get markets. It is simply terrible the way the United Nations has been kicked around, until now it is almost dead.

In fact, today it is not possible to obtain the appropriation of money for the building of the headquarters of the United Nations. I almost wish the money for the headquarters would not be appropriated; I wish the headquarters would be taken to Switzerland or some other country. I think the United Nations would have a better chance there than in the United States, with all the saboteurs that we have in this country, who try to undermine the United Nations. I think the United Nations would be better off in some other country, where war is more real to the people, and where they have a genuine desire to have peace. I was greatly put out about the failure to appropriate money for the United Nations headquarters until I began to think that the United Nations might have a better chance to succeed if it were located in some other country where not so many lobbyists would be around.

But to go back to the editorial in the Detroit Free Press, it says:

Do the other nations expect that America and Russia—the new-found friends on the Israel issue—will send forces into Palestine to police that unhappy land and to enforce peace?

Of course, our boys will not permit the Russians to send any forces into Palestine. Our boys will not permit the Russians to do anything. They make the Russians stay out. They treat the Russians like Negroes are treated in this country; they discriminate against them. The editorial also says:

Let the matter be proposed and see how long Russia and the United States continue to hold hands.

It was proposed, and the whole thing was blown up, of course. We would not have anything more to do with partition when the Russians agreed to it; that made it bad right away. The editorial further says:

Will moral suasion alone be resorted to? What foundations have Russia and this country laid which would make a moral appeal reasonable?

The United Nations up to now has been largely ineffective because of the failure of Russia and the United States to compose their own differences.

Mr. President, I should like to say here that all the differences between us and Russia on the United Nations and all the failures of the United Nations have not been because of the use of the veto by Russia. Great Britain and ourselves have made the Russians veto one issue after another. We did it deliberately; we tried to think of things that we knew the Russians would have to veto. Mr. President, that is not my statement; it is the statement of Sumner Welles, the foremost writer on foreign affairs in this country, and certainly no howling liberal.

He said the other day that the failure of the Security Council was not due to any Soviet veto, but was due entirely to the cynical approach to the matter by Great Britain and, more particularly, he said, by the United States.

Mr. President, I like to quote such statements, because then if someone calls me a tool of Stalin—just because I tell the truth—I can give the source.

The editorial further says:

Under the circumstances can it be hoped that they—

Meaning Russia and the United can now work together to solve the problems of the rest of the world?

Here is another part of this editorial:
RUSSIA AND THE ATOMIC BOMB

In embracing the Wallace proposals as a means of achieving accord between this Nation and Russia, Marshall Stalin declared that one of the objectives would be a general reduction of armaments and outlawing the atomic bomb.

And simultaneously with his statement comes the announcement that the United Nations' Atomic Energy Commission, which has been seeking a mutually acceptable basis for atomic control, has given up the job as hopeless, and closed up shop.

And if that is not enough for one day, the White House announces a whole new arsenal of atomic tricks, with more powerful weapons developed by this country in its tests at Eniwetok.

It boils down to this: For months the UN has been seeking some means to control atomic energy on an international level so that it could not be used for purposes of warfare.

The Commission began its work in the first place on the assumption that the United States, the only power to possess the atom secret, was willing to put it away for keeps if other countries—particularly Russia—would not stock pile atomic weapons when it had developed the formula for making them.

A provision, laid down by this country, required all atomic development facilities, our own included, to be open to international inspection.

Thus the United States made a gesture of its good intentions.

They were rejected by Russia, and now, as the UN Atomic Energy Commission goes out of business, Stalin talks of his desire for disarmament and outlawing the bomb.

Is this just a bid for empty talk which will lead us nowhere but into another impasse?

Is it a device by which Russia seeks to step outside of the UN to obtain a concession which she was unable to get through that organization?

The United States made what all the world outside of Russia could have interpreted as a sincere desire to cooperate and to eliminate from the minds of all men the fear of the most deadly, the most destructive and diabolical instrument ever devised.

And then, as a token of how much we meant it, the administration declares that we have gone beyond anything that was demonstrated at Nagasaki and Hiroshima. We have refined the atomic weapon, presumably to the point where the original bomb is now almost obsolete, and President Truman declares a new program of development in the light of achievements at Eniwetok.

light of achievements at Eniwetok.

We have questioned the sincerity of the Russians. Who is to blame if our own professions of good will and good intent also are brought under suspicion?

And, finally, just to make the puzzle a little harder, it can be pointed out that the collapse of the Atomic Energy Commission occurred within the framework of that same United Nations in which Russia and the United States are now joined in a policy designed to end the war in Palestine.

Peace, we have both decreed, must descend on Israel and the Arabs.

But we can no longer talk within the UN-AEC about peace between ourselves.

The atom race just goes on.

Yes, Mr. President, the atom race just goes on, to extinction. As I said earlier, we have within our power enough bombs to destroy life on this planet, to make all the world uninhabitable.

Here is a very pertinent article by Scott Nearing. Scott Nearing is one of America's really great men. He has devoted himself unselfishly to a study of our economic and political problems. The article reads:

AS OTHERS SEE US

The people who are saying hard things about Soviet foreign policy would gain a better understanding of the situation if they would put the shoe on the other foot.

If the Soviet Union:

- 1. Possessed the secret of the atomic bomb
- 2. Were doing its best to keep it from us, meanwhile
- 3. Building up a stock pile of the bombs. . Maintaining an army larger than ever before in its history and
  5. A navy larger than all the other navies of the world combined,

6. Proposing to introduce universal military training in time of so-called peace,

7. Allowing her army and navy officers to talk openly of attacking us before we should have time to recover from our war effort and perhaps learn to make our own atomic

8. Carrying on a press and radio campaign to foment suspicion and hostility

9. Seizing and holding military bases along both our frontiers (Iceland, Greenland, the islands of the Pacific),

10. Sending naval expeditions into northern waters for special training in Arctic warfare,

11. Maintaining its most powerful naval unit near our shores (eastern Mediterra-nean), and armed forces along our frontier (Germany, Italy, Trieste, Greece, China, Kerea, Japan). 12. Welding South and Central America into a military bloc and standardizing Latin American, British, and Russian war equipment; and if

13. The Greek Catholic Church were offering to lead a holy war against us; and if

14. Marshal Stalin arranged and officially sponsored a public ceremony at which a former British prime minister, who had twice tried to overthrow our Government and our economic system, was highly honored and, in his address, urged an alliance between our two most powerful rivals— What would we think of Generalissimo Truman and Foreign Commissar Marshall if they did not work night and day to see that the United States had friendly governments in every capital from Canada to Argentina and if they did not move heaven and earth to discover the secret of the atomic bomb? Let us try to see ourselves as others see us.

Surely, Mr. President, that is a very good admonition at this time in history when relations are so strained.

Mr. President, due to the fact that there is no order in the Chamber and no attempt made to keep order, I shall talk to myself from here on out. [Laughter.]

Here, Mr. President, is a feature written by Arthur Gaeth, a well-known radio commentator. He is one of the very few liberal radio commentators left, for the simple reason that most of them have been kicked off the air. Mr. Gaeth is still there, because he works for the United Electrical Workers. They have a radio program on which he broadcasts. That is why he is still on the air. That is why he can be liberal and is liberal. "Let the People Speak" is the title of his radio program, and this particular one is entitled "War Hysteria and Propaganda," broadcast No. 57, May 17, 1948. He said:

ARTHUR GAETH. Hello friends, in Moscow. Premier Stalin answered the open letter Henry Wallace read at a Madison Square Garden rally late Friday. Said Stalin: "The letter was one of the most important political documents of recent times." thing is that Mr. Wallace in his letter makes an open and honest attempt to get a concrete program for peaceful settlement. Stalin said Russia is ready to negotiate the settlement of differences between the two countries if the United States is willing. For a week now that Ambassador Smith-Molotov ex-change of ideas has been in the frying plan. today Walter Lippmann wrote cally that the State Department ought to think out carefully how it intends to conduct its diplomacy before it tries to engage in it. A few days ago in the New York Times, James Reston's article maintained that the existing stalemates between the United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics could not be broken merely by demanding that the Russians break them Secretary Marshall's insistence that the UN, so often bypassed, do it also came in for comment.

The United Nations probably never could have come into being had not Harry Hopkins gone personally to Moscow to secure agreement on two issues plaguing the big powers. Max Lerner wants to know what we are trying to avert-war or peace.

There is the United Press article in many of your newspapers tonight, "United States seeks a balance of power before entering Red talks." It states the United States wants to restore the balance of power in Europe and, therefore, slammed the door when Molo-tov put his foot into it. The article concludes that while the people of the world are tired of constant war talk and want and be-lieve the Russians and Americans can get together, our State Department is not willing to negotiate at present because it thinks the Russians have the advantage.

It's war hysteria produced by propaganda which is plaguing the people of the world, and particularly us here in America. preparing to invest up to $15,000,000,000 a year for quite some time-but what about peace endeavors?

Back in the 1930's, when the great prophet and world historian, H. G. Wells, was still alive. he described the pattern which was leading to World War II. Big business and finance in Great Britain and the United States, said Wells, were afraid of socialization of their own industries. They were even frightened by change, so they embarked on a propaganda program against it. They decided to rebuild Germany to the tune of billions. They recognized Hitler, closed their eyes to his actions, figured he was their stooge; but, gangster that he was, he shook down the bosses, hoping to take over. And he almost did. If Wells were alive today he would probably embellish on the old pattern, redrawing the position of Russia and pushing Great Britain out, with the United States of America going it alone-but for Germany there would be the same role. And there would be power politics, a great hysteria and propa-ganda game going on, financiers and militarists playing their roles. For world war III is in the making unless many people soon get a lot of sense. Here in New York, Prof. Clyde R. Miller, of Teachers College, has long been a student of propaganda. He has just written a new pamphlet for the commission of propaganda analysis of the Methodist Federation for Social Action. It is all about propaganda transcribed an interview with Professor Miller. When I asked him how less than three short years after the most destructive war known to humanity we have gotten ourselves into the mental state for another war, he re-

Professor MILLER. Mr. Gaeth, a country doesn't get itself into that state; the people in the country are gotten into that state by certain propagandists who operate through government, press, radio, church, schools, labor unions, patriotic groups, other groups, channels through which propaganda flows.

Mr. GAETH. Now, are we really in great danger or are we the subjects of extensive the techniques being used on us?

Professor Miller. Well, Mr. Gaeth, I think we are in great danger and chiefly because we are the unconscious subjects of propaganda which we don't even know is propaganda.

Mr. GAETH. Well now, what are these propagandists actually aiming at; what are they trying to do to us?

Professor Miller, I don't know. I have several theories or ideas. There may be three or four aims involved. One of them may be the actual aim of preparation for war against Russia with the continuous day-after-day drumming up of a war hysteria against Russia. Number two—that may not be the real aim, that may be only the apparent aim-the real aim may be to give Congress and the people the reason for supporting compulsory military training and the renewal of the draft so that we will have millions of young men being trained in the Army and the other armed forces. And the purpose for that may be the fear of a coming depression, Mr. Gaeth. And you recall the last depression hundreds of thousands of young fellows wandered about the country and there was a good bit of confusion and chaos. This time it may well be that these young fellows are disciplined by the Army and to be called back into the Army to preserve law and order amongst themselves and amongst others. Then there is the third reason and that may be that this war hysteria is being whipped up simply to make it possible for a Democratic candidate or one of the Republican candidates to ride into office on the basis of its being almost treasonable not to vote for a man who wants the fullest preparation for a war in a time of apparent great danger.

Mr. GAETH. Now, when I stated that it would seem that the basis for going to war was much more a propaganda one than an actual one, that we really didn't have all the reasons for going to war held out for us, Professor Miller replied:

Professor MILLER. Well, I can't help but agree with you on that, Mr. Gaeth.

Mr. GAETH. Now, Professor Miller, what are the dangers of such name calling as the Russians and we Americans are engaging in?

Professor MILLER. Well, the danger of such name calling is very simple. The use of violent words directed by one person against another frequently can cause violent action. Now, if that is true of a few individuals hurling bad names at one another, it can also be true of the peoples of two nations or the propagandists of two nations whip-ping up hysteria amongst their peoples, breaking out in violence, in war.

Mr. Gaeth. In other words, if we are driving for peace we don't use war technique and war propagandists to produce a peaceful state of affairs?

Professor MILLER. Right-if we are driving for peace we would use the methods of the peace maker and not the war maker if we really are sincere in the drive for peace.

Mr. GAETH. But then I wanted to know how we can sift the chaff from the wheat, what test could be applied to propaganda to determine whether we were being misled, and Professor Miller answered:

Professor MILLER. Well, first we ought to know what propaganda is. And I have tried to set that forth in a little booklet I did for a Methodist group, the Methodist Federation for Social Action, recently. And what is propaganda—it is nothing more or less than an attempt to persuade someone to do something. And it can be good or bad, depending on what you think is good or bad. I think the United States Constitution is good, and the Declaration of Independence is good, and the great ethics in all religions is good, and I think that good health is good, and propaganda that would persuade people to live up to those ethics and obligations and to have good health, I would say, would be good propaganda.

Secondly, we ought to know how propaganda works. It works both at the brain level and what you might call the spinal cord level. At the brain level, if I am a propagandist and I am trying to persuade you to do something, I attempt, if I am an honest and rational person, to martial relevant facts and opinions; and if you are a rational person you attempt to weigh those and come to a conclusion that is based upon those relevant facts and opinions. That is all open and above board and you are conscious of the process and so am I. Now, at the spinal cord level, we react to certain words and phrases such as "Communist" in America or "Capitalist" in Russia as bad words, and we are conditioned automatically to reject and condemn any person or program thus labeled.

Mr. Gaffh. Now, when I asked if we Americans had a basis or a set of standards for judging good or bad propaganda, Professor Miller replied:

Professor Miller. I think we in America are very fortunate, because we have in this country three things—first, we have the various religious groups, and their ethics make a common denominator of righteousness; secondly, we have the Declaration of Independence which is a wonderful ethical statement; and thirdly, we have our United States Constitution which implements that Declaration of Independence with concrete rights and obligations. Now, you wouldn't want any better standard for measuring propaganda than the Declaration of Independence and the United States Constitution. And, incidentally, you wouldn't want any better standard of government than those.

ard of government than those.

Mr. Gaeth. A song may help us see the Red scare in a new light; the lyrics are by my friend E. Y. Harburg whose Broadway musical Finian's Rainbow has played to packed houses for more than 500 performances. This music is the old folk tune Molly Malone. Now here is comely Betty Sanders with her guitar presenting E. Y. Harburg's The Red Herring:

Miss Sanders (singing The Red Herring):
"I'll sing you a ditty about Munich's fair city
Where a poor paperhanger hung out long

Till he got an idea, a bright-panacea,

Selling herring, red herring, alive, alive-o.

"With Goebbels and Goering he sold that red herring

To Quisling, Laval, and the boys in the know.

Europe fell like a sparrow beneath that wheelbarrow

Filled with herring, red herring, alive, alive-o.

"Now this red herring master soon met with disaster.

His wits were a-blitzed and his Fritz was laid low.

But his red-herring notion leaped over the ocean

And landed in Wall Street, alive, alive-o.

"Now Wall Street is bloomin', they sold it to Truman,

A nice little crisis for raisin' the dough, The dough that will cure up the ills of all Europe,

Red herring, red herring, alive, alive-o.

"Now taxpaying millions are shelling out billions

For herring that Goering had sold long ago,

But American fellers have developed their smellers

And they'll bury that herring, alive, alive-o."

Mr. Gaeth. Thank you, Betty Sanders, nicely done. And when war hysteria and propaganda aims to raise our temperatures we'll think of "the Red herring."

Next week I will deal with a crisis from within—three members of the Yale faculty will discuss the Mundt bill.

And now good night until next week at this same time

In his broadcast Mr. Gaeth asked: "What are we trying to avert, war or peace?" I think that is a very pertinent question, Mr. President. What are we trying to avert in this country, war or peace? It looks as though we got more excited when it seemed we were going to have peace with the Russians than we do when it appears we are going to have war.

I might have sung that little ditty, Mr. President, but I expect it would have been absolutely against the rules of the Senate.

Mr. President, that is a pretty good example of what is going on in America. They just scare the people silly with this red herring, telling them that the Communists are going to get them, so they can pass most any sort of legislation. Honestly, the poor folks remind me of the sheep of Australia. There is some kind of a bird there that lights on the backs of the sheep and picks out their kidneys and they die. They are so dumb they do not know what is going on. The poor people of America have no way of knowing what is going on. The newspapers and magazines and radio are just full of propaganda against Russia, and all for this armaments program, saddling an army on the people, just like the one Hitler had, just exactly, all these programs for them to give up the right of free speech and assembly, telling them that if they do not, the Communists are going to get them. The poor folks are just beside themselves, do not know what to do, so they just continue to work on them.

Mr. President, I was following a prepared statement awhile ago when I got sidetracked. I do not believe I had finished it. I have the statement right here now. I was telling about the President's Commission to look into the necessity for the draft. They turned in their report, and the only thing the Senate Armed Services Committee accepted was the draft, and that was the small part of the report. They said we needed a draft, but they told of all the other things we needed to go with it-assurances that there would be no discrimination, and things of that sort. But we have none of those things as it is now before the Senate.

They have asked me to permit them to appoint conferees, but one of my colleagues gave me a note a moment ago which said, "The conferees are ready to report." They do not care about whether they are appointed or not; they have gone ahead and held their conference, and, as I said earlier in the day, whenever they get the floor they will pull a request to appoint conference out of one pocket and the conference report out of the other pocket. I will take awhile longer on the strength of that.

The ablest propagandists for military training, of course, have been, not the military themselves, but the President's Advisory Commission on Universal Military Training.

Mr. President, as long as there is order in the Chamber I shall try to talk so people can hear me. When there is not order, I shall talk to the reporter.

I hasten to add that I have not seen any of these distinguished gentlemen who wrote the report in the forefront of those demanding that their principles. on which I have just touched, be retained intact in the military version of the draft we have before us. It does seem that, inasmuch as they wrote this report, they would be speaking up in behalf of their findings, and insisting that something be done about it, not just letting it go by the board by default, as they have been doing. These were able, representative American citizens who prepared this report of the President on the draft. But they are distinguished propagandists for all that, and they put out a fine report, very well set up, placed on sale throughout the country in a cheap edition for everyone to read. They have lent their names to an endeavor and enterprise of great seriousness.

This distinguished commission tells us that military training programs would have a great number of benefits. In their summary they list 12 such benefits. I assume these benefits accrue even more to the draft which would lengthen the time of service of our young men. After all, if the benefit of 6 months' or a year's training are so great, the benefits of 2 years' training should be either four or twice as great, perhaps even greater for the smaller number involved.

Let us consider these benefits in the light of the committee's insistence that segregation and discrimination must be a permanent part of the system. The first benefit offered by the Commission is that training would shorten the time in which our effective fighting force could be mobilized in case of war.

But segregation and discrimination, by barring the full use of one-tenth of our eligible people, acts in a contrary direction. Instead of shortening the time for mobilization, segregation and discrimination act to lengthen the time, because it introduces the factor of selecting men not on the basis of their ability to fight but on the color of their skin or perhaps the language they have used at home or even their religion.

The second alleged benefit is that it would give our young men the essentials of military training that would be the basic prerequisites for technical, specialized, or unit training in an emergency; and training saves lives. That is a curious argument about the need for a specialized army which I shall not discuss here. But it is important to note that this means training is supposed to fit men to move into higher and more specialized training, which all competent military authorities agree is necessary for modern warfare.

But the Army and Navy and Marine Corps and Air Force insist that this does not apply to all men, but only to some men. If there are Negroes, for example, who are highly qualified for such specialized training, the military tell us and this bill writes into law, that they shall not be permitted to move freely across the barrier of segregation and discrimination into positions of training where they are of most use. Yes, indeed, as the Commission says, "training saves lives"—but only training of part of our manpower, not the training of the full complement of the manhood of America.

The third alleged benefit of training, according to the Commission, is that it would make possible an effective National Guard and Organized Army, Navy, Air, and Marine Reserves capable of rapid absorption into the professional Military Establishment in time of war. But again, if we apply the test which the military demands that we apply by their dictatorial ukase on segregation and discrimination, the effectiveness of the National Guard and the Reserves is reduced by so much as the armed forces practice segregation and discrimination. Again, the alleged benefit is destroyed or nullified by discrimination and segregation. As we have seen from the exchange of correspondence between the Secretary of the Army and the Governor of New Jersey, the Army intends to abide by the pattern of segregation in the National Guard, despite the President's order to abolish segregation and discrimination. This means the Army will see to it that the effectiveness of the National Guard will be reduced, if the Army can help it, by all those practices of segregation which bar the complete and wholehearted use of all men in the interests of a feudal obsession with caste.

The fourth alleged benefit from military training is that it would improve the efficiency, quality, and alertness of the Regular forces in peacetime. But if the committee, at the insistence of the military mind, inserts the qualification of segregation and discrimination, instead of improving efficiency it will be lowering the efficiency of the Regular forces. Instead of improving the quality and alertness of the Regular forces, it will cause their deterioration. What other result can there be from a system which creates false tensions between different groups of men, which seeks to keep men in the servitude of a lower caste, which places a premium on men acting in accordance with a feudal code? Alertness, efficiency, and improved quality of workmanship, whether in peacetime pursuits or in the armed forces, comes with freedom. Is that not our boast to the world-that we can outproduce the world because our people enjoy the blessings of freedom? But segregation and discrimination, upheld at the insistence of the military men, limits and curtails that freedom and by so much reduces the capacity of all men to function at their best.

The fifth alleged benefit, according to the Commission, is that it would help produce qualified Reserve officers in numbers that would assist in neeting the officer requirements of the Regular services and the civilian components and to staff the forces needed after M-day in any future crisis. I am quoting the Commission's report exactly. We all know that this is nonsense when it is applied in actuality to Negroes. We all know that Negroes are systematically kept from officer positions, by the order of the highest men in the armed forces. Let me quote some figures on the Army's policy toward admitting Negroes to the position of officers.

In 1940, when the Selective Service Act was passed, there were 4,451 Negroes in the Army but only 5 commissioned officers and 11 warrant officers. According to a War Department release of Nowember 1, 1947, out of a total Negro Army strength of 58,437, there is a total of 937 Negro officers, and only 111 of that number are commissioned in the Regular Army. There are nine senior ROTC units. As late as 1940 not a single one of the more than 500 Negro Reserve officers had been called up for duty.

The Army places effective barriers in the way of Negroes becoming and remaining officers. Now the Navy is probably worse. The Marine Corps does not have any Negro officers. What is the effect of this practice on the alleged benefits which the Commission finds? Where is the alleged benefit of additional trained Reserves if the military mind refuses to train these men as officers and refuses to use them once they are forced to train them?

We have a good, objective story about the practical effect of this barrier of segregation and discrimination. The Gillem report of the Army, issued by the War Department on April 27, 1946, on utilization of Negro manpower in the postwar Army policy, has made a study of Negro performance in wartime. There were many fantastic and garbled and defamatory stories about the part played by Negroes during the war.

The Gillem Board investigated some of these instances. I do not know the facts myself, and I am a little suspicious about the findings of a board heavily weighted by the narrow military mind in a field which requires the utmost care and special training in social and sychological problems, a field that the Army does not particularly train for. But in any event, the Gillem Board has this to say in its summary:

From the evidence presented by the most experienced commanders, the Board cannot fail to conclude that the results obtained by all units are in direct proportion to the leadership demonstrated. The failures of Negro units have in almost every case been attributed to the lack of leadership qualities of junior officers and noncommissioned officers. Leadership, therefore, must be stressed and the development of all attributes which contribute to this must be the prime objective of those responsible for the training of the postwar Army.

This is one of those fine after-the-fact recommendations, a fine statement of principle and objective. But the very military men who make this kind of recommendation—and the recommendation boils down simply to giving Negroes full access without discrimination or segregation to training for officerhood—are the same men who insist on preventing that full access to training from becoming a reality. They throw out the window their own experience.

I submit, Mr. President, that the record of the military mind in this instance is such as to confirm us in asserting civilian authority and independent judgment over their actions. I further submit, Mr. President, that the Armed Services Committee has failed the Senate in submitting to the dictates of the military prejudice when they removed the ban on segregation and discrimination from this bill. The Armed Services Committee might well post in its committee room the famous remark attributed to Clemenceau, the Tiger of France, that the business of war was too important to be left to the military. Certainly the record of the military in this field is so bad that one cannot trust their judgment. They have done everything to violate the principles which make for a good and efficient army, and they will continue to do so.

I do not think I need to burden the Senate with more than a brief consideration of the other alleged benefits supposedly coming from military training, according to the Commission. Senators can, if they will, read them. I merely ask that in reading these alleged benefits each Senator ask himself whether the ban on segregation and discrimination will increase those benefits or lessen them. I am confident that any candid examination will reveal that segregation and discrimination nullify all of those alleged benefits.

The Commission finds a benefit from military training in inculcating spiritual and moral ideals in support of American democracy. These would be nullified by segregation which inculcates the ideals of Hitler's master race, not democracy.

The Commission says it would establish a pool of young, physically fit, and trained Reserves for future mobilization, and provide a large trained group in every community to deal with civil defense. But this is utterly refuted by segregation—for segregation makes for two pools, not a large pool, and diminishes the strength of our people instead of increasing it. And segregation means that civil defense, too, I presume, would have to proceed by setting up one alarm system for whites and another for Negroes, with separate bombproof shelters for both groups, and all the other double bookkeeping that goes on in a discriminated and segregated army ordering a civilian economy.

But the real jokers are the benefits alleged by the Commission of helping to channel qualified young men into programs of scientific and vocational training in fields important to national defense. In peacetime the Navy excluded Negroes from naval service except as messmen. I can see young collegetrained Negroes—where they have been fortunate enough to get the peacetime training-being channeled into the important field of serving on tables in the Navy and thus contributing best to our national defense. I can see the embryo Negro scientists who are made to serve in sanitary companies enjoying the feeling that their talents were being used to best advantage. As the representative of the National Association for Colored People said to the Senate committee:

So long as Congress leaves the military with unfettered discretion to discriminate as it may please in training and service, the types and extent of discrimination will depend as a practical matter upon the will of the officers who are administering or supervising particular programs. This Congress should not permit it.

Negroes with talent and ability are specifically excluded by the brass hats of whatever echelon from many important functions where their abilities are much needed. They are excluded entirely from becoming pilots in the Air Transport Command even today. When the Army badly needed 10,000 meteorologists and weather observers, the Army nonetheless specifically excluded all qualified Negroes from this much-needed service. Even when the need is overwhelming, it is apparently hever overwhelming enough for the brass hats to overcome their encrusted prejudices. The Army's excuse was that it already had seven Negroes in this field and that number was enough.

I submit, Mr. President, that this record convicts the military not only of undemocratic tendencies, but perhaps even more fatally, of incompetence. We cannot afford to trust men with such mentalities, men who will place their prejudices ahead of the democratic ideal, men who will set their own ideas against the orders of their Commander in Chief in this field, men who would rather perpetuate their ancient abuses than to run the most efficient Military Establishment they can.

I submit, Mr. President, that this bill, by cutting out the ban on segregation and discrimination, by cutting its cloth to the fit of the military mind, stands convicted on this one point alone and does not deserve the support of any Member of the Senate concerned with the strengthening and preservation of our democracy.

On April 3 America's illustrious historian, Dr. Charles A. Beard, sent a solemn warning to the Senate Armed Services Committee, which begins on page 1053 of the report of the hearings. I wish that all America might heed his warning at this late hour. Dr. Beard calls this step the most momentous step in the history of the Republic. I quote from the statement of Dr. Beard.

The statement of Dr. Charles A. Beard was read by Dr. Charles C. Tansill, of Georgetown University, Washington, D. C. Mr. President, bear in mind that Dr. Beard is one of the foremost historians in the United States, if not our foremost historian. He should know something about what he is talking about. He has spent a lifetime studying these things.

Here is what Dr. Beard had to say about this question of a peacetime draft, speaking through Dr. Tansill. Dr.

Dr. TANSILL, I have been asked by Prof. Charles A. Beard to read his statement this morning. This is his statement:

"I regret that the state of my health at the age of 73 prevents me from appearing before this committee in person to protest against efforts, amid war alarms, to fasten on our country military conscription as a fixed national policy."

Those are the words of our foremost historian, Mr. President. He probably can see that there will not be much more history to write if he does not get on the job here pretty quick.

He goes on to say:

Universal military training, so-called, represents an attempt to implant in the United States a well-known curse of the Old World. I have studied it on the ground there and in the melancholy history of the nations brought to ruin or servitude under its degrading influence, gross and subtle.

This system of conscription would violate every liberty to which our Nation has been dedicated since the foundation of the Re-

Mr. President, it is said that those who study history generally are able to look into the future fairly well. Dr. Beard has spent his life at studying history, I suppose, and he says we do not want military training.

I read further:

It would destroy the freedom which our ancestors, having fled from the despotism of Europe, established for themselves and their posterity on American soil.

Mr. President, that is what I am fighting for tonight: to maintain the liberties for which the founding fathers fought. What I am fighting against here, tonight, is the European ideology, the idea that you can draft men and make them fight. and that they will fight with their hearts in what they are doing.

I read further:

It would create a monstrous military bureaucracy drawn from the upper and middle

That is true, Mr. President. The Army is starting to do that now; it is getting very snooty about who will be accepted as volunteers into the Army. Those who volunteer have to pass tests almost as difficult as the tests that are given to the young men who wish to go to West Point. The Army now wants none but the very best. Of course, in order to pass those tests, a young man must have been well educated, and of course the ones who are the best educated come from the upper brackets. So that makes the Army an elite profession, as it was in Germany under the Junkers, with all their polished boots and fancy uniforms. Probably that is the next thing we shall have over here. Dr. Beard further says:

It would enslave the sons of the plain people-farmers, industrial workers, and all other laborers who toil with their hands for a living.

Charles Beard knows what he is talking about; he is one of our foremost historians. He has studied all the European systems which included conscription, and he knows what conscription does to people. He is trying to warn us.

Mr. President, I warrant that there are not a dozen Senators who have read this statement of Dr. Beard's, aside from those who were at the committee hearings. Yet we presume to act, even without preparation, with no understanding of what we are doing to our American way of life, to our traditional freedoms.

Dr. Beard further says:

It will exalt the military above the civil, thus would work for the overthrow of the first principles upon which the Constitution of the United States is based.

Of course the military is exalted above the civil now, Mr. President. The military have taken over. They really are running our country. We still have some forms left; we still can talk here in the Senate all we please, but the military go ahead and do as they please. We in Congress appropriate $100,000,000 for Turkey; but, lo and behold, the military spend a billion dollars in Turkey. They have things figured out so well, now, that they simply use the surplus. When we in Congress appropriate only $100,-000,000, the military buy a billion dollars' worth of material and declare it surplus, and then sell it for $100,000,000.

So they can do anything they please, anywhere in the world. Mr. President, the military has become very, very powerful.

Dr. Beard further says:

In its insinuating and insidious course, it would serve the cause of those leaders in military and civil life who exalt the Executive above the legislative and are now claiming that the President has a right to make war at his own discretion, without any declaration of hostilities by the Congress under the new dogma that the best defense is secret offense.

Mr. President, everything Dr. Beard says is true. Today the military are attempting to enslave us on the pretext that we are too dumb to know what is going on. Even the Senate does not know what is going on. There are just a few persons who know what is going on in the United States in the way of national defense activities.

Dr. Beard further says:

This ominous tendency of our days I describe at length in my book on President Roosevelt and the coming of the war, 1941. Owing to my inability to give a review of it in person, I respectfully direct attention to the last chapter (pp. 582 ff.) and I have requested my good friend, Dr. Charles C. Tansill, professor at Georgetown University, to present these supplementary views to the committee.

The people of the United States are now called upon by high civil and military authorities in Washington to take the most momentous step in the history of the Re-

Mr. President, that statement comes from Dr. Charles Beard, our most eminent historian. He says this is the most momentous step in the history of the Republic. Yet there were those, today, who criticized me because I chose to talk at this time. Some said that I was abusing the democratic privilege. Mr. President, it is they who are selling us down the river. Our democracy soon will be gone. I am the one who is defending our democratic privileges, in a last-ditch fight against those who would have us go the way of Europe, of fascism or nazism.

Dr. Beard then says:

They are called upon to make conscription of young men, or, to use more pleasant words, universal military service, a permanent policy in peacetime as well as war-

As I have said, Mr. President, once these things are fastened upon us, whether it be the armament economy into which we are moving or whether it be peacetime conscription, once they are fastened upon us, we shall not be able to get rid of them. There are too many vested interests tied up and associated with these things, and then our freedoms will be gone forever. Dr. Beard then says:

The subject has been argued, for and against, in thousands of pages, but the arguments thus far presented miss the main point in the dispute. Nor is there any evidence in the brief for the affirmative filed by President Truman's Commission on Universal Service that the authors of that document made any serious study of this point or were indeed competent to discuss it out of comprehensive knowledge.

of comprehensive knowledge.

It is this neglected main point that makes the step, if taken, the most momentous step in the history of the Republic—a radical departure from all peacetime life and experience in the United States since 1776.

It is a sad commentary, Mr. President, that in spite of the testimony of this great historian, this man who has no ax to grind, no motive except to warn his fellow Americans, there is but one voice raised in the United States Senate against the enslavement of the American people, against the abandonment of all the free institutions we have known down through the years, the things for which our fathers and our grandfathers have fought. He says:

The universal liability of all able-bodied men to defend their country was recognized by the founders of the Republic and still stands as an acceptable principle. This is, then, not the main point in the controversy.

The country is to be defended to the last ditch against foreign enemies. That, too, is an accepted principle—by all save extreme pacifists. Whether a huge conscript army would be the most effective instrument of defense in an age of atom bombs and guided projectiles is debatable. In fact, grave doubts as to its effectiveness in our age are warranted by the knowledge that military men are prone to prepare for the next war mainly in terms of experience in the last war. But in the argument over conscription this is not the main point.

The main point in the argument before the country is: The menacing impacts of universal military service on every branch of civil life, on all civil liberties, on all the virtues that make America precious to the people, on every aspect of American civilization.

It will be said this is a vague statement that cannot be proved; and besides, we are assured to the contrary by President Truman, high military men, and the President's Commission on Military Service.

With all due respect for such eminent personages, there is higher authority to give us instruction on consequences of universal military service and the huge military establishment which inevitably accompanies it. This authority is the long experience of the nations which have made universal service an instrument of permanent policy.

an instrument of permanent policy.

It will be replied by the exponents of the new course, the American people are different from all other peoples and so they will preserve their civil liberties intact and all other values of American life under a regime of universal military service.

With respect to those who reject experience with universal military service and proceed on the pleasing theory that Americans are a chosen people immune to its dangerous consequences, there is an authority on the other side of the argument more worthy of consideration.

It is the authority of the framers of the Constitution, to whom we are indebted for our form of Government, which survived the storms of 160 years. The one thing on which they all agreed was that historical experience with military establishments, ancient and modern, had demonstrated their peril to civilian life, economy, and liberty.

One of the framers of the Constitution, preeminent for knowledge of human experience with military establishments, James Madison, summed up their convictions, as a warning to their fellow citizens and to posterity, in the words:

"The veteran legions of Rome were an overmatch for the undisciplined valor of other nations and rendered her mistress of the world. Not less true is it that the liberties of Rome proved the final victim to her military triumphs; and that the liberties of Europe, as far as they ever existed, have, with a few exceptions, been the price of her military establishments. A standing force therefore is dangerous, at the same time that it may be a necessary provision. On the smallest scale, it has its inconveniences. On an extensive scale, its consequences may be fatal. On any scale, it is an object of laudable circumspection and precaution. A wise nation will combine all these considerations; and, whilst it does not rashly preclude itself from any resource which may become essential to its safety, it will exert all its prudence in diminishing both the necessity and danger of resorting to one which may be inauspicious to its liber-(The Federalist, No. 41.)

Mr. President, that is a pretty stringent warning. I know that there are Senators here who knew they should not vote for this bill. They voted for it because of the Red smear, just afraid that if they did not, somebody would say they were traitors, selling out their country. Well, that might be right, Mr. President, but we are selling out our country by voting for a measure like this. We shall lose to native Fascists all the freedoms that they warn us we are going to lose to foreign Communists.

The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. Baldwin] broke in at this point in the testimony and had something to say to Mr. Beard. We shall skip that, and go on with Mr. Beard's testimony:

There, in James Madison's admonition, is an imperative warning against the menace of military establishments, against their everlasting danger to civil liberty. Since Madison's time the experience of many great nations with universal conscription and huge military establishments has furnished additional evidence to confirm the instruction provided by the framers of the Constitution. Surely, in the first principles of the Constitution and in the experience of all countries which have had or now have universal conscription, we have better guidance than in all the rhetoric employed by contemporaries who know little or nothing about universal service as historical experience or at first hand.

To indicate what will be found when Europe's experience with universal military service is examined, I give the following brief description of a common soldier's career under the regime as operated in Germany before World War I—before Hitler's "refinements" had been invented. This description is drawn from specific sources of information for the authenticity of which I can vouch.

1. The influence of the army on this common soldier's life began as soon as he entered the first grade of the elementary school. In a short time a wooden stick was placed in his hand, and along with his classmates he was taught the goosestep. The teacher, a former soldier himself, took advantage of every occasion to praise the military virtues, and the textbooks used for instruction confirmed the praise. Not a breath of criticism or objection was ever allowed in the classroom or on the playground. Boys who gave any hints of opposition were warned and marked.

Mr. President, that is just as it is in the Senate. Anyone who opposes the militarization of the country is a marked man; he is branded as a Communist. So some of us are afraid to speak up. It is too bad.

The one thing constantly hammered into the head of every boy was his duty to render his obligatory military service, without raising any questions whatever, and to render it in the spirit of abject obedience to military authorities.

Mr. Pfesident, that is a disgusting situation. I have three sons. If this country were in danger I would expect them, when they are of age, to defend it, but, by the heavens, I hate the prospect of their being bossed around in peacetime in a military conscripted peacetime army.

As the time approached for the induction of this German boy into the military training service, he was not free to leave the country. The only way he could have escaped it was to run away secretly by hook or crook, or to secure a forged passport by bribing the proper officials. As he was a poor boy, whose parents had no money or special privileges, he had to stay in his country and take what came. In other words, the boy in a working class or farming family could seldom, if ever, escape the clutches of the military authorities by fleeing to some foreign land.

That is not a pretty picture of future America which Mr. Beard is painting for us.

As soon as this boy was inducted into training service, he was given a small record book in which were entered certain facts about his early life, and then from time to time other facts about his conduct in the service. This book he had to keep always at hand and show it on demand when questioned by his superiors.

Our own War Department is already moving in the direction of requiring just such a record. In its form on officer qualifications (AGO No. 0857) a complete personal history is compiled for each officer and I, am certain records of the same nature will be maintained for all enlisted men. In time this will develop into the same detailed inquisition into the private life of every citizen as it did in Germany.

While in training service this boy was subjected in all matters to strict military law, which provided forms of punishment for breaches of duty. In addition, there were innumerable ways in which any officer, high or low, could punish him for trivial or other acts not mentioned in the military law and make life miserable for him during the entire period of his original training service, and later while he was in the various stages of Reserve service and called up at specific times for supplementary training.

During the period of his original training service, the soldier's life and activities were regimented down to the last detail. All newspapers, magazines, books pamphlets, and other reading matter available to the privates were censored by officers. The mere possession of any printed matter not officially approved was dangerous and might send the soldier to the guardhouse for days, to live on bread and water. Every package of food, cigarettes, or other objects sent to the boy by his parents or friends had to be opened in the presence of an officer and if it happened to be wrapped in a piece of a newspaper banned by the military, the private was penalized for the very act of receiving it.

Imagine, Mr. President. That is what the Senate is trying to vote on America. Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, may we have order in the Chamber?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Presiding Officer has endeavored to keep the Chamber in order.

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. President, it is of very little consequence to me. I shall be happy to try to speak out and be heard if order is maintained. If it is not, I shall not exert myself.

I continue quoting from Mr. Beard:

Even when on furlough during the original training period, the soldier was ever under the watchful eye of the military. On his arrival home, he had to report his whereabouts immediately to the head of his military district so that he could be reached at any moment. Before leaving home on his return to service he had to report again to the head of his district and give him the details of the return journey to the barracks.

After this German private had finished his original training period, his record book was duly signed and he was allowed to go home. When he sought employment, his prospective employer might ask for his record book. This act on the part of the employer was not required by law, but he was "on the safe side" in inquiring into the applicant's military record. At all events an "unsatisfactory" military record could make it difficult for a man to secure employment after he had completed the first stage of his military training.

If we say all these military controls over our people will not happen here, let me answer that such authority over private lives of our people is already proposed by an offi-cial report and endorsed by the military.

I quote paragraph 7 on page 35 in the report of the President's Advisory Commission on Universal Training as follows:

"Universal training would involve the maintenance of an appropriate selectiveservice system adaptable to rapid conversion to wartime needs. It would make possible also a continuous inventory of military skills, aptitudes, and leadership qualities, which could be used advantageously in making military assignments in wartime. ventory would be especially helpful if a check were maintained on the whereabouts, sub-sequent training, skills, occupation, and de-pendency status of those who complete their basic training. A selective-service machinery, actively functioning in peacetime, would be a decided military asset in wartime.'

Completion of the original training service did not free the young man from military control. His after life, until he reached the age of 45, was divided into two periods. For the first period, he was in the reserve, or reserves, and for the second, in the Landwehr, or militia. During each of these periods he had to report at stated times for supplementary military training.

A particularly obnoxious feature of the German military reserve system was the Kontrollversammlung, or muster of reserves, This control meeting was an assembly at which the men of a country or smaller unit who were in the reserve or Landwehr had to appear for inspection and instruction by a military officer. On the day of this meeting all of these men were under military law and jurisdiction and any one of them who committed a misdemeanor during the day could be severely punished under military

If to this description of a young man's career under the system of universal service in Germany were added a description of the way in which the military system affected the daily affairs of all German people—family life, education, employment, amuse-ments, intellectual pursuits, and civil liberties-it would be seen immediately that the whole of German society was subdued to its To imagine that the American people would escape the major effects of this militarism. if universal military service were permanently established in the United States, is to indulge in daydreaming and self-deception.

If the President and the military leaders force conscription upon the American people, they will find that instead of gaining in national security, they will have destroyed the real essence of American strength—the spirit of a free people which has twice brought us victories over conscripted armies.

It is almost unbelievable. Mr. President, that the Senate has failed to heed this warning of Mr. Charles Beard, this famous historian. He continued:

Hence, before the Congress of the United States subjects the country to "universal service" under military administration, it should establish a commission on experiences with universal conscription, for the purpose of inquiring into what it has meant in other countries and will mean here, in all probability, if adopted. Such a commission should include only men and women who can read the necessary foreign languages and have an extensive knowledge of military history. Such a commission should hear not only military officers, educators, pacifists, and people of that kind always eager to testify. It should also hear what men and women who have had experiences with universal military service have to say about its impacts on individual family, and social life in gen-There has been enough "big talk" about the subject. The time has come to get down to the brass tacks. For Congress to act without having command of this knowledge is to betray its trust, despite all the clamor and all the Gallup polls.

But if Congress is unwilling to create such a commission of its own and have an inquiry ma'e by persons competent to make it, there is one thing that the Members of Congress are themselves especially fitted to consider before peacetime conscription in any form is permanently placed on the backs of the American people. Members of Congress represent the States and communities of the Union and are intimately acquainted with their constituencies. By numerous ad-dresses recently made in the two Chambers, Republicans and Democrats alike have made it evident that they are alarmed by the highly centralized power already assumed by the National Government over the States and communities.

Even those Members of Congress who are not experts in military affairs know very well that a special centralization of power over life and property must come if a huge body of young men is conscripted and placed under the control of professional military offi-cers. Members of Congress know that power once brought into being grows on the meat fed to it, is never satisfied with what it gets but demands more and more, resents restraints imposed on it, and ever strives to become sovereign in its own right. If Members of Congress rightly fear civil centralization and the growth of an independent civil bureaucracy, they have far more reason for fearing military centralization and a military bureaucracy, based on the control of the Nation's youth—physical, moral, and intellectual control-by professional military officers whose tenure is permanent and survives all passing Senators, Representatives,

Mr. President, how we can bow our necks and go ahead with this thing after testimony like that was given before the committee, after it appeared in the volume of testimony for all to read, how we can still go ahead and blithely bring an end to the era of freedom that has been America, is beyond my comprehension. Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will

the Senator yield?
Mr. TAYLOR. I am happy to yield to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. WHERRY. The Senator will recall that earlier in the evening I propounded a query as to whether or not the distinguished Senator might let us vote on the motion, and he would then have another opportunity, of course, to continue his speech on the conference report when it came in. Does the Senator feel that he would be receptive to the propounding of that question again? Mr. TAYLOR. I should be happy to quit if I thought the conference report would not be brought in until morning. but if they have it in their hip pocket. I am going on and talk.

Mr. WHERRY. Of course, I cannot advise the Senator about what will happen with the conference report. What I am suggesting to him once again is that no matter when it comes back, he might continue his speech without prejudice to his right to make any argument he might wish to make. I am not in any way trying to cut the Senator off. If the Senator desires to continue, it is perfectly agreeable.

Mr. TAYLOR. Well, I will talk a while longer.

(Applause in the galleries.)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair reminds the occupants of the galleries that demonstrations of any character are not permitted. The Senator from Idaho will proceed.

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. President, after the hearings of the Senate Armed Services Committee were closed abruptly, with many other organizations waiting to give testimony against the peacetime draft, the House Armed Services Committee held hearings which brought out much evidence that is recent and pertinent to the question before the Senate.

On Tuesday, April 20, Dr. Alonzo Myers, who is chairman of the department of higher education of the National Education Association gave very damaging testimony which all should hear. Dr. Myers testimony is at hand and I wish to read from it to let the Nation know that the proposed draft bill is unneces-

The testimony begins on page 6464 of the House Armed Services Committee hearing, and Dr. Myers testified:

My name is Alonzo F. Myers; I am chairman of the department of higher education of the National Education Association. I am, however, testifying today in behalf of the national council against conscription, of which I am a national cochairman.

When selective service was proposed by the President last month it was with such fanfare and atmosphere of crisis that there were many Americans who thought war was immi-nent. Since then we have been assured by Secretary of the Army Royall that war is not imminent and by Secretary Forrestal that we are in a tension-not a crisis.

We have had no evidence that Russia is planning by military invasion of other nations to precipitate a war with the United States. Although she had vastly superior numbers on hand and within calling distance, Russia permitted a token force of American soldiers to bar her from the Berlin railroad station. Moreover, recent political developments seem to indicate that Russia is not thinking in terms of immediate war. The new treaty between Russia and Finland wherein the Soviet accepted the more moderate treaty draft of the Finns rather than risk a possible conflict is a straw in the wind. And the comparatively quiet Italian elections seem to indicate that western Europe will have a chance without war to wage the economic and political struggle against communism.

In support of this reasoning we can turn to the statement of General Clay: "The present conflict in Germany is a political one and not a military one.'" (New York Times, March 26, 1948.)

We can also turn to General Bradley's testimony, March 25, before the Senate Armed Services Committee. He pointed out that if selective service should pass and the size of the Army should be increased, the Army would not increase American strength in Europe but would actually withdraw 3,000 men.

Since any attack upon the United States must come either through the air or via the sea, we believe that the Air Force and the Navy, whose task is to intercept any aerial or naval attack, must be the first lines of defense as well as the major vehicles of offense in the early stages of a war. The fact that the Secretary of Air and the Secretary of Navy told this committee that they did not need selective service in order to get recruits for the Air Force and the Navy, seems to us to destroy completely any case for a peacetime draft. We want, therefore, to examine very closely the Army's request for an increase in strength as well as their request for a draft.

We do not believe that the Army is justified in asking an increase beyond its authorized strength.

1. In support of this we want to quote from the recently concluded Senate hearings. Lt. Gen. W. S. Paul, in a statement on April 2, said that "the Army holds to the view that the proposed present increase in strength is not a mobilization for war, but merely an increase in the strength of the active force in order to permit the Army to carry out its global commitments." But when you examine the proposed deployment of Army forces, according to General Bradley, only 13,000 additional combat troops and 1,000 service troops would be sent overseas if the Army increased its strength by 240,000 men and got a peacetime draft. This is only a token increase overseas and does not in our opinion justify a draft. The bulk of the increase, or 226,000 men, would remain in the United States to swell Army ranks here.

2. We have not been impressed with the argument that the Army must maintain a balance with the Air Force in peacetime, Both Secretary Royall and General Bradley, for example, told the Senate committee that if the Air Force were increased to 70 groups, the Army must provide only an additional 15,000 service troops to support the Air Force.

The proposed Ground Forces increase, even if adopted, would not provide enough additional combat troops for Air Force support to permit a balanced operation against Russian troops in Europe and Asia in the early stages of a war. The Air Force can swing into immediate action in the event of war, whereas ground troops would have to be augmented by millions beyond the proposed increase if the Army were to attempt to meet the onslaught of Russian ground forces in Europe or Asia. No matter how well balanced with the Air Force the Army is, we do not see how the Army can, in the early stages of a war prior to all-out mobilization of manpower and of industry, to which they must look for a steady and adequate flow of supplies, actually maintain or take bases anywhere in the Russian orbit.

Russian orbit.

While we do not want to overemphasize this, we do believe there is some truth to the newspaper accounts which have implied that prestige and jealousy among the various branches of the armed forces may account somewhat for the desire of the Army not to be out of balance with the Air Force. The New York Times of April 14 described the situation as follows:

"The unification of the country's armed services, achieved after many years, had not lessened a whit the rivalry between them.

* * The necessity of maintaining absolute balance between the Army, the Navy, and the Air Force, urged by Secretary Forrestal, was overemphasized for the sake of keeping peace among the three services."

An earlier report of the New York Times appearing in the March 16 issue described decisions made at the Key West meeting of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, as follows:

"On the other hand, the discussion apparently revealed that many of the service traditions and preconceived notions of warfare * * still were important factors in trying to reach agreed decisions."

Business Week for April 10 said of the Key West conference:

"The conference was highly publicized, but you must read between the lines to find out what really was decided. Instead of an integrated defense program that would subordinate land and sea power to the requirements of the air age, the Joint Chiefs of Staff came up with this deal: If a dollar is spent to enlarge our air power, the Army and Navy must each get a dollar, too."

They are getting them, Mr. President. Senators have never seen appropriation bills which have come to the Senate for the Army or the Navy or the Air Force trimmed; they always have been "upped" substantial percentages. They are really getting the dollars.

As a further indication of the problem, Hanson Baldwin on April 15 wrote:

"The Air Force believes that Russia can be defeated, if war should come, with atomic and other bombs by planes operating from bases secure by distance. Many of its leader believe no attempt should be made to establish bases which might be overrun by Russian ground forces but that bombing should be conducted from bases 2,000 to 2,500 miles away.

"The ground forces and the Navy do not believe that atomic bombing alone would defeat Russia, even if atomic bombs were used in a war—which is by no means certain. They hold that intermediate or close-up bases would be necessary, in any case, for effective bombardment and that these must be selzed and defended and supplied by seaground power.

"This—in oversimplified fashion—is the basic cleavage between the services. The consequential cleavage—quite probably a subconscious one—is as follows: General Bradley emphasized today Russia's ground strength. His estimate of 170 Russian divisions * * is not accepted by some of the other services without qualifications. They hold that most of these divisions are organized in cadre form only and that Russia probably has only 40 to 60—perhaps a few more—full-strength divisions.

"On the other hand, the Air Force's estimates of Russian air power are extreme.

* * Estimates of Russian military strength by the services thus differ widely, with each service subconsciously tending to emphasize the arm with which it is particularly concerned. Nor has Central Intelligence Agency, supposedly the coordinating agency of all intelligence services and now smarting under the shame of Bogota, been able to reconcile these differences."

3. General Bradley told this committee that selective service must stay in operation until universal military training is passed. He said: "If our Reserve units were filled up with men with proper training, we believe we could reduce the size of our Regular Army. And it might get it down to a point where it could be maintained by voluntary enlistment." This is, of all arguments, the least convincing because the Army has over a million volunteer Reserves whom it has deliberately neglected. The April 10 Collier's contained an article by a Reserve officer, Does the Army Want the Reserves? It stated:

"1. As of September 30, 1947, only 189,998 of the 509,255 Reserve officers had been assigned to units, and even this figure was misleadingly high. Of the 189,998 total, over 80,000 were, according to General Evans, assigned to pools, not to real, functioning military units.

"2. The 631,039 ex-GI's who signed up with the Reserves have been even more neglected. Merely 71,668 of them have been given assignments, and again, a large proportion of these went to pools.

"3. Not one Reserve unit has been given adequate equipment, although millions of rifles, artillery pieces, and other material are lying idle or being shipped overseas."

Mr. President, the boys who run the Army are actually, I believe, the biggest finaglers anywhere. We talk about the old Army game. They really play it. They insist on new equipment every day of the week. They will not even use the old equipment. They are sending it to Turkey or somewhere else, and letting the Reserves in this country train with broomsticks or sit around twiddling their fingers.

"4. Just 6,418 Reserve officers and 1,199 enlisted reservists received any sort of field training from the Ground and Service Forces during the first quarter of the 1948 fiscal year, the last period for which figures are available."

I presume the generals, captains, majors, and colonels were too busy entertaining the boys who were going to vote for them. They did not have any time to train any Reserves.

"5. To date, the Army has not formulated any real long-range program for Reserve training. The Army Ground Forces have not even issued a directive on training policies. At the most recent muster, only 28,000 reservists were enrolled in the Army's correspondence courses"

Since General Bradley stated that "if our Reserve units were filled up with men with proper training we believe we could reduce the size of our Regular Army," we believe Congress should forthwith make use of the Reserves and reduce the size of the Army, The Army failure to use Volunteer Reserves ought not to justify the constant pressure the Army is putting on the citizens of the country and on Congress for a compulsory system.

system. While we are discussing the Reserves, Mr. Chairman, it would be well for the committee to recall the testimony given last July by General Collins, Deputy Chief of Staff. He said, "Our analysis in the War Department indicates we would have the need of a force of about 1,750,000 men available as an M-day force in the event we ever have to fight a major war again." He used this as an argument for UMT. May I point out that if the Army were to train its Volunteer Reserves it would have, together with the National Guard and its Regular force, more than the 1,750,000 men required for M-day. This seems to us to be an argument against authorizing an increase in the Ground Forces and an argument against a peacetime draft.

Mr. President, I depart from my reading of the testimony to say that the Army has shown conclusively, to anyone who wishes to look into the question, that it does not want volunteers. What wants is this iniquitous peacetime draft, so that the military can get their hooks into us and keep us forevermore. Then they will really have things their way.

4. A fourth reason against giving the Army an increase at this time is the fact that the Army is using uniformed personnel to do civilian jobs. The March 25 Chicago Tribune

"More than 50,000 Army, Navy, and Air Force men in uniform are sitting behind desks performing clerical and administrative tasks which could be done at less cost by civilian clerks, a Government personnel expert asserted today. These thousands of desk jobs handled by GI red-tape artists could be done more efficiently and economically by girl clerks or other well-trained civilians whose pay is far less than the cost of maintaining a soldier or a sailor.

The Washington Post of March 19, 1948

"Military people were brought in and told to do the civilian jobs * of jobs such as hospital attendants, fire-fighters, guards, skilled trades, and even typists and file clerks were filled by military men. It certainly isn't economy as it will cost more in the long run to have a military person in a civilian job." The Post goes on to say that Congress is responsible for the cut in civilian personnel.

While we are speaking of military personnel who are filling unnecessary civilian posts, we might as well speak of military personnel being siphoned off from essential work to man the Fort Knox showcase to which thousands of civilians are being brought annually to be propagandized for UMT. These, plus other uniformed men who occupy public re-lations and propaganda jobs to sell UMT, could be put on genuine military duty if the Army desperately needs men. Our next point, Mr. Chairman, deals with the question of Army personnel and recruiting. The people of this country have been led by Army spokesmen to believe that the Army is over a hundred thousand men below its authorized strength. This is only a The authorized strength of partial truth. 670,000 is a ceiling set by Congress beyond which the Army should not go. The actual strength each year is recommended by the President in his budget message and finally set by Congress through the appropriation voted. The Army has been granted enough money to support 560,000 men, which means that the Army is under the recommended strength by about 18,000, and not by about a hundred thousand. And what is more important, during the early part of this fiscal year the Army did maintain a strength of 560,000 or better.

The President in his budget message this year asked for money for 560,000 ground troops for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1948. Even if he had asked for the full 670,000 permitted by Congress, we believe it would be possible to get these men by the volunteer method, as we hope to show in a moment.

The first suggestion for improvement of Army recruiting has to do with the problem of reenlistment. General Bradley told the Senate committee that the Army expects this year to lose 240,000 men whose terms expire. If this is correct, it means that almost half of the Army's present strength have decided not to reenlist. We believe much of this is due to dissatisfaction with the Army as a result of conditions which could be corrected. The Army has failed to meet the demands of veterans for a drasrevision of its court-martial system.

Many enlisted men have found from bitter experience that justice means one thing for officers and another thing for enlisted men. Likewise, the Army has failed to implement the recommendations of the Doolittle Board. Many men object to the officer caste system. A former editor of Stars and Stripes, in an article in Life magazine, wrote:
"The lord-and-master overtones of the present officer-and-enlisted man relationship are at best an archaic hold-over from several hundred years back. The good officer does not need it to enforce discipline and will almost invariably mellow the distinctions. In too many cases these zealously guarded distinctions protect the inefficient and inferior officer more than they contribute to Army discipline." He went on to speak of the offlimits and out-of-bounds signs for enlisted men which caused deep resentment.

If the Army were to meet these important demands of veterans there would undoubtedly be more men who would want to reenlist. We have two other suggestions at this point. Why doesn't the Army accept short-term reenlistments for a year, as they did in 1945 and 1946? And why doesn't the Army follow General Paul's suggestion about housing? He was quoted in the October 11, 1947, New York Times as having said that he believed the manpower picture would improve materially if more decent housing could be assured in the Army. If the Army had put into housing the millions of dollars spent on propaganda for UMT, including the expensive Fort Knox experimental unit, they have done something concrete to solve their manpower problem.

With respect to new enlistments, everything said about improving the Army would help. In addition, we want to call attention to the statements of the Army recruiting chief that the Army has been turning down "about 50 percent of those who apply for enlistment," because the Army has raised its requirements from a 70- to an 80-grade in the Army general classification test (New York Times, September 10, 1947).

Army spokesmen in the Senate hearings maintained that they did not want to lower the grade from an 80 to 70 because every man should be a specialist in some function. However, an official Army pamphlet entitled "The Fort Knox Experiment," which was reprinted in the Senate hearings, refers to "the 70 minimum which is usual for Army enlistment." And General Eisenhower on April 2 told the Senate committee: "My memory is sometimes tricky, but I thought I had directed before I left the Chief of Staff, to drop for the Ground Forces at least, the figure is back to 70, and I thought there is where it was so we could fill up certain places where we could do this."

Out of about 60 jobs in the Army, we are informed that at least 15 can be performed by men in the 70- to 80-grade group. These include such jobs as longshoreman, amphibious truck driver, amphibious tractor driver, duty soldier I, duty soldier II, duty soldier III, cook, section hand.

General Paul is quoted in the Senate hearings as saying about the Army general classification test that, "The standard score is not an IQ and does not involve the notion of mental age." The Army's tables submitted to the Senate committee compare the years of education with the scores made on the Army general classification test. They reveal that only 9 persons with more than 16 years of education and only 105 persons with more than 12 years of education, and 1,593 with more than 10 years of education have failed to get an 80 AGCT grade, whereas only 148 persons with less than a fourth-grade education were able to get more than an 80 score. The problem seems to be one of education and not necessarily a matter of in-telligence. The question should be asked: "Since the Army conducted literacy train-ing and other education during the war and would do so if universal military training passes, why doesn't it do so now and accept men with lower educational standards?

Another disturbing thing about Army testimony is the Army's insistence on getting the best young men of the Nation to go into the Army. A nation cannot remain strong if the Army takes the best and disregards the needs of the civilian population. For example, as Hanson Baldwin points out, the Army has about 1 doctor for every 88 men and I dentist for every 451, and the Air Force 1 doctor for every 190 and 1 dentist for every 1 doctor for every 190 and 1 dentist for every 832. Yet the country as a whole has a ratio of only 1 doctor to every 768 persons and 1 dentist to every 1,900. We believe Representative A. L. Miller was right when on April 8 he said: "Why should not the military be required to take its share of the average men and women."

That is a fact, Mr. President. If the military get so snooty that they take just the cream of the crop, who will pay to keep the military going? Who will run industry for us if we put the elite in uniform, just to suck off the wealth? We had better think about that.

I read further:

In the hearings before this committee General Bradley stated that the Army didn't want men between a 70- and 80-grade be-cause there are more guardhouse people and troublemakers among them. In our judgment this is in no sense a justifiable statement, even if true. Before accepting it we urge this committee to find out exactly what proportion of men in the 70 to 80 were committed to the guardhouse and why. The Army has so many minor regulations that it would take a good memory to obey all of them. However, I do not believe that people of less education are more criminal or immoral in their actions. The fact that a man cannot answer certain mathematical questions or explain the meaning of certain words, as the AGCT requires, in no sense should involve a prejudgment as to criminal tendencies.

We also believe that the Army's attention should be called to their claims that military training improves citizenship and reduces crime. If they can make these claims, as propaganda to get the public to accept UMT, then they ought to make good on these claims in the Regular Army. If the Army doesn't want these boys because they violate rules or laws, why does it claim that only 6 months of military training under UMT will give these same boys such good discipline and citizenship training that the crime rate would be reduced?

Still another way that the Army could get more men is to eliminate the quota restrictions on qualified Negroes and Puerto Ricans. It is quite as unjust to keep qualified Negroes from joining the Army as it would be to impose quotas on any other section of the population.

The Army could permit enlistments for an 18-month term and conceivably for a 1-year While a 1-year term would not be so profitable to the Army as a longer term, there is no reason why the Army could not combine a short-term enlistment with a 3year enlistment in the National Guard or the Reserves. Every argument the Army has used in behalf of UMT could be used to justify such a program. If the Army won't accept this suggestion because too much time would be required to train these short-term recruits or because they won't be specialists, then the Army must recognize the validity of a considerable number of arguments against universal military training.

Having made these suggestions, Mr. Chairman, may I add that the Army's volunteer recruiting has improved considerably. Since no publicity so far as I have been able to discover, has been given to these figures, possibly because it would not help the draft clause, it is well to note that the Army recruited in January 18,203 men, in February 16,653, and in March 21,960, or a total of 56,813 in the first quarter. The first week of April they got 4,485, which probably means at a monthly rate of 16,000 to 18,000. Since most of these recruits are for terms of 3 years or more, it is obvious that the voluntary system could easily support an army of about 670,000 men, especially if some of the recruiting suggestions we made should be adopted.

I am greatly concerned about the way in which the Army is trying to foster a program of peacetime conscription in America. General Bradley's plea for UMT last week is a good example of emotionalism. He said:

"The youth of America have a stake in this. Most of them are not going into the Regular services but if war should come most of them will lave to go to war. Giving up a training program means they go to war the next time unprepared, mentally, physically, and with no training. Picture your own son or somebody else's, 18 or 19 years old, enlisted in a National Guard unit and moved off in a week or two to Alaska or Greenland or some other spot. Picture him going into combat. The alternative is not 70 groups or UMT. The 70 groups are not going to give that boy the lead time he needs in training."

My goodness. That is touching, Mr. President, all that essay on our poor boys, the sad fate they are going to meet if they are not properly trained. I do not think it will make much difference to them whether they were trained or not when they get shot, or more especially, when the atom bombs are dropped. They do not have to drop them. They just set them off some place. They could kill everybody in the world. The boys are not going to worry much about whether they were trained or not. They know how to die.

The general did not reveal that most of the youths who go to war would not be combat troops, that out of 14,000,000 in the armed forces during this past war only 1,500,000 were combat troops. He implied that National Guard units might be moved to a combat zone in a week's time, yet didn't reveal the Army's low opinion of the guard, which kept most of them out of combat zones until 1943, though they were mobilized in 1940 and 1941. Nor did he reveal that the failure of the guard and the Reserves to have adequate training is the Army's fault for not making weapons and training personnel available to them.

It is increasingly clear that the Army wants a permanent compulsory training and service system in America, regardless of whether we are at peace or war. So far as I have been able to discover, the Army has not suggested a time limit on selective service. At one point in the Senate hearings "possibly the decade" was mentioned as the length of the draft. At another point Mr. Forrestal implied that we would change the proposed program when she (Russia) withdraws to her own borders and is content with a national rather than an international effort to govern. Mr. Forrestal also told the Senate committee that when "the long-term program [universal military training] is adequately functioning, we should be able in a more peaceful world to curtail or eliminate the short-term program [selective service]." Secretary Royall made it equally clear in his Army Day speech when he said, "I see no safe way of ending selective service until we build up a trained Reserve by universal military training."

Oh, Mr. President, these boys are certainly determined to saddle militarism upon America, and I am equally determined that they shall not do it.

In other words, indefinite peacetime concription is desired, whether it is called selective service or universal military training.

tive service or universal military training. It would be far better for this country to remember what it is that has made America strong, lest we automatically accept the path which Germany and Japan and other nations have trod. The Wall Street Journal of April 7 stated the case well:

"The question we as a people have to decide is not whether the United States should be strong. In this parlous world we must. The question for decision is how we may best be strong. President Truman and his military advisers think the way to military strength is through a huge standing army and an armament industry geared now for war. They think the way to be strong is to go now on a war footing, to draft both men and resources now for some coming battle. That is ever the answer of military men. * * Since battles are fought with men and guns, getting a lot of them seems the obvious way of preparing for war. But troops and guns, and even skill at tactics, do not guarantee victory. They are a necessary adjunct to military victory; they win battles. But they can also lose wars if in acquiring them a nation pays too high a price.

"The priceless ingredient in our society is the discovery that the freeman is a greater asset to his community than the slave. From that has come a productivity unequaled in history and it is that productivity, the efficient use of resources, that has made us strong. Now what the administration proposes is this."

When they speak of the administration, they should make it the bipartisan coalition, because they are all for it.

"That we drain off more than a million and a half of our industrial capacity into making goods that add nothing to our future productive power; and that we bind our energies with continued oppressive taxation and with regulations and controls by an omnipotent government. This is to make us strong. "Possibly we could stand this for a while,

"Possibly we could stand this for a while, as a healthy man can for a long time fight a sapping disease. A champ starting from perfect physical pitch can abuse his body for a long time and still be better than the next man. But in the end if we abuse our heritage it will make us weaker, as it did Germany and Japan, as it will Russia, too, if she stays on a permanent war basis. A nation, like the strongest man, needs a rest to recuperate its strength.

"We need to be prepared. We need a well-knit, skilled armed force to offer initial protection from sudden aggression and to form the nucleus of a mightier force if war should come. But we should beware lest too great a faith in arms exhaust the inner strength that is now, and always has been, our real source of power."

Finally, Mr. Chairman, our own people, as well as other people, will not believe that permanent or even temporary draft legislation is a peace measure. The history of conscription both here and abroad is such that it has never prevented war. And for this country to establish it now means placing even more power in the hands of the National Security Council whose secret discussions cannot be challenged until it is too late. It means strengthening the hand of those military strategists whom the Chicago Tribune of March 8 describes as "fostering a military doctrine that the President should lead the Nation into war against a potential enemy to keep it from striking the first blow without waiting for congressional declaration of war."

We believe rather that America should adopt a course which would unmistakably lead to peace. The Detroit News of April 9 editorially recommended such a course. Writing before the Italian election the editor described the foolishness of our present policy as follows:

"The Italians above all want peace, and the Communist Party has been wooing the voters in the terms of that yearning. The commie line has explained our interest in the election as concerned with making Italy an American stooge for purposes of a planned war against Russia. The Defense Department seems to have done its untimely best to lend an air of truth to that version of American intentions. It should be added that the News repeatedly has (advocated) * * * an American challenge to Russia to outlaw war, effectively and finally, by agreeing to a universal, supervised disarmament. The problem is to prove American devotion to peace in a manner so convincing that not even the most suspicious and ill-informed European could doubt it. The disarmament proposal would do just that."

Mr. President, here is some more of Mr. Alonzo Myers' testimony. He said:

I am a professor at New York University, being chairman of the department of higher education of the National Education Association.

I do not want to be quoting Mr. Baldwin all the time. I have quoted from him several times tonight, but he happens to be one of those professional writers on military matters who has watched this military game a long time, much longer, and with better preparation, than many of us. Mr. Baldwin has written an article in the New York Times for Sunday, May 9, 1948, on the Army's study about Hitler and the power of his army in 1939. He comments on a recent army study called foreign logistical organizations and methods, and compares it with some of the fine statements made by Churchill in his memoirs. The report deals with German production of aircraft before and during the war. It is clear from this report and Mr. Churchill's memoirs how much the military men of both this country and England overestimated German war production before and even during the war. This is Mr. Baldwin's comment:

In other words, Germany's great advantage in the immediate prewar and early war years was not in production output, and our estimates of Germany's production figures, including official intelligence estimates and some made from these figures by this writer, were greatly exaggerated.

I should like to read further from Mr. Baldwin's article on this subject, Mr. President. He has this to say:

German industry and German aircraft production facilities—contrary to official and popular impression—were not by any means fully mobilized for war when Hitler invaded Poland in 1939, according to a comprehensive official study and report prepared for the Secretary of the Army.

The report, a staff study made under the direction of Maj. Gen. C. F. Robinson, was published for limited circulation last October, and is entitled "Foreign Logistical Organizations and Methods." Its facts, compiled carefully from German records, modify, supplement, and at times take sharp issue with some of Winston Churchill's contentions, as expressed in the British war leader's historical memoirs now appearing in the New York Times.

The report reveals, for instance, that in 1938 Germany produced only 3,350 combat aircraft, or 5,235 aircraft of all types, including trainers and noncombat types. In 1939, when Britain was producing 8,000 military aircraft of all types, combat and noncombat, Germany produced only 4,733 combat planes, or 8,295 of all airplane types, including civil aircraft. In the same year the United States turned out 2,141 military aircraft and 5,856 of all types, military, and civil.

Not until 1944, when the United States produced more than 96,000 planes, did German industry reach production peaks. In that year, despite prior and continuing intensive bombings, the Reich manufactured almost 40,000 planes of all types, nearly five times its 1939 production.

OTHER PRODUCTION SMALL

The same trend, of small production at the start of war but of immensely increased production during the war, particularly after the German invasion of Russia and the induction of Dr. Albert Speer as German eco-nomic dictator, is applicable, the report notes, to tanks, trucks, and other military matériel. Germany was not prepared in 1939—contrary to democratic assumption for a long war or for total war; her economic and industrial effort was by no means fully harnessed; her factories were not producing war matériel at anything like top capacity.

These conclusions are at sharp variance with some of Mr Churchill's statements.

Speaking of the years 1934-35 and his struggle to awaken Britain to the need of rearmament, Mr. Churchill wrote that "a disaster of the first magnitude had fallen upon us. Hitler had already obtained parity with Great Britain. Henceforward he had merely to drive his factories and training schools at full speed, not only to keep his lead in the air but steadily to improve it * * * quantity was henceforth beyond us."

Later, in discussing the Munich settlement, Mr. Churchill writes:

"It is probable that in this last year before the outbreak, Germany manufactured at least double, and possibly treble, the munitions of Britain and France put together, and also that her great plants for tank production reached full capacity. They were therefore getting weapons at a far higher rate than

But the staff survey shows that in 1934, when Mr. Churchill first commenced to express his concern, Germany produced only 840 combat aircraft, 1,968 of all types, and that up until 1940, at least, Germany's production did not markedly outstrip Britain's. The difference was, however, that Germany's production was specifically applied to military aircraft and especially to fighters and bombers; Britain was producing fewer than 100 fighters a month in September 1939 and only a handful of heavy bombers. Much of her production was of training or commercial types, whereas German production had built up to 500 combat planes a month.

The same lack of German preparedness for total war or for a long war is revealed throughout the Army Department report.

In the last 4 months of 1939, after war had started, Germany produced 247 tanks and self-propelled guns, the British 314 tanks. But in 1943, after blitzkrieg had become attrition war, the German tank production mounted to 12,063, compared with the British home production of 7,476; and in 1944, despite bombing, German tanks and armored vehicle production was 27,340.

In 1939 Germany built 101,745 trucks and her truck production decreased slightly to 92,959 in 1943. But Britain built 112,500 heavy-wheeled vehicles in 1940.

In other words, Germany's great advantage in the immediate prewar and early war years was not in production output, and our estimates of Germany's production figures, including official intelligence estimates and some made from those figures by this writer, were greatly exaggerated.

As the Army study notes, "the full extent of military armament (by Germany) by 1939 has often been exaggerated."

"The total production of all tanks up to

The total production of all tanks up to September 1939 had provided the German Army with about 3,000 tanks, of which only 300 were medium tanks," the report con-tinues. "When Germany attacked Poland, the army had three Panzer divisions with only 600 tanks in reserve. * * In the German ordnance industry no new gun plants were constructed before 1939. The Army had sufficient ammunition in 1939 weeks; the Air Force had bombs enough for 3 months' operations at the rate of expenditure experienced in Po-land. * * * When the Polish invasion began, Germany had 1,000 frontline (serviceable) bombers and 1,050 fighter planes. (These latter figures agree fairly closely with Mr. Churchill's estimates.) Up to the out-break of war, the German submarine industry had delivered just 53 submarines to the German Navy.

AMMUNITION RESERVE SMALL

actual armament performance achieved by September 1939 is not too impressive. Germany was able to put more than 100 divisions into the field in the Polish campaign, but only 3 were armored and none were completely motorized. She had almost no reserve stocks of ammunition and equip-ment. * * But the equipment which was available was utilized to the full in the kind of campaign which Hitler himself conceived as the only type which the German Army would have to wage—short decisive action against one military opponent at a time. * * * But Hitler was not economically prepared for the new kind of war he now had to fight (the war of attrition which replaced the war of blit kreig after the Germans failed to capture Moscow in 1941). Hastily he took steps to enlarge the industrial base of his military might. But it was too late."

This revealing study—while it stands in sharp comparison to some of Mr. Churchill's estimates and to other estimates—does not invalidate the Churchillian contention that Britain should have started to prepare long before she did, and that Munich cost the Allies Czech divisions, strategical position, and other assets more important than the time gained.

But it also shows that military strength is considerably more than production figures; in fact, Germany won her initial great victories with a production output smaller than the combined production output of her op-ponents. Organization for war, concepts of war, sound strategy and tactics, good training and administration are all important ingredients of military strength and Germany had developed these. Germany was, on the whole, quite well prepared in 1939 for blitzkrieg war against individual opponents, but certainly not for total war against a great coalition, which is the kind of war she got.

Incidentally we might say, Mr. President, that in spite of all Hitler's preparation, in spite of all he could do, along came America, which had never had conscription, and laid him in the shade.

Mr. President, I do not think it is fully realized how much of our policy is determined by the military, instead of by civilian authorities. From the start to the finish, we are furnished with military opinions, not political opinions, and not opinions that reflect a well-rounded view of the whole situation.

Take for example, the matter of Germany and Japan, to which I have referred. Here the military are in complete command. So we depend entirely on the military and the men they appoint for all information and advice on how to handle those countries. We also depend on them for the policy. Just how trustworthy this is may be gathered from a little quotation from a civilian military expert, Mr. Hanson W. Baldwin, the respected military expert of the New York Writing on June 8, 1948, in the Times. New York Times, Mr. Baldwin speaks of the relaxation of tension in Washington from the February and March crisis atmosphere, and then goes on to say:

In some measure that crisis was made in Washington, but it stemmed in part from some very alarmist cables from Gen. Lucius D. Clay, United States military governor in Germany, who, in common with others, expected the Russians to march in weeks or There was little tangible foundation for any such belief then, and there is even less now, although some officers still talk vaguely of trouble after the harvest is in and of mysterious troop movements.

What shall we think of men who keep sending us in alarmist information from day to day that causes crises to arise back home? How can we trust them with more important information and policy?

I have not begun to speak in any detail about the big Army apparatus of propaganda and publicity to get the draft adopted. When a civilian organization wants to get a bill passed in Congress, its members come meekly into the Senate and House committees and are always afraid they are going to be thrown out by the nape of their necks. But when the Army comes into a Senate committee, they send in their best generals with all their brass glittering, and their stars shining and decorations gleaming-who can stand up against them?

But what about the nature of their arguments? That is a lot more important than the dress they wear or the influence they may have. I should like to quote this little piece from Hanson Baldwin about Mr. Forrestal's testimony before the Senate Armed Services Committee. Mr. Baldwin points out that the Defense Secretary failed to put into adequate perspective the exact state of the American Military Establishment today and he kept for a secret session of the committee some facts of major importance to the public opinion on this sub-

Mr. Baldwin's article further points out that the continued stress on American weakness" is for domestic consumption, to influence the Congress and the public and to stampede them into accepting what the military think is necessary for the country

I should like to quote a few little excerpts:

> IT'S NO TIME FOR SECRECY (By Hanson W. Baldwin)

Secretary of Defense James Forrestal's presentation last week of the service expansion program was on the whole a reasonable and persuasive argument for greater military strength.

But the testimony before the Senate Armed Forces Committee suffered from one instance of sensationalism, one of exaggeration, and a recurrence of the old service differences. The Defense Secretary failed, moreover, to put into adequate perspective the exact state of the American military establishment today, and he deferred to executive session some facts of major importance to the formulation of a sound public opinion about our military program.

MISLEADING THE PUBLIC

For the last 18 months-and increasingly in the last 6 months—Congress and the pub-lic have been told repeatedly by our military leaders of our "weaknesses," Secretary of State George C. Marshall stressed this "weakness" more emphatically than any other Government spokesman when he recently described the United States Army as a "hollow shell," an amazing statement by a Secretary of State in a time of crisis when the foreign policies he is espousing require the backing of military force.

Such statements obviously are intended for domestic consumption. There are some real weaknesses in our Military Establishment—notably the Army's shortage in man-power and in a strategic reserve, and our very small plane production-but the Army, Navy, and Air Force have elements of great strength and are by no means a "hollow shell."

The stressing of our weaknesses was aimed at Congress and the American people, both usually in a complacent and wishful-thinking mood until the moment of danger. But such exaggeration usually backfires. This

On the one hand the obvious retort of the citizen in this country is an inquiry into the citizen in this country is an inquiry into the intellectual capacity and administrative efficiency of our military leadership if $10,-000,000,000 and $11,000,000,000 defense budgets can buy us only a "hollow shell." The other and far more important effect is abroad. The continued harping upon our military weaknesses has played directly into the hands of the Communists.

Communism is waging a campaign of fear in Europe; it is encouraging the flight of cap-ital from Europe by a subtle spreading of rumors, fostering of unrest and the dissemination of reports that Russian troops will be in western Europe within the next few months. Communism stresses Russian strength, emphasizes Amearican weaknesses. Secretary Marshall's "hollow shell" statements and similar exaggerations are grist to the Communist mill.

Mr. Forrestal did something but not enough to correct this distortion last week; he could have emphasized more than he did our military strengths.

POSSIBILITY OF WAR

There was another omission in his presentation. In the last 3 months the opinion of our leaders appears to have shifted radically. At the beginning of the year Washington seemed more or less unanimous that war in the near future was unlikely.

The President's speech advocating resumption of the draft and UMT shows a sudden reversal of this opinion. Washington now appears to feel that war in the near future is a distinct possibility and that Russia may use military force to gain her ends. The reasons for this shift in opinion have not been made clear.

Have there been Russian or Yugoslav troop movements? Is Russia mobilizing? Mr. For-restal hinted at possible answers when he asked the committee to hear in executive ses-sion the strengths and deployments of the armed forces of other countries.

Yet if a whole shift in Government opinion, a major development of policy and the biggest peacetime military expansion program in our history are to be based, even in part, on such strengths and deployments, surely the American people are entitled to the evi-dence. The situation is far too serious for secrecy or for anything less than direct

Nor did Secretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan help, the cause with his abrupt and sensational announcement that submarines not belonging to any nation west of the iron curtain have been sighted off our shores.

That just turned out to be a blank, outright falsehood. The submarines off our shores, of course, were way up off the Aleutians. They happened to be our shores, but they are as close to Russia as they are to us. It turned out to be a distortion of the truth to scare the American people.

AIR FORCE RESENTMENT

The Secretary did not elaborate. But anonymous naval officers amplified the report. "Off our shores," it appears, was in at port. "Off our shores," it appears, least one instance in mid-Pacific.

I am quoting Hanson Baldwin. He is no wild-eyed alarmist.

This is pretty flimsy evidence upon which to build a defense program. Secretary of the Air Force W. Stuart Symington added to the excitement and confusion by disagreeing with a previous statement of his colleagues that the Eurasian "heart-land" could not be reached from North America by any existing bombers. It soon developed, however, that Mr. Symington meant that our B-29's "could bomb any part of Russia and return to American bases" only by refueling in the air, presumably from B-36 tanker planes. What Mr. Symington did not explain, however, was that neither the technique nor the logistics of large-scale midair refueling operations have been solved, and that the refueling planes must also have a base of operations.

And behind his statement, it quickly developed, was Air Force resentment that it was not to get a larger share of the expanded budget presented by Mr. Forrestal.

All of which "is a hell of a way to run a railroad."

That is an old joke which I heard years ago. I have forgotten what it was about, but I remember the gag line which Mr. Baldwin uses.

Mr. President, on April 21, General Evans, executive director of the Reserve Officers Association of the United States, testified before the House Armed Services Committee. In order to show what they learned over on the other side, I wish to read a few brief selections from that testimony:

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. ELSTON.
Mr. ELSTON. If the President decided before that the provisions of the Selective Service Act of 1940 should not operate, how can the services give us any assurance now that the President will not take a similar provision with respect to this act?

Mr. Brooks. That is the point exactly.
Mr. Short. You know the road that is paved with good intentions and where it leads.

What has the Department done and is doing now to help the Reserves?

General Evans. Very little.
Mr. Short. In furnishing you equipment?
General Evans. Nothing.
Mr. Short. Nothing. That is what I thought. Nothing.

Mr. Brooks. I want to ask you this: What is the status of the Reserve at the present

General Evans. I am speaking now of the Reserve of the Army and Air, Mr. Brooks. Three years have gone by. There is not an adequate troop basis which gives a man a wartime assignment. There are not adequate units. People are not assigned to units. The enlisted men—some six-hun-dred-odd thousand—that were taken, veterunits. ans all of World War II-have not been contacted. They have not been put in units. Their enlistments run cut this year. We will lose nearly all of them. So you can rather quickly see that it is a rather pitiful state that the Reserves are in.

Mr. SHORT. General, the only time they call you is when they are in war and they need you to win it.

General Evans. Unfortunately.

Mr. SHORT. Yes.

Mr. Johnson of California. General Evans, we want to find a legal way to have them carry it out, when we write it in the General Evans. Exactly. Mr. Johnson of California. Instead of relying on promises of the military.

General Evans. That is right.

Mr. Johnson of California. Up to now they have not done very much for you, as Mr. SHORT pointed out.

General Evans. There are two things. It General Evans. There are two things. It is true we have 600,000 on paper; but they have not been contacted. They have not been put into units. They have not been given any training. Their enlistment is going to run out, and because of lack of interest they are not going to reenlist. So, you are going to lose them.

Mr. BATES. Probably because they have not been given anything to do.

General Evans. That is right.

Mr. Johnson of California. Have those bills that the House passed cleared the Senate yet?

General Evans. No; not the retirement bill. Mr. Johnson of California. They are still pending; are they not?

General Evans. The retirement bill is still pending in the Senate. It comes up before the Senate committee sometime next week, I believe.

Mr. Johnson of California, Until you get organized units and equipment, those kinds of bills are worthless because they have nothing to apply them to.

General Evans. That is right, Mr. Johnson. I am not talking about incentive. I am not talking about procurement. All I am urging and begging and what I have been doing for years is to have somebody do something with what we now have.

Mr. Bates. You want to do the same with the Army that we are now doing with the Naval Reserve?

General Evans, Exactly.

Mr. Bares. Give them something to do. Build the unit. Train them and equip them.
General Evans. That is right.

Mr. Brooks. You say the Army Reserve program has broken down?

General Evans. Completely.

Mr. Short. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. It has been testified that the Air Force had all the men that they need, or can get them. We know there is a long list trying to get in who cannot get in. The Navy can get theirs through voluntary recruitment. Now, we propose to spend millions of dol-lars in registering millions of men to get 240,000 for the Ground Forces.

My contention, General, is that if the Army had done its duty and supported the Guard and our Reserves, having made a sincere, earnest, determined effort to build them up, we would not have this legislation here.

General Evans. I agree with you thoroughly.

Mr. SHORT. There would be no need for a draft, UMT, or anything else.

General Evans. I agree with you thoroughly.

Mr. Short. Good. I am glad to get it in the record.

Mr. KILDAY. Not UMT, General? General Evans. Yes; I would almost go that far, Mr. KILDAY. Mr. Kilday. You would go that far? General Evans. Yes. There it is. This general admits that the Army has not tried to get men. He says that it could if it wanted to; but it did not. It wanted universal military training or the draft, so the Congress has voted the draft.

Mr. President, on April 23, the Reverend E. Paul Weaver, of Huntington County, Ind., appeared before the House Armed Services Committee and gave a remarkable statement of reasons why America should not adopt a peacetime draft. Rev. Dr. Weaver's testimony begins on page 6584 of the House Committee hearings. I think that the Senate should consider this testimony, especially since the Senate Armed Services Committee refused to let Dr. R. L. Holland present an oral testimony in behalf of the Indiana Committee for the Prevention of Compulsory Military Training in Peacetime. The roster of that committee is found in the Senate armed services hearings, together with the splendid statement of that committee, which was signed by 150 outstanding leaders of the State of Indiana. I wish to read from Rev. Dr. Weaver's testimony. Parts of this testimony were carried in most of the papers of the country. I quote:

Mr. Chairman, I am E. Paul Weaver, of Huntington County, Ind. I am a rural pastor. I am not here today, however, to represent any church group or its position in regards to selective service. I am here as the authorized representative of the Indiana Committee for the Prevention of Compulsory Military Training in Peacetime. The complete statement which every member of our organization has signed and the list of 150 principal members of our committee is found on pages 834 to 838 of the Senate hearings, which with your kind permission I should like to have entered into the record at this point.

Briefly I might state that our Indiana committee is composed of the State-wide leaders of the following organizations: The Indiana Farm Bureau, the Indiana Grange, the State WCTU, the Indiana Congress of Parent-Teachers Associations, the Indiana Council of Churches, the Methodist Church, the Presbyterian Church, the Disciples Church, and others; four leading Jewish rabbis of the State of Indiana, and many other prominent citizens of the State and officers of other organizations. In addition to the 150 names found in the report of the Senate hearings, we have local chapters in many of our counties.

Since military spokesmen have made clear the interrelationship of selective service and universal military training when they spoke of being willing to give up selective service if universal military training were passed, we believe that both forms of a peacetime draft ought to be rejected.

First, I should like to demonstrate that evidence before the country and the committee at this time does not conclusively prove that it is now necessary to depart from our historic American policy of a voluntary peacetime Military Establishment.

1. The Air Force does not need selective service: Secretary of Air Symington told this committee on April 13: "We do not feel that selective service is necessary in order to get the people * * * for the Air Force." General Spaatz added: "I have no doubt in my mind but what the Air Force will get sufficient recruits to maintain the Air Force proper on a voluntary-enlistment basis."

2. The Navy doesn't need selective service: Secretary of Navy Sullivan told this committee on April 13: "We believe that the way our enlistments have been running we probably will be able to do it (without selective service) * * *." Admiral Denfeld, in reply to a question on whether the Navy could get its strength without a draft, said: "I think you can get it if the present situation continues."

3. As we consider the Army's case for selective service, we must bear in mind the fact that Secretary Royall testified before the Senate Armed Services Committee on March 25 that "war is not imminent." To that we must add the fact that the Italian elections turned out rather worse for the Communists than most Americans anticipated.

Italy went anti-Communist without the help of selective service, even though Mr. Truman certainly implied in his message to Congress that only a peacetime draft would back up our foreign policy.

Now that the elections in Italy are over and no crisis requiring drastic military action is on the horizons, there should be less reason for enlarging the Army. If the United States is not planning to launch an aggressive war there doesn't seem to be any reason to put men in the Army beyond the number needed for our present commitments. The Army spokesmen in the Senate hearings indicated that if the Army were increased by 240,000 men only 14,000 additional troops would be sent overseas. This doesn't seem to justify a draft.

Furthermore the Army is rejecting enlistments because it has raised its standards of admission.

The Army has tried to justify its rejecting men whose grades in the Army general classification tests are between 70 and 80 on two grounds. First, that the ability of men to learn is registered by the test and also that men who get less than an 80 score are unable to learn well enough to be in the Army.

Actually, of course the Army knows that men who make less than an 80 score do learn well enough to be in the Army. General Paul, for example, in a statement to the Senate Armed Services Committee admitted that the Army now has men of prior service with good records whose score is between 70 and 80. An Army officer who signs his name Maj. K. S. V. wrote a letter to the Infantry Journal which appears in the March 1948 issue. In it he gives 12 reasons why the Army is not getting enough recruits. The one the major emphasized intelligence requirements. was the was the intelligence requirements. He claimed that many good noncommissioned officers in the Army would not now be able to get in if they had to pass the present standards. He recommended lowering the score and stated that all of the old-timers he had consulted before submitting his letter to the editor agreed that it was most urgent to lower the present intelligence requirements. General Paul's statistics submitted to the Senate Armed Services Committee also reveal that 1,593 persons with more than 10 years of education failed to get an 80 score. Yet the fact that these men were able to advance through 10 grades of school is an indication that they have ability to learn.

During the war and until early 1947 the Army accepted men with a 70 grade. eral Dahlquist testified before the House Armed Services Committee the military has not to any perceptible percentage changed in any way since World War II with respect to mechanization, electronics, etc. The general added "we are getting more gadgets, but gadgets do not necessarily take higher intelligence. The greatest intelligence needed by any soldier is needed by the man who with the rifle is a complete army.' alone Now, General Dahlquist really meant this, he was talking about ordinary horse sense or judgment which is quite different from the book-learning skills or other skills. Furthermore, riflemen were needed a lot more in past wars than they will be in future ones as war becomes more mechanized. If an 80 score was not required for riflemen in past wars it ought not to be required now. And if mechanization does not necessarily take higher intelligence what is the justification of raising the standard for men who serve in a mechanized army.

The second argument Army spokesmen have used to justify rejecting men with a 70 to 80 score is the one used by General Dahlquist that they will have greater numbers in our guardhouse and greater numbers in developmental battalion.

Statistically, it is true that more men with lower grades end up in the guardhouse than do men with higher grades. This, however, is not because men with lower grades are more immoral or because they have criminal tendencies. It is because the brighter criminals, the men who are a little more clever, cover up a bit more and don't get caught so often.

I was impressed with the statement before this committee made by the prominent educator D. Alonzo Myers. He asked this committee to find out exactly what proportion of men in the 70 to 80 group were committed to the guardhouse and why. He pointed out that the Army has so many minor regulations that it would take a good memory to obey all of them.

General Hershey told this committee that about 12,000 paid personnel and close to 175,-000 unpaid draft-board personnel would be required to operate selective service. Now General Hershey didn't reveal whether 175,-000 experienced draft-board personnel who served for 5 years during the war are going to work without pay during peacetime when there is obviously no emergency. Evidently General Hershey doesn't expect that they will, for the Chicago Tribune of April 8 reports that he has asked National Guard headquarters in each State to assign men for training in draft procedures. Not only will General Hershey have to find thousands of new men and persuade them to work without pay, but he is apparently already planning to insure military control over selective service through the National Guar! whose appropriations for example are recommended by the Army.

General Hershey tried to justify using over 150,000 men to draft 240,000 men by saying that the draft would encourage 600,000 others to enlist. This is pure double talk. The Navy and Air Force say they can rely on volunteers. The Army needs only 240,000 additional men and is recruiting now at the rate of about 225,000 men a year without the heat of a draft. (See recruiting figures in Myers testimony.) General Hershey cannot take credit for encouraging 600,000 to enlist. He would be nearer the truth if he would say that he is hoping to use almost 200,000 men to draft about 200,000 men.

It seems clear to many of us that the Army is not utilizing the Enlisted Reserves in a manner that will prepare them for an emergency. General Evans of the Reserve Officers Association testified before this committee yesterday. "It is true that we have 600,000 men on paper, but they have not been contacted and they have not been given any training." He added, "All I've been urging for 3 years is to have somebody do something for the Reserves."

In the April 10, 1948, Colliers, Donald Robinson has discussed this problem under the subject Does the Army Want the Reserves?

PROPOSALS FOR POSITIVE ACTION

1. Urge Congress to pass at once the Landis resolution which was originally proposed by Speaker Martin which resolves "That before the United States adopts compulsory military service, the President of the United States, the Secretary of State, and the United States delegate to the United Nations organization, Warren R. Austin be, and hereby are, urged to work unceasingly for an immediate international agreement whereby compulsory military service shall be wholly eliminated from the policies and practices of all nations.'

2. Inasmuch as the Air Force and Navy can get their recruits by American volun-tary methods, I suggest that Congress appoint a committee to investigate and find out:

(1) Why the Army is not able to get sufficient men by voluntary enlistments.

(2) Why the rate of reenlistment for the Army has sunk so low.

(3) Whether the Army is using its existing manpower and reserves. If not, why not?
3. Let Congress tell those concerned to cease propagandizing our Nation for uni-versal military training and selective service, and to make our American democracy work.

Mr. President, Reverend Weaver. whom I have just been quoting, also gave a speech at Elkhart, Ind., on May 20 over radio station WTRC. It has much good information in it and reveals some of the errors of the current arguments in favor of the peacetime draft. From Reverend Weaver's radio talk at Elkhart I quote the following:

There is one thing that all of us have in common. All of us love America. My ancestors came to these shores just about 200 years ago, because America appeared to them as a land of freedom and great promise. I was reared in these great traditions. I believe in the American way of life. of us love America. If we did not love this country we should not be so deeply concerned that it should not go down the path that would lead to its self-destruction.

Recently I have returned from our Nation's Capitol where for 2 weeks I studied carefully the testimony being presented to the House Armed Services Committee. I have seen the clever trick that is being played in an attempt to get Congress to provide for permanent compulsory military train-ing. When it became evident that Congress would not pass UMT temporary selective service was demanded in the President's ad-dress on March 17. On the 18th of March when Secretary of Defense Forrestal testi-fied before the Senate Armed Services Committee he appeared to be so surprised by the request of the President that he had no plan to offer the committee (p. 43, SASC hearings). However, by April 12 when Sec-retary Forrestal testified before the House Armed Services Committee the following conversation occurred:

"Mr. HÉBERT. I understood you to say that selective service is merely a temporary meas-

"Secretary Forrestal. Yes, sir.
"Mr. Hébert. Which will be on the books so long as you do not have UMT; is that "Secretary Forrestal. Yes, sir; that is

"Mr. HÉBERT. Then it will be as temporary as some of those buildings on Constitution Avenue which were erected during World War I and which are still there—if we do not have universal military training?

"Secretary FORRESTAL. That is my opin-(House Armed Services Committee hearing, p. 6114.)

Let no one be confused. The program calls for permanent peacetime conscription and regimentation. Its advocates want all they can get. They will start with a little if they cannot get all at the first attempt. After studying the situation carefully I am convinced that the program calls for more than permanent peacetime conscription for military service. It follows its logical course to conscription of labor and regimentation of capital and industry, in fact regimenta-tion of all life. If we should follow such a course in an attempt to defeat a totalitarian dictatorship abroad we should in-evitably find ourselves the victims of just such a system here in the America that we

I live in the Fifth Congressional District of Indiana. We in the Fifth District are happy to have as our Representative the Honorable Forest Harness, who loves our American way of doing things. I have found Mr. HARNESS to be a statesman of unusual courage. If our American way of life is preserved by this Congress, all America will be in debt to Mr. HARNESS and his investigations of the agencies of the Federal Government which have been using our money to control the thought of this Republic. His investigations of the War Department's "illegal and improper" propaganda activities for UMT helped to turn the tide from the way of regimentation.

we felt that peacetime conscription were really necessary to our security, I know that Congress would pass a law to that effect without hesitation. I talked with dozens of Congressmen. I know that they feel that they are not getting the truth from the administration. I predict confidently now, contrary to the predictions of so many, that neither UMT nor the proposed Truman draft will pass in this session.

Well, it looks to me as though the Reverend Weaver got some bum steers when he made that prediction that they would not pass in this session—probably a case of wishful thinking.

Just yesterday I received my copy of the minority report of the House Armed Serv-ices Committee and signed by Congressmen SHORT, BISHOP, HEFFERNAN, PHILBIN, and HAVENNER. It is a masterful summary of the case against the Truman draft.

It is not only the Truman draft; it is a bipartisan draft. They are all for it.

The responsible officers of the Air Force testified that they felt that even for a 70group program the Air Force does not need selective service. Likewise on the same day, April 13, the men responsible for our Navy testified that they felt that the Navy can get its men without selective service.

On March 31, 1947, the Army grades were raised to 80. At the present time the Army is turning down almost 50 percent of the men applying for service, although they must admit that men with grades under 80 did spendid jobs during the war. In fact men with grades of 59 were used. The Army claims that men with grades under 80 make up an unusual percentage of the men in the guardhouse.

Dr. Alonzo Myers, an infantry captain of World War I, told the House Armed Services Committee that "The Army has so many minor regulations that it would take a good memory to obey all of them." (House Armed Services Committee hearings, p. 6472.)

It was pointed out in the minority report of the House Armed Services Committee that "the Army has deliberately refrained from making all-out efforts to utilize voluntary recruitment methods. Just as little interest has been shown in supporting the Reserve Establishments as long as the Army feels that universal conscription is obtainable, so the Army has been unwilling to pursue energetically the problem of making Army service more desirable to the average potential

I think, Mr. President, if we once and for all told them they were not going to get a draft, they would get busy, hustle around, and recruit the men.

Many believe that if the Army would reform its system according to the suggestions of the Doolittle report, Army life would be more attractive to the average young man. The minority report also stresses the observation that-

"To date the record of the Army in refusing to build up either the Organized Reserves or the National Guard borders on a national scandal. The testimony before our committee established clearly that the Army has followed a policy of deliberately ignoring the Reserves as a means of exerting pressure to get universal military training."

The argument that hooks more people in favor of peacetime conscription and UMT than any other is the story that has been fed very cleverly to our Gold Star Mothers. It has also been fed to the patriotic organizations as gospel truth. I should like to have the people examine this clever fiction very carefully.

The proponents of a regimented society argue that if we had UMT and/or peacetime conscription those Gold Stars would not be there. They say that the reason that we lost so many boys is that we did not have UMT. "If only we had had UMT." the conscriptionists sigh. What is the truth?

The relative casualty lists disprove this fiction. Here are the casualty lists of soldiers killed in World War II according to General Marshall's estimates:

Countries with peacetime conscription: USSR lost 7,500,000 (1 for every 22 inhabitants); Germany lost 2,850,000 (1 for every 25 inhabitants); Japan lost 1,506,000 (1 for every 46).

The Nation without UMT and/or peacetime conscription: The United States of America lost 295,904 (1 for every 500 inhabitants). (These figures do not include civilian deaths by bombings.)

Of course we would come out better than anyone else in that respect

Mr. President, I might say to the folks who expect to attend the Philadelphia convention that they had better be putting on their thinking caps, because we are just going good here. I am beginning to realize that Saturday night is not so far away. I understand that the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Langer] may rally around after a bit, and we can run this right through, without a stop, until midnight Saturday, without any strain whatsoever. So the boys may as well go home and get busy and figure out what they are going to do.

I resume reading:

During the war the Army insisted upon a teen-age draft together with an unfulfilled promise to parents that boys would be given adequate training.

In October 1942, Congress was asked to lower the draft age to 18. The United States News of March 9, 1945, stated "The Senate wrote in a provision that youths of 18 and 19 could not be sent into combat without receiving a year's training. That provision was killed by House and Senate conferees after they were assured that draftees would be given all the training necessary to make good fighting men. Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, appealed to Congress to "trust our judgment and our insistence that we fight only with properly trained units, to see that each soldier has adequate training before he enters combat."

The New York Times reported on December 9, 1944, "Because of a large increase in the percentage of youth that are being drafted, the Army has changed its policy and is now sending 18-year-old soldiers over-seas as infantry and as armored force replacements, Robert P. Patterson * * * disclosed today." The United States News of March 9, 1945, also indicated that Secretary Patterson had said in general that all men would get about 8 months' training before going into combat. The News added, "Even then the names of 18-year-olds were showing up in casualty lists. Boys who had been graduated from high school in June were being reported killed and wounded in December."

Mr. President, these military boys do not think much of their plighted word. They are a kind of cold-blooded, hardhearted lot.

I hope that every Gold Star Mother realizes that the Army had inducted approximately 8,000,000 men. According to General Marshall's last biennial report only 1,500,000 of these were combat troops. We know that there were millions of men in the Army over 20. If the Army had kept faith with the parents would they have sent the 18-year-olds into combat?

Of course they did not keep faith, Mr. President. Young boys were killed and wounded a few months after they were inducted into the Army. At this moment there is a fine establishment in Tennessee or Kentucky where there is a show place, to indicate what they would do with the UMT. If they once get the law passed and get the boys into the service they will not treat them that way any more.

I hope that the decision to send our 18year-olds into combat while the Army had millions of more mature men was not made by men who have been endeavoring to sell UMT to America for almost 30 years.

The Reverend Weaver is speaking wishfully again, Mr. President.

The Army has tried to create the impression that if the United States had had UMT, the casualties could have been prevented. This is attempted in both the War Department pamphlet of January 1947 and the UMT bill H. R. 4278. Most of us who think soberly will realize that these 18-year-old boys who were sent into combat had just finished high school. They would not have had UMT even if UMT had been the practice of America.

It does not seem to be honest to blame the casualties of the last war upon the absence of peacetime conscription. The Nation's leading military analyst, Hanson Baldwin, in the January 5, 1945, New York Times, discussed this question. He assigned the blame for the casualties of the Battle of the Bulge at least partly to inferior equipment. He attributed this situation to the "conservatism and traditionalism in the Army mind, complicated organization in the War Department." etc.

The Gold Star Mothers who have seen through this clever ruse at transferring the blame for the loss of their sons, are among the most ardent opponents of UMT and the peacetime draft. At the Indiana State pastors' conference in January 1948, a lady collecting all the material about peacetime conscription available, locked up with tears in her eyes as her Gold Star was noticed.

her eyes as her Gold Star was noticed.

She remarked, "Yes; I have another son who is only 15." She does not want to turn that boy over to the same group that took away his older brother. It would be most ironical if, after the older brother has offered his life to defeat the regimented militarism of Japan, we left MacArthur behind there to root out that militarism and peacetime conscription and set up a democracy, while we in America proceeded to set up a system of militarism complete with universal military training and peacetime conscription.

Millions of people who deeply love the American way of life are opposed to universal military training and/or the proposed Truman draft because they have read the following statement:

"It is clear to anyone who even stops to think that in case of a coming war the entire Nation would have to take up arms; that therefore millions would be driven toward the enemy with bad, insufficient, or half-finished training. One must nevertheless not forget that the shortage of trained soldiers could easily lead, at the beginning of a war, to losing that war.

"The Army educates them only to be reliable, decent members of the community, men who in the hour of need and danger will feel themselves united in loyalty with the Nation, and should fate confront them with the sternest ordeal, will defend the freedom of their people with bravery and honor."

That statement was made not by a loyal American but by Adolph Hitler in Mein Kampf when he was trying to sell his Nazi youth movement to the German people.

It sounds just like what is being done to us now, and it is exactly the same thing, indeed. Those who are party to this effort are just as remiss in their duty to the American people as those who saddled militarism on the Germans were to their people.

The Reverend Mr. Weaver proceeds:

When I testified before the House Armed Services Committee on April 23, I was asked, "What do you suggest we should do to stop Russia?"

To that question I replied, "I think we must not follow the method of Russia; but we must approach Russia with some positive action. We cannot defeat communism, which is an idea, with guns. We must learn that. You cannot stop an idea with a gun. You drive it in further. But you can stop an idea with a more powerful idea, and the more powerful idea is the Christian ideal of cemocracy. Jesus Christ taught respect for the human personality, and our Government today has lost it. It is time that we find it again. If we have the ideal of a Christian democracy which our ancestors had, we will defeat communism not only in America, but we will stop it in Russia. The "iron curtain" is not so high but what Russia will hear of the democracy which is working in America. But if we fall to make it work here, they will have a good, fertile bed for their ideals here in America."

I still agree with that statement. We must make our democracy work. We must reaffirm our faith in the American way of life. We must say "No" to every effort at unncessary regimentation. UMT and the "Truman draft" are only a beginning. When my hostess requests, "Will you keep your fork, please," I know there is something more coming. In the case of UMT and the Truman draft there is also something more coming, I would warn us solemnly, "It will not be ple and cake." God helping us we can yet resist these steps toward regimentation and these efforts at Federal thought-control.

That is the end of the radio address delivered by Rev. Mr. Weaver.

The Senate and the country might also be interested in the methods of propaganda used by the military to get over their ideas on the draft and UMT. I quote from the report of the Publicity and Propaganda Subcommittee of the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments of the House of Representatives made on July 24, 1947, almost a year ago.

The committee concludes in its report that the War Department is using Government funds in an improper manner for propaganda activities supporting compulsory military training.

I was interested in noting that one of the people—the paid propagandists of the Army—used was a woman who went around to various women's group and also contacted the former Supreme Court Justice Owen Roberts. Mr. Roberts is known as head of an organization lobbying for UMT. I find it interesting that Mr. Justice Roberts lobbies on the one hand for universal inilitary training and the draft, and on the other for some form of world government. I had not thought we should work for government that will be imposed by arming the world.

Here are the quotations from the committee of which I spoke a moment ago:

This report summarizes our hearings on this phase of the inquiry, to date, and presents the conclusions arrived at, following careful evaluation of the testimony and documentary evidence presented by, and relating to, the War Department.

The use of Federal funds for the purpose of influencing legislation before Congress is unlawful under section 201, title 18, of the United States Code. We have, therefore, brought these matters to the attention of the Department of Justice, with a request that the Attorney General, at once, initiate proceedings to stop this unauthorized and illegal expenditure of public moneys. A copy of the chairman's letter to the Attorney General is made a part of this interim report.

This, our second report, deals exclusively with the activities calculated to build up a federally stimulated public demand upon Congress for enactment of legislation for universal military training. The activities (which we shall hereinafter more fully set forth) have been those of civilian employees of the War Department, as well as the personnel of the United States Army.

Another of the War Department's civilian consultants was Mrs. Arthur Woods. Mrs. Woods, a former lieutenant colonel in the WAC, also traveled throughout the country at Government expense, speaking on behalf of universal military training. She was particularly interested in influencing women and parents of the country on the virtues of compulsory military training. The purposes of the activities of Mrs. Woods can, perhaps, best be shown in a letter written by her to Miss Linnea Woolf, 164 East Thirty-third Street, New York 16, N. Y.

The letter of this lady appears in the report. However, I shall not take the trouble to read it.

Now, Mr. President, I think I shall turn over the chore to the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Langer], whom I eulogized earlier in the evening, and for whom I have a great admiration and high regard. Later I shall resume. I am entitled to another speech on this same matter. At this time I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. IVES in the chair). The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken Byrd Cain Chavez Eastland Ecton Ellender Baldwin Barkley Connally Cooper Feazel Ferguson Brewster Bricker Cordon Flanders Bridges Brooks Donnell Fulbright Downey Dworshak Green Butler Gurney

The message notified the Senate that Mr. Brooks had been appointed a manager on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 2655) to provide for the common defense by increasing the strength of the armed forces of the United States, including the reserve components thereof, and for other purposes, vice Mr. Durham, excused.

TRANSACTION OF ROUTINE BUSINESS

By unanimous consent, the following routine business was transacted:

ADDITIONAL BILL INTRODUCED

Mr. TOBEY, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (S. 2894) to amend the Public Health Service Act to provide for research and investigation with respect to the cause, prevention, and treatment of multiple sclerosis, and for other purposes, which was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF A COMMITTEE

As in executive session,

The following favorable reports of nominations were submitted:

By Mr. LANGER, from the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service: Sundry postmasters.

GEN. MATT WHITAKER RANSOM—AD-DRESS BY SENATOR UMSTEAD

[Mr. UMSTEAD asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address on Gen. Matt Whitaker Ransom, delivered by him at Jackson, N. C., on August 4, 1947, which appears in the Appendix.]

JOSIAH W. BAILEY

[Mr. UMSTEAD, in accordance with the terms of S. Res. 212, agreed to April 1, 1948, submitted a tribute prepared by him on the life, character, and public service of Josiah W. Balley, late a Senator from the State of North Carolina, which appears in the Appendix.]

TRIBUTE TO THE HONORABLE WALLACE WHITE

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, the approach of Congress' recess brings to mind the fact that many of the distinguished men who grace this Chamber will shortly bid adieu to the United States Senate, in which they have rendered such noble and faithful service. At this time, I should like to briefly pay tribute to a man who is a friend of all of us, a guide, an inspiration, a devoted public servant of his native State and his Nation, a man who has served in this body since 1931 with success and distinction.

I am referring, of course, to the senior Senator from Maine, the Honorable WALLACE H. WHITE, JR.

If you look in the Congressional Directory and read the long series of achievements of Wallace White in the House of Representatives, where he was first elected to the Sixty-fifth Congress and where he served until the Seventy-first Congress, in the Senate, in many international conferences and in numerous other capacities, the layman can only get a limited picture of what Wallace White means to us and has meant to us during all these years. You would have to know him personally, as we have known him, to realize the strength that he possesses that is, nevertheless, gentle, the humor with which he is so richly endowed, but which is always in such good nature, the leadership which he has constantly exercised, both as minority and majority leader of the Senate, but about which he has always been so modest.

It is difficult for any man to try to sum up in a few moments the devoted work of a lifetime by a dear friend. We can recite the facts, but it is hard to convey all of the sacrifices, all of the patience, all of the endless devotion which went into each of the activities of our dear friend.

We can recall that Wallace White served as an employee of the Senate for some years prior to his service in the Congress. For example, he served as assistant clerk to the Committee on Commerce for a couple of years when the chairman of that committee was the Honorable William P. Fry. He also served as Secretary to Senator Fry for several years when the latter was President pro tempore of the Senate. WAL-WHITE continued in that capacity until November 1903.

On April 2, 1917, 4 days before Amer-ica's declaration of war in the first world conflict, Wallace White was sworn in as a Member of the House of Representatives. In the House, he served as chairman of the Committee on Expenditures in the Department of Justice, of the Committee on Woman's Suffrage, of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

In September 1930, following his unbroken service in the House of Representatives, he was elected United States Senator, in which post he has been successively reelected. In this Chamber, he has served with distinction on the Civil Service, Claims, Commerce, Education and Labor, Post Office and Post Roads, and other committees. In May of 1935, he was appointed to the Committee on Foreign Relations and he has served on numerous other Senate groups.

With the advent of the GOP's control of the Congress, Senator WHITE, who had served as acting Republican floor leader following the death of Senator McNary, was elected majority leader of the Senate.

We in the Senate know how popular WALLACE WHITE has been with all his colleagues and with all those who have come in contact with him.

Without fanfare, without histrionics, he has performed his duties selflessly and faithfully.

In whatever capacity he has served, as chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee and ranking member on the Appropriations Committee, or as floor leader, he has gained the respect and admiration of his associates on both sides of the aisle.

To say that WALLACE WHITE'S departure from the Senate will leave a gap that will be hard, if not impossible, to fill, is an understatement. To say, however, that we will look to him for continued public service and continued guidance is merely to state the obvious.

WALLACE WHITE has deserved the rest and relaxation which are so much his due but which have been denied him during all these strenuous years in public service. We know, however, that he will continue to be a source of inspiration and direction to all his fellow citizens of Maine and to all of his associates here in the Senate.

As he has paid tribute to other great men who have graced this Chamber, so now we pay deserved tribute to him and wish him good luck and Godspeed on all his future ventures.

PROMOTION OF THE NATIONAL DE-FENSE-INCREASE IN PERSONNEL OF ARMED FORCES

The PRESIDING OFFICER. question is on the motion of the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. GURNEY] that the Senate disagree to the amendment of the House; agree to the conference requested by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. MORSE. I yield to the Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, quite a number of the Members of the Senate, members of the Appropriations Committee, have been working on appropriation bills all evening. They must return to committee rooms to deal with more appropriation bills. House conferees are waiting in the conference rooms. I am very hopeful that all Members of the Senate will agree to the appointment of conferees on Senate bill 2655. I especially ask my colleague from my neighboring State of North Dakota [Mr. LANGER! to allow the appointment of conferees.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President-

Mr. MORSE. I yield to the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. LANGER. I will wait until I secure the floor in my own right.

AMENDMENT OF FEDERAL-AID ROAD ACT-CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. COOPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MORSE. I yield. Mr. COOPER. Mr. President, I submit a conference report on House bill 5888, to amend and supplement the Federal-Aid Road Act approved July 11, 1916 (39 Stat. 355), as amended and supplemented, to authorize appropriations for continuing the construction of highways, and for other purposes, and I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, my understanding is that it requires unanimous consent temporarily to displace the pending business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct

Mr. WHERRY. I ask unanimous consent that the motion of the Senator from South Dakota be temporarily laid aside in order that the Senate may proceed with the conference report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report, which was read by the Chief Clerk, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5888) to amend and supplement the Federal-Aid Road Act approved July 11, 1916 (39 Stat. 355), as amended and supplemented, to authorize appropriations for continuing the construction of highways, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free con-ference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 5 and 14.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 3, 4, 6, 10, 11, 12, 13, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, and 21; and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 2: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 2, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Change the figure "400,000,000" to read "$450,000,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered, 7: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 7, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Page 2, line 4, of the amendments of the Senate, strike out the words "one fiscal year" and insert in lieu thereof the words "two and insert in fleu thereof the words "two fiscal years"; page 2, line 12, of the amendments of the Senate, after the word "year", insert the following ", including any funds authorized to be appropriated under this Act"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 8: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 8, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Page 2, strike out all of subsection (a) under 2 (a); and on page 3, line 8, strike out "(b)"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 9: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered nine, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Page 4, line 8, of the amendment, as follows: Page 4, line 8, of the amendments of the Senate, change the figure "$20,000,000" to read "$17,500,000"; Page 5, line 19, change the colon to a period, and strike out the remainder of the paragraph through line 9, on page 6; and the Senate agree to the same.

> JOHN S. COOPER, DENNIS CHAVEZ, Managers on the Part of the Senate.

CHAPMAN REVERCOMB,

GEO. A. DONDERO, J. HARRY McGREGOR, PAUL CUNNINGHAM. E. G. ROHRBOUGH, J. GLENN BEALL, WILL M. WHITTINGTON, A. J. ELLIOTT, GEORGE H. FALLON, Managers on the Part of the House.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. President, I move the adoption of the conference report.

The The PRESIDING OFFICER. question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. COOPER].

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President—Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from West Virginia.

STREAM POLLUTION—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. REVERCOMB. At this time I ask unanimous consent that the pending business be temporarily laid aside and that the Senate take up for immediate consideration the conference report on Senate bill 418, which is a bill dealing with the removal of pollution from streams and with the Public Health Service.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. KILGORE. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. MILLIKIN. Mr. President-Mr. MORSE. I yield to the Senator from Colorado.

XCIV-556

INCREASE OF COMPENSATION PAYABLE TO SURVIVING CHILDREN OF CERTAIN DECEASED VETERANS - CONFERENCE

Mr. MILLIKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending business be temporarily laid aside, and that the Senate proceed to consider the conference report on Senate bill 2825, a bill to increase the compensation payable to the surviving children of certain deceased veterans whose death was wartime service-connected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Colorado?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report, which was read by the Chief Clerk, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 2825) to increase the compensation payable to the surviving children of certain deceased veterans whose death was wartime serviceconnected, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagree ment to the amendment of the House and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by the House amendment insert the following: That paragraph IV of part I of Veterans Regulation Numbered 1 (a), as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"The surviving widow, child or children, and dependent mother or father of any deceased person who died as the result of in-jury or disease incurred in or aggravated by active military or naval service as provided in part I, paragraph I hereof, shall be entitled to receive compensation at the monthly rates specified next below:

"Widow but no child, $75; widow with one child, $100 (with $15 for each additional child); no widow but one child, $58; no widow but two children, $82 (equally vided); no widow but three children, $106 (equally divided) (with $20 for each additional child; total amount to be equally divided); dependent mother or father, $60 (or both), $35 each."

"Sec. 2. Subparagraph (c), paragraph I, part II, Veterans Regulation Numbered 1 (a), as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"'(c) Any veteran or the dependents of any deceased veteran otherwise entitled to compensation under the provisions of part II of this regulation or the general pension law shall be entitled to receive the rate of compensation provided in part I of this regu-lation, if the disability or death of such veteran resulted from an injury or disease received in line of duty (1) as a direct result of armed conflict, or (2) while engaged in ex-tra-hazardous service, including such service under conditions simulating war, or (3) while the United States is engaged in war.'

"SEC. 3. Paragraph III of part II of Veterans Regulation Numbered 1 (a), as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"'The surviving widow, child or children, and dependent mother or father of any deceased person who died as a result of injury or disease incurred in or aggravated by active military or naval service as provided for in part II, paragraph I hereof, shall be entitled to receive compensation at 80 per centum of the rates specified for such dependents in paragraph IV, part I hereof, as now or hereafter amended.'

"SEC. 4. The increases provided by this Act shall be effective from the first day of the second month following the passage of this Act."

And the Senate agree to the same

That the Senate recede from its disagree ment to the amendment of the House to the title of the bill, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by the House amendment insert the following: "A bill to increase the rates of service-connected death compensation payable to certain widows, children, and dependent parents of persons who served in the active military or naval service, and for other purposes"; and the House agree to the same.

EUGENE D. MILLIKIN,

ROBERT A. TAFT, HUGH BUTLER, ALBEN W. BARKLEY, TOM CONNALLY,

Managers on the Part of the Senate.

EDITH NOURSE ROGERS, BERNARD W. KEARNEY FRANK A. MATHEWS, Jr., JOHN E. RANKIN, A. LEONARD ALLEN

Managers on the Part of the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the report is agreed to.

INCREASE OF COMPENSATION FOR CER-TAIN VETERANS-CONFERENCE RE-PORT

Mr. MILLIKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending business be temporarily laid aside and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the conference report on Senate bill 2821, to provide increases of compensation for certain veterans withservice-connected disabilities who have dependents.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report, which was read by the Chief Clerk, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 2821) to provide increases of compensation for cerveterans with service-connected disabilities who have dependents, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagree ment to the amendment of the House, and agree to the same with an amendent, as follows: "That any person entitled to compensation at wartime rates for disability incurred in or aggravated by active service as provided in part I, or paragraph I (c), part II, Veterans Regulation Numbered 1 (a), as amended, or the World War Veterans' Act, 1924, as amended, and restored with limitations by Public Law 141, Seventy-third Congress, March 28, 1934, as amended, and whose disability is rated not less than 60 per centum, shall be entitled to additional compensation for dependents in the following monthly amounts:

"(1) If and while rated totally disabled and-

"(a) has a wife but no child living, $21; "(b) has a wife and one child living, $35;

"(c) has a wife and two children living, $45.50:

"(d) has a wife and three or more children living, $56;

"(e) has no wife but one child living, $14; "(f) has no wife but two children living, $24.50;

"(g) has no wife but three or more children living, $35;

"(h) has a mother or father, either or both dependent upon him for support, then, in addition to the above amounts, $17.50 for each parent so dependent.

"(2) If and while rated partially disabled, but not less than 60 per centum, in an amount having same ratio to the amount specified in subsection (1) hereof as the degree of his disability bears to the total disability.

"Sec. 2. That any person entitled to compensation at peacetime rates for disability incurred in or aggravated by active service as provided in paragraph II, part II, Veterans Regulation Numbered 1 (a), as amended, except paragraph I (c) thereof, and whose disability is rated not less than 60 per centum, shall be entitled to additional compensation for dependents in the following monthly amounts:

"(1) If and while rated totally disabled and-

"(a) has a wife but no child living, $16.80;

"(b) has a wife and one child living, $28;
"(c) has a wife and two children living, $36.40;
"(d) has a wife and three or more children living, $44.80; "(e) has no wife but one child living, $11.20;

"(f) has no wife but two children living, $19.60:

"(g) has no wife but three or more children living, $28;

"(h) has a mother or father, either or both dependent upon him for support, then, in addition to the above amounts, $14 for each parent so dependent.

"(2) If and while rated partially disabled, but not less than 60 per centum, in an amount having same ratio to the amount specified in subsection (1) hereof as the degree of his disability bears to the total disability.
"SEC. 3. The additional compensation for a dependent or dependents provided by this Act shall not be payable to any veteran during any period he is in receipt of an in-creased rate of compensation or of subsistence allowance on account of a dependent or dependents under any other law admin-istered by the Veterans' Administration: Provided, That he may elect to receive whichever is the greater.

"SEC. 4. The administrative, definitive, and penal provisions of Public Law Numbered 2, Seventy-third Congress, and Veterans Regulations thereunder, as amended, shall be for application under this Act.

"SEC. 5. This Act shall take effect on the first day of the second calendar month next succeeding its enactment."

And the Senate agree to the same. EUGENE D. MILLIKIN, ROBERT A. TAFT, HUGH BUTLER, ALBEN W. BARKLEY, TOM CONNALLY, Managers on the Part of the Senate.

EDITH NOURSE ROGERS, BERNARD W. KEARNEY. FRANK A. MATHEWS, Jr., JOHN E. RANKIN, A. LEONARD ALLEN,

Managers on the Part of the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the report is agreed to. STREAM POLLUTION

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President-Mr. MORSE. I yield to the Senator from West Virginia. Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, I again ask unanimous consent that the pending business be temporarily laid aside and that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of the conference report on Senate bill 418, which is a bill dealing with the removal of pollution from streams.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. AIKEN. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, may I inquire of my distinguished colleague from North Dakota [Mr. LANGER] if there is any objection at this time to permitting a vote on the motion of the Senator from South Dakota to appoint conferees on the military bill? I appeal to him to let us vote. When the business of the Senate continues, and the report is made, my distinguished colleague will have ample opportunity to debate the issue as to whether or not he wishes to approve the conference report.

I know that the Senator can do as he chooses, but it would expedite the work of the Senate if the motion could be voted upon. He could make his speech on the adoption of the conference report, which would be almost the immediate order of business.

I appeal to the Senator to permit us to expedite the work of the Senate.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President— Mr. WHERRY. I yield to the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I have another matter which I deem of such great importance that I decline to accede to the suggestion of the Senator from Nebraska at the present time, because I wish Senators to hear what I am about to say. I want all to hear who can possibly remain.

Mr. RUSSELL, Mr. President-The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, the Senator from North Dakota wishes to make a speech. He has a perfect right to make the speech. I will assure the Senator that there will not be a recess, but that we shall proceed with the business of the Senate, and that before this session is concluded tonight the conference report will be submitted, on which the speech is to be made. It would greatly expedite the work of the Senate if that could be done. I appeal to the Senator to let us vote on the motion of the Senator from South Dakota. Then the Senator from North Dakota will have ample opportunity to make the speech which he is about to make. We will guarantee that the session will continue if he will do that for us.

Mr. LANGER. I assure my distinguished friend that I deeply regret that I cannot do so.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHERRY. I yield. Mr. RUSSELL. I should like to ask the distinguished Senator from Nebraska if a continuation of the present condition, which has existed on the floor of the Senate for the past several hours, is not almost certain to result in the death of many important measures which we would like to consider at this session, including that of increasing the pay of postal employees, and the bill with relation to the classified employees in the Federal service?

Mr. WHERRY. If the Senate adjourns, as has been scheduled, it is almost a certainty that some of the legislation which the Senate would and should consider will be jeopardized if we cannot expedite the business of the Senate. Just which measures might suffer, I could not say. I will say, however, that if we could expedite the work of the Senate tonight, I am confident that the pay bills could be passed. I see no objection to them. I think they could be ironed out satisfactorily.

Mr. RUSSELL. Does the Senator be-lieve that this situation is helping the chances of those bills?

Mr. WHERRY. I am sorry to say that it is not. On the other hand, I want the distinguished Senator from Dakota to know that he has a perfect right to make a speech on any subject he wishes. I shall not ask him again at this time to permit us to vote on the motion of the Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. MAYBANK. Mr. President, will the Senator vield?

Mr. WHERRY. I yield. Mr. MAYBANK. I wish to make only one statement.

The other day when the postal bill was called up, I suggested that I thought that because of the increased cost of living an increase in pay should be granted to postal employees. My statement was misunderstood by some. I wish to say to my distinguished friend the Senator from Nebraska that I believe other Government employees should likewise have an increase in pay.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I express to the distinguished Senator my approval of the statement he has made. We are all interested in the pay bill. It was our intention to make it the next order of business on the Legislative Calendar.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHERRY. I am glad to yield. Mr. PEPPER. I was going to ask the distinguished acting majority leader if he had considered the possibility of asking that some of these other important measures might be brought up.

I think the pending question is on the motion to agree to a conference on the draft bill and to appoint conferees.

Mr. WHERRY. That is correct. Mr. PEPPER. In the last few minutes I have seen other conference reports brought up, and the able Senator did not seem to object to their consideration.

Now we have pending some very vital legislation, and I am sure there would be no objection to bringing it up. instance, there is the housing legislation, the legislation pertaining to pay raises for postal and governmental employees generally, and perhaps other measures.

I wonder whether the acting majority leader has given consideration to the possibility of asking the Senator from North Dakota to defer his remarks until those matters are disposed of.

I am sure the Senator from North Dakota would not object to the disposition of the measure for pay increases for postal employees, as well as other measures of similar character.

I wonder whether we can gain some time by disposing of some of these other vital matters, and asking the Senator from North Dakota to defer his remarks until they are disposed of, and then return to the draft measure.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER, Mr. President, wil the Senator yield?

Mr. WHERRY. I yield. Mr. HICKENLOOPER. I might suggest that the unfinished business presently before the Senate is the bill for the extension of the terms of members of the Atomic Energy Commission; and I shall yield for privileged matters only because I have no other choice. But the moment the privileged matters are disposed of, I shall resist any effort to superimpose any other proposed legislation of similar standing or to bring it before the Senate in place of the bill for the extension of the terms of the members of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHERRY. I yield. Mr. PEPPER. I see no reason why the acting majority leader, in his discretion, could not include that in the request he might make, and I am sure the Senator from North Dakota would not object to it. I understand that the Senator from North Dakota expects to address himself to the draft measure. I assume that the Senator from North Dakota is not objecting to the consideration of any other subjects.

Mr. LANGER. I am not.

Mr. PEPPER. So it is up to the acting majority leader to determine whether he wishes these other matters to be proceeded with in the Senate or to have them kept behind the Draft Act.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHERRY. I yield. Mr. KNOWLAND. I merely wish to make my own position on this matter

I have not objected to the consideration of the miscellaneous matters which have come up that are not in any degree of a controversial nature.

But I wish to call attention again, although I am sure the Senate is already well advised as to this, that we have before us one of the most important bills which this Congress has had to consider, a bill which vitally affects the national defense of the Nation. For 8 hours a filibuster has been conducted against it in an effort to prevent the Senate of the United States from performing its constitutional duty.

I believe there is nothing more important than to proceed to a determination of the question whether the Senate of the United States can function or whether the Senate of the United States cannot function.

For that reason, I shall object to the consideration of any other business until that matter has been disposed of.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHERRY. I yield. Mr. PEPPER. I am in the same category with the able Senator from California in the belief that the rules of the Senate should be modified so that a majority of the Senate may determine what business shall be pending before the Senate and when the Senate shall vote upon any particular matter.

Senators will recall my introduction of resolutions to that effect and my appearance before Senate committees dealing with that subject. But the Senate has not chosen to adopt our viewpoint on that matter, and that is not the rule of the Senate at the present time.

The present rules of the Senate allow unlimited debate, except if cloture is invoked, and allow any Senator to speak twice in any single legislative day upon any pending question. That includes the right of the Senator from North Dakota to speak as long as he cares to speak.

Mr. President, that being the situation at the present time, the acting majority leader will, unhappily, no doubt, have to make the decision as to whether he is to allow the desire of the Senator from North Dakota to speak-which is perfectly within the rights of the Senator from North Dakota, under the rules of the Senate which the Senate has declined to change-and to obstruct all other desirable legislation, or whether the Senator might be requested to defer his remarks-and he has indicated that he is willing to do so-and have the Senate take up these other matters, so that they could be considered.

So, if the pending discussion of the Senator from North Dakota obstructs the other matters, I am not at all sure that the Senator from North Dakota will be the only one responsible.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, is there a conference report ready to be laid down?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the Senator from Nebraska will release the floor, the Chair will call attention to a bill received from the House of Representatives, the title of which will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (H. R. 6465) to amend and supplement section 2 of the act approved August 30, 1935, relating to the construction and financing of toll bridges over the Delaware River by the Delaware River Joint Toll Bridge Commission of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, there is no further use in asking anyone to yield. The answer to the Senator from Florida has already been made. The Senator from California feels that this draft measure is the most important legislation before the Senate, and that it should be determined, and it will have to be determined under the rules we now

I should like very much to expedite the consideration of all legislation. Here we are in the closing hours of this session of the Congress. We could accomplish a program and end the session of Congress without any difficulty if we could just obtain full cooperation.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me.

Mr. WHERRY. I shall yield to the Senator from Kentucky as soon as I finish making the statement.

If we could get a vote on the motion to appoint conferees on the draft bill, we could proceed, and the Senator from North Dakota could make his speech on any business which comes up. I want to have the Senate proceed just as harmoniously as it is humanly possible to do, and I make an appeal that we may have a vote on the present motion to have a conference on the draft bill, and then proceed with the other work of the Senate. The Senator from North Dakota could still make his remarks; he could oppose the draft bill when it comes back before the Senate in the form of the conference report. Certainly my suggestion is a fair one. Certainly what I suggest is the only thing to do under the present rules.

In a moment I shall yield to the minority leader; and while he is speaking, I am going to ask my distinguished colleague from North Dakota to consider my suggestion very seriously, and to realize that I hope with all the hope within my power that he will permit us to proceed with this important subject.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nebraska object to the consideration of the matter which has just been referred to?

Mr. WHERRY. I did not object, but understand that the Senator from California will object.

Mr. KNOWLAND. I object.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I wish to join the distinguished acting majority leader in asking the distinguished Senator from North Dakota to permit the draft bill motion to be acted upon. It really would seem to discredit the Senate of the United States, in the last hours of what we hoped would be this session, to have to witness the utter futility of this body in the matter of legislation. Although I have cooperated with the other side as fully as I could to bring about the completion of the program and to adjourn today, I wish to say that so far as I am concerned, I myself will not vote either to adjourn or recess the Senate in the midst of this atmosphere of futility and impotence. I will vote to stay here all day today and all tonight and all day tomorrow and all tomorrow night and all every other day and all every other night, to end this futility.

(Manifestations of applause in the galleries.)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair must advise those in the galleries that it will be necessary to have the galleries cleared if there are other demonstrations, for the rules of the Senate do not permit demonstrations by the occupants of the galleries.

The Senator from Kentucky may pro-

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I wish to state that if any Senators feel that they can force the Congress to adjourn because of the pendency of any measure or any number of measures, they are reckoning without their host.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield for a parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. WHERRY. I shall yield as soon as I finish making my statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator declines to yield.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, a point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state his point of order.

Mr. PEPPER. Does it require the consent of the Senator from Nebraska in order to propound a parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, until I finish this observation, I do not intend to yield to anyone for any purpose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The

Senator declines to yield, and he has perfect right to decline.

Mr. WHERRY. I decline to yield until I finish this observation. I shall be fair. I shall let any Senator talk vho wants to, when the time comes for him to be heard.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will recognize the Senator from Florida as soon as the Senator from Nebraska finishes.

Mr. PEPPER. I shall gladly yield until the Senator gets through with his observation.

Mr. WHERRY. That is fine. I thank the Senator.

We have about four important pieces of legislation that can be passed here I think without any difficulty. I agree with the Senator from California, however, that the most important issue before the Senate is the pending motion to send the draft bill to conference. Until that can be settled we shall all have to take the position of the distinguished minority leader and remain here until it is settled. I can see no other way out of

I appeal to the logic, I appeal to the reason of Senators, that inasmuch as the conference report will come back here, speeches can be made on it, and I will guaranty so far as the motion is concerned, there will be no motion to recess or adjourn made until the conference report is made to the Senate of the United States. I can see no reason at all why we cannot vote on the appointment of conferees. A Senator may talk about rules, he may talk about anything he pleases. Until we are in a frame of mind that we can have that kind of cooperation, Senators will not get any place in a program, unless we can do that very thing. That is all there is to it.

I should like to finish this session-it means something to me-in a spirit of harmony. This country is faced with some of the greatest issues it has ever faced in its history, and for the Senate to continue in a cooperative and harmonious way means a lot not only to the legislation that is passed but to our domestic and foreign relations.

I hope the distinguished Senator from North Dakota will yield on this one thing, that we may vote upon the appointment of conferees; then, when the conference report comes back, he can make his speech on it. When we get that out of the way, we shall proceed to the orderly work of the Senate. I now yield to the Senator from Florida.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I propound the parliamentary inquiry, in view of the objection which was indicated by the able Senator from California, which was evidently regarded by the distinguished acting majority leader as preventing him from bringing up any other measure except the draft. I propound the parliamentary inquiry whether or not it requires unanimous consent to make a motion to displace the pending motion and consider something else.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No; of course it does not.

Mr. PEPPER. Of course not. It does not require unanimous consent. Then the acting majority leader by a majority vote of the Senate and upon his motion could displace the pending question and bring up any other measure he may care to bring up.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Chair would observe, however, in that connection that that would only make confusion worse confounded.

Mr. WHERRY. That is right. Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state the inquiry.

Mr. BARKLEY. Would that be pos-ble? [Laughter.]

sible?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the Senator from Nebraska has no more to say, before the Chair recognizes the Senator from North Dakota, the Chair will state the question before the Senate, so there will be no doubt about it on this new day which has dawned since the quorum call was made, or just before it. The motion was made by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. GURNEY] that the Senate disagree to the House amendment and agree to the conference asked by the House, and the conferees on the part of the Senate be appointed as follows: The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. Gurney], the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Saltonstall], the Senator from Oregon [Mr. Morse], the Senator from Maryland [Mr. Typings], and the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD].

Mr. LUCAS. Question.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question before the Senate has just been (Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!")

(At 1:45 a. m., June 19, the Senate was ill in session. The proceedings will be still in session. continued in the next issue of the Con-GRESSIONAL RECORD.)

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

FRIDAY, JUNE 18, 1948

(Legislative day of Tuesday, June 17, 1948)

The House met at 10 o'clock a. m., on the expiration of the recess.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following

Our Lord and our God, again we wait in the shadow of Thy holy presence, in which all alarms have been hushed. entreat Thee to teach us the best way to see, the best way to reason, and the best way to act in serving society and the State.

Give to the Congress a great measure of moral courage as it meets all pressing needs: grant that its achievements may bear the mark of a patriotic and convincing faith and that its decisions may become prophecies of a better tomorrow. In our Master's name and for His sake. Amen.

STILL FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A still further message from the Senate, by Mr. Frazier, its legislative clerk, announced that the Senate had passed. with amendments in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H. R. 6771. An act making appropriations for military functions administered by the National Military Establishment for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendments to the foregoing bill, requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. Gurney, Mr. Brooks, Mr. Reed, Mr. FERGUSON, Mr. BRIDGES, Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma, Mr. HAYDEN, and Mr. RUSSELL to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H. R. 6248. An act to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to stabilize prices of agricultural commodities; to amend section 22 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, reenacted by the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937: and for other purposes

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendments to the foregoing bill, requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. AIKEN, Mr. YOUNG, Mr. THYE, Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma, and Mr. ELLENDER to be the conferees on the part of the Senate

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to a joint resolution (S. J. Res. 117) entitled "Joint resolution providing for acceptance by the United States of America of the Constitution of the International Labor Organization Instrument of Amendment, and further authorizing an appropriation for payment of the United States share of the expenses of membership and for expenses of participation by the United States."

Mr. DAVIS of Georgia asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include some telegrams.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and include a statement on the thirtieth observance of Lithuania's independence day. I am informed by the Public Printer that this will exceed two pages of the RECORD and will cost $301.50, but I ask that it be printed notwithstanding that fact.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, notwithstanding the cost, the extension may be made.

There was no objection.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, several days ago I was granted permission to include in the Appendix of the RECORD a telegram from President Truman, the speech of Dr. Frank Kingdon, sundry newspaper articles and pieces of correspondence, and the speech of our distinguished colleague the gentleman from New York [Mr. Bloom], in connection with a testimonial dinner recently given the gentleman from New York [Mr. BLOOM! in New York City. I understand that only a portion of this material was included in the RECORD, and I ask unanimous consent that I again be permitted to extend my remarks in the RECORD as indicated, and that anything inserted in the RECORD in the previous extension be included in this insertion.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO EXTEND REMARKS AT THIS POINT

Mr. PETERSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

Mr. PETERSON. Mr. Speaker, our friends and colleagues from Florida, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. HENDRICKS] and the gentleman from Florida [Mr. PRICE | will leave Congress at this session. They have both made very capable, conscientious legislators and Representatives. It has been my pleasure to serve with both of them during the entire length of their service. They have both fully cooperated with the Florida dele-gation in matters relating to the entire State and the national welfare. They have both been on the alert to represent the best interests of their respective districts. Great districts with diversified interests, they have been well represented in a critical period requiring hard work.

The Florida delegation, while small in number, has worked together as a team. These two, our friends and colleagues, have been an important part of that team, Representative Hendricks having served on the Post Office and Post Roads and on the Appropriations Committees, and Representative PRICE on the Post Office and Post Roads, Naval Affairs, and Merchant Marine and Fisheries Commit-

Personally, and as chairman of the delegation from Florida, I rise to express my warm personal friendship and deep appreciation to them for their fine public service. We will miss them and we wish for them success and happiness in their future undertakings.

If I may depart for a moment from the use of formal language, I will say "Good luck, Little Joz. Good luck, Emory. You both have made a good record. You will be missed."

Mr. HAVENNER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD and include a prize-winning essay.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. HAVENNER. Mr. Speaker, the prize-winning essay in the contest conducted by Drew Pearson on Democracy was written by Rev. Alfred J. Fisk, of San Francisco. It is as follows:

Democracy, like good music, does not need argument; it needs rendition. The b way to make democracy live, is to live it. The best

People are too much concerned about democratic rights; too little about democratic responsibilities. But the rights imply duties, and become empty unless practiced. Democracy is not a fact; it is a task. To make it live, we must:

1. Vote in every election-using our best intelligence, studying propositions candidates.

2. Exercise our right of petition, letting our legislators and officers of government know our convictions.

3. Promote community meetings for democratic discussion of civic and world problems.

4. Work through "Good Government" leagues-exercising eternal vigilance that political performance match profession.

5. Do an honest day's work. Parasites or shirkers fail in their responsibility to a democratic society.

6. Treat every man in personal relationships as an equal-without prejudice and without exploitation.

7. Finally, democracy-like peace-is indivisible. The world cannot long continue half democratic and half totalitarian. To make democracy live here at home, our Nation and we as individuals must use our influence that it live throughout the world.

Democracy begins with the individual; it ends with the world. Each of us, you and I, your next-door neighbor and mine, must practice democracy. We must build little islands of functioning democratic life. The islands will grow and touch other islands, merging into greater units, becoming continents, becoming finally the world. If you and I, the last and least citizen, live democracy day in and day out, democracy will live.

HOUSING

Mr. KELLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. KELLEY. Mr. Speaker, all signs now point to this-the housing bill as proposed by the Republican leadership will contain no provision for slum clearance, no public housing, no veterans housing, no farm housing. The public interest is plainly ignored.

The legislative machinery is well lubricated to push through a bill minus these provisions. Has the leadership completely overlooked the disastrous effects of present housing conditions on our people? Thousands of families are forced to live in disease-ridden slums: other thousands compelled to crowd into one, two, or three rooms, with attendant unsanitary conditions. Children must spend much of the time out of doors for there is no room at home, thus fostering iuvenile delinquency. Thousands of juvenile delinquency. houses, even in our modern cities, have no inside toilets, running water, or electric lights. How now will this situation be relieved? Not by the Republican controlled Congress, I assure you.

Social justice will be attained some days for these people. The Nation will not and cannot permit such uncivilized conditions to exist. How about the health rate and death rate under such conditions? Do not the leaders recognize that our manpower strength is dependent upon healthful living conditions? Perhaps if all of our people could live under proper conditions of health and sanitation there would be no need to worry about communism. Much of our social unrest can be traced directly to slums, filthy and poorly constructed homes, and unsanitary conditions in and surrounding those homes. How long will it be until some united and earnest effort is made to eliminate all of such conditions? That is the question to be answered by the Republican leadership of the House. The people will answer it for them if no answer is forthcoming.

DEFENSE OF ALASKA

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alaska?

There was no objection.

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Speaker, the primary importance of Alaska in the plan of national defense is not properly appreciated even today. We are in effect making the same mistake we did in the years preceding the assault by Japan. Perhaps we are compounding that mistake. Then the United States did nothing at all to prepare this highly strategic area against aggression from Asia. Now we are doing just enough to make Alaska a more tempting prize than ever. Since the close of World War II we have done far too little. We can only hope that we will not be too late in taking those prudent steps which sound common sense advises must be taken without delay.

A defenseless Alaska imperils the entire United States. If our air bases in the Territory were seized by an enemy power every major city in the United States would be open to attack. The industrial East could be bombed at will, as could Detroit and Chicago and the great cities of the Pacific Northwest.

In some ways it might have been better that we did nothing in Alaska than to do the little we have accomplished in the last 3 years. Alaska now stands as tempting bait. Properly fortified, it could be an almost impregnable bulwark against attack from Asia and could provide the spring board from which a major offensive action could be launched.

There is imperative need not only for carrying out without further delay the program outlined by the Department of National Defense, but for enlarging that program. For months on end last winter construction work at the vital Alaska defense centers was halted because of lack of funds. Buildings needed now and which could have been completed and in use now are only skeletons because workmen had to be laid off when Army funds ran out. We cannot afford to gamble in that fashion.

Neither can we afford to concentrate all our efforts upon installations at Fairbanks and Anchorage. The Air Force has in Arctic Alaska only one field. It is located at Nome. Once seized by an enemy power it could be used as the base from which to launch crippling attacks upon our installations at Anchorage and Fairbanks. There is almost literally nothing to keep an enemy from across Bering Strait from entering Alaska in any numbers he chooses.

NEED FOR ARCTIC BASES

It ought to be a matter of high national policy to ring the Arctic with suitable defenses. In any event this would be desirable and even necessary. It becomes all the more so because of the possibility of the existence in the Arctic of an oil field of considerable dimensions. It is a matter of public record that the Navy is exploring the vast Naval Petroleum Reserve No. 4. Although no official announcement to that effect has been made, there is high hope that underneath the Arctic tundra, heretofore held valueless, may be discovered one of the great oil pools of the world. If oil is found there Alaska will be more than ever a prize. Now, aside from the small force based at Nome, there is no protection at all along the entire Arctic coast.

Construction there will take time; it will proceed under difficulties. We should not overestimate those difficulties. We should not rule out the Arctic as a land so hostile and forbidding in climate and terrain that men and machinery cannot operate there. It can be done. It has been done. On the Soviet side of Bering Strait great advances have been made in many fields. It would be foolhardy for us to fail to note this fact. It would be foolhardy for us to make assumptions which might prove false under the stress of war. Nations have perished because of their failure to be hardheaded and realistic. We must not commit any such mistake.

SIBERIAN DEVELOPMENT

I have said that the Soviet Government has not been remiss in proceeding actively with the development of Soviet Siberia. What has been accomplished there is simply astounding. In these latter days, of course, we do not know everything that is being done but the record is clear that a great industrial empire is rising across Bering Strait and that huge cities and great farming areas are growing up. This is in startling and sad contrast to our continuing neglect of Alaska;

Alaska is a rich land. I need not elaborate on that here. It has magnificent resources of ocean and land sufficient to support a great and prosperous population, yet its area of over 586,000 square miles contains fewer than 100,000 people. What is the situation in Siberia? There were to be found 14,000,000 persons in 1944 and it is estimated the population has increased by several million since then. In 1944 along the trans-Siberian railway there were seven cities with a population of more than 100,000 persons. It is obvious that in event of war producing urban and rural populations would be of major value militarily. In Alaska we have done far too little-in fact, we have done practically nothingto implement the national defense by attracting a civilian population to Alaska. The need for such action has been repeatedly emphasized by President Truman and by spokesmen for the armed services. The President was aware of the national interest when in his special message to Congress last month he urged adoption of an integrated program to provide for far wider utilization of Alaska resources by a far greater number of people.

The map shows why the United States cannot contemplate the loss of Alaska without contemplating at the same time the possibility—even the probability—that disastrous blows would be struck at the heart of this Nation.

PROXIMITY TO UNITED STATES

From Fairbanks, Alaska, it is 4,100 miles to Moscow. But it is only 2,790 miles from Fairbanks to Chicago, 3,270 to Washington, and 3,255 to New York. The distance from Fairbanks to Seattle is only 1,525 miles. Thus, it follows that while United States aircraft would in event of war be too far removed for direct strikes at the principal cities of Europe. the Alaska bases, once captured by an enemy power, could be turned against us with devastating effect. Bombers are now in use which can fly 8,000 miles with a load of 5 tons of bombs. Thus, no important city in the United States is removed from bombing range of Alaska. The urgency of the situation grows even more apparent when it is realized that until about 2 months ago there were no combat troops in Alaska at all. Now, some combat troops-numbering about 10,000—have been sent to Alaska for training purposes. This is a step forward, but does not meet the needs of the situation. Combat troops should be stationed permanently in Alaska in numbers sufficient to insure, insofar as such insurance can be provided, that the Alaska bases could be held even under a lightning attack. On February 1 of this year we had only 7,500 Army forces and 8,700 officers and men of the Air Force stationed in Alaska. These included Army elements stationed in the Aleutian Islands-and, as a matter of fact, those spread throughout the length and breadth of Alaska. Army troops are the service type and are largely for the support of the Air Force.

Construction is tremendously expensive in Alaska. The cost of erecting buildings has been a matter of proper concern to the appropriate committees of this Congress. Perhaps some savings could be effected. It has been suggested that gains might be registered if construction were by means of competitive bidding instead of by cost-plus contracts. However that may be, it can be fairly stated that no matter what the presentday costs are the money must be spent: It must be spent in greater volume than has been the case during the last 3 years. To do otherwise leaves Alaska defenseless and thus the Nation under constant threat. I suggest that if sufficient money is not immediately available and if time does not permit it is better to have temporary housing so combat troops can be stationed in Alaska in suitable numbers than to leave Alaska unarmed. First things must come first.

GENERAL TWINING CONCERNED

In a recent magazine article, Lt. Gen. N. F. Twining, commander in chief of the United States Army in Alaska, called attention to the needs and problems of Alaska when he wrote:

Alaska and the Aleutians must be retained as the forward bastion of our defense. Bases for long-range heavy-bomber units must be developed, inasmuch as Alaska is primarily a theater for long-range, heavy-bomber operations. These bases must be adequately staffed, even though there is a current overall shortage of personnel that seriously affects all planning for the peacetime Air Force.

No effort to conquer the problems pre-

No effort to conquer the problems presented by Alaska can be too great. The late Gen. Billy Mitchell said, "Whoever holds Alaska will hold the world." To fail to develop this potential would leave a critical gap in our national defense. Alaska retains a defense value that is both psychological and real. Alaska has been United States territory for 80 years. Americans anywhere would be as quick to resent an aggressive attack on Alaska as they were on Pearl Harbor, or as they would be on any part of the continental United States. Such an attack on Alaska would be certain cause for war.

The average concept of Alaska and the Arctic is continuous cold, icebergs, glaciers, Eskimos, and generally uncomfortable living conditions. The people of the United States should be informed of the fact that this is not an accurate picture. While it is true that winter months are in some areas severe and really Arctic, it is also true that occasionally temperatures and conditions exist which are experienced as far south as the middle United States.

Students of geopolitics have long been familiar with the teachings of Sir Halford Mackinder, who reasoned that whichever nation dominates a certain land mass (which he called the heartland) lying partly in Europe and partly in Asia, would be able eventually to control the whole world. More recent geopolitical theory speaks of two heartlands—the one designated by Mackinder, and another in North America. The shortest distance between the two "heartlands" of the world is across the Arctic regions. Our Arctic frontier has become, therefore, our primary defense coasideration. Alaska, the northernmost portion of our Nation, thus assumes a place of primary importance in the strategy of national security.

Referring to some needs of the moment, General Twining wrote:

Logistical requirements in Alaska are many. Pipe lines are greatly needed. The existing railroad must be improved. New railways and highways are needed. Alaska has less than 3,000 miles of highways and roads in an area twice the size of Texas. These 3,000 miles would be called secondary roads in the continental United States. They could not sustain any major operation.

ALASKA UNPREPARED

My good friend Paul Herring, of Kodiak, Alaska, in a talk made before the Rotary Club of that community not long ago dealt in facts when he said:

With all the rough talk that we are making in the diplomatic world today are we prepared to back it up if war should be forced on us tomorrow? Of course, we are not in a position to answer this question for the rest of the world but our first and immediate concern is for Alaska, and our answer to the above question is a positive and emphatic "No; we are not prepared!" It is a fact that it would take no more than two or three thousand paratroopers properly equipped to descend upon and capture or destroy every military or naval establishment in Alaska today. This could be accomplished in 24 hours or less.

Paul Herring's statement was made before combat troops were sent to Alaska for training. Despite their presence, scattered as they are and numerically Despite their presence, weak, it follows that no major thrust would be required by an enemy to take over Alaska.

William L. Baker, editor and publisher of the Ketchikan, Alaska, Chronicle, recently wrote five enlightening articles concerning the lack of preparation in Alaska in a military way:

Geography has placed Alaska in a posi-

Wrote Mr. Baker-

to make it a probable battleground in any war between the two great remaining powers of the world.

There are no Maginot lines; no allies to hold the foe while we prepare.

A high officer in the Army Air Forces admitted to me recently that the construction program won't be completed at the present rate of progress for 8 to 10 years, and at that time it will be worthless. "How," he asked, "can we start building underground facilities when we don't get enough money to maintain a handful of air bases and to build houses for our personnel?"

The Bering Sea today is the hemisphere's frontier, and it boasts not a single first-class airfield along its thousand miles of coast

WE MUST ACT NOW

Maj. Gen. J. H. Atkinson, commander of the Air Forces in Alaska, in an address made before the Veterans of Foreign Wars encampment at Seward last month was quoted as having said:

The Army is not in Alaska to fan the figmes of war, but Alaska is the strategic outpost, and the Army must guard against the area taking on a false sense of security

Aside from the immediate strengthening of military forces General Atkinson called for improved railroads and highways, proper housing, adequate port, dock, and warehouse installations and modern airports.

All of us can hope and pray that existing tensions will be wiped away and that this troubled world may have a long period of peace. But since none of us can peer into the future clearly we cannot leave everything to hope. We must make prudent preparations for that which might occur. The desire of the Ameri-can people for peace will never, we hope, again be accompanied by a lack of preparation for defense against an aggressive power. Since we must prepare and since man's inventive genius has narrowed time and space, we must make it sure and positive that our own land cannot be seized from us to provide the base for an attack on these States.

I recall that my distinguished predecessor as Delegate to Congress, Judge Anthony J. Dimond, called on the Nation in the early 1930's to fortify Alaska from the aggression he feared even then from the Japanese. He urged that a hundred million dollars be spent on naval fortifications in the Territory. His pleas went unheard. Not one penny was appropriated. Had that work been done then, it is highly unlikely the Japanese could ever have seized the outer Aleutians. They were dislodged at tremendous cost in money and American lives. Before the war, Delegate Dimond urged, too, that the Army garrison in Alaska, numbering then less than 300 officers and men, be expanded. But nothing was done. So when war did come, defenses which should have been built long before had to be constructed speedily at much greater cost and with much less efficiency than would have been the case otherwise. Had the Japanese desired to, they could have captured Alaska just as easily as it can be taken now.

We cannot afford to make the same mistake twice. We must realize and we must never forget that Alaska is the first and most important line in this Nation's defense. With it, bases would be ours to insure victory. Without it, we could be defeated. We must act and act now.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Knutson] may extend his remarks in the RECORD regardless of the limit of cost reviewing the work of the Committee on Ways and Means, which he feels will be useful to each Member of the House. The cost will be about $450.

Mr. Speaker, I also ask unanimous consent that I may extend my remarks in regard to the work of the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. KNUTSON ].

Mr. Speaker, I also ask unanimous consent that each member of the Committee on Ways and Means may extend his remarks with reference to the work of Mr. Knutson as chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the several requests are granted.

There was no objection.

Mr. BYRNE of New York asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an editorial from the New York Times entitled "Housing, a Party Test."

SPECIAL ORDER GRANTED

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may address the House for 10 minutes today, following the disposition of business on the Speaker's desk and the conclusion of special orders heretofore entered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. GAVIN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. D'EWART asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in two instances, one concerning rural electrification and the other to include a letter concerning national park concessions.

Mr. JAVITS asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in two instances.

Mrs. BOLTON asked and was given permission to extend her remarks in the RECORD in two instances.

Mr. FOOTE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. HAGEN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an article on the need for a strong merchant marine.

Mr. PHILBIN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. HOLIFIELD asked and was given permission to extend his remarks.

Mr. SIKES asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a timely editorial from the New York Times.

Mr. LESINSKI asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in reference to the Taft-Hartley

Mr. MILLER of California asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include therewith certain editorial and newspaper articles.

Mr. WOODRUFF asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an article by Samuel B. Pettengill.

PERMISSION TO EXTEND REMARKS AT THIS POINT

Mr. MATHEWS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey

There was no objection.

Mr. MATHEWS. Mr. Speaker, I suggest this motto for self-styled liberals and progressives, "Never do yourself anything you can get the Government to. do for you."

MAKING APPROPRIATIONS FOR MILITARY FUNCTIONS

Mr. ENGEL of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 6771), making appropriations for military functions administered by the National Military Establishment for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, and for other purposes, with amendments of the Senate thereto, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the genleman from Michigan? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and appoints the following conferees: Messrs. Engel of Michigan, Case of South Dakota, TIBBOTT, SCRIVNER, KERR, MAHON, and NORRELL.

SELECTIVE SERVICE ACT OF 1948

The SPEAKER. The unfinished business is the reading of the engrossed copy of the bill (H. R. 6401) to provide for the common defense by increasing the strength of the armed forces of the United States and for other purposes, which was requested by the gentleman from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO].

The Clerk will read.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my request for the reading of the engrossed copy.

The bill was read the third time by

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

Mr. PHILBIN. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. PHILBIN. I am, Mr. Speaker. SPEAKER. The gentleman

The Clerk will report the motion to recommit

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. PHILBIN moves to recommit the bill R. 6401) to the Committee on Armed Services.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion to recommit.

The previous question was ordered. The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion to recommit. The question was taken; and the Speaker announced the "noes" seemed to have it.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that there is no quorum present, and I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. Obviously, a quorum is not present.

The roll call is automatic.

The Doorkeeper will close the doors; the Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members; and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 125, nays 283, not voting 22, as follows:

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to House Resolution 671, the Chair lays before the House the Senate bill (S. 2655) to provide for the common defense by increasing the strength of the armed forces of the United States, including the Reserve components thereof, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out all after the enacting clause of the Senate bill and substitute the House bill H. R. 6401, as amended.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Andrews of New York moves to strike out all after the enacting clause of the bill S. 2655 and insert the provisions of H. R. 6401, as amended.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Speaker, on that I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered. The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to. The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the Senate bill.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the Senate bill S. 2655, with a House amendment, insist on the amendment of the House, and ask for a conference with the Senate, and that the Speaker appoint conferees.

The Clerk read the title of the bill. The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. ANDREWS]?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the resolution, House Resolution 690, which I send to the desk

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the House insist upon its amendment to S. 2655, ask a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes, and that the Speaker immediately appoint conferees.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, a second is considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule, the gentleman from New York [Mr. An-DREWS] is recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO] is recognized for minutes.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO].

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO] desire to use any of his time?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman vield?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I yield.

Mr. RICH. If this resolution is agreed to, when the bill goes to conference will the conferees have a right to agree to the Senate bill, without coming back to the House for instructions?

The SPEAKER. The Chair, of course, cannot anticipate what action the conferees would take or what action the Senate might take.

Mr. RICH. Suppose the House conferees agree to everything that the Senate wants, without having the amendment containing the provisions of the House bill in the legislation, would they not be required to come back here?

The SPEAKER. Of course, the gentleman understands that whatever the conferees do, they must report back to the House for further action. Their recommendations must be supported by the House later.

Mr. FOLGER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I yield.

Mr. FOLGER. The last I could hear about the motion was: "And with an amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole." I understand several amendments were adopted in the Committee of the Whole. I wish to know if the Shafer amendment will be a part of this bill.

The SPEAKER. The so-called Shafer amendment is a part of the House amendment to the Senate bill; that is

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, I am not going to take the time allotted to me except to point out that the House has voted by substantial majorities certain amendments. I think the Managers on the part of the House at the conference should feel duty bound to insist on the amendments the House voted into this bill.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Speaker, will the

gentleman yield?
Mr. MARCANTONIO. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. SHORT. I merely wish to repeat what I said in general debate yesterday: I know I am going to be a lonely figure, I am going to be alone. My hands are tied, but I will fight over there. And then they will bring it back and throw it into your laps. I hope that you have enough conscience, and courage, and conviction to rise up and vote on that conference report when it is returned to

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I yield.

Mr. RANKIN. If the gentleman from New York wants to do so, he can offer a motion to instruct the conferees to stand by the House bill.
Mr. FOLGER. Mr. Speaker, will the

gentleman yield?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. FOLGER. As I remember it, an amendment was adopted by the committee in anticipation of the Shafer amendment. Will it likewise be in the bill?

The SPEAKER. All the amendments adopted in the House will go to the conference.

Mr. FOLGER. All right. They will have a scrap over there.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, is a motion to instruct conferees to stand by the House amendments in order at this time?

The SPEAKER. The Chair will say that such a motion is not in order at this

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I yield.

Mr. SHORT. I ask for this time only to say that whenever the gentleman from Mississippi comes to the rescue and aid of the gentleman from New York, Mr. Marcantonio, the days of miracles are not over.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the

gentleman yield?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, before I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi, may I say that the gentleman from New York is in need neither of being rescued nor of a miracle.

I yield to the gentleman from Missis-

Mr. RANKIN. I wish to say that if the gentleman wishes to do so, as soon as the previous question is ordered it is in order to offer a motion to instruct conferees. That is the rule of the House that has always been followed.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will inform the gentleman from Mississippi that there is no previous question to be ordered, that the House is now considering under a suspension of the rules House Resolution 690, which carries the following provision:

That the House insist upon its amendments to the bill of the Senate, S. 2655, ask for a conference with the Senate on the disagree ing votes of the two Houses, and that the Speaker immediately appoint conferees.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. RANKIN. It has always been the rule and it is the rule now.

· The SPEAKER. But this is under a suspension of the rules and it would not be in order after the adoption of the pending resolution to offer such a motion

Mr. RANKIN. Then it is changing the rules of the House.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER. The question is. Shall the rules be suspended and the resolution passed?

The question was taken and, twothirds having voted in favor thereof, the motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Chair appoints the following conferees: Messrs. An-DREWS of New York, SHORT, COLE of New York, Bates of Massachusetts, Vinson, Brooks, and KILDAY.

By unanimous consent, the proceedings by which the House bill was passed were vacated and that bill was laid on the

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM FOR THE DAY

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute in order to make an inquiry of the gentleman from Indiana.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I am wondering if the gentleman from Indiana can tell us what the program is for the remainder of the day or at least some of it.

Mr. HALLECK. I can at least give enough to start us off, which will keep us busy for some time.

As I understand it, there are several conference reports ready for action and probably they should be disposed of first. Then it is proposed to call up some measures under suspensions and they will be called up approximately as follows:

First. A bill to extend the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Second. The housing bill.

Third. Increase in postal pay and rates.

Fourth. Air parcel post.

Fifth. The so-called revolving fund matter which has to do with cotton and wool for export to Japan, which bill is from the Committee on the Armed Services

There are five measures. Other measures may be called up under suspension during the day if we have time and if other matters do not intervene.

THE HONORABLE FRANCK R. HAVENNER, OF CALIFORNIA

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I am glad to announce that a black blot upon the records of a former committee of the House of Representatives has been officially erased during the present session of Congress. On June 15 the Committee on Un-American Activities, by unanimous vote, ordered that testimony attacking the reputation of Representative Franck R. Havenner, of California, which was given at a secret meeting of a subcommittee of the old Dies committee, held in Beaumont, Tex., on July 16, 1940. be expunged from the records of the committee

Thus a regrettable chapter in the history of the so-called Dies committee has been obliterated by official action.

During the summer of 1940, while the Seventy-sixth Congress was in session and while Representative HAVENNER, a Member of that Congress, was at his post of duty here in the National Capital. he received information that an attempt would be made to give certain derogatory testimony concerning him before the Dies committee. Mr. HAVENNER informs me that he went to see the chairman of the committee, Representative Dies, of Texas, and inquired whether there was any truth in this report. Mr. Dies replied that he had heard nothing about it. Mr. HAVENNER then requested Chairman Dies to notify him if anyone attempted to give any testimony concerning him before the committee, in order that he might appear before the committee and exercise his right as a Member of Congress to testify in his own behalf. Dies assured him that this would be done.

After talking to the chairman, Mr. HAVENNER visited Representative Dempsey, of New Mexico, the ranking member of the Dies committee, and Representative Voorhis, of California, also a member of the committee, and made the same requests of them. Both also assured Representative HAVENNER that they would notify him immediately if they learned that any testimony concerning him was to be heard by the committee.

Now comes the most amazing feature of this regrettable episode in congressional history.

Not until more than 4 years had elapsed did Representative HAVENNER learn that, shortly after his conversation with Chairman Dies, a meeting of a subcommittee of the Dies committee, which was not public, was held in Beaumont, Tex. At that meeting, which was attended, as Mr. HAVENNER states, only by one member of the committee, the secretary of the committee, Robert E. Stripling, and the then investigator for the committee, James H. Stedman, a witness named John L. Leech testified under oath that it was his understanding that Representative HAVENNER had been and was at that time a member of the Communist Party.

The first time that Congressman Havenner knew that this meeting had been held on July 16, 1940, and that damaging testimony concerning him had been taken under oath, was when political advertisements, containing excerpts from the testimony given by the witness Leech were printed in San Francisco newspapers in October 1944, during Mr. HAVENNER'S campaign for reelection to Congress

Mr. Havenner never received any notification from Mr. Dies or from any other member or employee of the committee, or from anyone else, that this meeting was to be held in Beaumont, Tex., on July 16, 1940, and he was never given any opportunity to appear before the committee to refute this damaging testimony.

The record of the subcommittee hearing, which was not a public meeting, held in Beaumont, Tex., on July 16, 1940, was kept on the sccret file of the committee for more than 4 years and was never officially released by the Dies committee for publication.

Just how the supporters of Mr. Haven-NER's opponent in the 1944 campaign for Congress learned about the secret subcommittee meeting and obtained the record of its proceedings for publication has never been officially disclosed.

When Mr. Havenner was returned to Congress in January 1945, he took the floor of the House of Representatives and denounced the testimony of the witness Leech as perjury in its entirety. On that occasion every member of the old Dies committee who was present arose and stated that they had never heard of the secret subcommittee meeting held in Beaumont, Tex., on July 16, 1940, and had never known anything about the testimony concerning Mr. HAVENNER until he made his speech on the floor of the House.

When Mr. Havenner had concluded his statement, many Members of the House of Representatives voluntarily arose and expressed their confidence in Mr. Havenner's patriotism and integrity.

Not a single Member of the House attempted to condone this tectimony given in an attempt to smear their fellow Member, and many Members denounced it as an outrageous proceeding.

I participated in the discussion on the floor of the House on that occasion, and, in the course of my remarks, I said:

There should be an investigation of the conspiracy to smear a gentleman who was a former Member of Congress and who is a Member of Congress today. The gentleman from California is the one who happened to be in that position today, but it might have been any other Member of this House.

If that testimony was false it means that there was a conspiracy among certain individuals in California to smear the gentleman for a particular purpose. It seems to me to be a matter of interest to each and every Member of the House and I think, speaking as an individual, if anything is done that the committee should go further and if they do find falsehoods, look into them. They will find falsehoods, for the gentleman has denied that the statements were true. They should investigate the conspiracy because it concerns every Member of this body.

As far as the gentleman himself is concerned, I have served with him, and I believe I speak the sentiments of every Member of this body. The gentleman may differ with me on this or that question, or differ with some of us who serve with him, but because we differ on public questions does not mean that we are not good Americans; it means simply a difference in our individual conscience and our individual judgment as to the best interests of the country. We may disagree as to judgment, but every man here has a love of America and is actuated by the same high patriotic motives as the gentlemen from California, who enjoys the confidence of every Member on each side of the aisle, as far as I know, who serves with him. I rise particularly to make this contribution because the gentleman from California | Mr. HAVENNER | enjoys our respect and confidence and because we recognize that he is both honorable and trustworthy.

The conviction which I expressed in these remarks back in 1945 that this whole unsavory affair indicated that there had been a conspiracy to misuse the privileged authority of a congressional committee in order to defame a Member of Congress is strengthened by certain information which Representative HAVENNER has recently given me. He states that with the permission of Chairman Thomas he talked with the clerk of the Committee on Un-American Activities, Mr. Stripling, who was present at the secret subcommittee meeting of the Dies committee down in Beaumont, Tex., on July 16, 1940.

Mr. HAVENNER asked the clerk of the committee who had arranged to bring the witness, Leech, whose home was in Los Angeles, out to this secret meeting in Beaumont, Tex., to give perjured testimony against a Member of Congress. The clerk, Mr. Stripling, replied that it was the duty of the investigator, James H. Stedman, to produce witnesses for the committee hearings. When Mr. HAVEN-NER asked to see Stedman, he was informed that the former investigator had not been employed by the committee for several years. Congressman HAVENNER inquired where Stedman was located, and was informed that after he left the committee he was employed by the Honolulu Oil Co., in Los Angeles, and was still in the employ of that company.

The President of the Honolulu Oil Co. is Mr. Albert C. Mattei, a gentleman who has been very active in Republican politics in northern California for many vears. Congressman HAVENNER states that Mr. Mattei has been the chief financial and political supporter of every Republican candidate for Congress who has run against Havenner since our colleague was first elected to this House back in 1936. Mr. Mattei was the chief financial and political backer of Mr. HAVENNER'S Republican opponent for Congress in 1940, when the secret subcommittee meeting of the Dies committee was held down in Beaumont, Tex. Mr. Mattei was again the chief financial and political backer of Mr. HAVENNER's opponent for Congress in 1944, when the defamatory perjured testimony taken at the secret subcommittee down in Beaumont, Tex., first saw the light of day in a political advertisement designed to defeat Mr. HAVENNER as a candidate for Congress.

And now it develops that when former Investigator Stedman, who is reported by the clerk of the Committee on Un-American Activities to have produced the witness who gave the defamatory perjured testimony against Congressman HAVENNER at the secret subcommittee meeting down in Beaumont, Tex., severed his connection with that committee, he was employed by the Honolulu Oil Co., of which Mr. Mattei is the president.

I leave this astounding sequence of facts to the judgment of Congress and the American people.

Congressman Havenner is one of the ablest Members of the Congress, sincere, courageous, a fighter for the people, and loyal to the best interests of the people, he is a credit to the people of his district. Congressman Havenner is a great American.

AGRICULTURAL ACT OF 1948

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 6248) to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to stabilize prices of agricultural commodities; to amend section 22 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, reenacted by the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937; and for other purposes, with Senate amendment thereto, disagree to the Senate amendment, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none and appoints the following conferees: Messrs. Hope, August H. An-Dresen, Johnson of Illinois, Murray of Wisconsin, Flannagan, Cooley, and Pace.

PERMISSION TO EXTEND REMARKS AT THIS POINT

Mr. BENNETT of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from

There was no objection.

Mr. BENNETT of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, this morning I voted for the bill to provide for a temporary draft but I did so with considerable skepticism and reluctance. The wisdom of peacetime conscription in a free country is always open to serious challenge. It is a dangerous power to extend in time of peace except upon the most stringent and limited terms. In my judgment, its necessity can only be justified on the need for sufficient military manpower to adequately defend our country against attack from any potential aggressor. I base my support of this measure on the fact that the President, as Commander in Chief, and our military experts have advised us that our manpower in the armed forces is inadequate for this purpose and that it cannot be obtained by voluntary procedures.

The evidence is abundant that our Military Establishment has not given the voluntary system of induction a fair trial. But it is not difficult to understand that a voluntary system can never be successful when the men in charge of such a program condemn it in advance and doom it to failure. As long as military men have that attitude, there is little or no chance for a voluntary program to succeed.

It should be definitely understood that this legislation is temporary and limited in duration to the period needed to fill our basic minimum manpower requirements. Such a system has no place in a free government in peacetime except upon that limited basis. So I have supported this legislation, Mr. Speaker, because it is temporary in nature and because I think that we must be adequately prepared to defend ourselves against outside aggression and thus be able to insure the preservation of our country and the safety of our people. But I definitely want to be on record as opposing the use of peacetime conscription as a means of implementing our foreign policy. If I thought we were putting additional men in uniform for the purpose of sending them to the far-flung corners of the earth, to settle other peoples' problems or fight other nations' wars, then I would be irrevocably opposed to it. The average American has no objection to being called at any time to assist in the defense of his country. The real fear of our potential soldiers is the constant uncertainty of whether their services will be used in the defense of this country or whether they will be sent to some distant land to become involved in the settlement of disputes which have nothing to do with our national security or defense. No one can blame an American soldier for wanting some assurance that he will not again be sent to foreign battlefields. If Congress does not give him that assurance, to whom can he look for it? Those who have conducted our foreign policy since the beginning of the last war have made one tragic blunder after another. This policy has been costly in dollars. Let us pray that it will never again be costly in American lives.

Mr. Speaker, this country cannot afford another global war. The last one cost over $360,000,000,000 and left us with a national debt of over two hundred and fifty billion. Another such war would not only impoverish and bankrupt this Nation, it would completely destroy our freedom and the system of government which protects it. It would annihilate the only republic on the face of the earth where human rights and dignity come ahead of the state. We can never again afford to risk this priceless heritage by engaging in another global war.

No single nation can shoulder the social, economic, and military problems of the rest of the world and expect to survive. The United States cannot do it and survive. Yet, step by step we are trying to assume that responsibility. Day by day in ever increasing numbers other nations are saddling us with their social, economic, and military burdens. If we do not soon discontinue this kind of program we will eventually find ourselves in the same desperate situation as those we are seeking to save.

Our foreign policy and our military power should be dedicated wholly and solely to the preservation of our own national security and welfare. If we use the military and economic prestige of the United States for these purposes we will be in a better position to help maintain world peace, without endangering the solvency or stability of our own Government-and without engaging in other people's wars.

Mr. REEVES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD and include letters.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mis-

There was no objection.

Mr. REEVES. Mr. Speaker, in time of great national peril we must depend chiefly on able and loyal military and naval leaders for our security. It is more important today than ever before that the United States be assured that its future requirements for well-qualified and highly trained officers shall be adequately met.

Not long ago my attention was called to an editorial entitled "A Challenge to Service Schools," which summarized the criticisms directed at the United States Military and Naval Academies because of their short enrollments and unfilled vacancies. Under existing procedure, in a large measure the fact that there are unfilled vacancies in classes at the Academies may very well be the responsibility of Congress itself.

I sent the editorial in question to the Secretary of the Army with a request for his comments. His letter constituted so excellent a statement of the position of the Department and the Academy authorities that under the leave which has been granted I include its text together with a further exchange of letters between us. They are as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE ARMY, Washington, D. C., November 10, 1947. Hon. Albert L. Reeves, Jr., House of Representatives.

DDAR MR. REEVES: In further reply to your letter of October 6, 1947, I would like to outline the principal reasons, as they appear to the Department of the Army, for the present understrength at West Point.

Your letter refers to the article in the Atlantic Monthly, written by Ralph Lee Smith, a former midshipman at the Naval Academy. I know that you did not expect me to comment directly on this article, but I do wish to comment briefly on references to it in the editorial in the Kansas City Star, since it might be inferred that the complaints of this former midshipman about instruction and traditions might apply to the military acad-

The Army has maintained vigilant interest in the instruction at West Point, and has not relied solely on its own judgment there-of. In 1945 the Secretary of War appointed a board to criticize the proposed curriculum and the transition from the 3-year to a 4-year course. The board was composed of Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of Massa-chusetts Institute of Technology, Dr. James P. Baxter III, president of Williams College, and several distinguished general officers of the Army, including Lt. Gen. Troy H. Middleton, comptroller of Louisiana State University. In their report, the consultants commented most favorably upon the methods of instruction, the progressiveness of the teaching staff, and the modern equipment in the academic department. The program of physical education and intramural athletics drew their praise. The general conclusion was that the academic program at the academy was thoroughly sound and provided the balanced and liberal education in the arts and sciences directed in the Department of the Army's statement of the academy's mission. The curriculum has been broadened to cover recent developments in nuclear physics and electronics, and the course in leadership increased to 4 years. Additional professors have been authorized by Congress, and appointed. The ratio of instructors to students has been maintained at a level permitting individual instruction. Daily recitations by each cadet reveal either proficiency or deficiency in each phase of instruction, thus eliminating mediocre efforts in midterm and cramming for final examinations. Weekly standings posted on bulle-tin board and monthly reports to parents keep both informed of the cadet's progress.

Tradition has ever been part of military service, and properly so. That it is an important factor in the life of the West Point cadet is undeniable. The honor code, developed and adhered to by generations of cadets, is the outstanding tradition at the Military Academy, and, with others, has served to inculcate in these young men the acceptance of "duty, honor, country" as a personal code. This spiritual indoctrination is no less important than the technical, cultural, and physical development of cadets. Civilian schools have their traditions and customs; and if those at the Military Academy demand more of the student in fortitude, self-control, and determination, it only reflects the striving for an ideal of character, courage, self-denial, forthrightness, and physical stamina that is expected of the Regular Army officer. These traditions place all cadets on a common footing, regardless of personal fortune or social background. They serve to identify weaklings and reveal to themselves and to the authorities those who are unable to conform to group living under strenuous circumstances, or who are temperamentally incapable of submission to authority.

The reasons, in the opinion of the Department of the Army, for the decrease in the number of applicants for admission to the Military Academy and the consequent understrength in the Corps of Cadets, are set forth below under six main headings

1. American economic conditions: Inflated earnings increase the attraction of civilian pursuits, while rising living costs decrease interest in an education that involves an obligation to serve many years at relatively low fixed incomes. Because of high earnings throughout the war years, many parents who would otherwise be eager to obtain West Point appointments for their sons, with education at Government expense, have accumulated sufficient money to pay for a civilian education.

2. The apathy of the public toward military service: The apathy of the public toward military service that became apparent as soon as actual combat was over has adversely affected the number of applicants for West Point, just as it has affected the success of the recruiting program. It is reflected in a slight increase in resignations from the Mili-tary Academy as well as in a decrease in the number of applications for admission. derstand the understrength at the Military Academy has a parallel at the Naval Academy, and that the reasons therefor are believed to be similar to those affecting the Military Academy. History has repeated itself, inasmuch as the Military Academy and Naval Academy had similar experiences following A large proportion of the World War I. young men within the age limits for admission to West Point have already had Army service, and their attitude toward a military career has been shaped by their war experi-

3. GI bill of rights: Many men within the age limits for admission to the Military Academy are entitled, by reason of military service, to the education benefits of the GI bill of rights. They have unlimited choice of subjects and wide selectivity of schools, without obligation for military service after grad-This applies particularly to students who had completed one or more years at a civilian college or university prior to entering military service and for which they would not receive credit upon admission to the Military Academy. The advancement of Military Academy. The advancement of science makes specialized study more essential to the successful engineer, nuclear physicist, doctor, and other professional men, and in the public mind renders a military edu-cation less attractive than formerly. While the curriculum at West Point has been broadened to include new developments in science, this fact is not completely known to the general public. Students with serious scientific ambitions do not see sufficient opportunity for West Point graduates to pursue specialized scientific studies at advanced technological schools.

4. Opportunities for obtaining Regular Army commission by other methods: Legislation recently passed by Congress increased the commissioned officer strength of the Regular Army to 50,000. It has been necessary, within a short period of time, to devise procurement methods to fill this increase. Many men who would be qualified and normally interested in attending the Military Academy have had an opportunity to obtain a Regular Army commission through these methods. While no figures are avail-able as to the actual number of possible candidates for the Military Academy who were eliminated by the above cause, there is every reason to believe that the number was substantial. It is not unnatural that these men interested in a military career as commissioned officers should choose these other methods, which permit them to receive their Regular Army commission quickly and often in a higher rank than the second lieutenant's commission they would receive after four strenuous years at the Military Academy.

5. Increase in foreign service assignments: The duties imposed upon the Army by postconditions require much amounts of foreign service, often in very undesirable areas throughout the world. This is very distasteful to many men, in considering their future. Prior to the war, the years spent by an officer on foreign serv-ice covered a relatively short period of his career and usually were spent in areas which permitted him comfortable living and climatic conditions.

6. Hold-over of appointments of 1947 until 1948: Every year some Members of Congress notify The Adjutant General of their intention to carry their vacancies over to the following year, which is done either to reserve appointments for certain individuals or for lack of suitable applicants. There was a marked increase in hold-overs from 1947 to 1943, as compared with previous years, but no break-down as to the reasons therefor is available. The Congressmen do not always specify the reason, but where reasons are given, they generally indicate a decrease in applications or lowering of qualifications of applicants, thus reflecting the factors mentioned in previous paragraphs.

It is believed that the shortage that existed in the class entering the Military Academy in 1947 was brought more plainly to public attention because of the contrast of the present shortage to the abundance of applications for attendance at the Military Academy during the war years. During that period, there was never a dearth of candidates, available vacancies being applied for by many more times the number of men than could possibly be admitted. As a result, the Department of the Army was flooded with applications and the competition was keen. During the war years, the operation of the Selective Service System served to swell the number of applicants for the Military Academy. Under a ruling made by Selective Service in 1942, candidates holding appointments to the Military Academy were not liable for induction during the pendency of such appointments. New appointments for unsuccessful candidates could be obtained for each succeeding year that the applicant was within the age limit for admission. Many faced with the necessity of military service, sought appointments in a sincere desire to qualify for commissioned service. However, hundreds of others are believed to have taken advantage of this opportunity for deferment as a means of avoiding or postponing induction and possible exposure to hazardous duty. This painful fact was brought clearly to light when the suspension of the draft brought with it a complete reversal of the motivating interest in obtaining appointments. This was also reflected in the number of resignations from the Academy, and in declinations of appoint-

It is desired to present certain information relative to resignations at the Military Academy. In the years from 1921 to 1945, inclusive, resignations from the Military Academy were a minor factor in the number of vacancies, averaging only 29 a year. Immediately following both world wars, however, resignations jumped to a high figure, contributing in large measure to the total number of vacancies. Following are figures for the 2 years following each war:

1919: One hundred and forty resignations, or 10.5 percent of the authorized strength of 1,334

1920: One hundred and two resignations, or 7.6 percent of the authorized strength of 1,334.

1946: One hundred and eighty-two resignations, or 7.3 percent of the authorized strength of 2,496.

1947: One hundred and fifty-two resignations, or 6.1 percent of the authorized strength of 2,496.

In 1921 and 1922 resignations dropped to a very low figure, possibly as a result of the depressed economy of that period. It is believed that resignations from the Academy in 1948 and 1949 will decline from the 1946-47 figures, but in view of existing economic and political conditions, an accurate forecast is impossible.

In reply to your quest'on about legisla-tion authorizing the filling of vacancies, sec-tion 2 of the act of Congress approved June 3, 1942, authorizes the filling of vacancies occasioned by the nonuse of appointments, whether through failure to pass entrance examination or otherwise. Section 2 pro-

"When on the date of admission of a new class the total number of cadets is below the number authorized, the Secretary of War may bring the corps of cadets to full strength by appointing qualified alternates and can-didates recommended by the academic board, two-thirds thereof from qualified alternates and one-third thereof from qualified candidates (competitors): Provided, That any appointment made under this section shall be an additional appointment and shall not constitute an appointment otherwise author-ized by law."

The only candidates who are eligible for consideration are those who have been found mentally and physically qualified in connection with an appointment held for admission on the first week day of July of the year con-cerned. No application is necessary for consideration by the academic board since all candidates who are fully qualified but who are not entitled to admission under the terms of their appointments are rated relatively according to general merit. The academic board, in determining the general merit, studies the records of these candidates and makes its selection based upon consideration of the academic grades and other pertinent factors which affect the qualifications of the various candidates to become officers of the Army. In spite of the provisions of section 2, it was impossible to fill all vacancies in 1947. It was found on July 1, 1947, after all other admissions were authorized, that the corps of cadets was operating at a strength of 2,227, or 269 less than its authorized strength. However, since there were only 14 qualified competitors left on the lists of competitive candidates, only that number of competitors and only 28 alternates (thereby maintaining the one-third, twothirds ratio) could be admitted under the provisions of the law cited. Therefore, 227 vacancies remained unfilled (269 less 42). Action was recently taken by the Department of the Army to authorize the nomination of four candidates instead of three for each vacancy for enlisted men of the Regular Army and National Guard. Similar action had already been taken for all other sources of admission under which the number of nominations for each vacancy were limited. This will increase the number of qualified competitors, thus making the provisions of section 2 more effective in filling any va-cancies which may exist in an entering class

Your interest in the United States Military Academy is greatly appreciated. If there is any further information you desire, I shall be happy to obtain it for you.

Sincerely yours,

Hon. KENNETH C. ROYALL, Secretary of the Army, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. SECRETARY: Under date of November 11 my secretary acknowledged re-ceipt of your excellent letter of November 10, written in reply to my inquiry of October 6, 1947, concerning the reported understrength at the Military Academy at West Point.

You have answered my question completely. Much of the information and many of the comments which you included are particularly illuminating and would be of considerable interest to other Members of the House and to the public as well. For that reason I would like to include the text of your letter in the Congressional Record, but I shall not do so unless it is agreeable to you. Do you have any objection to its publication?

During almost 4 years of service in the Army in World War II my observation and association with officers of the Regular Establishment gave me a high regard for the Academy and its traditions, and in my pres ent position I feel keenly the responsibility to strengthen and encourage public interest and confidence in its work.

Sincerely yours,

ALBERT L. REEVES, Jr.

House of Representatives.

DEAR MR. REEVES: Thank you for your letter of November 22, 1947, expressing your high regard for the United States Military Academy and its traditions, with which I most heartily agree.

I would be very glad to have the letter to which you refer published in the Con-gressional Record, and I would also appreciate the publication of your letter of November 22, 1947.

Sincerely yours,

KENNETH C. ROYALL, Secretary of the Army.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. HUGH D. SCOTT, JR. Speaker, I have voted to recommit the draft bill to committee because this is the only means by which I can at this time express my disapproval of those amendments which have so weakened the effectiveness of the bill. I would prefer to give the committee another chance at a better bill. I recognize that this is not going to be done.

We are going to have to take the bill as it is. I will vote for it as the best we

It is my judgment that the passage of an effective Selective Service Act is of more importance as a demonstration of the national determination to defend our way of life than any measure we have so far considered.

In the present state of the world we will be ill advised to adopt any measure which falls short of adequacy, and do anything which may be less than enough to accomplish our purpose, whether it be the enactment of measures of domestic import, of foreign aid, or of national defense.

Last night I looked across the Mall at the floodlights playing on the figure of Armed Freedom atop the Capitol Dome. The artist had given arms to Freedom. well knowing that unarmed she could not long be free. There seemed to be light enough on Armed Freedom but less was shed over either House. Perhaps there is a moral in this somewhere.

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD and include a short letter from the American Tariff League.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Speaker, on May 28, 1948, I inserted in the RECORD an article from the May issue of ATL Topics, the magazine published by the American Tariff League. Portions of this article were read to the House to point out that the Gearhart antireciprocal trade extension bill passed by the House earlier in that week bore a striking resemblance to certain recommendations made by the Tariff League in the secret, star-chamber sessions of the Ways and Means Subcommittee on Tariff and Reciprocal Trade.

The article stated:

This temporary program parallels, in some instances the proposals for a long-range program, providing for flexible rate-setting by a new governmental commission, with op-portunity for review by Congress, but not requiring congressional action, offered by ATL President H. Wickliffe Rose at the recent House Ways and Means Subcommittee hearings, and contained in the new ATL Declaration of Principles and Program for World Trade.

From this statement, as well as from comparing the unmistakable effect of the House bill in killing the Reciprocal Trade Act with the long-standing high-tariff hostility to the Reciprocal Trade program of the American Tariff League, it seemed a warrantable conclusion that the Tariff League should be claiming the credit which I inferred from the ATL article. Moreover, Mr. H. Wickliffe Rose, president of the American Tariff League, appeared to assume some responsibilities of authorship when he told the Senate Committee on Finance that "because H. R. 6556 incorporates some of the basic principles proposed in our declaration and because to that extent we believe it is in the right direction toward a sound. long-term program and policy, we approve the bill as a whole for an interim measure.

Mr. Chairman, I am in receipt of a letter dated June 11, 1948, from Mr. Richard H. Anthony, secretary of the American Tariff League, which states that the American Tariff League does not claim credit for H. R. 6556. In accordance with the request contained in the letter, under unanimous consent. I insert it at this point in my remarks in the RECORD.

THE AMERICAN TARIFF LEAGUE, New York 18, N. Y., June 11, 1948. Congressman HERMAN P. EBERHARTER, House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

My DEAR CONGRESSMAN EBERHARTER: Our attention has been called to a statement made by you on May 28 in the House of Representatives and which appears in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of that date, beginning on page 6884. The title which, I assume, is intended to summarize the views of the speaker, is "American Tariff League Claims Credit for the Gearhart Bill."

This league does not claim credit for H. R. 6556, the bill in question, and we do not think that the article in our May issue of ATL's Topics, from which you quoted, can be properly construed in that way. You apparently have so construed it, however, and so we must categorically deny that your conclusion is the correct one.

The only part taken by the league in regard to pending legislation was the appearance of the president of the league, Mr. H. Wickliffe Rose, at hearings held by the House Ways and Means Subcommittee and the Senate Finance Committee. At appearances he offered the league's "Declaration of Principles and Program for World Trade," which is briefly summarized in the ATL Topics article you inserted in the Con-GRESSIONAL RECORD. Copies of that declara-tion were left by Mr. Rose at the time of his appearance before the House Ways and Means Subcommittee for every member of the full committee. You should have re-ceived one as a matter of course, and, to be sure that you have one, an additional copy I hope that you will want to give it careful study. It envisions a long-term program, and does not refer to any bill in either House of Congress.

You will remember that H. R. 6556 was not before the House Ways and Means Subcommittee at the time of the hearings the first week in May. Hence, Mr. Rose could not have addressed any remarks to that particular bill. However, when he appeared before the Senate Finance Committee on June 3, the hearings were on the subject of H. R. 6556, and in reference to that bill, Mr. Rose, as part of his testimony, made the statement which appears on pages 296-297 of the printed hearings entitled "Extending Authority to Negotiate Trade Agreements, as follows:

The proposals in this declaration are directed to a long-term program and policy on tariff, in the belief that its adoption will foster world trade, peace, and prosperity. We do not expect you to analyze it in detail today, and we know that there is not time to prepare legislation for its complete adoption in this session of Congress.

"Consequently, we agree that it is practical to pass an interim extension of the Trade Agreements Act for 1 year, as in H. R. 6556, in order to give Congress the opportunity to study and develop a long-term program and policy.

"Furthermore, because H. R. 6556 incorporates some of the basic principles pro-posed in our declaration and because to that extent we believe it is in the right direction toward a sound, long-term program and policy, we approve the bill as a whole for an interim measure. Under this or any other act of Congress, however, we see nothing to be gained by the United States through additional international tariff bar-gaining agreements."

Mr. Rose's statement on H. R. 6556 is the full extent to which any league action has been taken thereon. We believe that an opportunity should be afforded the league to deny that it claims credit for H. R. 6556. In the interest of fair play, would you be willing to insert this letter in the RECORD?

Sincerely yours, RICHARD H. ANTHONY,

Secretary.

Mr. REES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. REES. Mr. Speaker, one of the Members of the House in emphasizing his position on this legislation, has quoted the words of George Washington when he said, "One of the most effectual means of preserving peace is to be prepared for

I believe in full and complete preparedness. It is absolutely necessary in view of the position that we find ourselves in today that we have adequate defenses. Not only with respect to manpower, but just as important we must have adequate air power, atomic power, together with the latest and most modern equipment that can be produced. We are living in a blundering, bleeding world and we are disappointed to find this country and the world at large so far from reaching an understanding of peace among the peoples of the various nations.

It is fundamental that our armed forces should be improved and modernized so that our country may at all times be adequately defended from any type of attack. As I understand it, the question involved today is whether peacetime conscription is required for an adequate and modernized system of national defense

Those in charge of this legislation have given us to understand quite definitely that the need for additional men in the armed forces is not immediate. The House Committee on Armed Services in charge of the bill approved an amendment to this legislation to extend the enforcement of the draft for a period of at least 90 days, following the effective date of the act, so that the bill as presently submitted and approved could not become effective until November of this year.

Now, Mr. Speaker, according to the committee report and according to the facts submitted by the sponsors of this legislation, we have 1,211,818 men in our armed forces as of March 1, 1948. Four hundred and sixty-nine thousand four hundred and ninety-six are in the Army; 351,181 are in the Navy; 317,102 are in the Air Force; and 74,039 in the Marines. We now have the largest and strongest Navy in the world. In fact, our Navy is more than equal the strength of the combined navies of all the rest of the world. We are advised by those in charge of this legislation that the Navy has more enlistments than they need. In fact, our committee tells us that the Navy does not request or need peacetime conscription.

This Congress recently passed legisla-tion to increase our Air Force to a 70group corps. This is even larger than was requested by the Department of Defense. It is larger than was requested by the President. I was glad to support the authorization as well as the appropriation for the 70-group Air Force. In fact, I think the Air Force is the strong arm of our defense.

I want to pay tribute to the infantrymen who I think do not receive the credit to which they are entitled. It is not a glamorous job. We must not ignore the necessity of the men in the Infantry. It is a fact that the Infantry does not carry the appeal that we find in the Navy, the Marines, or the Air Force.

The first question involved I think is with respect to the immediate need of 300,000 additional men in order to bring the armed forces up to the strength that the Department of Defense has suggested. They tell us that the need is not immediate, but that in 3 or 4 months from now the authority of conscription may be required. I believe that only in case of a national emergency should we resort to a policy of registering two or three million men for conscription. Now, I call your attention to the fact that prior to World War II and during that period, a test of 59 points was the mimimum requirement. Since that time the requirement has been jumped to 80 points. I am told that if the requirement for induction were reduced to 70 points, and incidentally I have secured an amendment to the present bill to make such provision, there are a good many men who would join the armed forces if given an opportunity to do so. It has been pointed out the draftee, under this bill, will not have a choice of services. He will go where the Army assigns him.

Furthermore, the Army, instead of encouraging and building up the extension of the Reserve Corps for hundreds of thousands of men, have permitted it to dwindle and have disappointed and discouraged a good many men who would otherwise have joined the Reserve. It is unfortunate, too, that those in charge of the Regular Army of our country do not encourage the enlargement and the advancement of the National Guard. which after all was the backbone of the infantry organizations during World War II.

Mr. Speaker, I have supported every appropriation to increase our defenses all the way up and down the line and if this committee had made a real showing with respect to the need of the conscription of men for the armed forces, I should be glad to support this legislation. regret that in view of the showing that has been made by those who propose this legislation, that I am unable to support it. And do not forget that if and when the need for conscription of men is shown, I will be one of the first to support it. Incidentally, I am inclined to agree with Members of this House who have spoken before me who believe that if the time comes for the need of the conscription of thousands and millions of men to defend our country against a foreign foe, we should at the same time conscript the wealth of our country as a part of that program. May it never be said again that our country produced millionaires who made profits from munitions of war, either directly or indirectly, while our young men were sacrificing their lives in the defense of their country.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection. Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, if what I hear regarding the so-called housing bill is true then I must vote against passage. I will not be guilty of the betrayal of the trusting millions among our people or perpetrating a hoax upon our deserving veterans who while promised solution of the housing shortage now face years of slum existence as a reward for their unfaltering patriotic service. I have been watching this bill and the arduous road over which it was compelled to travel. In the Committee on Banking and Currency the other day it seemed certain that the coalition of 11 Democratic and 3 Republican Members saved the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill and restored the people's confidence in the integrity of the Congress. This morning however, I learn that the whipping received by the 3 Republican Members who joined in righteousness their Democratic colleagues has inclined them to once again follow the wrong course toward ease and error. I shall not have the opportunity to discuss the iniquities of the Wolcott bill when presented to us later this afternoon. I shall not blame the Republican leadership for this because time grows short but I must place the blame upon the leadership of the party in control for encouraging-yes. for forcing the Republican members of the committee to reconsider their vote, reversing their position, and reporting the husk of what might have been a real housing bill. The Wolcott bill raises the cry of socializing housing, but nothing is said about the socializing support of Government given to builders in guaranteeing loans, in the taking over, specially, of Government-built housing at an accelerated depreciation in order to reduce taxes and thereby increase the financial return to the investor. I must oppose the bill if it does not contain the public-housing provision to which the gentleman from Michigan, Chairman Wolcott, is uncompromisingly opposed. To meet any standard slum clearance rural housing, too, must be included. All these features involve the family life of our country and upon this family life the Government is founded. Anything that imperils family life undermines and endangers our country.

The public-housing feature in the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill to which the real-estate lobby so strongly objected and which has been wiped out in the Wolcott proposal dooms to the slums the widow and the children who unfortunately having lost their husband and father cannot meet the rentals charged while the breadwinner lived. The subsidized rental property intended by the T-E-W bill was condemned and stricken from the Wolcott bill as socialistic. Seemingly there is no concern about the widow and orphaned children of a citizen, and he may have been a veteran. when they are forced to give up their old home for an alley slum all because of the death in the family. The Wolcott bill preserves the slum for the use of the unfortunate upon the pretense that it is socialistic to render aid to helpless future citizens. What little might be saved to the Treasury of the United States will be paid out a thousandfold due to delinquency in health and morals, which thrive in the slums and which will require the construction of asylums, hospitals, and prisons.

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A further message from the Senate, by Mr. Carrell, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments in which the concurrence of the House is requested, bills of the House of the following titles:

H.R. 3190. An act to revise, codify, and enact into positive law, title 18 of the United States Code, entitled "Crimes and Criminal Procedure"; and

H.R. 5710. An act to amend the Act entitled "An act to expedite the provision of housing in connection with national defense, and for other purposes," approved October 14, 1940, as amended.

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendment to the foregoing bill, requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. Cain, Mr. Buck, and Mr. Fulbright to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 2192) entitled "An act for the relief of the Massman Construction Company."

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills and joint resolutions of the House of the following titles:

H. R. 333. An act for the relief of sundry residents of Alaska, veterans of World War II; H. R. 371. An act for the relief of Jenness

C. Thomas;

H. R. 564. An act for the relief of Sarah Lee Cregg;

H. R. 700. An act for the relief of Anthony Arancio;

H. R. 851. An act for the relief of Adney W. Gray;

H.R. 911. An act for the relief of Kam Fong Chun, Mr. and Mrs. Jose Dias, Joseph De Souza, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Ayres, and Jose Oducado:

H. R. 912. An act for the relief of Hiro Higa and Kana Higa;

H. P. 1220. An act for the relief of James Sigler and Frederick P. Vogelsand III;

AMENDING FEDERAL FOOD, DRUG, AND COSMETTC ACT

Mr. LEONARD W. HALL submitted the following conference report and statement on the bill (H. R. 4071) to amend sections 301 (k) and 304 (a) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, as amended:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 4071) to amend sections 301 (k) and 304 (a) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, as amended, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as

That the Senate recede from its amendment on page 2 of the bill.

That the Senate recede from its amendment to the title of the bill.

LEONARD W. HALL. ROBERT HALE, WILLIAM J. MILLER, VIRGIL CHAPMAN, J. PERCY PRIEST,

Managers on the Part of the House.

HOMER E. CAPEHART, CLYDE M. REED, E. H. MOORE, EDWIN C. JOHNSON, BRIEN McMahon, Managers on the Part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 4071) to amend sections 301 (k) and 304 (a) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, as amended, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The Senate made two amendments to the bill. One amendment inserted at the end of the bill a new section 3 amending section 303 (a) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, so that the penalty provided therein would apply only to violations which were willful or resulted from gross negligence. The other amendment modified the title of the bill because of the new provision added by the first amendment.

The committee of conference recommend that the Senate recede from both amendments.

TERMINATING RETIREMENT SYSTEM OF OFFICE OF COMPTROLLER OF THE CURRENCY

Mr. REES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (S. 2692) to terminate the retirement system of the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, and to transfer that retirement fund to the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund, which was approved by the committee on June 17, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill. The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the first sentence after the first proviso of the second paragraph of section 5240 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (U. S. C., 1946 edition, title 12, sec. 481), is amended by deleting the comma after the words "whose compensation" and striking out the words "including retirement annuities to be fixed by the Comptroller of the Currency" and deleting the comma following those words.

SEC. 2. (a) The United States Civil Service Commission is hereby authorized and directed to ascertain the amount of the gross assets in the retirement fund of the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, and the Comptroller of the Currency is authorized and directed to cause to be transferred all such assets to the Secretary of the Treasury to be entered on the books of the Treasury Department to the credit of the civil service retirement and disability fund.

(b) In the case of each officer or employee who is a member of the retirement system of the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, the United States Civil Service Commission shall cause to be credited to his indi-vidual account in the civil service retirement and disability fund an amount equal to such employee's accumulated contributions and interest standing to his credit on the books of the retirement system of the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency at the time of its termination: Provided, That in the event that such amount is in excess of the amount which would have been to his credit had he made the contributions required for allowable service under the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 22, 1920, as amended, currently during the same period of time for which he has creditable service under the rules and regulations of the retirement system of the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, plus interest thereon, such excess amount shall be applied to any other deposits or redeposits required of such employee under sections 7, 9, and 12 of the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, as amended, covering periods of allowable service for which said employee did not have creditable service under the rules and regulations of the retirement system of the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, or, if he has no such additional allowable service, the excess be repaid to such employee in cash: Provided further, That no part of said sum credited to such employee's individual account shall be applied to any period of allowable service prior to August 1, 1920, or to periods of honorable service in the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, or Coast Guard of the United States, for which periods no deposit shall be required, as provided by section 9 of the act of May 29, 1930, as amended; nor shall deposits be required for any periods of time prior to June 1, 1936, for which such employee has creditable service under the rules and regulations of the retirement system of the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, in excess of the amount of such employee's accumulated contributions plus interest standing to his credit on the books of the retirement system of the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency at the date of its termination.

SEC. 3. (a) In the case of an officer or employee who, prior to the effective date of this act, shall have been retired on annuity under the rules and regulations of the retirement system of the Comptroller's office, the annuity shall be paid out of the civil service retirement and disability fund and shall be increased effective on the first day of the third month following the month in which this act is enacted by 25 percent or $300, whichever is the lesser: Provided, That each such annuitant may, prior to the effective date herein prescribed, elect to retain his or her present annuity in lieu of the increased annuity provided by this subsection and name his wife or her husband to receive upon his or her death one-half of his or her present annuity but not to exceed $600 annum during the remainder of the life of such surviving wife or husband and upon the death of such survivor no further annuity shall be due or payable: Provided further, That the amount payable in the event of the death of the annuitant either to his nominated beneficiary or estate, in the form of a lump-sum payment or survivor's annuity, shall not be less than the amounts which would have been payable under the applicable rules and regulations of the retirement system of the Comptroller's office.

(b) In the case of any officer or employee who was a member of the retirement system of the Comptroller's office and who, prior to the effective date of this act, terminated his employment with that office and elected to receive a deferred annuity at age 65, under the applicable rules and regulations of the retirement system of that office, such annuity shall be payable out of the civil service retirement and disability fund beginning at the age of 62 years. Otherwise his rights shall be determined and the annuity computed as though this act had not been enacted.

SEC. 4. In the case of any officer or employee or former officer or employee of the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency who withdrew his accumulated contributions from the retirement fund of that office upon leaving its employ, said officer or employee or former officer or employee of such office shall be entitled to the same allowable service under the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, as amended, to which he would have been entitled if he had never been a member of the retirement system of the Comptroller's office, subject, however, to the payment of the deposits required under said act of May 29, 1930, as amended.

SEC. 5. This act shall become effective on the first day of the first pay period which begins at least 30 days after the date of its enactment.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6705) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, and for other purposes, submit the following report in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon and recommended in the accompanying conference report as to each of such amendments, namely:

Nos. 1, 2, and 3, relating to the Office of

Nos. 1, 2, and 3, relating to the Office of the Secretary: Permits employment of such personnel outside the District of Columbia, as proposed by the Senate; appropriates $1,-115,842, for such office, instead of $965,842, as proposed by the House, and $1,250,000, as proposed by the Senate; and permits the use of $50,000 for the Division of Power, instead of $75,000, as proposed by the Senate, and a prohibition against the use of any funds for such purpose, as proposed by the House.

No. 4, relating to the Office of the Solicitor: Appropriates $250,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $220,225, as proposed by the House.

No. 5, relating to salaries and expenses, Division of Territories and Island Possessions: Appropriates $160,000, instead of $146,800, as proposed by the House, and $185,000, as proposed by the Senate.

Nos. 6 and 7, relating to the Oil and Gas

Nos. 6 and 7, relating to the Oil and Gas Division: Authorizes the purchase of four passenger vehicles, as proposed by the Senate, instead of two, as proposed by the House; and appropriates $225,000, for such division, instead of $300,000, as proposed by the House, and $350,000, as proposed by the Senate.

No. 8, relating to salaries and expenses,

No. 8, relating to salaries and expenses, soil and moisture conservation operations; Appropriates $2,800,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $2,700,000, as proposed by the House.

Nos. 9 and 10, relating to contingent expenses, Department of the Interior: Appropriates $215,000, instead of $205,730, as proposed by the House, and $230,000, as proposed by the Senate.

Nos. 11 and 12, relating to expenses, power transmission facilities: Provides funds for expenses in connection with the supervision of contracts executed prior to June 30, 1948, as proposed by the Senate, instead of "1947", as proposed by the House; and provides for terminal leave payments to employees on furlough from active duty, as proposed by the Senate.

BONNEVILLE POWER ADMINISTRATION

Nos. 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, and 20, relating to Bonneville Power Administration:
Appropriates $21,125,700, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $20,920,760, as proposed by the House; provides that $3,231,800 shall be available for operation and maintenance and administrative expenses, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $3,000,000, as proposed by the House; authorizes the purchase of eight motor vehicles, instead of five, as proposed by the House, and ten, as proposed by the Senate; authorizes the Administrator to contract for "services", as proposed by the Senate; provides contract authorization in the sum of $11,888,500, instead of $10,269,290, as proposed by the House, and $12,046,500, as proposed by the Senate; restores the House provision relating to force account work amended to allow eight per centum of funds appropriated for construction for such work, in lieu of the Senate proposal; and restores the provision of the House relating to the disposition of interest collected by Bonneville Power Administration from sales of electric energy generated at Grand Coulee Dam on the unamortized balance of investment al-located to power, amended to make such provision effective during the fiscal year 1949.

The use of funds or of contract authorization for the Lebanon and Coos Bay substations mentioned on page 8 of the House Report and on pages 3 and 4 of the Senate Report has been disapproved by the conferees. The conferees approve the table of allocations as submitted by Bonneville Power Administration appearing at page 1540 of the Senate hearings with the following changes:

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

Nos. 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27 and 28: Appropriates $1,000,000 for salaries and expenses, including personal services in the District of Columbia, instead of $1,100,000 as proposed by the Senate, and $500,000 as proposed by the House; and strikes out the word "only" following the words "District of Columbia" as proposed by the Senate; appropriates $3,-000,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $2,562,565, as proposed by the House, for management, protection, and disposal of public lands; authorizes the purchase of 15 motor vehicles as proposed by the Senate, instead of 10 as proposed by the House; and provides that no part of the appropriations in the Act shall be used for salaries of personnel in regional offices in excess of the average total of such personnel during the fiscal year 1948, in lieu of the House provision eliminating such regional offices; appropriates $500,000 for revested Oregon and California Railroad and reconveyed Coos Bay Wagon Road grant lands, Oregon, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $469,300 as proposed by the House; strikes out the provision of the House prohibiting the transfer of activities to the field, as proposed by the Senate; and inserts the provision of the Senate relating to the hire, maintenance, and operation of aircraft, instead of the proposal of the House.

BUREAU OF INDIAN AFFAIRS

No. 29: Appropriates $200,000 for salaries and expenses, District Offices, in lieu of $600,-000 as proposed by the Senate. The sum recommended provides $110,000 for a District office at Billings, Montana, and $90,000 for a similar office at Portland, Oregon, for special activities and functions applicable to those areas.

No. 30: Appropriates $2,400,000, as proposed by the House, instead of $2,200,000 as proposed by the Senate for salaries and expenses, reservation administration. conferees approve the recommendations contained on page 15 of the House Committee report (No. 2038) with reference to maintenance of the agencies and subagencies in Oklahoma and the keeping of the enumerated okatalonia and the keeping of the circulative records at such agencies and subagencies.

No. 31: Appropriates $125,000 for maintenance of law and order instead of $100,000 as proposed by the House and $150,000 as proposed by the Senate.

Nos. 32 and 33: Appropriates $4,118,962 as proposed by the Senate, instead of $4,518,762 as proposed by the House, for the Alaska Native Service and inserts the word "vessels" in such item as proposed by the Senate.

Nos. 34 and 35: Appropriates $907,900 as proposed by the House, instead of $1,907,900 as proposed by the Senate, and strikes out the contract authorization of not to exceed $3,350,000 proposed by the Senate amendment for construction and maintenance service, Navajo and Hopi Service. In connection with these decreases, the conferees wish to point out that the proposed increase was submitted in a supplemental estimate which went to the Senate and on which the House had no opportunity to hold hearings or give consideration. For this reason the conference committee decided that the request for additional funds and contract authorization should be deferred.

No. 36: Appropriates $4,334,115 for agency services of the Navajo and Hopi Service, instead of $3,748,615 as proposed by the House, and $4,584,115 as proposed by the Senate. Of the increase of $585,500 in the House bill, $56,500 is provided for purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, $29,000 for education, and $500,000 for welfare work. Conferees request that the Indian Bureau submit a report to the Congress early in the next regular session on conditions as to the general welfare of the Navajo and Hopi Indians.

No. 37: Corrects a total. No. 38: Appropriates $755,000 for maintenance of buildings and utilities instead of $700,000 as proposed by the House and $810,- 000, as proposed by the Senate.

Nos. 39 and 40: Appropriates $10,100,000 for education of Indians, instead of $9,574,709 as proposed by the House, and $10,376,000, as proposed by the Senate. Of the increase in the House bill, $200,000 is provided for education of Navajo students, $125,000 is for State educational contracts and $15,000 for equipment at the Anadarko Arts and Craft Building, Oklahoma.

No. 41: Appropriates $900,000 for management, Indian Forest and Range Resources, instead of $711,687 as proposed by the House, and $950,000, as proposed by the Senate.

No. 42: Restores the House provision relating to a revolving fund for loans to Indians, in lieu of the Senate amendment.

Nos. 43, 44, 45, 46, and 47: Relating to construction, irrigation systems; appropriates $2,600,000 for Colorado River, Arizona, instead of $2,500,000 as proposed by the House and $2,700,000 as proposed by the Senate; appropriates $190,000 for payment to the San Carlos irrigation and drainage district, in accordance with the provisions of the Act of March 7, 1947, and $60,000 for miscellaneous small projects instead of $25,000, as proposed by the House, and $90,000 as proposed by the Senate; restores the provision of the House limiting personal services in the District of Columbia to not exceeding $12,500; and corrects the total of such items.

Nos. 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, and 59: Relating to construction of building and utilities: Appropriates $622,500 for such work in Alaska, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $222,500, as proposed by the House; appropriates $125,000 for buildings, and so forth, Celilo Falls, Oregon, as proposed by the Senate; appropriates $79,000 for sewage works, as proposed by the Senate, and $75,000 for water supply as proposed by the Senate, instead of $35,000 as proposed by the House, at the Cherokee, North Carolina reservation; appropriates $213,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $85,000, as proposed by the House, for construction of school buildings for the consolidated Chippewa Indians, Minnesota, as authorized by Public Law 231, Eightieth Congress; appropriates $35,000 as proposed by the Senate, instead of $25,000 as proposed by the House, for a school building at Walker, Minnesota; appropriates $750,000, as proposed by the House, instead of $1,500,000 as proposed by the Senate, for a tubercular sanatorium at Galen, Montana; appropriates $80,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $50,000 as proposed by the House, for a building for the Hunter School District, Sawyer County, Wisconsin; appropriates $250,000 for a school building for the school district of Roosevelt, Utah, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $100,000, as proposed by the House; appropriates $200,000 for school building in Owyhee, Nevada, instead of $100,000 as proposed by the House and $300,000, as proposed by the Senate; appropriates $300,000 for miscellaneous repairs and improvements, instead of $250,000 as proposed by the House, and $400,000 as proposed by the Senate; and cor-

Tects the total appropriation for such items. No. 60: Appropriates $2,500,000 for roads, Indian reservations, instead of $2,000,000, as proposed by the House, and $2,894,400, as proposed by the Senate; the conferees have approved work to be prosecuted on the Ethete Road, Wyoming, and have also approved the provision in the House report recommending $150,000 for road construction on the Sprague River Road on the Klamath Indian Reservation. In connection with the latter item, it is understood that the states will match these amounts equally, thus providing a total of $300,000 for this work.

Nos. 61 and 62, relating to the Klamath Agency, Oregon, tribal funds: The amendments restore the provisons and amounts in identical form as provided in the House bill. Nos. 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, and 68: Appropriates

$138,875 for support of Menominee Agency and pay of tribal officers, instead of $162,250 as proposed by the House, and $215,500 as proposed by the Senate; and adjust the amounts available to provide $36,500 for relief of such Indians, $5,500 for compensation and expenses of attorney; limits to £10,000 the amount available for salaries and expenses of certain Menominee representatives, as proposed by the Senate; and provides for the appointment of a recreational director, as proposed by the Senate.

No. 69: Inserts the language of the Senate providing a total of $197,000 for support of the Osage Agency, in lieu of the language of the House providing a total of the same amount for such purpose.

No. 70: Appropriates $50,000, as proposed the House, instead of $73,000, as proposed by the Senate, for expenses of tribal council officers in a travel status.

No. 71: Appropriates $82,880 for compensation and expenses of attorneys, instead of $62,080, as proposed by the House. The proposed increase of $20,800, covering compensation under approved contracts, was submitted to the Senate after the bill had passed the House and into which the House conferees have not had an opportunity examine.

Nos. 72, 73, 74, 76, and 76: Relating to in-dustrial assistance, tribal funds: Appropriates $350,000, instead of $277,500 as proposed by the House, and $422,500, as proposed by the Senate, and adjusts such total amount to provide $167,500 for the Menominee Indians, Wisconsin, $20,000 for the Nez Perce Indians, Idaho, $50,000 for the Standing Rock Indians, North Dakota, and $75,000 for the Blackfeet Indians, Montana.

Nos. 77 and 78: Authorizes the purchase of 200 passenger motor vehicles, instead of 100 as proposed by the House, and 250 as proposed by the Senate.

Nos. 79 and 80: Permits the use of funds for salaries and expenses, reservation administration, for the hire of aircraft, instead of limiting such use to maintenance and operation as proposed by the House.

Appropriations for Indians in Oklahoma: The conferees are in agreement with the provision and recommendations set forth pages 17 and 18 of the House Report on the bill, House Report No. 2038, which breaks down the appropriations available to the State of Oklahoma into miscellaneous items covering schools, agencies, hospitals, and so Where the conferees have increased amounts for activities above the amounts allowed in the House bill, it is the understanding of the conferees that such funds shall be distributed proportionately in order that Indians in Oklahoma will receive their equal share of the increases.

RUREAU OF RECLAMATION

Nos. 81, 82, and 83, relating to administrative provisions: Authorizes the purchase of one hundred and twenty-five motor vehicles, instead of three hundred, as proposed by the Senate; provides for the hire of air-craft, and eliminates authority for acquisiof aircraft from other government agencies; and inserts a limitation of $100,000 to the Senate provision relating to the employment of consultants.

No. 84: Reported in disagreement.

Nos. 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, and 91, relating salaries and expenses: Appropriates $3,600,000, instead of $3,161,472, as proposed by the House, and $4,000,000, as proposed by the Senate: authorizes the transfer of $7,800,000 for work to be performed for the benefit of specific projects, instead of $6,-000,000, as proposed by the House, and $8,500,000, as proposed by the Senate; and strikes out, as proposed by the Senate, the provision of the House restricting the use of funds for salaries of personnel engaged in obtaining power contracts with customers already supplied, with the understanding, however, that the conferees are in general agreement with the objectives set forth in such amendment, and it is directed by the conferees that the Bureau curb activities of the nature which have given rise to the widespread opinion that its employees have been unduly aggressive in offering the exten-sion of services which are often in direct or implied competition with existing private facilities. In connection with amendments 88 and 89, relating to the prohibition against the use of funds for certain employees without certain qualifications, the House has accepted the Senate amendments making the date effective "after January 31, 1949", and requiring that such employees have five years' engineering and administrative ex-perience, instead of ten years' experience, as proposed by the House. In connection with amendment No. 90, the conferees have re-stored the provision of the House amended to fix such limitation of funds available at $48,000,000, instead of $45,341,615, as proposed by the House. In connection with amendment No. 91, the conferees have recommended restoration of the House provision amended to limit the number of such employees to 3,500, instead of 3,251, as proposed by the House.

Nos. 92, 93, 94, and 95, relating to general investigations: Appropriates $3,500,000, instead of $3,000,000, as proposed by the House, and $4,000,000, as proposed by the Senate; strikes out the proposal of the Senate to make such funds available until expended, and inserts the word "construction", as proposed by the Senate.

Nos. 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, and 107, relating to construction, from the reclamation fund: Appropriates $1,000,000 for the Santa Barbara County project, California, Cachuma Unit, as proposed by the House, instead of $2,700,000, as proposed by the Senate, and restores the provision of the House authorizing a contract authorization, amended to allow $1,-600,000, instead of $1,500,000, such funds being provided for construction of tunnel and conduit and acquisition of right-of-way: appropriates $1,525,000 for the Boise project, Idaho, Payette division, instead of $1,400,000, as proposed by the House, and $1,650,000, as proposed by the Senate; eliminates the provision of the House requiring completion of the Lewiston Orchards project, Idaho; increases the limitation on the amount available for surveys, Minidoka project, Idaho, to $147,500; reports the contract authorization for the Palisades project, Idaho, in technical disagreement; appropriates $1,-293,000 for the Tucumcari project, New Mexico; appropriates $57,985 for the Rio Grande project, New Mexico-Texas; appropriates $1,980,000 for the Provo River project, Utah, as proposed by the House; appropriates $1,298,650 for the Yakima project, Washington, Roza division; appropriates $1,780,175 ton, Roza division; appropriates $1,780,175 for the Riverton project, Wyoming; and corrects the total of such items.

Nos. 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, and 124, relating to operation and maintenance: Authorizes the use of $2,645,380 from power revenues for the Parker Devices. enues for the Parker Dam power project, Arizona-California; appropriates $230,437 for operation of the Central Valley project, California, and $814,400 from power revenues; appropriates $220,000 for the Boise project, Idaho; authorizes the use of $447,500 from power revenues for the Minidoka project, Idaho; authorizes the use of $175,500 from power revenues in connection with the North Platte project, Nebraska-Wyoming; appro-priates $101,250 for the Deschutes project, Oregon; appropriates $292,500 for the Owyhee project, Oregon; appropriates $217,000 for the Klamath project, Oregon-California; authorizes the use of $1,645,000 from power revenues for the Columbia Basin project, Washington, and strikes out the provision washington, and strikes but the provision of the Senate authorizing the payment of tuition for children of employees; appropriates $337,500 for the Yakima project, Washington; authorizes the use of $206,250 from power revenues for the Kendrick project. ect, Wyoming; appropriates $93,700 for the Riverton project, Wyoming, and authorizes the use of $57,212 from power revenues on such project; and appropriates $77,200 for the Shoshone project, Wyoming, and authorizes the use of $104,800 from power revenues on such project.

Nos. 125 and 126: Reported in disagreement.

Amendment No. 84, relating to authorization for Bureau of Reclamation to make payments to school districts for instruction of dependents of employees and contractors on reclamation construction projects: The managers on the part of the House will move to recede and concur.

Amendment No. 101, providing a contract authorization of $2,000,000 for construction on the Palisades project, Idaho, under the Bureau of Reclamation: The managers on the part of the House will move to recede and concur.

Amendment No. 125, providing funds for rehabilitation and betterment of existing reclamation projects: The managers on the part of the House will move to recede and concur.

The proposal of the Senate is a new program not heretofore undertaken by the Bureau of Reclamation. The conferees on the part of the House will insist that each project be authorized by basic legislation and that such legislation be enacted before additional funds are provided.

Amendment No. 126, relating to a total:

The managers on the part of the House will move to recede and concur with an amend-

Amendment No. 150, providing for the transfer of certain land at the Grand Island Army Air Field to the Bureau of Reclamation: The managers on the part of the House will move to recede and concur.

Amendment No. 151, providing for the transfer of certain unexpended balances of property management funds from the War Assets Administration to the Bureau of Reclamation: The managers on the part of the House will move to recede and concur.

Amendment No. 152, providing for the transfer of a certain parcel of land from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to the Bureau of Reclamation: The managers on the part of the House will move to recede and concur.

Amendment No. 178, providing authority for the transfer of a certain parcel of land from the Department of the Army to the Department of the Interior: The managers on the part of the House will move to recede Amendment No. 189, providing funds for acquisition of lands by the National Park Service: The managers on the part of the House will move to recede and concur with an amendment.

Amendment No. 190, providing a contract authorization for construction of certain parkways, National Park Service: The managers on the part of the House will move to recede and concur.

Amendment No. 199, clarifying the language of an appropriation as to its availablity for construction of certain fish cul-tural facilities, Fish and Wildlife Service: The managers on the part of the House will move to recede and concur.

Amendment No. 211, providing for purchase and operation of wildlife management areas in California: The managers on the part of the House will move to recede and concur with an amendment.

This is a cooperative effort for which the State of California has arranged by legislative action for an appropriation of $9,000,000 over a three year period. A special act has been passed by Congress, (Public Law 534, 80th Congress), which provides for this special situation. The conferees do not inend by approving this special situation that the action shall be regarded as a precedent.

Amendment No. 212, adjusts a total: The managers on the part of the House will move to recede and concur with an amendment.

Amendment No. 214, adjusts a total: The managers on the part of the House will move to recede and concur with an amendment.

Amendment No. 231, appropriating to meet deficits of municipal governments of the Virgin Islands and authorizing them to make purchases for certain of their public institutions through the Federal Bureau of Supply: The managers on the part of the House will move to recede and concur.

BEN F. JENSEN, IVOR D. FENTON, LOWELL STOCKMAN, GEO. B. SCHWABE, MICHAEL J. KIRWAN, W. F. NORRELL. ALBERT GORE,

Managers on the Part of the House.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to. The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the first amendment in disagreement.

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that amendments Nos. 84, 101, 125, 150, 151, 152, 178, 190, 199, and 231 be considered en bloc.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection. The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendments.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 84: Page 39, line 20, insert "payments (not to exceed the average per pupil cost in the State where construction is in progress) to school districts as reimbursement, while projects are actually under construction, for the instruction of dependents of employees of the Bureau of Reclamation and of contractors engaged on such projects: Provided, That a tuition charge of $25 per semester shall be charged and collected by the Bureau of Reclamation for each such dependent attending such schools

Amendment No. 101: Page 44, line 14,

"Palisades project, Idaho, the Commissioner of Reclamation is authorized to enter into contracts in an amount not in excess of $2,000,000."

"REHABILITATION AND BETTERMENT

"For rehabilitation and betterment of existing projects, $1,500,000: Provided, That, at the discretion of the Secretary, repayment may be scheduled after the completion of repayment of existing obligations of the wausers' organizations concerned.'

Amendment No. 150: Page 61, line 11,

The War Assets Administration or other Federal agency having ownership or custody thereof or interest therein is hereby directed to transfer to the Bureau of Reclamation without exchange of funds, the followingdescribed lands, together with improvements, buildings, facilities, equipment, and inter-

"The War Assets Administration is authorized and directed to transfer to the Bureau of Reclamation unexpended balances of funds available for maintenance and protection of transferred property under the Department of the Interior Appropriation Act of 1947 (Public Law 478, 79th Cong.) to reimburse the Bureau of Reclamation for expenditures made for the maintenance and protection of the Yuma Army Air Base and such transfer shall be made hereafter for the maintenance and protection of the Yuma Army Air Base, pending its final disposition as contemplated in the Interior Appropriation Act of 1948 (Public Law 247, 80th Cong., 1st sess.)." Amendment No. 152: Page 63, line 7, insert:

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is authorized and directed to transfer to the Bureau of Reclamation, without reimbursement or transfer of funds, all of its right, title, and interest in and to a certain building and improvements under Defense Plant Corporation project, Plancor 1437, con-structed on the War Relocation Center at the Heart Mountain Division of the Shoshone project, Wyoming."

Senate amendment No. 178: On page 81, line'5, insert the following:

"The Department of the Army is authorized to transfer to the Department of the Interior, for the use of the Bureau of Mines, without compensation therefor, full jurisdiction, possession, and control of a parcel of 10 acres, more or less, from that portion of Fort Douglas Military Reservation in the county of Salt Lake, State of Utah, which lies immediately north of the site of the Bureau of Mines Intermountain Experiment Station and is situated between a line beginning at a point 400 feet north of the northwest corner of the United States Bureau of Mines property granted by deed from the University of Utah May 21, 1938, said point being on the south curb of Fort Douglas Boulevard and running thence south 320 feet to the east-west boundary line between the University of Utah and Fort Douglas; thence east 604% feet to the north-south boundary between the University of Utah and Fort Douglas; thence south along said north-south boundary 480 feet to a line on the south boundary (extended) of the United States Bureau of Mines property above mentioned; thence east 262 feet; thence north 952% feet to the south curb of Fort Douglas Boulevard; thence westerly along said south curb of Fort Douglas Boulevard to the point of beginning, said enclosure embracing 10 acres.'

Senate amendment No. 190: On page 86, line 16, insert the following:

"Parkways, National Park Service: The Secretary is hereby authorized to incur obligations and enter into contracts, not exceeding a total of $2,680,000, for the construction of the Blue Ridge, Natchez Trace, George Washington Memorial, and Foothills Parkways."

Senate amendment No. 199: On page 90, line 2, after the word "thereto" insert the following: "and not to exceed $35,000 for the construction and operation, in accordance with the provisions of the act of August 14, 1946 (60 Stat. 1080), of fish cultural facilities on lands owned by the State of South Dakota.'

Senate amendment No. 231: On page 106, strike out lines 12 to 18, inclusive, and in-

"Municipal governments: For expenses of the government of the Virgin Islands in exof current local revenues for the fiscal year 1949, municipality of St. Thomas and St. John, $194,400, and municipality of St. Croix, $325,800; in all, $520,200, to be paid to the respective municipal treasuries in monthly installments; and the said municipal governments are hereby authorized to make purchases for their hospitals, schools, and other public institutions, through the Bureau of Federal Supply of the Treasury Department."

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 84, 101, 125, 150, 151, 152, 178, 190, 199, and 231, and concur in the same.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement. The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 126: On page 50, line 3, strike out "$30,605,997" and insert "837.308.855."

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur with an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. JENSEN moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 126, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment, insert *834 132 439 '

The motion was agreed to.
The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 189: Page 85, line 23, insert:

"Acquisition of lands: For the acquisition of privately owned lands or interests therein within the authorized boundaries of established areas under the jurisdiction of the National Park Service, including expenses incidental thereto and personal services in the District of Columbia, $200,000, to remain available until expended, of which $150,000 shall be available only for lands within Colonial National Historical Park; Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania County Battlefields Memorial and Gettysburg National Military Parks; Manassas National Battlefield Park; Badlands, Dinosaur, George Washington Birthplace, Joshua Tree, Petrified Forest, and Scotts Bluff National Monuments; and Bend parcel of land adjoining Big Bend National Park necessary to connect the park road system with State Highway No. 227, Glacier, Grand Canyon, Great Smoky Mountains, Kings Canyon, Lassen Volcanic, Mesa Verde, Mount Rainier, Olympic, Rocky Moun-tain, Sequoia, Yosemite, and Zion National

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur with an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Jensen moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 189, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out lines 13 and 14 of said amendment and insert in lieu thereof the following: "(parcels of land adjoining Big Bend National Park necessary to connect the park road system with State Highway 227)."

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 211: Page 96, line 13, insert:

"California wildlife management areas: For the purchase or rent, and development, maintenance, and administration of wildlife management areas in the State of California, as authorized by the act of May 18, 1948 (Public Law 534), $300,000, to remain available until expended."

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur with an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Jensen moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 211, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment insert "$250,000."

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 212: Page 96, line 19, strike out "$9,226,978" and insert "$10,-257,309."

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur with an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Jensen moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 212, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment insert "$9,928,509."

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 214: Page 97, line 16, strike out "$9,226,979" and insert in lieu thereof "$10,257,309."

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur with an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Jensen moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 214, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment insert "$9,928,509."

The motion was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider the votes by which action was taken on the several motions was laid on the table.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa? There was no objection.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENSEN. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. CURTIS. As the gentleman knows, I am very much interested in the development in the Missouri River Basin, particularly in the Republican Valley in Nebraska, Kansas, and Colorado. In that area the Bureau of Reclamation is not only carrying on construction for irrigation, but for flood control also. I appeared before the gentleman's committee and also the Senate committee, urging the full budget amounts for these projects.

Mr. JENSEN. The gentleman from Nebraska has been most diligent, not only this year, but throughout the years that I have served on this committee. I am sure that everyone on that committee knows about the problems of the Republican Valley and we are interested in the early completion of Frenchman-Cambridge project, the Bostwick and all the rest of them.

Mr. CURTIS. The amounts carried in the conference report for these projects is an increase over what we started out with, but it is not yet quite up to the budget estimates.

Mr. JENSEN. May I say that the committee has gone over these figures very carefully? We have taken the testimony of the engineers as well as the Bureau of the Budget. We want these projects to go forward at an efficient and economical rate, and we believe that the figures finally agreed upon will do that.

Mr. CURTIS. I am glad to have the assurance of the Chairman of the committee that this irrigation and flood control work will go on at an efficient rate.

Mr. JENSEN. We have taken into account the amount of money that the projects were able to use last year, and all the other factors, and if what has been done proves to be erroneous I can assure you that this committee will be willing to look into the matter when and if such a time comes. And may I say further to the gentleman from Nebraska that he has been most diligent in presenting the needs and wants of his district before this committee, and that because of his efficient work, more floodcontrol and irrigation projects are under construction in his district than perhaps in any other congressional district in the country?

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENSEN. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. BUCK. When this bill was passed by the House it contained adequate provision for the improvement and rehabilitation of Bedloe Island. May I ask the gentleman whether that provision is undisturbed in the conference report?

Mr. JENSEN. It was not disturbed. The $500,000 for the improvement and rehabilitation of Bedloe Island, on which the Statue of Liberty is located, is in the bill exactly as the House approved it and I am happy to state that the work will go forward and this disgraceful situation which has existed for the past 16 years or longer will be taken care of in the proper manner. I want to thank the gentleman from New York for the great interest he has taken in that great symbol of our freedom.

Mr. BUCK. I thank the gentleman for his helpfulness in this matter.

As chairman of the subcommittee charged with the National Park Service appropriation, the able gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Jensen], recognized the need for correcting the disgraceful conditions which have prevailed on Bedloe Island for years, and which have sullied the Statue of Liberty. He felt that this shrine of Americanism merits surroundings of beauty, rather than ugly decrepitude. He therefore included in the bill a sum sufficient for a proper job of rehabilitation, and was diligent in protecting that sum against any attempt at deletion.

All patriotic Americans are indebted to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Jensen] for this fine accomplishment.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENSEN. I yield to the gentleman from South Dakota.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I note a small increase in the appropriation for the Missouri River Basin program. Was that increase proportionately applied to the several projects phase A and phase R2

Mr. JENSEN. Yes, generally speaking, they were.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I note also that in the report on the appropriation with reference to the Standing Rock Sioux Reservation, it is referred to as the Standing Rock Indians of North Dakota. The Standing Rock Reservation is about equally in South Dakota and North Dakota. Is this $50,000 for the Standing Rock Indians of North Dakota, or does it apply to the entire reservation?

Mr. JENSEN. Apparently the amendment covers only those in North Dakota.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Let us get that clear.

Mr. JENSEN. The gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. Schwaße] handles the Indian problems of this committee. I wish the gentleman from Oklahoma would comment on that.

Mr. SCHWABE of Oklahoma. In reference to this particular item I do not think there was ever any question but what the item was taken as it was presented to us.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. May I suggest that the agency headquarters happens to be across the line in North Dakota, but the reservation is almost equally in both States.

Mr. SCHWABE of Oklahoma. My understanding is it applies to all of the interested parties, regardless of their status of residence tus of residence.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. To the Standing Rock Reservation?

Mr. SCHWABE of Oklahoma. That is

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Rather than to the North Dakota members.

Mr. SCHWABE of Oklahoma. That is

Mr. HAGEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENSEN. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. HAGEN. Is it the gentleman's understanding that the new Alaska Indian Service sanatorium and hospital for the care of the tuberculous will be located in southwestern Alaska?

Mr. JENSEN. That is correct.

Mr. HAGEN. Further, may I ask the gentleman this question: During the hearings I appeared before the committee and urged that the hospital be located in the Matanuska Valley at or near Palmer. The chairman of the subcommittee has been there and I should like to ask him if he does not agree that Palmer would be a very suitable location fcr this hospital.

Mr. JENSEN. I think it would be a very suitable location. However, of course, it is not up to this committee to designate the placing of the hospital, but it is a very beautiful valley and I think it would be a good place for the hospital if the authorities felt so inclined. I certainly would be glad to see it at Palmer.

Mr. HAGEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point and include an editorial appearing in the Anchorage Daily

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection. Mr. HAGEN. There has been some discussion of locating the sanatorium at Anchorage as well as Palmer. I should like to suggest that because of the great concentration of Government work and development at Anchorage, the housing shortage is constantly becoming more acute, and the labor supply is short. Palmer in the Matanuska Valley is less than 50 miles from Anchorage and if the sanatorium were located in that vicinity, there would be convenient access to Anchorage. Furthermore there are many important advantages of having the institution located in the Palmer area. As we all know, the Matanuska Valley is the center of the largest farming community in Alaska which means the sanatorium would be conveniently located with reference to farm produce.

Construction of a great new airport will probably start at Anchorage this year, there will be considerable road work, the Army will continue its activities, and thus it would seem it would be the sensible thing to construct the tuberculosis sanatorium elsewhere where the competition for living quarters, workmen, and so forth would not be so great.

I should like to insert an editorial from the Anchorage Daily News dated Wednesday, May 26, 1948.

THE OBVIOUS PLACE

Ever since the Joint Appropriations Sub-committee began its deliberations on a bill calling for the building of a 400-bed hospital in Alaska, as the first step in a move designed to alleviate the growing incidence of tuberculosis among the native Indians, there has been a great deal of pressure exerted to bring the hospital to Anchorage.

With the bill due to be reported out of committee on Thursday there seems to be a growing fervor to bring more pressure to bear for its location here. Normally we would be inclined to feel the erection of such an institution in the nearby Anchorage area, a sound proposition for the city.

However, we feel there are several points which should be given full consideration before exerting pressure for its construction here. We realize the cost of the structure will total some $5,000,000 and that the an-nual pay roll will amount to approximately $1,000,000, but one of the biggest hurdles for this area would be to find the necessary land that would meet the requirements of the Office of Indian Affairs who will administer the activities of the hospital.

In the meantime Palmer residents have been spurred on by their interest in the project to the extent that several tracts of land have been offered free to the Government. Needless to say, the Government will not bypass such an offer if the various tracts made available meet their needs.

It seems to us that Palmer offers other advantages which Anchorage cannot meet, such as the nearby availability of garden fresh foodstuffs which are required in the treatment of tubercular patients. Important, too, is the fact that such an institution would provide part time work for many of the homesteaders in the Matanuska Valley.

And there can be no doubt but that Anchorage would also profit in the long run, as much of the funds needed to run the hospital would ultimately be spent here, as would salaries.

But more important than just the bringing of more money to Anchorage is the long-range view—the necessity for development of the territory as a whole. If Alaska is to prosper, it will never occur if Juneau, Fairbanks, and Anchorage keep running to the pot with a gravy spoon.

We say, let's help Palmer get the hospital.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENSEN. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. RANKIN. How much is contained in this bill for the construction of the Natchez Trace?

Mr. JENSEN. We have a contract authorization of $2,680,000 which the conferees will recommend for parkways. There is no cash in this bill earmarked for that particular parkway. The Park Service has in excess of a $5,000,000 carry-over. We are also recommending a contract authorization in the amount of $2,680,000. So, they have sufficient funds, I am sure, to take care of most of the needed construction on parkways.

Mr. RANKIN. They ought to begin to use it. These parkways ought not to just be used to furnish jobs for individuals. They ought to go ahead and do this work

Mr. JENSEN. We certainly agree with the gentleman.

Mr. RANKIN. I shall insist on it from now on.

Mr. JENSEN. Of course, it is rather apparent that a lot of pushing has not been done because of the great carryover they have. But, they promised us they would go forward and get this work done. That, of course, is an administrative function of the Department.

Mr. BARRETT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENSEN. I yield to the gentleman from Wyoming.

Mr. BARRETT. I note here that the Senate has decreased the amount for the construction of roads and trails in the national parks.

Mr. JENSEN. If the gentleman will permit, that all applies to Alaska; not to the mainland.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired.

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for two additional minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

Mr. BARRETT. I note here that the Senate has stricken out the language with reference to regional offices as written in, in the House for the Bureau of Land Management, and I note this language in the conference report:

That none of the appropriations made in this act shall be used to pay the salaries of personnel assigned to regional offices of the Bureau of Land Management in excess of the average total number of all personnel assigned to such regional offices during the fiscal year 1948; and the Senate agree to the

Will the gentleman explain that language to me?

Mr. JENSEN. The purpose of that amendment is to keep the Department from expanding other than in district offices where the tract books are supposed to be, so that we can get these thousands of leases adjudicated, some of which may be from two and a half to six years old. I might say to the gentleman that the job of the Bureau of Land Management is now the baby of the Congressmen from the West who objected to getting this thing straightened out according to the House version so that we could get these leases adjudicated. they seem to think that they should have the say, and so it is now their baby. If we do not get these leases expedited, they will know exactly who is going to be held responsible.

Mr. BARRETT. This amendment will not prohibit automatic increases in pay for these people?

Mr. JENSEN. No. Mr. D'EWART. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENSEN. I yield to the gentleman from Montana.

Mr. D'EWART. The chairman will remember our colloquy with regard to the Lower Marias and the Montana pumping. I gather that part of the funds for these two projects are in the conference report carried up to phase A.

Mr. JENSEN. $450,000 of the Lower Marias was carried up to phase A, but the Montana pumping has not been changed from phase B to phase A. It is still in phase B.

the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENSEN

Mr. JENSEN. I yield to the gentleman from Arizona.

Mr. MURDOCK. The House put in a provision which I greatly question. What became of the amendment that provided that the Commissioner of Reclamation must be an engineer?

Mr. JENSEN. The House agreed to the Senate version of that provision,

Mr. DURHAM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENSEN. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. DURHAM. Under the appropriation to carry out the Bureau of Mines program in regard to synthetic fuels, the budget requested how much, and how much was finally allowed in this appropriation?

The gentleman from Mr. JENSEN. Pennsylvania [Mr. FENTON] will answer that. He is in charge of the mines and mining section of this bill.

Mr. FENTON. In the conference the Bureau of Mines got every nickel they asked for

Mr. DURHAM. That is good.

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have five legislative days in which to extend their remarks on this bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa? There was no objection.

ASSISTANCE TO GREECE AND TURKEY-MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 724)

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read, and, together with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs and ordered to be

To the Congress of the United States:
Pursuant to the provisions of Public Law 75, enabling the United States to render financial, technical, and material aid to the Governments of Greece and Turkey, I submit herewith the third quarterly report on the activities and expenditures of funds under the authority of this act.

HARRY S. TRUMAN.

THE WHITE HOUSE, June 18, 1948.

INCREASING THE RATES OF SERVICE-CONNECTED DEATH COMPENSATION

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts submitted the following conference report and statement on the bill (S. 2825) to increase the rates of service-connected death compensation payable to certain widows, children, and dependent parents of persons who served in the active military or naval service, and for other purposes:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 2825) to increase the compensation payable to the surviving children of certain deceased veterans whose death was wartime serviceconnected, having met, after full and free do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagree ment to the amendment of the House and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: "In lieu of the matter inserted by the House amendment insert the following: That paragraph IV of part I of Veterans Regulation Numbered 1 (a), as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows: "'The surviving widow, child or children, and dependent mother or father of any deceased person who died as the result of injury or disease incurred in or aggravated by active military or naval service as provided in part I, paragraph I hereof, shall be entitled to receive compensation at the monthly rates specified next below:

"'Widow but no child, $75; widow with one child, $100 (with $15 each additional child); no widow but one child, $58; no widow but two children, $82 (equally divided); no widow but three children, $106 (equally divided) (with $20 for each additional child; total amount to be equally divided); dependent mother or father, $60 (or both), $35 each.

"SEC. 2. Subparagraph (c), paragraph I, part II, Veterans Regulation Numbered 1 (a), as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"'(c) Any veteran or the dependents of any deceased veteran otherwise entitled to compensation under the provisions of part II of this regulation or the general pension law shall be entitled to receive the rate of compensation provided in part I of this reg-ulation, if the disability or death of such veteran resulted from an injury or disease received in line of duty (1) as a direct result of armed conflict, or (2) while engaged in extra hazardous service, including such service under conditions simulating war, or (3) while the United States is engaged in war.

"Sec. 3. Paragraph III of part II of Veterans Regulation Numbered 1 (a), as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"The surviving widow, child or children, and dependent mother or father of any deceased person who died as a result of incommendation. jury or disease incurred in or aggravated by active military or naval service as provided for in part II, paragraph I hereof, shall be entitled to receive compensation at 80 per centum of the rates specified for such dependents in paragraph IV, part I hereof, as now or hereafter amended.'

"SEC. 4. The increases provided by this Act shall be effective from the first day of the second month following the passage of this Act."

And the House agree to the same. That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House to the title of the bill, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by the House amendment in-sert the following: "A bill to increase the rates of service-connected death compensa-tion payable to certain widows, children, and dependent parents of persons who served in the active military or naval service, and for other purposes."

And the House agree to the same. EDITH NOURSE ROGERS. BERNARD W. KEARNEY, FRANK A. MATHEWS, Jr., JOHN E. RANKIN, A. LEONARD ALLEN, Managers on the Part of the House.

EUGENE D. MILLIKIN, ROBERT A. TAFT, HUGH BUTLER, ALBEN W. BARKLEY, TOM CONNALLY,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (S. 2825) to increase the compensation payable to the surviving chil-dren of certain deceased veterans whose death was wartime service-connected, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The House amendment struck out all of the Senate bill after the enacting clause. The committee of conference recommends that the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House, and agree to the same with an amendment which is a substitute for both the Senate bill and the House amendment, and that the House agree to the same.

The substantial differences in rates between the House amendment and the proposed conference substitute are noted in the following schedule:

The House bill placed an annual income limitation to $1,800 for one parent or $3,000 for two for use in determining dependency. It also excluded life-insurance payments from any source in an amount less than $3,000 received in any one year. The conference agreement eliminates this provision. It was pointed out that complaints were made that the criteria in the Veterans' Administration regulations for determining dependency of parents were not liberal enough to meet present-day requirements. Accordingly, the conferees agreed that the Veterans' Administration should survey such regulations with a view toward revision to meet current needs.

The Senate bill provided that widows and orphans of peacetime veterans should receive 80 percent of the rates specified for wartime cases. No provision of this character was contained in the House bill. The House managers agreed to accept it.

XCIV-558

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. The conferees on S. 2825, providing increases for widows and dependents of veterans who lost their lives in the service of their country have reached, in my opinion, a reasonable compromise.

The rates for widow but no child, $75; widow with one child, $100—with $15 for each additional child; no widow but one child, $58; no widow but two children, $82—equally divided; no widow but three children, $106—equally divided (with $20 for each additional child; total amount to be equally divided); dependent mother or father, $60, or both, $35

These figures mean a slight increase over the House bill rates for orphans and a slight increase for widows and widows with one or more children over the Senate bill rates.

The House managers have agreed to accept the Senate amendment providing 80 percent of wartime compensation for widows and dependents of peacetime veterans.

The House receded from its section providing an increase of income limitation for parents. However, the conferees agreed that the present Veterans' Administration formula is antiquated and in serious need of revision. It was agreed that unless the Veterans' Administration revised their formula to fit existing economic conditions, legislation to accomplish this purpose would be enacted in the next session of the Congress.

The conference report was agreed to. A motion to reconsider was laid on the

INCREASING COMPENSATION FOR CERTAIN VETERANS

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts submitted the following conference report and statement on the bill (S. 2821) to provide increases of compensation for cerfain veterans with service-connected disabilities who have dependents:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 2821) to provide increases of compensation for certain veterans with service-connected disabili-ties who have dependents, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: "That any person entitled to compen-sation at wartime rates for disability incurred in or aggravated by active service as provided in part I, or paragraph I (c), part II, Veterans Regulation Numbered 1 (a), as amended, or the World War Veterans' Act, 1924, as amended, and restored with limitatives. tions by Public Law 141, Seventy-third Con-gress, March 28, 1934, as amended, and whose disability is rated not less than 60 per centum, shall be entitled to additional compensation for dependents in the following monthly amounts:

"(1) If and while rated totally disabled

"(a) has a wife but no child living, $21;
"(b) has a wife and one child living, $35;
"(c) has a wife and two children living,

$45.50; "(d) has a wife and three or more children living, $56; "(e) has no wife but one child living, $14;

"(f) has no wife but two children living, $24.50:

"(g) has no wife but three or more children

living, $35;

"(h) has a mother or father, either or both dependent upon him for support, then, in addition to the above amounts, $17.50 for each parent so dependent.

"(2) If and while rated partially disabled, but not less than 60 per centum, in an amount having same ratio to the amount specified in subsection (1) hereof as the degree of his disability bears to the total disability.

"SEC. 2. That any person entitled to compensation at peacetime rates for disability incurred in or aggravated by active service as provided in paragraph II, part II, Veterans Regulation Numbered 1 (a), as amended, except paragraph I (c) thereof, and whose disability is rated not less than 60 per centum, shall be entitled to additional compensation for dependents in the following monthly amounts:

"(1) If and while rated totally disabled

"(a) has a wife but no child living, $16.80; "(b) has a wife and one child living, $28;
"(c) has a wife and two children living, $36.40;

"(d) has a wife and three or more children

living, $44.80;
"(e) has no wife but one child living, $11.20;

(f) has no wife but two children living, $19.60;

"(g) has no wife but three or more children living, $28;

"(h) has a mother or father, either or both dependent upon him for support, then, in addition to the above amounts, $14 for each parent so dependent.

"(2) If and while rated partially disabled, but not less than 60 per centum, in an amount having same ratio to the amount specified in subsection (1) hereof as the degree of his disability bears to the total disability.

"SEC. 3. The additional compensation for a dependent or dependents provided by this Act shall not be payable to any veteran during any period he is in receipt of an increased rate of compensation or of subsistence allowance on account of a dependent or dependents under any other law administered by the Veterans' Administration: Provided. That he may elect to receive whichever is the "SEC. 4. The administrative, definitive, and penal provisions of Public Law Numbered 2, Seventy-third Congress, and Veterans Regu-lations thereunder, as amended, shall be for application under this Act.

"SEC. 5. This Act shall take effect on the first day of the second calendar month next succeeding its enactment."

And the House agree to the same,

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (S. 2821) to provide increases of compensation for certain veterans with service-connected disabilities who have dependents submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The House amendment struck out all of the Senate bill after the enacting clause. The committee of conference recommends that the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House, with an amendment which is a substitute for both the Senate bill and the House amendment, and that the House agree to the same.

The substantial differences in rates between the House amendment and the proposed conference substitute are noted in the following schedule:

Totally disabled	T D stoo	S. 2821, wartime	S. 2821, peace- time	Conference agree- ment
Totally dissoled	H, R, 5588			War- time	Peace- time
Wife, but no child. Wife, 1 child. Wife, 2 children. Wife, 3 or more children. No wife, 1 child. No wife, 2 children No wife, 3 or more children. Dependent parent or parents, each.	$30 50 65 80 20 35 50 25	$15,00 25,00 32,50 40,00 10,00 17,50 25,00 12,50	$12 20 26 32 8 14 20 10	$21,00 35,00 45,50 56,00 14,00 24,50 35,00 17,50	$16.80 28.00 36.40 44.80 11.20 19.60 28.60 14.00

The conference agreement also provides that if and while rated partially disabled, but not less than 60 percent, the amount of additional compensation shall be in an amount having the same ratio to the amount specified in the above schedule under heading of "Conference agreement" as the degree of disability bears to the total disability.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill S. 2821, and ask unanimous consent that the statement of the managers on the part of the House be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. The conferees agreed on 70 percent of the House rates on this bill which would increase the compensation received by veterans who are 60 percent or more disabled and who have one or more dependents.

The House accepted the Senate provision providing for 80 percent of wartime rates for peacetime veterans-a provision which was not included in the original

I think we have reached a reasonable compromise and the best that could be done under existing conditions. I move the adoption of the conference report.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 5 minutes

The SPEAKER. The gentlewoman from Massachusetts [Mrs. Rogers] is in control of the time. Does the gentlewoman yield to the gentleman from Mississippi?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I agreed not to take any time in order to have the bill come up promptly and be sent to the other body. So I have not yielded any time.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House

The conference report was agreed to. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 5 minutes

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the gentleman from Mississippi is recognized for 1 minute.

There was no objection. Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, our first duty is to the disabled veterans.

You have heard a good deal of demagoguery about my attitude on the Negro question. I got through the committee a bill to establish a Negro veterans' hospital in Virginia because the real Negroes wanted it. It would give them an opportunity to supply their own doctors and nurses and to show what they can do. This outfit which calls itself the Association for the Advancement of the Colored Race has interfered with it in the other body, although it passed the House without opposition.

The one Negro in America whose name stands out as a representative of his race is Booker T. Washington. I am going to read you a telegram I received from his daughter this morning about this hospital. The telegram is from New York. It is as follows:

Hon. JOHN RANKIN,

Washington, D. C .:

This is to express my deep appreciation to you for your tireless efforts in trying to get a veterans' hospital at my father's birthplace for our people. I am praying that you might yet find a way for this bill to get through the Senate, since it has passed the House. PORTIA WASHINGTON PITTMAN.

That is Booker T. Washington's daughter. They want this hospital, and the white people of the South want them to have it.

It will furnish them an institution where they can be to themselves, where they can have their own doctors and their own nurses. We have one such hospital at Tuskegee, Ala. I was chairman of the Committee on World War Veterans Legislation for 16 years, and I saw to it that they got what they needed. They have done a good job. We have one established in Mound Bayou, Miss., for the same purpose.

These Negroes came here asking for this one in Virginia, and the House voted unanimously for it.

Yet it is being held up in the Senate because of the pressure being used by an outfit, that I regard as a Communistfront outfit, that is doing infinite harm to the Negroes of this country.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield. Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. heartily agree with the gentleman that the colored doctors have done a remarkable job, as well as the colored nurses. Mr. RANKIN. The passage of this bill would be to the best interest of both the Negro veterans and the white veterans in Virginia and adjoining States. It passed the House unanimously, and I feel sure it would pass the Senate unanimously, if the Members of that body are permitted to vote on it.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN] has expired.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have five legislative days in which to extend their remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

AMENDING SECTION 3 OF THE STANDARD TIME ACT OF 1918

Mr. LEONARD W. HALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill, H. R. 6318, an act to amend section 3 of the Standard Time Act of March 19, 1918, as amended, relating to the placing of a certain portion of the State of Idaho in the third time zone, with a Senate amendment, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill. The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Page 1, lines 9 and 10, strike out all after "Provided", over to and including "time" in line 4, page 2, and insert: "That common carriers within such portion of the State of Idaho may conduct their operations on Pacific time.

INTERSTATE BOUNDARY COMPACT BY AND BETWEEN THE STATES OF MICHI-GAN, MINNESOTA, AND WISCONSIN

Mr. DEVITT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 206 consenting to an interstate boundary compact by and between the States of Michigan, Minnesota, and Wisconsin.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. DEVITT]?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby given to the following inter-state boundary compact by and between the State of Michigan, the State of Minnesota, and the State of Wisconsin:

Page 3, line 11, after "Congress", insert ": Provided, That in the case of condemnations of easements through or other interests in airspace, in fixing condemnation awards, consideration may be given to the reasonable probable future use of the underlying land."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California [Mr. HINSHAW]?

Mr. STEFAN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object. I would like to have the gentleman explain this amendment that has to do with the Civil Aeronautics Administration, which makes changes which may affect our responsibility as far as appropriations are concerned.

Mr. HINSHAW. This bill was reported out of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce unanimously and was passed by the House. I am sure it is satisfactory to the gentleman from Nebraska

The SPEAKER. If there is to be much discussion about this, the request will have to be withdrawn.

Mr. STEFAN. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from California has explained the amendment to me, and I withdraw my reservation of objection.

Mr. FELLOWS. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill H. R. 3566, an act to amend subsection (c) of section 19 of the Immigration Act of 1917, as amended, and for other purposes, and I ask unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill. The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maine

[Mr. Fellows1?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement of the managers on the part of the House.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3566) to amend subsection (c) of section 19 of the Immigration Act of 1917, as amended, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagree-ment to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

On page 5 of the Senate engrossed bill, strike out the below quoted language appearing in lines 9 to 20:

"If during the session of the Congress at which a case is reported, or if a case is re-ported less than ninety days prior to the close of the session, then during the next session of the Congress, the Congress passes a resolution stating in substance that it favors the suspension of such deportation, the Attorney General shall cancel deportation proceedings. If during the session of the Congress at which a case is reported, or if a case is reported less than ninety days prior to the close of the session, then during the next session of the Congress, the Congress does not pass such a resolution, the Attorney General shall thereupon deport such alien in the manner provided by law."

And insert in lieu thereof the below quoted language:

"If during the session of the Congress at which a case is reported, or prior to the close of the session of the Congress next following the session at which a case is reported. the Congress passes a concurrent resolution stating in substance that it favors the suspension of such deportation, the Attorney General shall cancel deportation proceedings. If prior to the close of the session of the Congress next following the session at which a case is reported, the Congress does not pass such a concurrent resolution, the Attorney General shall thereupon deport such alien in the manner provided by law."

And the Senate agree to the same.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill, H. R. 3566, to amend subsection (c) of section 19 of the Immigration Act of 1917, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The Senate amendment to the House bill strikes out all after the enacting clause and rewrites section 1 of the bill with amendment. The House agrees to the Senate amendment of section 1 of the bill providing for congressional review of the Attorney General's recommendations in deportation cases submitted to the Congress under section 19 of the Immigration Act of 1917 but insists on its amendment that the Congress shall have an opportunity to review these cases, not only in the session in which they are presented but also during the session next following, if so desired. To this amendment the managers on the part of the Senate agree.

The managers on the part of the House agree to the Senate amendment striking out section 2 of the bill.

FRANK FELLOWS,
LOUIS E. GRAHAM,
EMANUEL CELLER,
Managers on the Part of the House.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the adoption of the conference report. The conference report was agreed to. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Act:

"(b) 'Displaced person' means any displaced person or refugee as defined in Annex I of the Constitution of the International Refugee Organization and who is the concern of the International Refugee Organization.

"(c) 'Eligible displaced person' means a displaced person as defined in subsection (b) above, (1) who on or after September 1, 1939 and on or before December 22, 1945, entered Germany, Austria, or Italy and who on January 1, 1948, was in Italy or the American sector, the British sector, or the French sector of either Berlin or Vienna or the American zone, the British zone, or the French zone of either Germany or Austria; or a person who, having resided in Germany or Austria, was a victim of persecution by the Nazi government and was detained in, or was obliged to flee from such persecution and was subsequently re-turned to, one of these countries as a result of enemy action, or of war circumstances, and on January 1, 1948, had not been firmly resettled therein, and (2) who is qualified under the immigration laws of the United States for admission into the United States for permanent residence, and (3) for whom assurances in accordance with the regula-tions of the Commission have been given that such person, if admitted into the United States, will be suitably employed without displacing some other person from employment and that such person, and the members of such person's family who shall accompany such person and who propose to live with such person, shall not become public charges and will have safe and sanitary housing without displacing some other person from such housing. The spouse and unmarried dependent child or children under twenty-one years of age of such an eligible displaced person shall, if otherwise qualified for admission into the United States for permanent residence, also be deemed eligible displaced persons.

"(d) 'Eligible displaced person' shall also mean a native of Czechoslovakia who had fled as a direct result of persecution or fear of persecution from that country since January 1, 1948, and (1) who is on the effective date of this Act in Italy or the American sector, the British sector, or the French sector of either Berlin or Vienna, or the American zone, the British zone, or the French zone of either Germany or Austria, and (2) who is qualified under the immigration laws of the United States for admission into the United States for permanent residence, and (3) for whom assurances in accordance with the regulations of the Commission have been given that such person, if admitted into the United States, will be suitably employed without displacing some other person from employment and that such person, and the members of such person's family who shall accompany such person and who propose to live with such person, shall not become public charges and will have safe and sanitary housing without displacing some other person from such housing. The spouse and unmarried dependent child or children under twenty-one years of age of such an eligible displaced person shall, if otherwise qualified for admission into the United States for per manent residence, also be deemed eligible displaced persons.

"(e) 'Eligible displaced orphan' means a displaced person (1) who is under the age of 16 years, and (2) who is qualified under the immigration laws of the United States for admission into the United States for permanent residence, and (3) who is an orphan because of the death or disappearance of both parents, and (4) who, on or before the effective date of this Act, was in Italy or in the American sector, the British sector, or the French sector of either Berlin or Vienna or the American zone, the British zone or the French zone of either Germany or Austria, and (5) for whom satisfactory assurances in accordance with the regulations of the Commission have been given that such person, if admitted into the United States, will be cared for properly.

"Sec. 3. (a) During the two fiscal years following the passage of this Act a number of immigration visas not to exceed 202,000 may be issued without regard to quota limitations for those years to eligible displaced persons as quota immigrants, as provided in subsection (b) of this section: Provided, That not less than 40 per centum of the visas issued pursuant to this Act shall be available exclusively to eligible displaced persons whose place of origin or country of nationality has been de facto annexed by a foreign power: Provided further, That not more than 2,000 visas shall be issued to eligible displaced persons as defined in subsection (d) of section 2 of this Act.

"(b) Upon the issuance of an immigration visa to any eligible displaced person as provided for in this Act, the consular officer shall use a quota number from the immigration quota of the country of the alien's na-tionality as defined in section 12 of the Act of May 26, 1924 (U.S.C., title 8, sec. 212), for the fiscal year then current at the time or, if no such quota number is available for said fiscal year, in that event for the first succeeding fiscal year in which a quota number is available: Provided, That not more than 50 per centum of any quota shall be so used in any fiscal year: Provided further, That eligible displaced orphans may be issued special nonquota immigration visas, except that the number of such special nonquota immigration visas shall not exceed three thousand.

"SEC. 4. (a) Any alien who (1) entered the United States prior to April 1, 1948, and (2) is otherwise admissible under the immigration laws, and (3) is a displaced person re-siding in the United States as defined in this section may apply to the Attorney General for an adjustment of his immigration status. If the Attorney General shall, upon consideration of all the facts and circumstances of the case, determine that such alien is qualified under the provisions of this section, the Attorney General shall report to the Congress all of the pertinent facts in the case. If during the session of the Con-gress at which a case is reported, or prior to the end of the session of the Congress next following the session at which a case is reported, the Congress passes a concurrent resolution stating in substance that it favors the granting of the status of permanent residence to such alien the Attorney General is authorized, upon receipt of a fee of $18.00, which shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States to the account of miscellaneous receipts, to record the admission of the alien for permanent residence as of the date of the alien's last entry into the United States. If prior to the end of the session of the Congress next following the session at which a case is reported, the Congress does not pass such resolution, the Attorney General shall thereupon deport such alien in the manner provided by law: Provided, That the number of displaced persons who shall be granted the status of permanent residence pursuant to this section shall not exceed 15,000. Upon the grant of status of permanent residence to such alien as provided for in this section, the Secretary of State shall, if the alien was a quota immigrant at the time of entry, reduce by one the immigra-tion quota of the country of the alien's na-tionality as defined in Section 12 of the Immigration Act of May 26, 1924, for the fiscal year then current or the next succeeding fiscal year in which a quota number is available, but not more than 50 per centum of any quota shall be used for this purpose in any given fiscal year: Provided further, That quota deductions provided for in this section shall be made within the 50 per centum limitations contained in section 3 (b) of this Act.

"(b) When used in this section the term 'Displaced Person residing in the United States' means a person who establishes that he lawfully entered the United States as a non-immigrant under section 3 or as a nonquota immigrant student under subdivision (e) of Section 4 of the Immigration Act of May 26, 1924, as amended, and that he is a person displaced from the country of his birth, or nationality, or of his last residence as a result of events subsequent to the out-break of World War II; and that he cannot return to any of such countries because of persecution or fear of persecution on account of race, religion or political opinions.

"SEC. 5. Quota nationality for the purposes of this Act shall be determined in accordance with the provisions of Section 12 of the Immigration Act of 1924 (43 Stat. 160-161; 8 U. S. C. 212) and no eligible displaced person shall be issued an immigration visa if he is known or believed by the consular officer to be subject to exclusion from the United States under any provision of the immigration laws, with the exception of the contract labor clause of section 3 of the Immigration Act of February 5, 1917, as amended (39 Stat. 875-878; 8 U. S. C. 136), and that part of the said Act which excludes from the United States persons whose ticket or passage is paid by another or by any corporation, association, society, municipality, or foreign gov-ernment, either directly or indirectly; and all eligible displaced persons and eligible displaced orphans shall be exempt from paying visa fees and head taxes.

"SEC. 6. The preferences provided within the quotas by Section 6 of the Immigration Act of 1924 (43 Stat. 155-156; 47 Stat. 656; 45 Stat. 1009; 8 U. S. C. 206), shall not be applicable in the case of any eligible displaced person receiving an immigration visa under this Act, but in lieu of such preferences the following preferences, without priority in time of issuance of visas as beween such preferences, shall be granted to eligible displaced persons and their family dependents who are the spouse or the un-married dependent child or children under twenty-one years of age, in the consideration of visa applications:

"(a) First. Eligible displaced persons who have been previously engaged in agricultural pursuits and who will be employed in the United States in agricultural pursuits: Provided, That not less than 30 per centum of the visas issued pursuant to this Act shall be made available exclusively to such persons: And provided further, That the wife, and unmarried dependent child or children under twenty-one years of age, of such persons may, in accordance with the regulations of the Commission, be deemed to be of that class of persons who have been previously engaged in agricultural pursuits and who will be employed in the United States in agricultural pursuits.

"(b) Second. Eligible displaced who are household construction, clothing, and garment workers, and other workers needed in the locality in the United States in which such persons propose to reside; or eligible displaced persons possessing special educational, scientific, technological or professional qualifications

"(c) Third. Eligible displaced persons who are the blood relatives of citizens or lawfully admitted alien residents of the United States, such relationship in either case being within the third degree of consanguinity computed according to the rules of the common law.

"SEC. 7. Within the preferences provided in section 6, priority in the issuance of visas shall be given first to eligible displaced per-sons who during World War II bore arms against the enemies of the United States and are unable or unwilling to return to the countries of which they are nationals because of persecution or fear of persecution on account of race, religion or political opinions and second, to eligible displaced persons who, on January 1, 1948, were located in displaced persons camps and centers, but in exceptional cases visas may be issued to those eligible displaced persons located outside of displaced persons camps and centers upon a showing, in accordance with the regulations of the Commission, of special circumstances which would justify such issuance.

"SEC. 8. There is hereby created a Commission to be known as the Displaced Persons Commission, consisting of three members to be appointed by the President, by and with advice and consent of the Senate, for a term ending June 30, 1951, and one mem-ber of the Commission shall be designated by him as chairman. Each member of the Commission shall receive a salary at the rate of $10,000 per annum. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums of money as may be necessary to enable the Commission to discharge its duties. Within the limits of such funds as may be appropriated to the Commission or as may be allocated to it by the President, the Commission may employ necessary personnel without regard to the Civil Service laws or the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, and make provisions for necessary supplies, facilities, and services to carry out the provisions and accomplish the purposes of this Act. It shall be the duty of the Commission to formulate and issue regulations, necessary under the provisions of this Act, and in compliance therewith, for the admission into the United States of eligible displaced or-phans and eligible displaced persons. The Commission shall formulate and issue regulations for the purpose of obtaining the most general distribution and settlement of persons admitted under this Act throughout the United States and their Territories and essions. It shall also be the duty of the Commission to report on February 1, 1949, and semiannually thereafter to the President and to the Congress on the situation regarding eligible displaced orphans, eligible displaced persons and displaced persons. Such report shall also include in-formation respecting employment conditions and the housing situation in this country, the place and type of employment, and the residence of eligible displaced orphans and eligible displaced persons who have been admitted into the United States pursuant to the provisions of this Act. At the end of its term the Commission shall make a final report to the President and to the Congress

"SEC. 9. Every eligible displaced person, except an eligible displaced person who shall have derived his status because of being the spouse or an unmarried dependent child under twenty-one years of age of an eligible displaced person, who shall be admitted into the United States shall report, on the 1st day of January and on the 1st day of July of each year until he shall have made four reports to the Commission, respecting the employment, place of employment, and residence of such person and the members of such person's family and shall furnish such other information in connection with said employment and residence as the Commission shall by regulation prescribe: Provided, That if such person enters the United States within 60 days prior to either the 1st day of January or the 1st day of July, the first report need not be made until the next date on which a report required to be made. Such report shall be made to the Commission during its term and thereafter to the Attorney General. Any person who willfully violates the provisions of this section shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not to exceed $500, or be imprisoned not more than 6 months.

"SEC. 10. No eligible displaced person shall be admitted into the United States unless there shall have first been a thorough investigation and written report made and prepared by such agency of the Government of the United States as the President shall designate, regarding such person's character, history, and eligibility under this Act. The burden of proof shall be upon the person who seeks to establish his eligibility under this Act. Any person who shall willfully make a misrepresentation for the purpose of gaining admission into the United States as an eligible displaced person shall thereafter not be admissible into the United States. No eligible displaced orphan or eligible displaced person shall be admitted into the United States under the provisions of this Act except in pursuance of the regulations of the Com-mission, but, except as otherwise expressly provided in this Act, the administration of this Act, under the provisions of this Act and the regulations of the Commission as herein provided, shall be by the officials who administer the other immigration laws of the United States. Except as otherwise authorized in this Act, all immigration laws, including deportation laws, shall be applicable to eligible displaced orphans and eligible displaced persons who apply to be or who are admitted into the United States pursuant to this Act.

"SEC. 11. After June 30, 1948, no preference or priority shall be given to any person be-cause of his status as a displaced person, or his status as an eligible displaced person, in the issuance of visas under the other immigration laws of the United States.

'SEC. 12. The Secretary of State is hereby authorized and directed to immediately resume general consular activities in Germany and Austria to the end that the German and Austrian quotas shall be available for applicants for immigration visas pursuant to the immigration laws. From and after June 30. 1948, and until July 1, 1950, notwithstanding the provisions of section 12 of the Immigra-tion Act of May 26, 1924, as amended, 50 per centum of the German and Austrian quotas shall be available exclusively to persons of German ethnic origin who were born in Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Romania, or Yugoslavia and who, on the effective date of this Act reside in Germany and Austria.

"SEC. 13. No visas shall be issued under the provisions of this Act to any person who is or has been a member of, or participated in, any movement which is or has been hostile to the United States or the form of govern-ment of the United States.

"SEC. 14. Any person or persons who knowingly violate or conspire to violate any proviof this Act, except section 9, shall be guilty of a felony, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than $500 nor more than $10,000, or shall be imprisoned not less than two or more than ten years, or both.

And the House agree to the same. FRANK FELLOWS, E. WALLACE CHADWICK, ED GOSSETT, LOUIS E. GRAHAM, FRANK L. CHELF, Managers on the Part of the House. CHAPMAN REVERCOMB, JAMES O. EASTLAND, FORREST C. DONNELL Managers on the Part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 2242) to authorize for a limited period of time the admission into the United States of certain European displaced persons for permanent residence, and for other purposes, submit the following statement in explanation to the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

In a free exchange of opinions and arguments the conferees endeavored to compose the numerous differences of the measures passed by their respective Houses.

The compromise bill would admit into the United States for permanent residence up to a maximum of 220,000 displaced persons, and it is the confident expectation of the conferees that the enactment of this legislation will be regarded by other countries and particularly by the members of the International Refugee Organization as an inducement to further recognition of their obligations to accept a relative share of the displaced persons. This legislation has proceeded upon the assumption that other nations will soon accept for resettlement a proportionate number of displaced persons, and that by doing so they will cooperate with the United States in expediting the closing of the camps and terminating the emergency.

It is further the consensus of the conferees that the language of the proviso to section 3 (a) of the bill providing for a special priority for displaced persons "whose place of origin or country of nationality has been de facto annexed by a foreign power" has been used exclusively for the purpose of the definition of a certain class of eligible displaced persons and that it cannot and shall not be understood or interpreted as implying any recognition on behalf of the Government of the United States of the territorial status in eastern Europe. The main differences between the House amendments and the bill as agreed to in conference are noted below, except for changes made necessary by reason of agreements reached by the conferees and clarifying changes made in order to perfect the legis-

The "cut-off" date of December 22, 1945, for certain of the displaced persons has been agreed upon as representing the concept that persons displaced from their countries of origin during the war should be offered now immediately resettlement opportunities.

The consent of the Senate conferees has been obtained for the 15,000 displaced persons residing in the United States to be offered the opportunity to obtain the status of permanent residents subject to final approval by the Congress of recommendations made in that respect by the Attorney

The special preference accorded to persons engaged in agricultural pursuits is prompted by the desire for general basic distribution of persons admitted pursuant to the bill and also because the housing situation is much less acute in the rural areas.

The special preference granted under section 3 (a) is prompted by the fact that nationals of countries and provinces made de facto parts of the U. S. S. R. represents the real "hard core" of the displaced persons in view of the fact that their repatriation is highly improbable because of the political situation prevailing in their countries and places of origin.

The Senate conferees agreed to two House amendments (a) admitting up to 2,000 recent refugees from Czechoslovakia provided that they are at the date of the enactment of the bill in the zones specified therein, and (b) admitting nonquota up to 3,000 eligible displaced orphans provided that satisfactory assurances have been given that such orphans if admitted into the United States will be cared for properly.

The Senate conferees have also agreed to those sections of the House amendment which provide that all visas issued under the bill, except visas issued for eligible displaced orphans, should be properly charged to quotas, as established by the existing law.

The House conferees have agreed to an amended version of a section of the Senate bill which would make 50 percent of the German and Austrian quotas available from and after June 30, 1948, and until July 1, 1950, for persons of German ethnic origin who were born in Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Rumania, or Yugoslavia.

various differences between measures passed by both Houses pertaining to the administration of the bill were com-posed so as to insure the proper enforcement of the law, a suitable resettlement of displaced persons all over the United States, its Territories and possessions, and by preserving all safeguards with respect to exclusion of subversives and by providing for proper assurances that new immigrants shall not become public charges.

The managers on the part of the House believe that this is the best displaced per-sons bill upon which the conferees could agree and that if any legislation upon this subject is to be enacted, it is incumbent upon the House to give its approval to the compromise bill as reported.

FRANK FELLOWS, LOUIS E. GRAHAM, E. WALLACE CHADWICK, FRANK L. CHELF, En GOSSETT.

Managers on the Part of the House.

Mr. FELLOWS. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (S. 2242) to authorize for a limited period of time the admission into the United States of certain European displaced persons for permanent residence, and for other purposes, and ask unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. CELLER. I wish an opportunity to speak briefly on the conference report. Also the gentleman from Maine desires to speak on the conference re-Will I have the right to do so without making a reservation of objection?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maine will have 1 hour on the conference report which he may yield, The Chair expresses the hope, however, that he will not be too liberal in his yielding.

Mr. STEFAN. Reserving the right to object, and of course I shall not, nor will I take up any time of the House, but I am asking that the gentleman from Maine will explain whether or not the amendment I placed in the bill with reference to bringing Czechs into the United States is still in the bill.

Mr. FELLOWS. Yes. The SPEAKER. The conference report is not much longer than the statement. The Clerk will read the conference report.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, a point of order

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will

Mr. CELLER. Will I be deprived of making a motion to recommit the conference report-not desiring to take up any time-if I consent to the reading of the statement in lieu of the report?

The SPEAKER. That motion will be in order after the previous question is ordered.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD on the conference report.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection. Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, it is rather late for anyone to criticize the displaced persons bill or the final conference report. To attempt amendments now or to refuse its acceptance would mean the death of the bill and all that it seeks to accomplish for the relief of the hopeless people who yearn for the day when at least some among them will be saved

The bill should have been more liberal according to my viewpoint, but the rule of the majority decreed against expansion of its provisions and said it should be confined within rigid limits. I accept the dictum of the House and now accept the conference report. I believe the displaced persons' bill will prove itself so that we might expect Federal relief later. Meantime more 200,000 unfortunates, including than 3.000 orphans, 2,000 refugee Czechs, and others will be permitted to come to our shores. I regret more than I can ever say, how much I deplore the injection or the consideration of religious bias or intolerance in connection with such a bill. Such references have no basis in our American legislative system. I deplore it and abjure any contact with it. My only hope is that this bill, after having served a good purpose, will lead to further and final relief of the distressed.

The report has weaknesses not to be condoned, but its total virtues outweigh its gross deficiencies.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the conference report.

(The Clerk began reading the conference report.)

Mr. MICHENER (interrupting the reading). Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MICHENER. As I understood. there was no objection to reading the statement in lieu of the report. The report is technical and just consumes time on a matter that is difficult to understand.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state that he did not put the request.

Mr. MICHENER. Then, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the technical report be dispensed with and that the statement be read in lieu thereof.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to ne request of the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object-

The SPEAKER. The Chair calls for the regular order. It will either be the reading of the full report or the statement. The Chair is not depriving any one of his opportunity later to find out what is in the bill or to get time from the gentleman from Maine.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. That is what I want to find out, whether or not we are going to have time for somebody to explain the bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maine will have 1 hour. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MICHENER]?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement of the managers on the part of the House.

Mr. WALTER (interrupting the reading of the statement). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the statement be dispensed

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. FELLOWS. Mr. Speaker, this legislation has had a long, hard road; the hills have been steep and difficult to climb. Your committee has met and after several days has agreed. Except for two of our conferees we have signed the report.

I am not going to discuss the House You are all familiar with that. I will discuss very briefly the salient features of the conference report.

The number, for example, is the same except for a ceiling of 3,000 orphans. So I can say that the number, 220,000, has been accepted.

The bill as reported by the Senate contained a provision that 50 percent of the 200,000 should be farmers. We have agreed upon 30 percent. You know, I come from a State where they trade

In the bill reported by the Senate was a provision that 50 percent of the 200,000 should come from east of the Curzon Line, namely, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, and Eastern Poland. That has been reduced to 40 percent.

A provision that 15,000 be charged to the quota of those people who are in this country and have no place to go, has been accepted provided the House and Senate concur in the Attorney General's finding after his investigation, which is the same provision as will be found in 3566, the conference report on which has just been accepted.

The 2,000 Czechs, which were covered by an amendment offered by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. STEFAN], have been accepted.

The ceiling on the orphans has been put at 3,000. According to the best figures available there are 3,000 orphans. In the House bill there was no limit on We agreed to 16 years in this report.

In this conference report also will be found the provision which appeared in the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KERSTEN], providing that certain men and women of German ethnic origin who had to flee to Germany after the Potsdam agreement may be allowed to come to this country by having assigned to them 50 percent of the German and Austrian. quotas over a 2-year period, if they qualify under all the immigration laws. This has nothing to do with the displaced person problem, as such. It is an amendment to the immigration law, permitting, to the extent indicated, the quota charge against Germany and Austria rather than their land of national origin.

It has nothing to do with the 200,000, however. It does give some relief to these people for a 2-year period only.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FELLOWS. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. WALTER. Does not the gentleman feel that some difficulties will be encountered in view of the fact that the International Refugee Organization Charter specifically excepts those people from consideration as displaced persons?

Mr. FELLOWS. Does the gentleman mean without that?

Mr. WALTER. Yes. Mr. FELLOWS. I think so. I think we will have further trouble along the line. So we have accepted that provision, and that provision was offered. I think, by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KERSTEN].

The real bone of contention is this date December 22, 1945. The House bill had the cut-off date of April 21, 1947. We felt that that was a fairer date, taking into consideration all of the circumstances. But we could not and have not changed the date of December 22. 1945, the effect of which is this: That the people who fled Poland after 1945-the exodus beginning somewhere in July 1946-will not be considered when they come to choose or applications are made for those people who are coming in under this so-called DP bill. We figure it is a matter of some 100,000.

Mr. Speaker, will the Mr. SHORT. gentleman yield?

Mr. FELLOWS. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Speaker, while I voted against this bill. I think this is the best that anyone could devise. There is no abler or finer man in this House than the gentleman from Maine [Mr. Fel-Lows] and I think we should adopt this conference report.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FELLOWS. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. GRAHAM. As one who served with the chairman all during this proceeding, from the day we began the hearings on the 4th day of June 1947, on the so-called Stratton bill, down to the close of the conference last night, I want to say this in justice to our chairman that no one has been more tolerant or more willing to hear all of the facts or has rendered more able assistance than has the gentleman from Maine [Mr. Fel-Lows]. In my judgment, no man could have done better. My own opinion is that this is a much better bill than the socalled Stratton bill. I do not think it is as good a bill as we had prepared in the House. But we either had to take the report that we did take or lose everything. Having spent the months that we did on this matter, I signed the re-port in the honest belief that we were doing the best thing for all the people of this country and for the people in the displaced-persons camps.

Mr. FELLOWS. I thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania, and I say in relation to him that we would not be here today with this report or any bill whatsoever were it not for the efforts and the ability of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM].

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FELLOWS. I yield to the gentleman from South Dakota.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. want to say that I think that this particular piece of legislation will be marked as one of the constructive pieces of legislation coming from this Congress. May I ask the gentleman also whether or not he was able to keep in the bill the inclusion of miners as one of the labor categories that would be recognized?

Mr. FELLOWS. I am very sorry. did, however, agree on this: The word "miners" was stricken out, and then with the help of men like the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM], and two or three others, we were able to incorporate the words, after the divisions were set up, section 6 (b), providing for eligible displaced persons, "household, construction, clothing and garment workers and other workers needed in the locality of the United States in which such person proposes to settle." That is the best we could do.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. That, it seems to me, would embrace miners.

Mr. FELLOWS. I think so, too. That was our idea of it.

Mr. JENKINS of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield

Mr. FELLOWS. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. JENKINS of Pennsylvania. As the gentleman knows, I have been ex-ceedingly interested in this whole problem for some time, and I want to join my colleagues from Pennsylvania in paying a very high tribute to the statesmanlike quality exhibited by the gentleman from Maine in his handling of the bill. The conference report does not do everything that we would have liked, but I believe it is a fine piece of work even as it stands, and I shall support the conference report.

Mr. FELLOWS. I thank the gentle-an. I signed this report. Without Without this there would be no legislation, and legislation is needed. Under this bill, although it does not perhaps satisfy everybody-it does not satisfy me-we are going to receive into this country some 220,000 of these people which will. I think, solve the question of the displaced-persons camps, will rid Europe of this cancer, and at the same time help us rehabilitate Germany.

I do not like a lot of it, and I can see that many people would disagree. It is much more restrictive than the socalled Fellows bill, because it provides, to start with, for 30 percent farmers. It also provides that 40 percent must come from east of this line. Among the 30 percent farmers will be included their wives and children. This is the best solution we could get, and in my judgment it is not wholly unfair, although I would prefer the date of April 21, 1947.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FELLOWS. I yield to the gentleman from New York.
Mr. JAVITS. Without any criticism of the gentleman, because I think he tried very hard and really did a splendid job, and that there is any bill at all I think is attributable to the gentleman from Maine, is it not a fact that there still remains in this conference report the mortgaging of the quotas to the extent of 50 percent?

Mr. FELLOWS. That is correct.

Mr. JAVITS. If that is so, have we not taken the worst features of the Senate bill and the most onerous features of the House bill and put them together and brought in this conference report? I say that without any criticism, because, as I said before, the gentleman from Maine has moved heaven and earth and has done a terrific job.

Mr. FELLOWS. I thank the gentleman for the compliment, but my answer would be that that is largely a point of view, of course. Much of this I would have preferred to eliminate if I could have done it.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker,

will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FELLOWS. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I am very much interested in the statement the gentleman is making. I hope he takes enough time to make his statement complete, because this is a big proposition. As I understood the gentleman's statement with reference to the farmers, the conference report provides that 30 percent of the 20,000 shall be farmers.

Mr. FELLOWS. Yes.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. The gentleman also said something about the farmers' families.

Mr. FELLOWS. Of course, the wife of the farmer is going to be catalogued as a farmer, and I suppose his son is also. They will come within the 30 percent.
Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Yes. I presume all those above the quota age will be counted in the quota?

Mr. FELLOWS. That is right.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. The children naturally would come in without being considered in the quota?

Mr. FELLOWS. I think they are all charged to the quota.

Mr. STEFAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FELLOWS. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. STEFAN. I want to express my deep appreciation to the gentleman from Maine and the members of his committee for preserving in the bill my amendment which permits 2,000 Czechs to come into this country. I have looked over the conference report on the Senate side and I know that you had a tremendous task to perform in order to bring out the best bill that could possibly be brought out. I compliment the gentleman and the members of his committee, and again express my deep appreciation for the preservation of the amendment I had in the bill.

Mr. GOFF. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FELLOWS. I yield to the gentleman from Idaho.

Mr. GOFF. I congratulate the chair-man on the work he has done, and appreciate the fine attitude evidenced by the gentleman from New York, that he took this so well, because a lot of us that voted for this bill gagged quite a bit in voting for it.

My question is, What now is going to be done with the DP camps? Are we going to do away with them?

Mr. FELLOWS. Of course, we cannot compel other nations to do these things, but we do ask and urge that they be The best information we can get is that if we will give them this bargaining proposition so that they can use it around the table, we can close these camps. I believe fully that it will be done, because everybody connected with it is just as anxious as the gentleman and I that that question be solved.

Mr. VURSELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FELLOWS. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. VURSELL. I was off the floor and came in just this minute. There are two points I should like to have cleared up.

Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. FELLOWS. I yield.

Mr. VURSELL. Have you increased the quotas in the conference report to something like 220,000? That is, instead of 202,000?

Mr. FELLOWS. No; we had 220,000 in the House bill, H. R. 6396, and there are 220,000 here.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FELLOWS. I yield.

Mr. GRAHAM. As a matter of fact, there are 15,000 already here.

Mr. FELLOWS. That is right.

Mr. GRAHAM. And 3,000 orphans and 2,000 Czechs?

Mr. FELLOWS. That is right. Mr. VURSELL. That is my understanding. Now are all the children counted in the 220,000?

Mr. FELLOWS. Yes. Mr. VURSELL. Are they counted as citizens?

Mr. FELLOWS. Orphans are especially exempted from the operation of the quota.

Mr. VURSELL. And not more than half of the 220,000 came come in in any 1 year?

Mr. FELLOWS. I do not say that, because that is a matter of shipping. They say now "not over 200,000."

Mr. VURSELL. They will be not over that in any 1 year; is that correct?

Mr. FELLOWS. I do not think we have to worry about that, because it will not be until next fall until this thing is set up.
Mr. VURSELL. That is probably true, but I just wanted to know.

Mr. CHADWICK. Mr. Speaker, will

the gentleman yield?

Mr. FELLOWS. I yield. Mr. CHADWICK. If the gentleman will permit me to revert to the very concise statement of his own views and his own motives which preceded the colloquy which we just heard. In order to save the time of the House, I desire to be associated not merely with the very effective result of the gentleman's leadership, but with the line of thought and the persuasions which induced him to take such action. He expressed better than I could possibly express them the views which I entertained, not only in Committee and in the House, but in the Conference Committee, and which caused me to sign this report on the part of the managers of the House with confidence that we have been able to make a contribution in a field which touches not only practical economics but the strongest motivations of humanity.

Mr. FELLOWS. The gentleman has made a fine statement, and I thank him. Mr. MASON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FELLOWS. I yield.

Mr. MASON. As one who served as the ranking Member of the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization of the House for 10 years, I want to say that the gentleman and his committee have done a magnificent job. It is not exactly as I would have it, of course, but it is a magnificent job, and I want to give him full credit for it.

Mr. FELLOWS. I thank the gentleman

Mr. CHELF. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr FELLOWS. I yield.

Mr. CHELF. I want to agree with the gentleman from Maine, our able chairman. This is the best we could get under the circumstances. I can speak my own sentiments, and I think I can speak the sentiment of all those who served with the House conferees to the extent that we wholeheartedly favored the socalled Fellows bill, because in our honest estimation and sincere belief, it was fair and it was a more equitable approach to and solution of the problem. However, we had a gun barrel at our heads. That gun barrel was the element of time. The legislative sands in our congressional hourglass are running out. I repeat, 't was either this compromise or nothing. Of course, there are features in the report that we did not want-one or two items almost gagged me to swallow but we have done the best we could, believe me. I want to congratulate our chairman and commend him upon his untiring efforts and his loyalty and devotion to this most difficult problem; truly, he has done a wonderful job. I know because I sat by him and watched him for three long days during sessions of the conference of the House and Senate. We did not capitulate—we did not sur-render our principles. We did not raise any white flag-had it not been for the time element and immediate adjournment slapping us in the face I would have hung the jury until Gabriel blew taps on his trumpet. I would have never compromised. I would have de-manded the Fellows bill. But my colleagues, 200,000 poor, miserable, pathetic people were hanging in the balance, their fate was in our hands-with this upon my conscience and in my heart-I therefore reluctantly signed the conference report-for it was better than no bill at all.

Mr. FELLOWS. I thank the gentle-

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FELLOWS. I yield.

Mr. GRAHAM. The question has been asked me by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Deane] as to the disposition of these displaced persons who have come to this country. Would the gen-tleman care to answer that question as far as he can at this time?

Mr. FELLOWS. Of course, they are taken care of in that part of the country where that type of worker or professional person is required and can be assimilated in the community. These people who come here can be settled in the part of the country and in a community where their services or professions can best be utilized.

Mr. DEVITT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FELLOWS. I yield.

Mr. DEVITT. Am I correct in believing that in the House bill there was a provision by the terms of which these people would be admitted in accordance with the proportion that existed in the various camps by racial or religious groups?

Mr. FELLOWS. That is true.

Mr. DEVITT. Is that provision retained in the conference report?

Mr. FELLOWS. It is not.
Mr. DEVITT. Was there not a provision in the House bill giving preferential treatment to farmers?

Mr. FELLOWS. Yes, but this is really preferential in the sense that the 30 percent has to be farmers. In our bill we set out farmers, doctors, dentists, and so forth, but in this bill 30 percent farmers have the preference.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. FELLOWS. I yield.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Of course, it stands to reason that all who come here will stay here because there is no place to which they can be sent if they violate our laws.

Mr. FELLOWS. Yes. They will come in anyway, only they are coming in at present under provisions that do not screen-under the provisions that do not require that this group or that group or any other group have a fair share. There have been 32,000 already brought in, and there has been no plan as to the manner of doing it. This will not add a single, solitary person that will not be here anyway in the next 5 or 6 or 7 years.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, will

the gentleman yield?
Mr. FELLOWS. I yield.
Mr. CRAWFORD. The parliamentary debates in the Australian Parliament in the last few days shows conclusively that Britain will have to move 10,000,000 people out of England during the next few years. If 10,000,000 are to be moved out of England, we might as well get clear that pressure will be put on this country to take a great many of them.

Mr. FELLOWS. May I say this, in submitting our original displaced persons legislation, the committee felt it offered you an elegant garment—a "creation," if you will-which clothed a delicate situation suitably, adequately, and becom-Each nationality and group received fair consideration. The fact that one or another had perhaps had preferential treatment in the past might have explained but could not have excused any other procedure on our part.

This conference report now offered for your action represents something less than I hoped, and better than I feared. If, as I believe, we are faced with a problem requiring solution, this is one offered by the Senate and House conferees, and the only one to be hoped for. This conference report is not the bill that passed the House, but is a compromise between the position of the Senate and this body. This legislation will permit admission of 220,000. I believe some legislation is necessary. I believe it should be adopted.

Mr. NICHOLSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PELLOWS. I yield.

Mr. NICHOLSON. Is this the best we can do?

Mr. FELLOWS. Indeed it is. It is this or nothing.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. FELLOWS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. CELLER].

Mr. ROSS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CELLER. I yield.

Mr. ROSS. I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD following the statement of the gentleman from New York.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Speaker, for all of the reasons urged by the gentleman from New York [Mr. CELLER], I will vote in favor of his motion to recommit this conference report, and will vote against the adoption of the report if the motion to recommit fails. The bill in its present form is worse than no bill. It is viciously discriminatory. It is hard for me to believe that, in a country that fought nazism so successfully, and is now attempting to stop communism, any Member of Congress can consider voting in favor of a bill that would grant priorities to prospective immigrants who were part and parcel, if not the backbone, of the Hitler regime during its worst days. Rather than to give them priorities in seeking admission to this country, Congress should bar them forever. No bill is better than a bill in the form now before us.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, when we had before us for consideration a few days ago the Fellows bill which provided for the bringing into this country of 202,000 foreigners without much regard as to who they are or where they come from, we were told that we must pass that bill or some great calamity might befall us. Many of us refused to be persuaded. They said many times that the Fellows bill represented a great amount of labor done by many members of the Judiciary Committee and that it was the best possible bill that could be worked out. They said that they would oppose all amendments to the Fellows bill and they did their best in that respect, but some amendments were made. They accepted those amendments and still claimed the bill was the best that could be made.

The Fellows bill went to conferees and now it comes back changed beyond recognition. Some of the conferees say the changes are terrible. But those who said that the original Fellows bill should not be changed are now advocating this conference report claiming that it is absolutely necessary that we pass it and that it will solve the problem.

This only proves that this method of trying to solve this problem is absolutely wrong. This displaced persons problem is a matter of relief. It is not an immigration problem and should not be solved by the Immigration Department. It should be solved by the United Nations.

This conference report should be voted down.

Mr. CHADWICK. Mr. Speaker there is one aspect of the remarks of the gentleman from New York [Mr. CELLER] which gives me concern. I have every respect for his views, and I recognize that the position he takes is consistent with his whole approach to the question. But when he suggests that some of the rest of us, who in association with him shared the responsibility of the conference on behalf of the House, were in any way less attached to our House bill than he, or less alert in its support, he both misappraises the realities of the then situation and underestimates his colleagues' contribution.

There was no "abject surrender" of anything which was practically obtainable. The distinguished Senators who sat with us had a right to their views. and it was obvious that they proposed to adhere to certain of them. At one stage of the negotiation, the gentleman from New York gave the strongest possible evidence of sharing this view; he joined us and the Senate conferees in what was at very least a tentative meeting of the minds.

Subsequently we all reviewed the basis of this honestly intended attempt at agreement the next day, at the request of my friend from New York; recognizing that he had misjudged the effect of the formula upon one group of displaced persons. But that neither he or we had micjudged the mettle of the Senatorial conferees became increasingly clear in that very discussion.

The gentleman gives his case away as it seems to me, when he admits that he prefers even now no bill to the present bill; that was the real alternative with which we were confronted. Five of us on the contrary preferred to save the bill; we wanted to get started with the DP problem, and to give immediate relief to more than 200,000 human beings, even if in so doing we missed keeping some individuals (a substantial number, in fact), who were certainly also entitled to sympathetic consideration. The House has intentionally failed these unfortunate individuals at no point. Our bill included them, but in the last resort we thought it better to postpone their hopes than completely to disappoint the hopes of so many more of their equally deserving companions in misery.

Mr. ROSS. Mr. Speaker, I shall support the conference report now under consideration which would admit 220,000 displaced persons to this country. As has been emphasized in this debate, the Senate and House conferees have determined that this is the best bill which could be agreed upon.

I have strongly advocated the passage of legislation which would provide for the admission to the United States of a fair share of the unfortunate and homeless displaced persons of Europe. I have felt for some time that it was not only our moral obligation, but that it would also be economically sound for us to take the lead in providing a haven for these persons who were made homeless through no fault of their own.

I supported and would have preferred the so-called Fellows bill as enacted by the House, and I think it is unfortunate that the provisions contained in the House bill did not prevail. However, since it appears it is a question of taking this measure now before the House or nothing at all, I shall vote for the bill.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I, too, yield to nobody in my affection and regard for the chairman of the committee the gentleman from Maine [Mr. FEL-Lows], and in my affection and regard for all Members who were managers on the part of the House, but I do nevertheless feel that there was a surrender by them too quickly, and that this bill is not a compromise. It is an abasement. It is a complete surrender, because the Fellows bill which was universally, throughout the length and breadth of the Nation, recognized as a fair bill, has been utterly and completely scuttled and sabotaged. In its place we have the Revercomb bill with slight modifications which was universally condemned as highly discriminatory, racially and reli-

The House rejected the Revercomb bill which my colleague of the House conferees now asks you to accept.

I had hoped that the members of the conference, as far as the House was concerned, would have stood by their guns and insisted upon the Fellows bill, and not hoisted the white flag as quickly as they did and accept almost in toto the Revercomb bill, which was generally objected to by all well-known commentators and editors, by all religious organizations interested, and by every fairminded man and woman who examined it. It was not a case of this bill or nothing at all.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield at that point?

Mr. CELLER. I yield. Mr. GRAHAM. Were we not told by Mr. GRAHAM. Were we not told by the managers on the part of the Senate after we had consulted for two whole days that if we did not make the recession there would be no bill, that they were prepared to walk out?

Mr. CELLER. I do not like to have a gun held at my head in that fashion. That is what was done. The Senate conferees said to us: "Stand and deliver."

I was not going to quail, I am too long in this business to shiver before any Member of the other body who tried to bulldoze me in that fashion. It would have been far better if we had no bill at all and allowed the present situation to stand with the President's directive of December 21, 1945, concerning the DP's and the normal operation of the quota law.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CELLER. I yield.

Mr. WALTER. Is not the statement of the gentleman from Pennsylvania the same kind of statement one always hears in a conference with the Senate, the usual statement made by every conferee who vields?

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CELLER. If the gentleman from Maine will yield me five additional minutes I will yield. Otherwise I must proceed with my explanation.

Mr. FELLOWS. I yield the gentleman five additional minutes.

Mr. CELLER. I yield.

Mr. GRAHAM. Did not the gentleman agree with the rest of us that we would accept the proposition made by the Senate; and then did not the gentleman come forward and say that his conscience would not permit him to go along with it?

Mr. CELLER. That is not the exact situation. I will reflect the exact situ-

The Members on the part of the House offered several compromises to the Senate conferees which they turned down with all emphasis. They were adamant and most intransigent and unyielding save that two of their number, the distinguished Senators from Michigan and West Virginia, Homer Ferguson and HARVEY KILGORE, were most understanding and aware of the human side of the problem. Then in the interest of getting something harmonious, I said I would accept the cut-off date Senator REVERCOMB demanded, with the Balts originally constituting a 50 percent chunk of the 200,000 quota reduced to 40 percent and the preference for farmers reduced from 50 percent to 30 percent. But overnight I discovered that what I had accepted was an abject and unwarranted surrender and that the officials of the State Department told me that the so-called cut-off date, which was demanded, namely December 21, 1945, would make the act utterly unworkable in that there was a paucity of records on that date and that most of the more unfortunate DP's had come into the camps after that date. They would be excluded.

Mr. FELLOWS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CELLER. Just let me finish, then I will gladly yield.

The experts of the State and Justice Departments told me December 22, 1945, as a cut-off date, would make the act utterly unworkable and that it would deliberately discriminate against the Jews who crowded into the DP camps after that date. Many of these pillaged and plundered Jews had fled from Poland after the Kielce pogrom which had occurred July 3, 1946. They would be denied any relief by the Revercomb bill and the conference report, now before We had set in the Fellows bill a cutoff date as of April 21, 1947; you must remember that the cut-off date December 22, 1945 was only a few months after the shooting stopped and there were 8,000,000 people wandering hither and tither with no place to rest their weary heads and there was no developed procedure in the camps, there were no rec-There was naught but confusion. The date April 21, 1947, was the date the camps were ordered closed by General Clay with agreement of the International Refugee Organization. It is utterly impossible to enforce and administer this bill as envisaged by this conference report if you use the cut-off date of December 21, 1945. Furthermore you deliberately proscribe Jews. Only about 6,000 Jews can be helped out of the 200,000 by this conference report.

Furthermore, those who are most deserving, those who fled from religious and racial persecution, those who suffered most, those who were the most hopeless, helpless, and homeless, the Jews-six million of whose coreligionists were martyred-came into these camps after the date set by this conference report.

Mr. FELLOWS. Mr. Speaker, will the

gentleman yield?

Mr. CELLER. The stand-and-deliver attitude of the Senate produces a bill in which we are not merciful. There is not an ounce of humanity in it. A situation developed in the conference where a certain gentleman on the other side of the Capitol because of his proscriptive attitude sought to bend the House conferees to his proscriptive viewpoint. I refused to yield as did the gentleman from Delaware [Mr. Boggs]. We refrained from signing the report. Even the gentleman from Maine [Mr. FEL-Lows] and the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CHELF] said publicly they signed the report "with reluctance."

I now yield to the gentleman.

Mr. FELLOWS. Is it not a fact that the gentleman himself agreed on the date of December 22, 1945, with the proviso, of course, that the other provisions were changed--50-50?

Mr. CELLER. I do not deny that, but we were still in conference and you cannot tell me that while we are still in conference the provisions of the whole bill cannot be opened and reopened and again reopened for reconsideration. I had only tentatively agreed to certain provisions. There were many questions and differences still unresolved and unsettled.

After the night of the second conference I consulted with those who were in position to know, the Immigration Service and the State Depaartment, and I was told that that cut-off date was highly unfair, utterly unjust, and deliberately discriminatory. After such-shall I say newly discovered information-I reopened the question of cut-off date. I had that right. No one shall gainsay me that right. If there is injustice I am not going to allow protocol to stand in the way of stamping it out.

Now, see what you have done in this conference report. You are going to admit not deserving people, you are going to help not the displaced persons in the You are going to help whom? The Volkdeutsche. You are going to take for 2 years the combined quotas for Germany and Austria, and you are going to issue an engraved invitation to the Volkdeutsche to come in to the extent of 50 percent of those combined quotas. will thus admit 27,000 of them.

Who are the Volkdeutsches? ought to know something about them. They were the advance guard who fertilized the field for Hitler's Panzer divisions. They were the natives, citizens, and subjects of Czechoslovakia, Poland, Holland, Belgium, Hungary, Rumania, of German ethnic origin. They were what Hitler called the Herrenvolk. They were like the German-American Bunds in the United States who turned against the Allies. These Volkdeutsche did all in their power to make it easy for Hitler's advance. Hitler's capture and overrunning of Czechoslovakia and Poland was made far easier for him because of the fifth column work that was done by these Volkdeutsches. Fritz Henlein was one of them. Others come to mind readily. Hitler were alive today he could qualify. He was born in Austria of German ethnic origin.

Are we going to forget so soon the purpose of which this recent war was fought? Are we going to admit these people against whom our veterans fought, bled and died, and went through the valley of the shadow? I cannot subscribe to this kind of procedure. This is the uttermost injustice.

You must in good conscience, and if humanity is your guide, if decency is your guide, reject this report if only because of the admission of these Volkdeutsche, These Volkdeutsches are not DP's. They are not in DP camps. They have no relation to the solving of the DP problem. They should have no place in this conference report.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Speaker, will the

gentleman yield?

Mr. CELLER. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. JAVITS. May I say to the gentleman that I agree with him. I went through the DP camps and the only way you can distribute the admission of these people fairly is according to the elements now in the camps. The dating back is distinctly a discriminatory act.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. FELLOWS. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman five additional minutes. Mrs. DOUGLAS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CELLER. I yield to the gentlewoman from California.

Mrs. DOUGLAS. I do not want to make a speech, but I would like to know specifically who we bring in under this bill, without covering all the history of it.

Mr. CELLER. The lady should read

Mrs. DOUGLAS. We have not the report. We are going to vote soon. We want to listen to the gentleman.

Mr. CELLER. The lady had that explained. I want to go into other matters. Let us see what else happens in this

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CELLER. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania. Mr. WALTER. What effect will our participation in the International Refugee Organization have on this section permitting these Germans who are not displaced persons to come in?

Mr. CELLER. It will have a very de-leterious effect, because the Interna-tional Refugee Organization deliberately said these Volkdeutsches were not displaced persons and the International Refugee Organization would have nothing to do with them. Why? Because they were the ones who sought to balk and sabotage the efforts of the Allies.

Mr. NICHOLSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield just for a question? Mr. CELLER. I yield to the gentle-

Mr. NICHOLSON. Is the gentleman preaching the doctrine of hate?

Mr. CELLER. I am not preaching the doctrine of hate, but I do not want to reward my enemies, I do not want to bring in those who did everything in their power to make it impossible for the allied effort to succeed.

I would rather have the gentleman who just interrogated me speak of "mercy." I would remind him as I would remind those plumping for the Revercomb formula the remarks of Matthew:

Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy.

I ask gentle consideration, I ask mercy for those who have suffered tortures of the damned just because they were born of a certain race but yet prayed to your God and mine.

I also ask for fair judgment and remind you of James, who said:

For he shall have judgment without mercy that showeth no mercy and mercy rejoiceth against judgment.

Beyond all that, see what else is done by this conference report? There was a rape by Russia of the independent Republics of Latvia, Esthonia, and Lithuania. This report gives the imprimatur to Russia's rape and "annexation" of those Republics. It says in so many words that there is recognized the de facto annexation by Russia of these three independent Republics made independent as the result of the First World War, and beyond that recognizes the annexation Russia of that part of Poland east of the Curzon line. They do that in order to bring in to the extent of 40 percent of the quota of 200,000 the so-called Balts and Poles east of the Curzon line. Whoever heard that a committee of conference should indicate what the foreign policy of the United States should be? We never recognized that annexation by Rusisa of those Republics, but if we pass this bill we have the temerity-and I say "temerity"-to tell Russia "You have a free hand; you can do anything you d- please with those republics."

Now, the State Department has violently objected to this indirect recognition given to Russia's action.

This bill, I want you to know, gentlemen-and you are going to hear from the people back home-is not without religious significance; it is not without racial preference. You cannot keep religion out of it no matter what you try. Hitler did not keep religion out of his cunning calculations and the victims of his cunning and mania are in these camps. Those people who first felt the scourge of Hitler, those who were the greatest victims of Hitler's sadism, those who perished to the extent of 6,000,000 in the crematoria and in the suffocation chambers, and who were held to languish and die behind the barbed wire, namely those of the race of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, are caught between the upper and the nether stones of the report's discrimination. Yes, you say, "Come in, you 28,000 Volksdeutsche." What do you say "Come in, you to those of the Jewish faith because of this cut-off date? You say, "We will only take in of the 200,000, 6,000 Jews." Think of it-only 6,000 Jews of the quota of 200,000 are admissible under the conference report.

I am making a special plea for my people. Why should I not? They have suffered immeasurably. Their fate was and still is like one on a sea without a shore. Where can they go?

I have before me the Fulton House Foreign Affairs report containing the passengers from the ship manifests of some of the refugee ships that went to Canada and to Brazil and to Venezuela and to other countries. You will find among those listed Roman Catholics, Lutherans, Greek Catholics, Baptists, and Orthodox, but not a single Jew was taken by any of those nations out of these DP camps. We, too, are now saying, "No, we do not want the people of the race of Isaac and Jacob and Abraham; let them go hang; let them be liquidated. Let them die in the camps." Palestine is closed to them by the cease-fire order. We do not know what their future will be as to Pales-They are apparently unwanted everywhere save in Palestine and even there the barriers are up. Should not the great United States at least show the way for others and take a fair share of these Jewish DP's? The conferees would say "No." I say "Yes."

We do not dissipate the DP problem by adopting the legislation agreed upon by the conferees. The problems of maintaining the camps will still be with us, military personnel will still have to be assigned to DP centers, the necessities of life will still have to be provided for the remaining DP's. Enlightened self-interest, at the very least, should prompt a better solution.

Moreover, the fact that 30 percent preference is to be given to farmers makes the whole situation ridiculous. In the United States camps 17.5 are farmers, in the British camps, the percent is 35.1, and the French camps hold 39.1. The result will be that we will empty the British and French camps before we empty our own.

It must be remembered, also that ours is a mixed economy which demands not only farm labor but plumbers, latherers, doctors, dentists, nurses, domestics, garment workers, carpenters, and so forth. No adequate consideration was given to these needs.

NO LAW BETTER

Mr. KLEIN. Mr. Speaker, the displaced persons bill as finally shaped by this conference report is a noxious mess which defies digestion.

It is compounded of large portions of fear, hate, and suspicion, faintly flavored with shame.

I cannot vote for this bitter gruel of legislation.

No law at all is better than this, and I shall vote to send the report back to conference.

Mr. FELLOWS. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. CELLER moves that the conference report accompanying S. 2242 be recommitted to the committee of conference.

Mr. FELLOWS. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion to recommit.

The previous question was ordered. The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from New York.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. CELLER) there were-ayes 40, noes 75. Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. Obviously a quorum is not present.

The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were-yeas 133, nays 266, not voting 31, as follows:

PROVIDING FOR WATER POLLUTION

CONTROL ACTIVITIES Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (S. 418) to provide for water pollution control activities in the Public Health Service of the Federal Security Agency and in the Federal Works Agency, and for other purposes, and ask unanimous consent that the statement of the managers on the part of the House be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the agreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 418) "An Act to provide for water pollution control activities in the Public Health Service of the Federal Security Agency and in the Federal Works Agency, and for other purposes", having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House, and agree to the same with amendments, as follows:

Page 2, line 12, of the amendment of the House, strike out the words "hereinafter declared to be a public nuisance".

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 418) submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon and recommended in the accompanying conference report as to each of such amendments, namely:

The first two amendments apply to Sec. 2
(a), lines 4, 5, and 6, on page 18 of the bill. The language substituted more clearly defines the authority of the Surgeon General with respect to the preparation and adoption of comprehensive programs for eliminating or reducing the pollution of surface and underground waters.

The amendment to Sec. 5 (line 3, page 25) increases by $50,000 the maximum individual loan which may be made under the Act.

The amendment to Sec. 7 (line 16, page 27), increases by $2,500,000 the maximum authorized to be appropriated to the Federal Security Agency for each of the five fiscal years during the period beginning July 1, 1948, and ending June 30, 1953, for the purpose of mak-ing loans under Section 5 of the Act.

The purpose of the amendments to Sec. 8 (b) (lines 16, 17, and 18, page 28), is to expand the service of the Public Health Service station authorized to be erected at Cincinnati, Ohio, in connection with research and study of water pollution and the training of personnel in work related to control of water pollution.

The amendment with reference to Sec. 9 (a), (lines 10 to 16, page 30), substitutes a new Sec. 9 (a), which is required for the purpose set forth in the following letter:

> FEDERAL SECURITY AGENCY, Washington, Zone 25, May 14, 1948.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: This is in reference to S. 418, which your Committee reported to S. 418, which your Committee reported out, with amendments, on April 28, 1948. Section 9 (a) of S. 418 as reported authorizes additional appointments to be made at higher grades in the Regular Corps of the Public Health Service pursuant to section 208 (b) of the Public Health Service Act to assist the Service in carrying out its new or expanded activities under S. 418. Since our letter of January 19, 1948, to you on this letter of January 19, 1948, to you on this bill, however, the Congress has enacted Public Law 425, which amends the provisions of the Public Health Service Act in several respects, primarily in the matter of appointment and promotion of commissioned officers of the Public Health Service. As a result of Public Law 425, the authority to make additional appointments at higher grades in the Regular Corps of the Public Health Service, formerly contained in section 208 (b) of the Public Health Service Act, is now contained in section 207 (b) of that Act, in a somewhat revised form. In order, therefore, to accomplish the purposes for which section 9 (a) of S. 478 was intended, the following is suggested in lieu of such section 9

(a) Five officers may be appointed to grades in the Regular Corps of the Service above that of senior assistant, but not to a grade above that of director, to assist in carrying out the purposes of this Act. Officers ap-pointed pursuant to this subsection in any fiscal year shall not be counted as part of the 10 per centum of the original appointments authorized to be made in such year under section 207 (b) of the Public Health Service Act; but they shall for all other purposes be treated as though appointed pursuant to such section 207 (b).

The short time available for necessary action on the amendment suggested by this letter has not permitted us to obtain advice from the Bureau of the Budget as to the relationship of this amendment to the program of the President.

Sincerely yours,

J. DONALD KINGSLEY, Acting Administrator.

NATIONAL FREEDOM DAY

Mr. REED of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 37) requesting the President to proclaim February 1 as National Freedom Day, and ask for its immediate consideration. I have consulted with the leaders on both sides.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illi-

There was no objection. The Clerk read, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the President of the United States is authorized to issue a proclamation designating the 1st day of February of each year as National Freedom Day for the purpose of commemorating the signing by President Abraham Lincoln, on February 1, 1865, of the joint resolution adopted by the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States, proposing the thirteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States of America.

The joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERMISSION TO EXTEND REMARKS AT THIS POINT

Mr. McGARVEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. McGARVEY. Mr. Speaker, the bill which has been reached on the Consent Calendar today will authorize and request the President to proclaim February 1 as National Freedom Day and invite the people of the United States to observe the day with appropriate ceremonies and thanksgiving. As you all know, on February 1, 1865, President Abraham Lincoln signed the joint resolution, which had previously been adopted by the Congress, proposing the thirteenth amendment to the Constitu-

I should like to repeat for you at this time the immortal words of that amendment: "Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime, whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction." These words are the foundation of our form of government with its emphasis on the freedom of the individual and the human liberties which belong to every citizen of the United States. It is therefore with pride in our free Nation that I introduced this resolution at the first session of the Eightieth Congress. Since that time I have been striving to obtain approval of the legislation.

I wish to thank the members of the Judiciary Committee and, in particular, the members of the subcommittee which handled the resolution, headed by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. REED], for the interest and cooperation they have displayed in reporting the legislation, also the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. CHADWICK].

I should like to pause here to pay tribute to the founder of National Freedom Day, Maj. R. R. Wright. It is regrettable that Major Wright is not with us today to realize the fulfillment of his long years of hard work and inspiring efforts. Born in slavery, Major Wright rose to prominence as a great American and occupied an unequalled position in the hearts of his fellow Americans. The story of Major Wright is truly the story of America, for in no other country today is it possible for a citizen to achieve such outstanding success. His success, however, would not have oc-curred had the thirteenth amendment to the Constitution not been approved. Since its signing is one of the cornerstones in the foundation of our American traditions, I am proud that we have today passed the resolution commemorating its inception.

PROCUREMENT AND SUPPLY OF GOVERN-MENT HEADSTONES

Mr. WELCH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H. R. 4272) to provide for the procurement and supply of Government headstones or markers for unmarked graves of members of the armed forces dying in the service or after honorable discharge therefrom, and other persons, and for other purposes, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill. The Clerk read the Senate amendment, Page 2, line 2, strike out all after "cemeterles," down to and including "costs." in line 14 and insert "The Secretary of the Army, the Secretary of the Navy, and the Secretary of the Air Force are authorized and directed to compile a list of the names of all mem-bers of the armed forces of the United States who died while serving in such forces in the overseas theaters of operations on or after September 3, 1939, and whose bodies have not been recovered or identified or have been buried at sea. Upon the compilation of such list of names and other appropriate data, the American Battle Monuments Commission and the Secretary of the Army are authorized and directed to provide for the inscribing of each such name and pertinent data with respect to the individual on the wall of a chapel or other apppropriate memorial erected by the American Battle Monu-ments Commission or by the Department of the Army. In determining the particular chapel or other memorial on the wall of which any particular name shall be inscribed, the Commission and the Secretary shall fol-low the general rule of having the name inscribed upon the wall of that chapel or other memorial which is appropriate in view of the circumstances under which the deceased died in the service of his country."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendment was concurred

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EMERGENCY FUND FOR BUREAU OF RECLAMATION

Mr. WELCH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H. R. 3218) to authorize an emergency fund for the Bureau of Reclamation to assure the continuous operation of its irrigation and power systems, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate

The Clerk read the title of the bill. The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

After line 10, insert:

SEC. 2. The term 'unusual or emergency conditions," as used in this act, shall be construed to mean canal bank failures, generator failures, damage to transmission lines; or other physical failures or damage, or acts of God, or of the public enemy, fires, floods, drought, epidemics, strikes, or freight embargoes, or conditions, causing or threatening to cause interruption in water or power

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

TOLL BRIDGE OVER DELAWARE RIVER

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 6465) to amend and supplement section 2 of the act approved August 30, 1935, relating to the construction and financing of toll bridges over the Delaware River by the Delaware River Joint Toll Bridge Commission of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 2 of the act entitled "An act to authorize the construction of certain bridges and to extend the times for commencing and/or completing the construction of other bridges over the navigable waters of the United States, and for other purposes," approved August 30, 1935, be, and the same is hereby, amended and supplemented by adding at the end thereof the following paragraph:

"(e) Notwithstanding any of the foregoing provisions of this section or of any other act of the Congress, the Delaware River Joint Toll Bridge Commission of the Common-wealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey is hereby authorized (1) to fix and charge tolls for transit over any bridge heretofore or hereafter constructed by it across the Delaware River in accordance with the provisions of the original compact or agree-ment between said Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and said State of New Jersey which is set forth in section 9 of said Act approved August 30, 1935, as amended with the consent of Congress by the compact or supplemental agreement which is set forth in the Act approved August 4, 1947; and (2) to unite or group any such bridges into a single project for financing purposes and to continue to fix and adjust the tolls for the use of the bridges in such project and pledge such tolls in accordance with the provisions of said original compact or agreement as so amended: Provided, however, That the tolls for the use of any such bridge or the bridges in any such project may be applied by said Commission, if and to the extent permitted by its contract with the holders of its bonds, to the payment of all or part of the cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating any bridge or bridges now operated by said Commission free of tolls: And provided further, That after the cost of any such bridge or of the bridges in any such project shall be amortized, such bridge or bridges shall thereafter be maintained and operated free of tolls, or the rates of tolls shall thereafter be so adjusted as to provide funds not to exceed the amount necessary for the proper maintenance, repair, and operation of such bridge or bridges, and any bridge or bridges now operated by said Commission free of tolls."

With the following committee amendments:

On page 2, line 20, strike out the words "that the" and all of lines 21, 22, 23, 24, and 25, and lines 1 and 2 on page 3 through the word "further,"

FEDERAL CHARTER FOR COMMODITY CREDIT CORPORATION

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill

(S. 1322) to provide a Federal charter for the Commodity Credit Corporation, with an amendment striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting the provisions of H. R. 6263, as amended.

The Clerk read the title of the bill. The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc.,-

TITLE I-COMMODITY CREDIT CORPORATION CHARTER

SEC. 1. This title may be cited as the "Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act."

SEC. 2. Creation and purposes: For the purpose of stabilizing, supporting, and protecting farm income and prices, of assisting in the maintenance of balanced and adequate supplies of agricultural commodities, products thereof, foods, feeds, and fibers (hereinafter collectively referred to as "agricultural commodities"), and of facilitating the orderly distribution of agricultural commodities, there is hereby created a body corporate to be known as Commodity Credit Corpora-tion (hereinafter referred to as the "Corporation"), which shall be an agency and instrumentality of the United States, within the Department of Agriculture, subject to the general direction and control of its Board of Directors.

SEC. 3. Offices: The Corporation may establish offices in such place or places as it may deem necessary or desirable in the conduct of its business.

SEC. 4. General powers: The Corporation-(a) Shall have succession in its corporate name.

(b) May adopt, alter, and use a corporate seal, which shall be judicially noticed.(c) May sue and be sued, but no attachment, injunction, garnishment, or other similar process, mesne or final, shall be issued against the Corporation or its property. The district courts of the United States, including the district courts of the District of Columbia and of any Territory or possession, shall have exclusive original jurisdiction of all suits brought by or against the Corporation: Provided, That the Corporation may intervene in any court in any suit, action, or pro-ceeding in which it has an interest. Any suit against the Corporation shall be brought in the District of Columbia, or in the district wherein the plaintiff resides or is engaged in business. No suit against the Corporation shall be allowed unless it shall have been brought within 4 years after the right accrued on which suit is brought. All suits against the Corporation shall be tried by the court without a jury. Notwithstanding any other provision of this act, the Federal Tort Claims Act (Public Law 601, 79th Cong.) shall be applicable to the Corporation.

(d) May adopt, amend, and repeal bylaws, rules, and regulations governing the manner in which its business may be conducted and the powers vested in it may be exercised.

(e) Shall have all the rights, privileges, and immunities of the United States with respect to the right to priority of payment with respect to debts due from insolvent, deceased, or bankrupt debtors. The Corporation may assert such rights, privileges, and immunities in any suit, action, or proceeding.

(f) Shall be entitled to the use of the United States mails in the same manner and upon the same conditions as the executive departments of the Federal Government.

(g) May enter into and carry out such contracts or agreements as are necessary in the conduct of its business. State and local regulatory laws or rules shall not be applicable with respect to contracts or agreements of the Corporation or the parties thereto to the extent that such contracts or agreements provide that such laws or rules shall not be applicable, or to the extent that such laws or rules are inconsistent with such contracts or agreements.

(h) May contract for the use, in accordance with the usual customs of trade and commerce, of plants and facilities for the physical handling, storage, processing, servicing, and transportation of the agricultural commodities subject to its control. Except as provided in section 16, the Corporation shall not have power to acquire or lease any such plant or facility or to acquire or lease real property or any interest therein, except that it may rent or lease office space necessary for the conduct of its business.

(i) May borrow money subject to any provision of law applicable to the Corporation: Provided, That the total of all money borrowed by the Corporation, other than trust deposits and advances received on sales, shall not at any time exceed in the aggregate $4,750,000,000. The Corporation shall at all times reserve a sufficient amount of its authorized borrowing power which, together with other funds available to the Corporation, will enable it to purchase, in accordance with its contracts with lending agencies, notes, or other obligations evidencing loans made by such agencies under the Corporation's programs.

(j) Shall determine the character of and the necessity for its obligations and expenditures and the manner in which they shall be incurred, allowed, and paid.

(k) Shall have authority to make final and conclusive settlement and adjustment of any claims by or against the Corporation or the accounts of its fiscal officers.

 May make such loans and advances of its funds as are necessary in the conduct of its business.

(m) Shall have such powers as may be necessary or appropriate for the exercise of the powers specifically vested in the Corporation, and all such incidental powers as are customary in corporations generally; but any research financed by the Corporation shall relate to the conservation or disposal of commodities owned or controlled by the Corporation and shall be conducted in collaboration with research agencies of the Department of Agriculture.

SEC. 5. Specific powers: In the fulfillment of its purposes and in carrying out its annual budget programs submitted to and approved by the Congress pursuant to the Government Corporation Control Act (31 U. S. C., 1940 ed., Supp. V. 841), the Corporation is authorized to use its general powers only to—

(a) Support the prices of agricultural commodities through loans, purchases, payments and other operations.

ments, and other operations.

(b) Make available materials and facilities required in connection with the production and marketing of agricultural commodities.

(c) Procure agricultural commodities for sale to other Government agencies, foreign governments, and domestic, foreign, or international relief or rehabilitation agencies, and to meet domestic requirements.

(d) Remove and dispose of or aid in the removal or disposition of surplus agricultural commodities.

tural commodities.

(e) Increase the domestic consumption of agricultural commodities by expanding or aiding in the expansion of domestic markets or by developing or aiding in the development of new and additional markets, marketing facilities, and uses for such commodities.

(f) Export or cause to be exported, or aid in the development of foreign markets for, agricultural commodities.

(g) Carry out such other operations as the Congress may specifically authorize or provide for.

In the Corporation's purchasing and selling operations with respect to agricultural commodities (except sales to other Government agencies), and in the warehousing, transporting, processing, or handling of agricultural commodities, the Corporation shall utilize the usual and customary channels, facilities, and arrangements of trade and commerce.

SEC. 6. Existing statutes applicable to the Corporation: The Federal statutes applicable to Commodity Credit Corporation, a Delaware corporation, shall be applicable to the Corporation. Commodity Credit Corporation, a Delaware corporation, shall cease to be an agency of the United States as provided in section 7 (a) of the act of January 31, 1935, as amended (15 U. S. C., 1940 ed., Supp. V. 713 (a)).

SEC. 7. Capital stock: The Corporation shall have a capital stock of $100,000,000 which shall be subscribed by the United States. Such subscription shall be deemed to be fully paid by the transfer of assets to the Corporation pursuant to section 16 of this act. The Corporation shall pay interest to the United States Treasury on the amount of its capital stock, and on the amount of the obligations of the Corporation purchased by the Secretary of the Treasury pursuant to the act of March 8, 1938 (U. S. C., title 16, sec. 713a-4), as amended, at such rates as may be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury to be appropriate in view of the terms for which such amounts are made available to the Corporation.

Sec. 8. Funds: The Corporation is author-

SEC. 8. Funds: The Corporation is authorized to use in the conduct of its business all its funds and other assets, including capital and net earnings therefrom, and all funds and other assets which have been or may hereafter be transferred or allocated to, borrowed by, or otherwise acquired by it.

SEC. 9. Directors: The management of the Corporation shall be vested in a board of directors (hereinafter referred to as the The Board shall consist of five members. The Secretary of Agriculture, or his nominee, shall be a member of the Board and the remaining members shall be ap-pointed by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The chairman of the Board shall be selected by the Board. A majority of the directors shall constitute a quorum of the Board and action shall be taken only by a majority vote of those present. The appointed directors shall serve for a period of 5 years, except that the terms of the first Board shall be shortened to provide for replacement or reappointment of its members in number as nearly equal as practicable in each year. The power of removal shall be vested in the President of the United States. poration may provide, by its bylaws, for the compensation to be paid the directors: Provided, That the compensation paid any director shall not exceed in the aggregate $10,000 per annum: And provided further, That employees of the Corporation or any department or agency of the Federal Government, if also directors, shall not receive additional compensation for their services on the Board. Employees of the Corporation or any department or agency of the Federal Government, if also directors, shall not comprise, in the aggregate, more than one-half the members of the Board.

SEC. 10. The executive staff: Responsibility for the day-to-day conduct of the business of the Corporation shall be vested in a staff of executive officers, headed by a chief executive appointed by the Board and responsible to the Board. The executive staff shall include a controller. Members of the executive staff shall devote their full time to the affairs of the Corporation. The Board shall define the authority and duties of the members of the executive staff, delegate to them such of the powers vested in the Corporation as it may determine, require that such of them as it may designate be bonded and fix the penalties therefor. The Corporation may pay the premium of any bond or bonds of any officer or employee. With the exception of experts, appointments shall be made pursuant to the civil-service laws and the Classification Act of 1923, as amended (5 U. S. C., 1940 ed., 661).

SEC. 11. Cooperation with other governmental agencies: The Corporation may, with the consent of the agency concerned, accept and utilize, on a compensated or uncompensated basis, the officers, employees, services, facilities, and information of any agency of the Federal Government, including any bureau, office, administration, or other agency of the Department of Agriculture, and of any State, the District of Columbia, any Territory or possession, or any political subdivision thereof. The Corporation may allot to any bureau, office, administration, or other agency of the Department of Agriculture or transfer to such other agencies as it may request to assist it in the conduct of its business any of the funds available to it for administrative expenses. The personnel and facilities of the Corporation may, with the consent of the Corporation, be utilized on a reimbursable basis by any agency of the Federal Government, including any bureau, office, administration, or other agency of the Department of Agriculture, in the perform-ance of any part or all of the functions of such agency.

SEC. 12. Utilization of associations and trade facilities: The Corporation may, in the conduct of its business, utilize on a contract or fee basis, committees or associations of producers, producer-owned and producer-controlled cooperative associations, and trade facilities.

SEC. 13. Records, annual report: The Corporation shall at all times maintain complete and accurate books of account and shall file annually with the Secretary of Agriculture a complete report as to the business of the Corporation, a copy of which shall be forwarded by the Secretary of Agriculture to the President for transmission to the Congress.

SEC. 14. Interest of Members of the Congress: The provisions of section 1 of the act of February 27, 1877, as amended (41 U. S. C., 1940 ed. 22), shall apply to all contracts or agreements of the Corporation, except contracts or agreements of a kind which the Corporation may enter into with farmers participating in a program of the Corporation. SEC. 15. Crimes and offenses.—

FALSE STATEMENTS; OVERVALUATION OF

SECURITIES

(a) Whoever makes any statement knowing it to be false, or whoever willfully overvalues any security, for the purpose of influencing in any way the action of the Corporation, or for the purpose of obtaining for himself or another, money, property, or anything of value, under this act, or under any other act applicable to the Corporation, shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine of not more than $10,000 or by imprisonment by not more than 5 years, or both.

EMBEZZLEMENT, AND SO FORTH; FALSE ENTRIES; FRAUDULENT ISSUE OF OBLIGATIONS OF COR-PORATION

(b) Whoever, being connected in any capacity with the Corporation or any of its programs, (i) embezzles, abstracts, purloins, or willfully misapplies any money, funds, securities, or other things of value, whether belonging to the Corporation or pledged or otherwise entrusted to it; or (ii) with intent to defraud the Corporation, or any other body, politic or corporate, or any individual, or to deceive any officer, auditor, or examiner of the Corporation, makes any false entry in any book, report, or statement of, or to, the Corporation, or draws any order, or issues, puts forth or assigns any note or other obligation or draft, mortgage, judgment, or decree thereof; or (iii) with intent to defraud the Corporation, participates or shares in, or receives directly or indirectly any money profit, property, or benefits through any transaction, loan, commission, contract, or any other act of the Corporation, shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine or not more than $10,000 or by imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

LARCENY: CONVERSION OF PROPERTY

(c) Whoever shall willfully steal, conceal, remove, dispose of, or convert to his own use or to that of another any property owned or held by, or mortgaged or pledged to, the Corporation, shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine of not more than $10,000 or by imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

CONSPIRACY TO COMMIT OFFENSE

(d) Whoever conspires with another to accomplish any of the acts made unlawful the preceding provisions of this section shall, upon conviction thereof, be subject to the same fine or imprisonment, or both, as is applicable in the case of conviction for doing such unlawful acts.

GENERAL STATUTES APPLICABLE

(e) All the general penal statutes relating to crimes and offenses against the United States shall apply with respect to the Corporation, its property, money, contracts and agreements, employees, and operations: Provided, That such general penal statutes shall not apply to the extent that they relate to crimes and offenses punishable under subsections (a), (b), (c), and (d) of this section: Provided further, That sections 114 and 115 of the act of March 4, 1909, as amended (18 U. S. C., 1940 ed., 204, 205) shall not apply to contracts or agreements of a kind which the Corporation may enter into with farmers participating in a program of the Corporation.

SEC. 16. Transfer of assets of Commodity Credit Corporation, a Delaware corporation: The assets, funds, property, and records of Commodity Credit Corporation, a Delaware corporation, are hereby transferred to the Corporation. The rights, privileges, and powers, and the duties and liabilities of Commodity Credit Corporation, a Delaware corporation, in respect to any contract, agree ment, loan, account, or other obligation shall become the rights, privileges, and powers, and the duties and liabilities, respectively, of the Corporation. The enforceable claims of or against Commodity Credit Corporation, a Delaware corporation, shall become the claims of or against, and may be enforced by or against, the Corporation.

SEC. 17. Dissolution of Delaware corporation: The Secretary of Agriculture, representing the United States as the sole owner of the capital stock of Commodity Credit Corporation, a Delaware corporation, is hereby authorized and directed to institute or cause to be instituted such proceedings as are required for the dissolution of said Corporation under the laws of the State of Delaware. The costs of such dissolution of said Corporation shall be borne by the Corporation.

SEC. 18. Effective date: This title shall take effect as of midnight June 30, 1948.

TITLE II-AMENDMENTS TO EXISTING LAW

SEC. 201. Section 8 (a) of the Stabilization Act of 1942, as amended (U. S. C., 1940 ed., supp. V, title 50, sec. 968), is amended by striking out "before the expiration of the 2-year period beginning with the 1st day of January immediately following the date upon which the President by proclamation or the Congress by concurrent resolution declares that hostilities in the present war have terminated" and by inserting in lieu thereof "on or before December 31, 1950."

SEC. 202. Section 4 (a) of the act entitled "An act to extend the life and increase the credit resources of the Commodity Credit Corporation, and for other purposes", approved July 1, 1941 (U. S. C., 1940 ed., supp. V, title 15, sec. 713a-8 (a)), is amended by striking out "the expiration of the 2-year period beginning with the 1st day of January immediately following the date upon which the President by proclamation or the Congress by concurrent resolution declares that hostilities in the present war have terminated" and by inserting in lieu thereof "December 31, 1950."

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered

Without objection, The SPEAKER. it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Wol-COTT] is recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SPENCE] is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, under the Government Corporation Control Act, no wholly Government-owned corporation is continued beyond June 30 of this year, unless it is incorporated as a Government corporation.

Under that law, the Commodity Credit Corporation would expire on June 30, 1948. The bill that is before the House reincorporates the Commodity Credit Corporation and continues the life of the Corporation in perpetuity. There is no limitation on the life of the Corporation contained in the law. However, each and every one of the functions of the Commodity Credit Corporation is limited in respect to the length of time in which that function may be administered by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

The act provides for the creation of this Government-chartered Corporation with a board of five appointed by the President by and with the consent of the Senate. Their terms are for 5 years. The Board appoints a chairman who presumably will be the Secretary of Agri-

A section of the bill provides that not more than a majority of the board shall be within the Department of Agriculture. so that there will be at least three members appointed independently of the Department of Agriculture, but, of course, within the executive establishment. We have created this Corporation within the executive establishment.

The Corporation has a capital of $100,-000,000 with certain assurances and guaranties in the law that any impairment of this capital shall be restored by the Treasury under an authorization for an appropriation for that purpose.

The borrowing power of the Corporation is limited to the same amount as at present, $4,750,000,000.

I neglected to say that this is now a Delaware corporation.

As I have said, the Commodity Credit Corporation is the agency for the administration of certain very important func-They come within the following classifications: The price-support program, the supply program, the foreignpurchase program, the commodity credit program, the loan program for agricultural conservation purposes; and, of course, the subsidy program which, although it was active during the war, is now in process of liquidation.

A few days ago we passed an agricultural-support program. Title 2 of the bill now under consideration provides for the continuance of the price-support program. One of the amendments I have offered is that title 2 of this bill be stricken because we have already legislated upon the same general subject. The above, I think, in principle, is the bill.

In substance and in summary, this bill continues the Delaware corporation, the Commodity Credit Corporation, as a federally chartered corporation, and we are assured that the programs which I have mentioned will be continued if the Com-modity Credit Corporation is continued and if the Congress, of course, supports those programs.

I reiterate that although there is no limitation upon the life of the Corporation, there is a limitation upon the period in which each and every one of these programs may be administered. The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I hope there will be no objection to the passage of this bill.

The Commodity Credit Corporation has exercised a most useful function. It has been the means by which agricultural prices have been supported, and it has done a good job in that respect. Unless it is reincorporated under the Federal Corporations Act it will die on the 30th of this month. It is necessary to pass this legislation in order that its useful functions may continue.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Brown].

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, the Commodity Credit Corporation is the agency through which price support and stabilization policies are effectuated.

The price-support bill, which we passed Saturday, is useless without the Commodity Credit Corporation as a vehicle to carry out the purpose of the support pro-

This bill provides a permanent Federal charter for the Commodity Credit Corporation. This action by Congress is made necessary because of the provisions of the Government Corporations Control Act, enacted in 1945, which requires all Government corporations to obtain a Federal charter from Congress on or before June 30, 1948, in order to continue to function as Government corporations.

The Commodity Credit Corporation was organized pursuant to an Executive order of the President issued on October 16, 1933, and was incorporated as a Government corporation under the laws of Delaware. It has continued to function down to the present time under a Delaware charter that has been amended at various times. Congress, from time to time, also has enacted specific legislation governing the extent and character of its lending and price-support operations and providing various limitations and safeguards with respect to these operations of the Corporation.

For several years, I have advocated legislation to make permanent the setup of the Commodity Credit Corporation. For the reasons I have just given, it is imperative that Congress act now to provide the Corporation with a Federal charter. I feel very strongly that in doing this, Congress should provide a permanent charter, and not deal with this matter on a temporary year-to-year basis or even on a 2- or 3-year basis.

At this point, it is important to distinguish clearly between the question of providing a permanent charter for the Corporation and the question of what levels and for what period of time the Corporation is to support farm prices. Regardless of whether price-support legislation is to be developed in a longrange farm program or whether a temporary extension of existing price support legislation for 1, 2, or 4 years is to be provided, the Commodity Credit Corporation will be needed permanently and it will need a permanent charter under which to operate.

The consuming public has a vital stake in maintaining the Commodity Credit Corporation and its successful functioning in carrying out the price-support functions and ever-normal granary features of the national farm program. Had it not been for the successful operations of the Corporation in carrying out these programs, food prices to consumers would be much higher than they are.

The Commodity Credit Corporation has, during the past 15 years, become a keystone of our over-all farm program. It has helped us establish and maintain fair prices and incomes for our farmers. It has assisted us in maintaining an adequate supply of foods, feed, and fiber—even during the war years, when many farmers found that manpower, machinery, fertilizer, and other production needs were scarce or nonexistent. It has given us flexible authority to meet emergency farm problems as they have arisen.

In view of the vital service the Corporation has rendered to American agriculture, I say that the Corporation should be continued as a Federal agency—a permanent Federal agency—with authority to move promptly and decisively.

The Corporation under the Delaware charter was authorized, among other things, to engage in buying, selling, lending, and other activities with respect to agricultural commodities. Those are broad powers. Congress, however, has kept a firm control over the Delaware Corporation and would continue to keep a firm control over the Federal Corporation. That is why Congress is faced today with two important questions with respect to the Corporation: First, should Congress grant a Federal charter, and, second, should that charter give the Corporation the authority it needs to deal decisively with farm problems. Of course, the answer is "Yes."

Unless Congress is going to repeal the basic agricultural laws, there will be a continuing need for the Corporation to operate. Therefore, it is just good common sense to provide a permanent charter for the Corporation. This will be reassuring to farmers. Some of the laws which require the use of the Corporation in order to effectuate congressional price-support policies are already permanent statutes, but without the Corporation to make good on these policies, the statutes would be of no value.

This does not mean that Congress from time to time cannot change the rules, powers, duties, and limitations under which the Corporation operates. The fact is, Congress has done this in the past by various statutes all during the period under which the Corporation has operated under a Delaware charter. Congress, of course, can revoke the proposed charter at any time it desires. Hence, there seems to be no valid reason why Congress should not provide a permanent charter for the Corporation.

It is also important to provide adequate powers with sufficient flexibility to enable the Corporation to carry out its statutory responsibilities. The Corporation is charged by law with providing mandatory commodity loans and price supports at various levels. It is vitally important that the Government be prepared to make good on its commitments to farmers in these basic statutes. if the confidence of farmers in the integrity of their Government is to be preserved. Therefore, the Corporation must be clothed with adequate powers to discharge these responsibilities effectively. The proposed charter is an improvement on the Delaware charter: its powers are not as sweeping in scope, but nevertheless they appear to be adequate and they are better defined than in the old charter.

This is one issue upon which farmers everywhere are united. They realize the vital necessity for continuing the Commodity Credit Corporation. The American Farm Bureau Federation, which is the largest and most representative of the farm organizations and which represents more than one and one-quarter million farm families in 45 States and Puerto Rico, strongly urged a permanent charter for the Corporation. I fully agree with their views of this matter. It is vitally important that Congress act now so that farmers will be assured that their Government is not going to let them down.

Mr. SPENCE, Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. Jackson].

Mr. JACKSON of Washington. Speaker, the drive to destroy the rights of farmer cooperatives in the United States continues unabated. As in the past, the drive is spearheaded by an organization known as the National Tax Equality Association. It is being aided and abetted by other groups, including the National Associated Businessmen. Their latest move, Mr. Speaker, is the attempt which is now being made to stampede the resolution committees of the Democratic and Republican Parties for a proposed platform plank against farm cooperatives. have undertaken a Nation-wide drive to obtain a million signatures in behalf of their mischievous program. A recent circular issued by the National Tax Equality Association illustrates the means they are using to obtain these signatures. It states in part as follows: "You will probably receive petitions sent out by other organizations. Use them. This is one case where duplication can be made to pay dividends-in more and more signatures." It looks like the National Tax Equality Association will be satisfied with all the petitions they can obtain even if some of them are duplicates. This should be ample warning to both major parties to scrutinize most carefully the petitions which will be presented to them.

Another tactic of the National Tax Equality Association is its attempt to smear the cooperatives as "Red" and "communistic." Nothing could be more ridiculous or further from the truth.

Farmer cooperatives are among the strongest foes of communism in any of its forms. Cooperatives are strongest in Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium, and England, and in none of these countries has communism been able to gain the slightest foothold.

In the United States there are more than 5,000,000 members of farmers marketing and purchasing cooperatives, many farmers belonging to more than one association. Well over half of all the farmers in the United States are stanch members of cooperatives, and I have never heard of anyone but the National Tax Equality Association and its affiliates who has conceived that the American farmer was a Communist.

It is pertinent to inquire as to just who are these persons and these organizations who are spearheading the drive to strike at the very heart of the cooperative groups of farmers throughout the Nation. Who are these persons and organizations who would have the Republican and Democratic Parties repudiate the major contributions that farmer cooperatives have made in bringing health and prosperity to American agriculture and thereby to our whole Nation?

What are the selfish motives of those persons and individuals who would have us forget the prostrate condition of American agriculture only a few short years ago and the success of farmer co-operatives in making our system of free enterprise work on American farms?

The full story of the identity and financing of this giant anticooperative endeavor is not known to the public because of the conscious effort of its sponsors to obscure it. I do know that the parent organization organized in 1943 with the demonstrated objective of crushing the successful operation of farm cooperatives is the National Tax Equality Association, with headquarters in Chicago, Ill. I do know that Mr. Ben C. McCabe, chairman of the board and formerly president, attempted to hide the true nature of the NTEA when he told the House Ways and Means Committee on November 25, 1947, that:

NTEA is devoted solely to research and educational activities and no deviation from these limitations is permitted either by the association's charter or by vote of its board of directors.

In order to try to retain its professed character of a research and educational organization, the NTEA has sponsored other organizations through which to channel to the public and to the Congress its propaganda advocating the overthrow of co-ops.

Up to about the first of this year, the NTEA had the United States Business Organizations, Inc., as its Washington agent to carry the frontal attack against cooperatives. Karl S. Dixon, as executive vice president of the United States Business Organizations, was the $12,000-a-year man until a few months ago in Washington spearheading the drive against cooperatives. Now I understand Dixon is back in Chicago and, as vice president of the National Tax Equality Association, is taking an active part in contacting trade associations, chambers of commerce, business firms, and private individuals to get signatures to the anti-cooperative petition for presentation at the Republican and Democratic Conventions

Is not this sufficient to indicate that NTEA has departed far from the research and educational activities professed by Mr. Ben McCabe?

Mr. Speaker, the House Small Business Committee, of which I am a member, conducted extensive hearings during 1945 and 1946 on the subject of cooperatives. On page 42 of the report submitted to the Congress by the committee on April 9, 1946, we made the following findings and recommendations:

There is substantial evidence to show that the cooperative movement operates as a very successful means of combating monopolistic concentrations and, as such, is a very healthy addition to the American economy.

addition to the American economy.

There is no evidence to show that cooperatives have been granted a type of preferential financial treatment by the Federal Government that has not likewise been made available to and accepted by other forms of business enterprise, including banks, savings and loan societies, manufacturers, distributors, and other types of private enterprise operating for the principal purpose of making profits. An examination of the operations of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Smaller War Plants Corporation, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, and other Federal financing agencies gives proof that thousands of private firms operating for profit have sought and enjoyed the benefits of such agencies' financial assistance in a manner comparable to that received by cooperatives from the Farm Credit Administration and its allied financing

In 1947 the same committee conducted further hearings on this subject. During the course of these hearings, a request was made on August 22, 1947, by the gentleman from Texas, Representative WRIGHT PATMAN, a member of the committee, for the National Tax Equality Association to submit a complete statement of its receipts, contributions, and disbursements for the past 2 years. gentleman from Texas, Representative PATMAN, pointed out that certain cooperatives had been asked by the committee to submit their full records and that every one of them had fully complied with the request. Although this information was requested of the National Tax Equality Association, to date they have failed to submit to the committee any of the information called for in the hearings.

A recent estimate made after a survey of the records of the Clerk of the House of Representatives shows that almost a million dollars a year is being spent by the National Tax Equality Association and its affiliates. Yet we have no record of who is contributing these vast sums of money to destroy farmer cooperatives. I think that it is time we find out who is behind this campaign.

Farmers in my own district in Washington have grown tired of the baseless charges which have been leveled at them during the past 4 years by such organizations as the National Tax Equality Association and the National Associated Businessmen. Farmer cooperatives pay all the local, State, and Federal taxes which are paid by other businesses which operate in the same manner. Cooperatives pay property taxes, sales taxes, social-security taxes, stamp taxes, and income taxes if they make any profits. Members of farmer cooperatives pay a tax on every cent of income which comes to them from patronage refunds paid by their own associations. Cooperatives are taxed in exactly the same manner as are partnerships and individual businesses.

I would like to remind the leaders of both political parties that the farmers of this Nation will not stand by and permit the representatives of organized greed and wealth to deny them their right to organize and operate their own farm business enterprises. From the depths of economic depressions and personal hardships, the farmers of this Nation have built their own cooperative organizations to insure to themselves and their families the just financial returns from their toil and labors.

I am sure that the millions of farmers of this Nation will not allow a selfish few to destroy the cooperatives which farmers have struggled to build up over a quarter of a century.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCormack].

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, we witness in the consideration of this bill the Congress legislating in accordance with the rules of both branches, and with the intent of Congress to get legislation enacted into law as quickly as possible. We have a situation here where a bill has passed the other body and the House committee has reported out a bill. If the House bill was brought up and passed, it would go over to the Senate, and we will have the situation of a bill passing the Senate over in the House and a bill passing the House over in the Senate, and no final action taken. In order to expedite legislative procedure and to get legislation enacted into law, where there is a sincere purpose to legislate, where a bill has passed one body and the other body has reported out a bill from the committee, the proper thing to do is to strike out all after the enacting clause and to substitute the bill of the body in which the bill is pending, in this case the Senate bill pending in the House, with the House passing the committee differences between the two bills. That means that there is complete legislative action to its final conclusion. When that is done the bill goes back to the Senate, and the Senate can agree to the House amendments insofar as there is a disagreement between the Senate bill and the bill as it passed this body. It goes back as a Senate bill with the House bill including all after the enacting clause. If the Senate decides not to concur, then they can ask for a conference, and after the conferees have discussed the matter, a conference report is brought in. If, in the first place, the Senate agrees to the House action, that is the end of it, and the bill, after engrossment and final action and signature by the presiding officers of both bodies, goes to the President. The same happens after a conference report is agreed to by both branches.

We are now witnessing the regular way of legislating, where there is a sincere desire to legislate. As to the housing bill, I am wondering if my good friend, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Wolcott] is going to take the same course. The housing bill will come up soon. There is a Senate bill now on the Speaker's table. I wonder if my good friend from Michigan [Mr. Wolcott] is going to, when he moves to suspend the rules, take the Senate bill and strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the House bill, whichever one he is going to propose, and I assume it is the last bill he reported out.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. WOLCOTT. The gentleman should know, for the very simple reason that there is no Senate bill at the Speaker's table.

Mr. McCORMACK. There is a Senate bill over here.

Mr. WOLCOTT. That is in committee. Mr. McCORMACK. That is immaterial. It does not have to be on the Speaker's table. The bill has passed the other body. The Speaker could recognize to suspend the rules. It would not have to be reported out of committee. The bill is in committee, but it has passed the other body, so that is immaterial. The gentleman could move to suspend the rules and call up the Senate bill, and then strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the House bill. That would be the orderly way, just as he is doing now. May I ask my friend from Michigan if it is the intention to do so?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I might say to the gentleman from Massachusetts that it is not the intention to do so.

Mr. McCORMACK. That being so, it is not the intention of the Republicans, as far as the House is concerned, to have any real housing legislation enacted in this session of Congress, because if they did intend to do so, they would take up the Senate bill, strike out all after the enacting clause, and substitute the House bill, and then it would immediately go to conference. If they did that, then we would support it in order to get it into conference. The frank answer of my friend from Michigan is, again, what I said yesterday, a powerful message to the people of the country that everything that President Truman has been saying on his trip West about the Republicancontrolled Congress is correct.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Hope].

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, I sincerely regret that this bill is being brought up under suspension of rules which does not permit amendment. This is a very important measure. The Commodity Credit Corporation furnishes the machinery through which the price-support programs on agricultural commodities are carried out. Without the Commodity Credit Corporation, it would be impossible for the Secretary of Agriculture to carry out the mandate of Congress that prices on certain agricultural commodities be supported.

There are two very serious defects in the bill as it now stands. One of them is that the bill prohibits the Corporation from acquiring or leasing any plant or facility for warehousing, transporting, processing, or handling of agricultural commodities, or from acquiring or leasing real property or any interest therein except the rental of office space. The bill also contains a provision reading as follows:

In the Corporation's leasing and selling operations with respect to agricultural com-modities (except sales to other Government agencies), and in the warehousing, transporting, processing, or handling of agricultural commodities, the Corporation shall utilize the usual and customary channels, facilities, and arrangements of trade and

These provisions which severely restrict the operations of the Commodity Credit Corporation would, in my opinion, make it very difficult for the agency to carry out the duties imposed on it by However, I shall not detain the House with a detailed discussion of these points because my time is limited and this particular matter will be discussed by the able gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN] a little later in this debate.

The provisions of this bill to which I particularly wish to call attention and to discuss in some detail are those which provide for setting up the Board. tion 9 of the bill provides that the Board of Directors shall consist of five members, one of whom shall be the Secretary of Agriculture or his nominee, and the remaining four to be appointed by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Not more than one-half of the members of the Board could be employees of the Corporation or any Department or agency of the Government. The Secretary of Agriculture is divested of the authority which he has previously had, of general supervision of the Corporation.

This means that three members of the Board of Directors must be appointed from outside the Department of Agriculture and the Federal Government, and that the control of the operations of the Corporation would be in the hands of the appointed members. What would occur under those circumstances is that, while the Secretary of Agriculture would have the responsibility for carrying out the provisions of law relating to support prices, under the terms of this bill he would lack the authority to do so effectively. It would simply be another case of what we already have too much of in the Federal Government-that is divided authority. Under the arrange-ment provided in this bill the Board could, if it desired, adopt policies and carry out programs to which the Secretary was opposed. Congress and the President would have to look to both the Board of Directors of the Corpora-tion and the Secretary of Agriculture.

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOPE. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. If the Congress does not give the Secretary of Agriculture full power over this board, how can we hold the Secretary of Agriculture to account for the operations of the Commodity Credit Corporation?

Mr. HOPE. There is no way that we can do so.

The principal purpose in putting the Commodity Credit Corporation in the Department of Agriculture, where it has been since 1939, was to get away from the division of authority and to assure that the activities of the Department and those of the Commodity Credit Corporation which are so closely related, would be coordinated and integrated.

At present the officers of the Commodity Credit Corporation are officials of the Department of Agriculture who are also in charge of departmental programs relating to the production and marketing of agricultural commodities. The programs of the Commodity Credit Corporation are necessarily closely related to the others of the Department of Agriculture. They are tied in with programs which involve section 32 funds. Price supports are tied in closely with production goals. The programs of the Corporation at the State and county levels are carried on largely through committees of farmers who are also responsible for other departmental activities. If the Corporation were under the control of a separate Board which had no knowledge of these activities and no part in them, there would without question be a tremendous amount of overlapping and confusion, and there would always be the possibility of conflicting programs.

Another factor which, it seems to me, should be taken into consideration is that there is no way by which members of the Board appointed from outside the Department of Agriculture could devote full time to the affairs of the Corporation. I mean by that that there is no necessity for full-time directors to pass on the matters which would ordinarily come before the Board.

It would be expected, I presume, that the members of the Board would be men who were acquainted with and experienced in the buying and selling of agri-cultural products. There is nothing in the bill which requires that they divest themselves of outside interests in those activities before becoming members of the Board. I believe that most men who are qualified for a position on the Board would not feel that they could afford to divest themselves of conflicting private interests. If they did not do so, they and the Board would certainly be subject to criticism. Thus, in practical operation, it would probably turn out that members of the Board will be those with conflicting private interests or persons without adequate experience to conduct such important business activities.

The provisions of this bill to which I have alluded are matters of deep concern to farmers everywhere. Some of our leading farm organizations have gone on record as being greatly disturbed by the provisions now contained in this bill. I have here in my hand a letter from Mr. Albert S. Goss, master of the National Grange, reading as follows:

JUNE 15, 1948.

Hon, CLIFFORD HOPE.

Chairman, House Committee on Agri-culture, House of Representatives, Washington 25, D. C.

DEAR MR. HOPE: We sincerely hope the Commodity Credit Corporation bill will be amended to eliminate the divided responsibility under which the Secretary is charged with the duty for supporting commodity prices, but with means for carrying out this duty under the control of a board not responsible to him, We believe that the bill should also be amended to eliminate those sections which would channel all operations through the grain trade who might easily wreck the Corporation's essential stabilization operations or make them prohibitively expensive.

Sincerely yours,

A. S. Goss, Master, the National Grange.

I also have the following telegram from Mr. John J. Riggle, assistant secretary of the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives:

Hon. CLIFFORD HOPE,

Chairman, Committee on Agriculture, House of Representatives:

Urge that H. R. 6263, Commodity Credit Corporation bill, be amended to eliminate divided authority between Secretary of Agriculture to support farm prices and handle surplus and the independent Board to direct affairs of Corporation, and to provide for Corporation to own real and personal property necessary to handle surpluses of farm products which normal channels of trade do not handle at or above support levels.

JOHN J. RIGGLE, Assistant Secretary, National Council of Farmer Cooperatives.

The American Farm Bureau Federation has stated its position in the following wire, signed by Roger W. Fleming. director of its Washington office:

Hon. CLIFFORD HOPE:

House Office Building, Washington, D. C .:

Urge support amendment to H. R. 6263, Federal charter CCC, eliminating restrictive grain-trade provisions, and substituting language requiring CCC, in buying, selling, and other operations, to use normal trade channels insofar as practicable. Because of congressional mandates on loans, price support and other operations control of Corporation should be left with Secretary of Agriculture.
ROGER W. FLEMING.

Director, Washington Office, American Farm Bureau Federation.

If this bill had been brought up under such circumstances that amendments were permitted, I would offer the following amendments, which, if adopted, would cure the serious defects to which I have referred:

Page 2, line 8, strike out "its Board of Directors" and insert in lieu thereof "the Secretary of Agriculture (hereinafter referred to as 'Secretary')."

Page 8, line 12, strike out section 9 in its entirety and substitute in lieu thereof the

"SEC. 9. Directors: (a) The management of the Corporation shall be vested in a board of directors (hereinafter referred to as the 'Board'), subject to the general direction and control of the Secretary, who shall be a director and serve as Chairman of the Board. The Board shall consist of four members (in addition to the Secretary), who shall be ap-pointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Each appointed member of the Board shall receive compensation at the rate of $10,000 per annum and shall hold office for a term of 4 years, except that (i) any member appointed to fill a vacancy occurring prior to the expiration of the term for which his predecessor was appointed shall be appointed for the remainder of such term, and (ii) the terms of office of members first taking office after the date of enactment of this act shall expire, as designated by the President at the time of appointment, one at the end of 1 year, and one at the end of 2 years, one at the end of 3 years, and one at the end of 4 years, after the date of enactment of this act. In addition to their duties as members of the Board, such appointed members shall perform such other duties as may be prescribed by the Secretary. Each appointed member of the Secretary. Each appointed member of the Board shall receive compensation at the rate of $10,000 per annum, except that any such member who holds another office or position under the Department of Agriculture, the compensation for which exceeds such rate, may elect to receive compensation at the rate provided for such other office or position in lieu of the compensation provided by this

"(b) Vacancies in the Board, whether arising from failure of the President to nominate or the Senate to confirm the original or subsequent members of the Board, so long as there shall be four members in office, shall not impair the powers of the Board to execute the functions of the Corporation, and a majority of the members in office shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of the business of the Board."

Page 9, line 13, strike out section 10 in its entirety and substitute the following:

"SEC. 10. Personnel of Corporation: The Secretary shall appoint such officers and employees as may be necessary for the conduct of the business of the Corporation, define their authority and duties, delegate to them such of the powers vested in the Corporation as he may determine, require that such of them as he may designate be bonded, and fix the penalties therefor. The Corporation may pay the premium of any bond or bonds. With the exception of experts, appointments shall be made pursuant to the civil-service laws and the Classification Act of 1923, as amended (5 U.S. C., 1940 ed., 661)."

Since it is not possible under this procedure to offer amendments, I have inserted them in the RECORD, with the hope that when this bill goes to conference, the conferees may agree upon provisions which are substantially the same as those contained in the amendments abovequoted.

As indicated in the beginning of my remarks, I regard this matter as one of the greatest importance to the agricultural producers of this country.

Mr. HOLMES. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOPE. I yield.

Mr. HOLMES. Because of the unusual parliamentary situation, has the gentleman from Kansas any information as to how these matters may be handled in conference if this bill is passed by this body?

Mr HOPE. We have a Senate bill, and I understand that the Senate bill will be substituted for this bill, and that everything after the enacting clause will be stricken out of the Senate bill, and the subject matter of the House bill in-serted. That would get the bill into

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Kansas has expired,

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN].

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. Mr. Speaker, I certainly agree 100 percent with what the gentleman from Kansas IMr. HOPE] had to say about the divided authority which is created by the provisions of this particular bill. Whether we are Democrats or Republicans, regardless of who is Secretary of Agriculture, if we in Congress want to hold that official responsible for Commodity Credits operations, we must give to the Secretary of Agriculture the power to make decisions. I sincerely trust, as Mr. Hope has stated, that this subject will be considered in confidence.

There is another defect in this particular bill. If you will turn to Section 5 of H. R. 6263, you will see a mandatory provision there in which it is required that practically all operations of the Commodity Credit Corporation in regard to the warehousing, transporting, processing, or handling of agricultural commodities shall utilize—note the word "shall"—the customary channels, facilities, and arrangements of trade and commerce.

What does that amendment mean? May I say first that the gentleman from Michigan has very kindly agreed that an amendment will be placed in this particular paragraph after the word "shall". which will not make this particular section mandatory. But under this particular section if left in the bill as it is, the Commodity Credit Corporation alone with other things could not purchase commodities directly from producers. It could not sell commodities directly to farmers. It could not extend the price support to farmers through purchases in areas where dealers are not willing to participate in the program. Frankly it would render ineffective entirely the great sealing program that we have had in effect throughout the Middle West in corn especially and other grains.

I thank the gentleman from Michigan and the committee for their willingness to accept this amendment, which will not make this section workable.

I am also disturbed about page 24, line The language as written there practically says to the Commodity Credit Corporation: "You cannot utilize the 22,-000 or more small steel-grain bins which you have had as extra storage space. We can plainly see that in case of a glut on the railroads or in the terminal markets the present language would mean that it would be practically impossible to carry out a grain-sealing program. Here, again, I am glad that the gentleman has agreed to an amendment, which does not go as far as I would like to see it, but nevertheless it does help a great deal. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Wolcottl has been very helpful in getting the matter adjusted.

Will the gentleman state what, in his opinion, his particular amendment to that section on page 4, line 22, would do? Would it assure the right of the Commodity Credit Corporation to own personal property? There is no such definite assurance in the bill. I would like a definite assurance that the Corporation can own these 20,000, or more, steel tanks, if needed, to carry out its functions as the vehicle for price-support programs.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I think I am in a position to assure the gentleman-surely, would state it is my understandingthat there is no limitation upon the amount of personal property which the Corporation may own. There is a limitation which applies only to leases and real estate, and, as the gentleman says, they will be authorized under this amendment to continue existing leases.

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. I thank the gentleman.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN] has expired.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I yield minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Buck].

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, this is another measure to guarantee continued high prices and high cost of living.

I read two of the specific powers granted the Corporation as set forth on page 6 (a): "Support the prices of agricultural commodities through loans, purchases, payments, and other operations." Then, having bought the commodities, subsection (d) permits the Corporation to "remove and dispose of or aid in the removal or disposition of surplus agri-cultural commodities." It buys the com-modities in section (a), and pours kerosene on them in section (d).

Members who want a continuation of the high cost of living should vote in favor of this bill.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from New York [Mr. Buck] has expired.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of the time on this side. Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Michigan to suspend the rules and pass the bill S. 1322, as amended.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Buck) there were-ayes 107, noes 13.

So two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the

HOUSING ACT OF 1948

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 6959) to amend the National Housing Act, as amended, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That this act may be cited as the "Housing Act of 1948."

TITLE I-AMENDMENTS TO TITLE I OF THE NATIONAL HOUSING ACT

SEC. 101. (a) Section 1 of the National Housing Act, as amended, is hereby amended by striking out "titles II, III, and VI" whereever appearing in said section and inserting in lieu thereof "titles II, III, VI, and VII." (b) Section 2 of such act, as amended, is hereby amended:

(1) by striking out "$165,000,000" in subsection (a) and inserting in lieu thereof "$200,000,000"

(2) by striking out "$3,000" in subsection

(b) and inserting in lieu thereof "$4,500";(3) by striking out the first proviso in the first sentence of subsection (b) and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "Provided, That insurance may be granted to any such financial institution with respect to any obligation not in excess of $10,000 and having a maturity not in excess of 7 years and 32 days representing any such loan, advance of credit, or purchase made by it if such loan, advance of credit, or purchase is made for the purpose of financing the alteration, repair, improvement, or conversion of an existing structure in order to provide additional housing accommodations for two or more families:

(4) by amending the last sentence of subsection (b) to read as follows: "The Administrator is authorized to prescribe such pro-cedures as in his judgment are necessary to secure to veterans of World War II and their immediate families occupancy priority with respect to any additional housing accommodations referred to in the first proviso of this subsection."

(c) Section 5 of such act, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 5. The Administrator shall make an annual report to the Congress not later than the 1st day of April in each year of his activities during the preceding calendar year under this title and titles II, III, VI, and VII

TITLE II-DISPOSAL OF GOVERNMENT-OWNED PERMANENT WAR-HOUSING ACCOMMODATIONS

DEFINITIONS

SEC. 201. For the purposes of this title-(1) The term "Administrator" means the Housing and Home Finance Administrator.

(2) The term "Lanham War Housing Act" means the act entitled "An act to expedite the provision of housing in connection with national defense, and for other purposes," approved October 14, 1940, as amended.

(3) The term "war housing" means any interest, owned by the United States and under the control of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, in (A) housing (other than temporary housing) acquired or constructed under the Lanham War Housing Act, under the Second Supplemental National Defense Appropriation Act, 1941 (Public, No. 781, 76th Cong.), as amended, under the Urgent Deficiency Appropriation Act, 1941 (Public Law 9, 77th Cong.), or under the Second Defi-ciency Appropriation Act, 1944 (Public Law 375, 78th Cong.), and (B) such other property as is determined by the Administrator to be essential to the use of such housing.

(4) The term "veteran" means (A) any person who served in the active military or naval service of the United States at any time on or after September 16, 1940, and prior to the termination of the present war, and who has been discharged or released therefrom under conditions other than dishonorable after active service of 90 days or more or by reason of an injury or disability incurred in service in line of duty, or (B), during the present war, any person in the active military or naval service of the United States

(5) The term "dwelling" means a war housing building designed for residential use of one or more families.

(6) The term "dwelling unit" means a dwelling, or that part of a dwelling, which is designed for residential use of one family.

SALE OF WAR HOUSING

SEC. 202. (a) All war housing (except mortgages, liens, or other interests as security) shall, subject to the provisions of this title, be sold for cash as expeditiously as pos-sible and not later than December 31, 1949. Wherever practicable each dwelling in a war housing project shall be offered for sale separately from other dwellings in such project. Any mortgage, lien, or other interest in war housing held by the Administrator or acquired by him pursuant to a contract en-tered into prior to February 26, 1947, may, subject to the provisions of this section, be sold for cash.

(b) (1) Except as provided in paragraph(2) of this subsection, the price to be paid for war housing sold under this title shall be a price not less than the reasonable value thereof at the time of the offer for sale as determined by appraisal made by an ap-praiser or appraisers designated by the Federal Housing Commissioner.

(2) The price to be paid for any mort-gage, lien, or other interest as security sold under this section shall be a price not less than the unpaid principal (plus accrued interest thereon) of the obligation with respect to which the mortgage, lien, or other interest as security is held.

(c) Except as provided in subsection (a) and (b), the sale of war housing under this title shall be with or without warranty and upon such other terms and conditions as the Administrator deems proper.

TRANSFER OF WAR HOUSING TO THE NATIONAL MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT

SEC. 203. Notwithstanding the provisions of this title or any other provision of law, the Administrator may, in his discretion, transfer to the jurisdiction of the appropriate department in the National Military Establishment any war housing situated within the proximate vicinity of any permanent Army, Navy, or Air Force Establishment if the transfer of such war housing was requested on or before April 15, 1947, by the Secretary of War or the Secretary of the Navy.

PREFERENCES

SEC. 204. (a) Preference in the purchase of any dwelling designed for occupancy by less than five families shall be granted to veterans and their families and to occupants over other prospective purchasers of such dwelling in the following order:

A veteran and his family who occupy a dwelling unit in the dwelling to be sold.

(2) A veteran and his family who do not occupy a dwelling unit in the dwelling to be sold but who intend to occupy a dwelling unit in the dwelling to be purchased; but if the dwelling is designed for occupancy by two, three, or four families, equal preference shall be granted to a private corporation, association, or cooperative society which is the legal agent of veterans and their families who intend to occupy the dwelling purchased by such corporation, associations, or society.

(3) A nonveteran who occupies a dwelling unit in the dwelling to be sold.

(b) In the case of any war housing project where it is not practicable to offer each dwelling for sale separately from other dwellings in the project and in the case of any dwellin the project and in the case of any dwelling designed for occupancy by more than four families, preference in the purchase thereof shall be granted to any private corporation, association, or cooperative society which is the legal agent of veterans who intend to occupy the war housing purchased by such corporation, association, or society.

(c) The Administrator shall give such notice in such manner as he deems reasonable to enable prospective purchasers who have a preference under this section in the purchase of war housing to exercise such preference. Any prospective purchaser having a preference under subsection (a) in the purchase of any dwelling may apply for the pur-chase of such dwelling (1) if the preference is under paragraph (1), within 30 days after the date of the notice of the offer for sale, (2) if the preference is under paragraph (2), within 60 days after the date of the notice of the offer for sale, and (3) if the preference is under paragraph (3), within 90 days after the date of the notice of the offer for sale. Any corporation, association, or society having a preference under subsection (b) in the purchase of any war housing may apply for the purchase of such housing within 180 days after the date of the notice of the offer for sale.

SALES WITHOUT PREFERENCE

SEC. 205. If any dwelling or war housing project is not sold to a purchaser who is granted a preference under section 204 and who applied within the time prescribed in who applied within the time prescribed in subsection (c) of such section, such dwelling or war housing project shall be sold a pro-vided in this title without regard to any preferences granted under section 204 and without regard to any restrictions contained in any other law as to whom war housing may

TITLE OF PURCHASER

SEC. 206. A deed or other instrument executed by or on behalf of the Administrator purporting to transfer title or any other in-terest in property under this title shall be conclusive evidence of compliance with the provisions of this title insofar as title or other interest of any bona fide purchasers for value is concerned.

VALIDITY OF CONTRACTS

SEC. 207. Nothing in this title shall be deemed to impair or modify any contract entered into prior to February 26, 1947, for the sale of property, or any term or provision of any such contract, without the consent of the purchaser or his assignee, if the contract or the term or provision thereof is otherwise valid.

DISPOSITION OF PROCEEDS

SEC. 208. Moneys derived by the Administrator from the disposition of war housing under this title shall be covered into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

TITLE III-AMENDMENTS TO TITLE III OF THE NATIONAL HOUSING ACT

SEC. 301. Title III of the National Housing Act, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"TITLE III-FEDERAL NATIONAL MORTGAGE ASSOCIATION

"CREATION AND POWERS OF THE FEDERAL NA-TIONAL MORTGAGE ASSOCIATION

"SEC. 301. (a) The Administrator is further authorized and empowered to provide for the establishment of a Federal National Mort-gage Association (hereinafter referred to as the 'association') which shall be authorized, subject to such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Association-

"(1) to purchase, service, or sell any mort-gages, which are insured after June 19, 1948, under section 203 or section 603 of this act, or guaranteed under section 505 (a) of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended: Provided, however, That—
"(A) no mortgage shall be offered to the Association for purchase by Federal, State, or municipal instrumentalities;

"(B) no mortgage may be purchased for an amount exceeding 98 percent of the unpaid principal balance thereof, plus accrued interest, at the time of purchase;

"(C) no mortgage shall be offered to the Association for purchase if the original principal obligation of the loan exceeds or exceeded $10,000 for each family residence or dwelling unit covered by the mortgage or other lien securing the loan;

"(D) no mortgage shall be offered to the Association for purchase unless offered by the original mortgagee prior to any other sale thereof;

"(E) no mortgage shall be offered to the Association for purchase by any one mort-gagee (1) if dated prior to June 19, 1948, and (2) if the unpaid principal balance thereof, when added to the aggregate amount paid for all such mortgages purchased by the Association from such mortgagee, exceeds 25 percent of the original principal amount of all such mortgage loans made by such mort-gagee after June 19, 1948.

"(2) to borrow money for any of the fore-going purposes through the issuance of notes or other such obligations as hereinafter pro-

The Administrator shall have power to terminate the existence of the Association and order its liquidation and the winding up of its affairs whenever the Ad-ministrator determines, in his judgment, that the need therefor no longer exists. The Association shall make a report of its activities to the Administrator in January .nd July of each year for the preceding 6 months' period, which report shall be transmitted to the Congress, together with the Administrator's recommendations thereon."

SEC. 302. Nothing in the amendment made by section 301 of this act shall limit the authority of the Federal National Mortgage Association to service or sell any mortgage purchased prior to the date of the enact-ment of this act, or to purchase, service, or sell any mortgage with respect to which commitment to purchase was made prior to the date of the enactment of this act.

TITLE IV-TAX INCENTIVE FOR THE PRODUC-TION OF ADDITIONAL RENTAL HOUSING AC-COMMODATIONS

SEC. 401. (a) The Internal Revenue Code is amended by inserting after section 124 thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 124A. Amortization Deduction for Rental Housing.

"(a) General rule: Every taxpayer, at his election, shall be entitled to an amorization deduction for a period of 60 months with respect to any necessary rental housing facility defined in subsection (d). Such amortiza-tion deduction shall be an amount, with respect to each month of such period within the taxable year, equal to the adjusted basis (for determining gain) of the facility at the end of such month divided by 60 plus the number of months (including the month for which the deduction is computed) remaining in the 60-month period. Such adjusted basis at the end of the month shall be computed without regard to the amortization deduction for such month. The amortization deduction above provided with respect to any month shall be in lieu of the deduction with respect to such facility for such month provided by section 23 (1) (relating to exhaustion, wear and tear, and obsolescence), but shall be allowable only if a deduction under section 23 (1) would otherwise be allowable for such month with respect to such The amortization deduction shall be allowable only to the taxpayer to whom a certificate is issued under subsection (e) with respect to such facility; and, if such certificate is revoked by the Federal Housing Commissioner for any violation of the conditions and specifications contained therein, the deduction shall not be allowable for any month ending after a violation upon which such revocation is based. The 60-month period shall begin as to any such facility at the election of the taxpayer, with the month following the month in which the facility was completed, or with the succeeding taxable year.

"(b) Election of amortization: The elec-tion of the taxpayer to take the amortization deductions and to begin the 60-month period with the month following the month in which the facility was completed shall be made only by a statement to that effect in the return for the taxable year in which the facility was completed. The election to take the amortization deduction and to be-gin such period with the taxable year suc-ceeding such year shall be made only by a statement to that effect in the return for such succeeding taxable year.

"(c) Termination of amortization deduc-tion: A taxpayer which has elected under subsection (b) to take the amortization deduction provided in subsection (a) may, at any time after making such election, discontinue the amortization deductions with respect to the remainder of the amortization period, such discontinuance to begin as of the beginning of any month specified by the taxpayer in a notice in writing filed with the Commissioner before the beginning of such month. The deduction provided under section 23 (1) shall be allowed, beginning with the first month as to which the amortization deduction is not applicable, and the tax-payer shall not be entitled to any further amortization deductions with respect to such facility

"(d) Definitions: As used in this section—
"(1) The term 'necessary rental housing facility' means any rental housing facility with respect to which a certificate under sub-section (e) is issued to the taxpayer. "(2) The term 'rental housing facility' means—

"(A) any dwelling unit or units held by the taxpayer for rental purposes, the con-struction of which is begun at any time on or after July 1, 1948, and before the close of

July 1, 1950; or

"(B) any dwelling unit or units held by the taxpayer for rental purposes provided by the alteration or remodeling of an existing structure if such alteration or remodeling is begun at any time on or after July 1, 1948, and before the close of July 1, 1950, and if such dwelling unit or units are in addition to the number of dwelling units contained in such structure prior to such alteration or remodeling.

"(3) The term 'dwelling unit' means any dwelling unit containing its own kitchen and bath facilities.

"(4) The adjusted basis of any necessary rental housing facility shall include only so much of the amount otherwise constituting such adjusted basis as is properly attribut able to the construction, or to the alteration or remodeling, covered in the certificate issued under subsection (e). In no event shall the basis of the land on which such facility is located be included in such adjusted basis

"(e) Issuance of certificate: (i) The Federal Housing Commissioner is hereby authorized to certify as necessary any rental housing facility (A) which is or will be located in an area in which he finds there is a short-age of rental housing and (B) in which the dwelling units are or will be of such character and will be rented at such rentals as will, in his judgment, tend to relieve such shortage. Such Commissioner is authorized. upon any violation of the conditions and specifications contained in a certificate issued by him, to revoke such certificate

"(2) An application for such certificate shall be filed with the Federal Housing Commissioner prior to the commencement of the construction, or alteration or remodeling, of the rental housing facility, and such cer-tificate shall be issued only to the person filing such application.

(3) The Federal Housing Commissioner is hereby authorized, from time to time, to prescribe forms and regulations with respect to such certificates.

"(f) Life tenant and remainderman: In the case of property held by one person for life with remainder to another person, the deduc-tion shall be computed as if the life tenant were the absolute owner of the property and shall be allowable to the life tenant."

(b) Section 23 (t) of the Internal Revenue Code is amended to read as follows:

"(t) Amortization deduction: The deduction for amortization provided in sections 124 and 124A.'

(c) Section 172 of the Internal Revenue Code is amended by striking out "of emergency facilities."

(d) Section 190 of the Internal Revenue Code is amended by inserting after "emer-gency facilities" the following: "or necessary rental housing facilities.'

(e) The amendments made by this section shall be applicable to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1947.

SEC. 2. Section 3403 of the Internal Revenue Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f) The tax imposed by subsection (b) shall not apply in the case of trailer coaches of the housing type (including parts or accessories therefor sold on or in connection therewith or with the sale thereof) sold prior to July 1, 1950, and after the close of the month in which falls the date of the enactment of this subsection."

TITLE V-GI HOME LOAN INCONTESTABILITY CLAUSE

SEC. 501. The Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended, is hereby amended by inserting immediately after section 510 thereof the following new section:

"INCONTESTABILITY

"SEC. 511. Any evidence of guaranty or insurance issued by the Administrator shall be conclusive evidence of the eligibility of the loan for guaranty or insurance under the provisions of this title and of the amount of such guaranty or insurance, except that nothing in this section shall preclude the Administrator from establishing, as against the original lender, defenses based on fraud or material misrepresentation, and except that the Administrator shall not, by reason of anything contained in this section, be barred from establishing, by regulations in force at the date of such issuance or disbursement, whichever is the earlier, partial defenses to the amount payable on the guaranty or insurance."

TITLE VI-AMENDMENTS TO TITLE VI OF THE NATIONAL HOUSING ACT

SEC. 601. (a) Section 603 (a) of the National Housing Act, as amended, is hereby amended-

(1) by striking out "$5,350,000,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$5,950,000,000 except that with the approval of the President such aggregate amount may be increased to not to exceed $6,950,000,000";

(2) by striking out "April 30, 1948" wherever it appears therein and inserting in lieu thereof "March 31, 1949";

(3) by striking out the period at the end thereof and adding a comma and the follow-ing: "and that, of the total authorization provided in this subsection, not less than $800,000,000 shall be made available for the insurance of mortgages on rental properties under section 608, and not less than $200,-000,000 shall be made available for the insurance of mortgages on multifamily dwellings under section 603, on which commitments for insurance are issued subsequent to March 31, 1948,

(b) Section 603 (b) of such act, as amended, is hereby amended by inserting "unless insured under paragraph (2a) of this subsection," before "involve" in paragraph (2), and by inserting after paragraph (2) the following new paragraph. lowing new paragraph:

"(2a) if insured under this paragraph, in-volve a principal obligation (including such initial service charges, appraisal, inspection, and other fees as the Administrator shall approve) in an amount not to exceed $6,000 and not to exceed 95 percent of the Administrator's estimate of the value, as of the date the mortgage is accepted for insurance, of a property, urban, suburban, or rural, upon which there is located a dwelling designed principally for a single-family residence which is approved for mortgage insurance prior to the beginning of construction: Provided, That mortgages shall be insured under this paragraph only if the Administrator determines that such insurance of mortgages would not reasonably be expected to contribute to substantial increases in costs and prices of housing facilities for families of moderate income: Provided further, That the Administrator may by regulation provide that the principal obligation of any mortgage eligible for insurance under this paragraph shall be fixed at a lesser amount than $6,000 where he finds that for any section of the country or at any time a lower-cost dwelling for families of lower income is feasible without sacrifice of sound standards of construction, design, and livability: And provided further, That with respect to mortgages insured under this paragraph the mortgagor shall be the owner and occupant of the property at the time of the insurance and shall have paid on account of the property in cash or its equivalent, at least 5 percent of the Administrator's estimate of the value of the property, or shall be the builder constructing the dwelling in which case the principal obligation shall not exceed 90 percent of the Administrator's estimate of the value of the property;'

(c) Section 603 (b) (3) of such act, as amended, is hereby amended by inserting before the semicolon at the end thereof the following: "in the case of a mortgage insured under paragraph (2) of this subsection or not to exceed 30 years from the date of the insurance of the mortgage in the case of a mortgage insured under paragraph (2a) of this subsection".

(d) Section 603 (b) (5) of such act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(5) bear interest (exclusive of premium charges for insurance) at not to exceed 4 percent per annum on the amount of the principal obligation outstanding at any one time, or not to exceed 5 percent per annum if the Administrator finds that in certain areas or under special circumstances the mortgage market demands it."

(e) Section 603 (c) of such act, as amended, is hereby amended by striking out in the next to the last sentence the following: "and a mortgage on the same property is accepted for insurance at the time of such payment.

SEC. 602. Section 604 (a) of such act, as amended, is hereby amended by inserting between the first and second provisos in the last sentence the following: "Provided further, That with respect to mortgages which are accepted for insurance under section 603 (b) (2a) or under the third proviso of section 608 (b) (3) (B) there may be included in the debentures issued by the Administrater, on account of the cost of fore-closure (or of acquiring the property by other means) actually paid by the mortgagee and approved by the Administrator, an amount not in excess of two-thirds of such cost or $75, whichever is the greater:

SEC. 603. (a) Section 608 (b) (3) (B) of such act, as amended, is hereby amended by striking out the semicolon and the word "and" at the end of the first proviso and inserting in lieu thereof a colon and the fol-lowing: "And provided further, That the principal obligation of the mortgage shall not, in any event, exceed 90 percent of the Administrator's estimate of the replacement cost of the property or project on the basis of the costs prevailing on December 31, 1947, for properties or projects of comparable quality in the locality where such property or project is to be located: And provided further, That, notwithstanding any of the provisions of this paragraph (B), a mortgage with respect to a project of a nonprofit cooperative ownership housing corporation (whose membership consists primarily of veterans of World War II) the permanent occupancy of the dwellings of which is restricted to members of such corporation, or a project con-structed by a nonprofit corporation (whose membership consists primarily of veterans of World War II) organized for the purpose of construction of homes for members of the corporation, at prices, costs, or charges comparable to the prices, costs, or charges proposed to be charged such members, may involve a principal obligation in an amount not exceeding 95 percent of the amount which the Administrator estimates will be the value of the project when the proposed improve-ments are completed and not exceeding 95 percent of the Administrator's estimate of the replacement cost of the project on the basis of the cost prevailing on December 31, 1947, for projects of comparable quality in the locality where such project is to be lo-cated; and".

(b) Section 608 (b) (3) (C) of such act, amended, is hereby amended to read as

"(C) not to exceed $8,100 per family unit for such part of such property or project as may be attributable to dwelling use: Provided, That the Administrator may increase this amount to $9,100 where in his discretion cost levels so require."

(c) The next to the last sentence of section 608 (b) (3) of such act, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows: "The mortgage shall provide for complete amortization by periodic payments within such term as the Administrator shall prescribe, and shall bear interest (exclusive of premium charges for insurance) at not to exceed 4 percent per annum on the amount of the principal obligation outstanding at any time, or not to exceed 5 percent per annum if the Administrator finds that in certain areas or under special circumstances the mortgage market demands it."

SEC. 604. Section 609 of such act, as amended, is hereby amended:

(a) By striking out all of paragraph (1) subsection (b) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(1) The manufacturer shall establish that binding purchase contracts have been executed satisfactory to the Administrator providing for the purchase and delivery of the houses to be manufactured, which contracts shall provide for the payment of the purchase price at such time as may be agreed to by the parties thereto, but in no event, shall the purchase price be payable on a date in excess of 30 days after the date of delivery of such houses, unless not less than 20 percent of such purchase price is paid on or before the date of delivery and lender has accepted and discounted, or has agreed to accept and discount, pursuant to subsection (i) of this section a promissory note or notes, executed by the purchaser, representing the unpaid portion of such purchase price, in which event such unpaid portion of the purchase price may be payable on a date not in excess of 180 days from the date of delivery of such houses."

(b) By striking out all of paragraph (4) subsection (b) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(4) The loan shall involve a principal obligation in an amount not to exceed 90 percent of the amount which the Administrator estimates will be the necessary current cost, exclusive of profit, of manufac-turing the houses, which are the subject of such purchase contracts assigned to secure the loans, less any sums paid by the pur-chaser under said purchase contracts prior to the assignment thereof. The loan shall be secured by an assignment of the afore-said purchase contracts and of all sums payable thereunder on or after the date of such assignment, with the right in the assignee to proceed against such security in case of default as provided in the assignment, which assignment shall be in such form and contain such terms and conditions, as may be prescribed by the Administrator; and the Administrator may require such other agreements and undertakings to further secure the loan as he may determine, including the right, in case of de-fault or at any time necessary to protect the lender, to compel delivery to the lender of any houses then owned and in the possession of the borrower. The loan shall have a maturity not in excess of 1 year from the date of the note, except that any such loan may be refinanced and extended in accordance with such terms and conditions as the Administrator may prescribe for an additional term not to exceed 1 year, and shall bear interest (exclusive of premium charges for insurance) at not to exceed 4 percent per annum (or not to exceed 5 percent per annum if the Administrator finds that special circumstances demand it) on the amount of the principal obliga-tion outstanding at any time."

(c) By adding at the end of subsection (f)

the following new sentence: "The provisions of section 603 (d) shall also be applicable to loans insured under this section and the ref-erence in said section 603 (d) to a mortgage shall be construed to include a loan or loans with respect to which a contract of insurance is issued pursuant to this section."

(d) By adding at the end thereof the following new subsections:

"(i) (1) In addition to the insurance of the principal loan to finance the manufacture of housing, as provided in this section, and in order to provide short term financing in the sale of houses to be delivered pursuant to the purchase contract or contracts assigned as security for such principal loan, the Administrator is authorized, under such terms and conditions and subject to such limitations as he may prescribe, to insure the lender against any losses it may sustain resulting from the acceptance and discount of a promissory note or notes executed by a purchaser of any such houses representing an unpaid portion of the purchase price of any such houses. No such promissory note or notes accepted and dis-counted by the lender pursuant to this subsection shall involve a principal obligation in excess of 80 percent of the purchase price of the manufactured house or houses; have a maturity in excess of 180 days from the date of the note or bear interest in excess of 4 percent per annum (or in excess of 5 percent per annum if the Administrator finds that special circumstances demand it); nor may the principal amount of such promissory notes, with respect to any individual principal loan, outstanding and unpaid at any one time exceed in the aggregate an amount pre-scribed by the Administrator.

(2) The Administrator is authorized to include in any contract of insurance executed by him with respect to the insurance of a loan to finance the manufacture of houses, provisions to effectuate the insurance against any such losses under this subsection.

"(3) The failure of the purchaser to make any payment due under or provided to be paid by the terms of any note or notes executed by the purchaser and accepted and discounted by the lender under the provisions of this subsection shall be considered as a default under this subsection, and if such default continues for a period of 30 days, the lender shall be entitled to receive the benefits of the insurance, as provided in subsection (d) of this section except that debentures issued pursuant to this subsection shall have a face value equal to the unpaid principal balance of the loan plus interest at the rate of 4 percent per annum from the date of default to the date the application is filed for the insurance benefits.

"(4) Debentures issued with respect to the insurance granted under this subsection shall be issued in accordance with the pro-visions of section 604 (d) except that such debentures shall be dated as of the date application is filed for the insurance benefits and shall bear interest from such date.

"(5) The Administrator is authorized to fix a premium charge for the insurance granted under this subsection, in addition to the premium charge authorized under section (h) of this section, such premium charge shall not exceed an amount equivalent to 1 percent of the original principal of such promissory note or notes and shall be paid at such time and in such manner as may be prescribed by the Administrator.

(j) To further carry out the purposes referred to in subsection (a) the Administrator is authorized to insure loans to finance the manufacture of housing equipment used on the job site in the actual construction of housing (including advances on such loans) in the same manner and under the same conditions applicable with respect to loans eligible for insurance under subsection (b): Provided, That to the extent the proceeds of the loan are used for the purchase of equipment, plant, or machinery the principal obligation shall not exceed 75 percent of the purchase price of such equipment, plant, or machinery.
"The other provisions of this section insofar as they are applicable shall apply in like respect and effect to loans insured under this subsection."

SEC. 605. Section 610 of such act, as amended, is hereby amended by adding at the end thereof the following new para-

"The Administrator is further authorized to insure or to make commitments to insure in accordance with the provisions of this section any mortgage executed in connection with the sale by the Government, or any agency or official thereof, of any of the so-called Greenbelt towns, including projects known as Greenhills, Ohio, Greenbelt, Md., and Greendale, Wis., developed under the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935, and any mortgage executed in connection with the first resale, within 2 years from the date of its acquisition from the Government, of any portion of a project or property which is the security for a mortgage insured pursuant to the provisions of this section.

SEC. 606. Title VI of such act, as amended, is hereby amended by adding after section 610 the following new section:

"SEC. 611. (a) In addition to mortgages insured under other sections of this title, and in order to assist and encourage the application of cost reduction techniques through large-scale modernized site construction of housing and the erection of houses produced by modern industrial processes, the Administrator is authorized to insure mortgages (including advances on such mortgages during construction) which are eligible for insurance as hereinafter provided.

"(b) To be eligible for insurance under this section, a mortgage shall— "(1) have been made to and be held by a mortgagee approved by the Administrator as responsible and able to service the mortgage properly;

"(2) cover property, held by a mortgagor approved by the Administrator, upon which there is to be constructed or erected dwelling units for not less than twenty-five families consisting of a group of single-family or two-family dwellings approved by the Administrator for mortgage insurance prior to the beginning of construction: Provided, That during the course of construction there may be located upon the mortgaged prop-erty a plant for the fabrication or storage of such dwellings or sections or parts thereof, and the Administrator may consent to the removal or release of such plant from the lien of the mortgage upon such terms and conditions as he may approve; and

"(3) involve a principal obligation in an

"(A) not to exceed 90 percent of the amount which the Administrator estimates will be the value of the completed property or project, exclusive of any plant of the character described in paragraph (2) of this subsection located thereon, and
"(B) not to exceed a sum computed on the individual dwellings comprising the total project as follows:

"(i) $8,100 or 90 percent of the valuation, whichever is less, with respect to each singlefamily dwelling, and

"(ii) $12,500 or 90 percent of the valuation, whichever is less, with respect to each twofamily dwelling.

"With respect to the insurance of advances during construction, the Administrator is authorized to approve advances by the mort-gagee to cover the cost of materials delivered upon the mortgaged property and labor performed in the fabrication or erection thereof: and

"(4) provide for complete amortization by periodic payments within such term as the Administrator shall prescribe and shall bear interest (exclusive of premium charges for insurance) at not to exceed 4 percent per annum on the amount of the principal obligation outstanding at any time, or not to exceed 5 percent per annum if the Administrator finds that in certain areas or under special circumstances the mortgage market demands it. The Administrator may consent to the release of a part or parts of the mort-gaged property from the lien of the mortgage upon such terms and conditions as he may prescribe and the mortgage may provide for such release.

"(c) Preference or priority of opportunity in the occupancy of the mortgaged property for veterans of World War II and their immediate families and for hardship cases as defined by the Administrator shall be provided under such regulations and procedures as may be prescribed by the Administrator.

"(d) The provisions of subsections (c), (d), (e), and (f) of section 608 shall be applicable to mortgages insured under this

TITLE VII-EQUITY INVESTMENT AIDS

SEC. 701. The National Housing Act, as amended, is hereby amended by adding the following new title:

TITLE VII-INSURANCE FOR INVESTMENTS IN RENTAL HOUSING FOR FAMILIES OF MOD-ERATE INCOME

"AUTHORITY TO INSURE

"SEC. 701. The purpose of this title is to supplement the existing systems of mortgage insurance for rental housing under this Act by a special system for insurance designed to encourage equity investment in rental housing at rents within the capacity of families of moderate income. To effectuate this purpose, the Administrator is authorized, upon application by the investor, to insure as here-inafter provided, and, prior to the execution of insurance contracts, and upon such terms as the Administrator shall prescribe, to make commitments to insure, the minimum annual amortization charge and an annual return on the outstanding investment of such investor in any project which is eligible for insurance as hereinafter provided in an amount (herein called the 'insured annual return') equal to such rate of return, not exceeding 2% percent per annum, on such outstanding investment as shall, after consultation with the Secretary of the Treasury, be fixed in the insurance contract or in the commitment to insure: Provided, That any insurance contract made pursuant to this title shall expire as of the first day of the operating year for which the outstanding investment amounts to not more than 10 percent of the established investment: And provided further, That the aggregate amount of contingent liabilities outstanding at any one time under insurance contracts and commitments to insure made pursuant to this title shall not exceed $1,000,000,000.

"ELIGIBILITY

"Sec. 702. (a) To be eligible for insurance under this title, a project shall meet the following conditions:

"(1) The Administrator shall be satisfied that there is, in the locality or metropolitan area of such project, a need for new rental dwellings at rents comparable to the rents proposed to be charged for the dwellings in such project.

"(2) Such project shall be economically sound, and the dwellings in such project shall be acceptable to the Administrator as to quality, design, size, and type.

"(b) Any insurance contract executed by the Administrator under this title shall be conclusive evidence of the eligibility of the project and the investor for such insurance, and the validity of any insurance contract so executed shall be incontestable in the hands of an investor from the date of the execution of such contract, except for fraud or misrepresentation on the part of such investor.

"PREMIUMS AND FEES

"Sec. 703. (a) For insurance granted pursuant to this title the Administrator shall fix and collect a premium charge in an amount not exceeding one-half of 1 percent of the outstanding investment for the operating year for which such premium charge is payable without taking into account the excess earnings, if any, applied, in addition to the minimum annual amortization charge, to amortization of the outstanding investment. Such premium charge shall be payable annually in advance by the investor, either in cash or in debentures issued by the Administrator under this title at par plus accrued ir terest: Provided, That, if in any operating yoar the gross income shall be less than the operating expenses, the premium charge payable during such operating year shall be waived, but only to the extent of the amount of the difference between such expenses and such income and subject to subsequent payment out of any excess earnning as hereinafter provided.

"(b) With respect to any project offered for insurance under this title, the Administrator is authorized to charge and collect reasonable fees for examination, and for inspection during the construction of the project: Provided, That such fees shall not aggregate more than one-half of 1 percent of the estimated investment.

"RENTS

"SEC. 704. The Administrator shall require that the rents for the dwellings in any project insured under this title shall be established in accordance with a rent schedule approved by the Administrator, and that the investor shall not charge or collect rents for any dwellings in the project in excess of the appropriate rents therefor as shown in the latest rent schedule approved pursuant to this section. Prior to approving the initial or any subsequent rent schedule pursuant to this section, the Administrator shall find that such schedule affords reasonable assurance that the rents to be established thereunder are (1) not lower than necessary, together with all other income to be derived from or in connection with the project, to produce reasonably stable revenues sufficient to provide for the payment of the operating expenses, the minimum annual amortization charge, and the minimum annual return; and (2) not higher than necessary to meet the need for dwellings for families of moderate income.

"EXCESS EARNINGS

"SEC. 705. For all of the purposes of any insurance contract made pursuant to this title, 50 percent of the excess earnings, if any, for any operating year may be applied, in addition to the minimum annual return, to return on the outstanding investment but only to the extent that such application thereof does not result in an annual return of more than 5 percent of the outstanding investment for such operating year, and the balance of any such excess earnings shall be applied, in addition to the minimum annual amortization charge, to amortization of the outstanding investment: Provided, That if in any preceding operating years the gross income shall have been less than the operating expenses, such excess earnings shall be applied to the extent necessary, in whole or in part, first, to the reimbursement of the amount of the difference between such expenses (exclusive of any premium charges previously waived hereunder) and such income, and, second, to the payment of any premium charges previously waived hereunder.

"FINANCIAL STATEMENTS

"Sec. 706. With respect to each project insured under this title, the Administrator shall provide that, after the close of each operating year, the investor shall submit to him for approval a financial and operating statement covering such operating year. If any such financial and operating statement shall not have been submitted or, for proper cause, shall not have been approved by the Administrator, payment of any claim submitted by the investor may, at the option of the Administrator, be withheld, in whole or in part, until such statement shall have been submitted and approved.

"PAYMENT OF CLAIMS

"SEC. 707. If in any operating year the net income of a project insured under this title is less than the aggregate of the minimum annual amortization charge and the insured annual return, the Administrator, upon submission by the investor of a claim for the payment of the amount of the difference between such net income and the aggregate of the minimum annual amortization charge and the insured annual return and after proof of the validity of such claim, shall pay to the investor, in cash from the Housing Investment Insurance Fund, the amount of such difference, as determined by the Administrator, but not exceeding, in any event, an amount equal to the aggregate of the minimum annual amortization charge and the insured annual return.

"DEBENTURES

"Sec. 708. (a) If the aggregate of the amounts paid to the investor pursuant to section 707 hereof with respect to a project insured under this title shall at any time equal or exceed 15 percent of the established investment, the Administrator thereafter shall have the right, after written notice to the investor of his intention so to do, to acquire, as of the first day of any operating year, such project in consideration of the issuance and delivery to the investor of debentures having a total face value equal to 90 percent of the outstanding investment for such operating year. In any such case the investor shall be obligated to convey to said Administrator title to the project which meets the requirements of the rules and regulations of the Administrator in force at the time the insurance contract was exe-cuted and which is evidenced in the manner prescribed by such rules and regulations, and, in the event that the investor fails so to do, said Administrator may, at his option, terminate the insurance contract.

"(b) If in any operating year the aggregate of the differences between the operating expenses (exclusive of any premium charges previously waived hereunder) and the gross income for the preceding operating years, less the aggregate of any deficits in such operating expenses reimbursed from excess earnings as hereinbefore provided, shall at any time equal or exceed 5 percent of the established investment, the investor shall thereafter have the right, after written notice to the Administrator of his intention so to do, to convey to the Administrator, as of the first day of any operating year, title to the project which meets the requirements of the rules and regulations of the Administrator in force at the time the insurance contract was executed and which is evidenced in the manner prescribed by such rules and regulations, and to receive from the Administrator debentures having a total face value equal to 90 percent of the outstanding investment for such operating year.

"(c) Any difference, not exceeding $50, between 90 percent of the outstanding investment for the operating year in which a project is acquired by the Administrator pursuant to this section and the total face value of the debentures to be issued and delivered to the investor pursuant to this section shall be adjusted by the payment of cash by the Administrator to the investor from the Housing Investment Insurance

"(d) Upon the acquisition of a project by the Administrator pursuant to this section, the insurance contract shall terminate.

"(e) Debentures issued under this title to any investor shall be executed in the name of the Housing Investment Insurance Fund as obligor, shall be signed by the Administrator, by either his written or engraved signature, and shall be negotiable. Such debentures shall be dated as of the first day of the operating year in which the project for which such debentures were issued was acquired by the Administrator, shall bear interest at a rate to be determined by the Administrator, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, at the time the insurance contract was executed, but not to exceed 234 percent per annum, payable semian-nually on the 1st day of January and the Ist day of July of each year and shall mature on the 1st day of July in such calendar year or years, not later than the fortieth following the date of the issuance thereof, as shall be determined by the Administrator and stated on the face of such debentures.

"(f) Such debentures shall be in such form and in such denominations in multiples of $50, shall be subject to such terms and conditions, and may include such provisions for redemption as shall be prescribed by the Administrator, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, and may be issued in either coupon or registered form.

"(g) Such debentures shall be exempt, both as to principal and interest, from all taxation (except surtaxes, estate, inheritance, and gift taxes) now or hereafter imposed by any Territory, dependency, or possession of the United States, or by the District of Columbia, or by any State, county, municipality, or local taxing authority, shall be payable out of the Housing Investment Insurance Fund, which shall be primarily liable therefor, and shall be fully and unconditionally guaranteed, as to both the principal thereof and the interest thereon, by the United States, and such guaranty shall be expressed on the face thereof. In the event that the Housing Investment Insurance Fund fails to pay upon demand, when due, the principal of or the interest on any debentures so guaranteed, the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay to the holders the amount thereof, which is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and thereupon, to the extent of the amount so paid, the Secretary of the Treasury shall succeed to all the rights of the holders of such debentures.

"(h) Notwithstanding any other provisions of law relating to the acquisition, handling, or disposal of real and other property by the Unitd States, the Administrator shall have power, for the protection of the Housing Investment Insurance Fund, to pay out of said Fund all expenses or charges in connection with, and to deal with, complete, reconstruct, rent, renovate, modernize, insure, make contracts for the management of, or establish suitable agencies for the management of, or sell for cash, in whole or in part, any project acquired pursuant to title; and, notwithstanding any other provisions of law, the Administrator shall also have power to pursue to final collection by way of compromise or otherwise all claims acquired by, or assigned or transferred to. him in connection with the acquisition or disposal of any project pursuant to this title: Provided, That section 3709 of the Revised Statutes shall not be construed to apply to any contract for hazard insurance, to any purchase or contract for services or supplies on account of any project acquired pursuant to this title if the amount of such purchase or contract does not exceed $1,000.

"TERMINATION

"Sec. 709. The investor, after written notice to the Administrator of his intention so to do, may terminate, as of the close of any operating year, any insurance contract made pursuant to this title. The Administrator shall prescribe the events and conditions under which said Administrator shall have the option to terminate any insurance contract made pursuant to this title, and the events and conditions under which said Administrator may reinstate any insurance contract terminated pursuant to this section or section 708 (a). If any insurance contract is terminated pursuant to this section, the Administrator may require the investor to pay an adjusted premium charge in such amount as the Administrator determines to be equitable, but not in excess of the aggregate amount of the premium charges which such investor otherwise would have been required to pay if such insurance contract had not been so terminated.

"INSURANCE FUND

"Sec. 710. There is hereby created a Housing Investment Insurance Fund which shall be used by the Administrator as a re-volving fund for carrying out the provisions of this title and for administrative expenses in connection therewith. For this purpose, the Secretary of the Treasury shall make available to the Administrator such funds as the Administrator shall deem necessary, but not to exceed $10,000,000, which amount is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated. Premium charges, adjusted premium charges, inspection and other fees, service charges, and any other income re-ceived by the Administrator under this title, together with all earnings on the assets of such Housing Investment Insurance Fund, shall be credited to said fund. All payments made pursuant to claims of investors with respect to projects insured under this title, cash adjustments, the principal of and interest on debentures issued under this title, expenses incurred in connection with or as a consequence of the acquisition and disposal of projects acquired under this title, and all administrative expenses in connection with this title, shall be paid from said fund. The faith of the United States is rund. The faith of the United States is solemnly pledged to the payment of all approved claims of investors with respect to projects insured under this title, and, in the event said fund fails to make any such payment when due, the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay to the investor the amount thereof, which is hereby authorized to be approved. which is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated. Moneys in the Housing Investment Insurance Fund not needed for current operations under this title shall be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States to the credit of said fund or invested in bonds or other obligations of, or in bonds or other obligations guaranteed by, the United States. The Administrator may, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, purchase in the open market debentures issued under this title. Such purchases shall be made at a price which will provide an investment yield of not less than the yield obtainable from other investments authorized by this section. Debentures so purchased shall be canceled and not reissued.

"TAXATION PROVISIONS

"SEC. 1.1. Nothing in this title shall be construed to exempt any real property acquired and held by the Administrator under this title from taxation by any State or political subdivision thereof, to the same extent, according to its value, as other real property is taxed.

"RULES AND REGULATIONS

"Sec. 712. The Administrator may make such rules and regulations as may be neces-sary or desirable to carry out the provisions of this title, including, without limiting the foregoing, rules and regulations relating to the maintenance by the investor of books, records, and accounts with respect to the project and the examination of such books, records, and accounts by representatives of the Administrator; the submission of finan-cial and operating statements and the approval thereof; the submission of claims for payments under insurance contracts, the proof of the validity of such claims, and the payment or disallowance thereof; the increase of the established investment if the investor shall make capital improvements or additions to the project; the decrease of the established investment if the investor shall sell part of the project; and the reduction of the outstanding investment for the appropriate operating year or operating years pending the restoration of dwelling or nondwelling facilities damaged by fire or other casualty. With respect to any investor which is subject to supervision or regulation by a State banking, insurance, or other State department or agency, the Administrator may, in carrying out any of his supervisory and regulatory functions with respect to projects in-sured under this title, utilize, contract with, and act through such department or agency and without regard to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes.

"DEFINITIONS

"SEC. 713. The following terms shall have the meanings, respectively, ascribed to them below, and, unless the context clearly indicates otherwise, shall include the plural as well as the singular number:

"(a) 'Investor' shall mean (1) any natural person; (2) any group of not more than 10 natural persons; (3) any corporation, company, association, trust, or other legal entity; or (4) any combination of two or more corporations, companies, associations, trusts, or other legal entities, having all the powers necessary to comply with the requirements of this title, which the Administrator (i) shall find to be qualified by business experience and facilities, to afford assurance of the necessary continuity of long-term investment, and to have available the necessary capital required for long-term investment in the project, and (ii) shall approve as eligible for insurance under this title.

"(b) Project' shall mean a project (including all property, real and personal, contracts, rights, and choses in action acquired, owned, or held by the investor in connection therewith) of an investor, designed and used primarily for the purpose of providing dwellings the occupancy of which is permitted by the investor in consideration of agreed charges: Provided, That nothing in this title shall be construed as prohibiting the inclusion in a project of such stores, offices, or other commercial facilities, recreational or community facilities, or other nondwelling facilities as the Administrator shall determine to be necessary or desirable appurtenances to such project.

"(c) 'Estimated investment' shall mean the estimated cost of the development of the project, as stated in the application submitted to the Administrator for insurance under this title.

under this title.
"(d) 'Established investment' shall mean the amount of the reasonable costs, as approved by the Administrator, incurred by the investor in, and necessary for, carrying out all works and undertakings for the de-velopment of a project and shall include the premium charge for the first operating year and the cost of all necessary surveys, plans and specifications, architectural, engineering, or other special services, land acquisition, site preparation, construction, and equipment; a reasonable return on the funds of the investor paid out in course of the development of the project, up to and including the initial occupancy date; necessary expenses in connection with the initial occupancy of the project; and the cost of such other items as the Administrator shall determine to be necessary for the development of the project, (1) less the amount by which the rents and revenues derived from the project up to and including the initial occupancy date exceeded the reasonable and proper ex-penses, as approved by the Administrator, incurred by the investor in, and necessary for, operating and maintaining said project up to and including the initial occupancy date, or (2) plus the amount by which such expenses exceeded such rents and revenues, as the case may be.

"(e) 'Physical completion date' shall mean the last day of the calendar month in which the Administrator determines that the construction of the project is substantially completed and substantially all of the dwellings therein are available for occupancy.

therein are available for occupancy.

"(f) 'Initial occupancy date' shall mean
the last day of the calendar month in which 90 percent in number of the dwellings in the project on the physical completion date shall have been occupied, but shall in no event be later than the last day of the sixth calendar month next following the physical completion date.

"(g) 'Operating year' shall mean the period of twelve consecutive calendar months next following the initial occupancy date and each succeeding period of twelve consecutive calendar months, and the period of the first twelve consecutive calendar months next following the initial occupancy date shall be the first operating year.

"(h) 'Gross income' for any operating year shall mean the total rents and revenues and other income derived from, or in connection with, the project during such operating year.

"(i) 'Operating expenses' for any operating year shall mean the amounts, as approved by the Administrator, necessary to meet the reasonable and proper costs of, and to provide for, operating and maintaining the project, and to establish and maintain reasonable and proper reserves for repairs, maintenance, and replacements, and other necessary reserves during such operating year, and shall include necessary expenses for real-estate taxes, special assessments, premium charges made pursuant to this title, administrative expenses, the annual rental under any lease pursuant to which the real property comprising the site of the project is held by the investor, and insurance charges, together with such other expenses as the Administrator shall determine to be necessary for the proper operation and maintenance of the project, but shall not include income taxes.

"(j) 'Net income' for any operating year shall mean gross income remaining after the payment of the operating expenses.

"(k) 'Minimum annual amortization charge' shall mean an amount equal to 2 percent of the established investment, except that, in the case of a project where the real property comprising the site thereof is held by the investor under a lease, if (notwith-standing the proviso of section 703 (a) herethe gross income for any operating year shall be less than the amount required to pay the operating expenses (including the annual rental under such lease), the minimum annual amortization charge for such operating year shall mean an amount equal to 2 percent of the established investment plus the amount of the annual rental under such lease to the extent that the same is not paid from the gross income.

"(1) 'Annual return' for any operating year shall mean the net income remaining after the payment of the minimum annual amortization charge.

"(m) 'Insured annual return' shall have the meaning ascribed to it in section 701 hereof.

"(n) 'Minimum annual return' for any op erating year shall mean an amount equal to 31/2 percent of the outstanding investment such operating year.

"(o) 'Excess earnings' for any operating year shall mean the net income derived from a project in excess of the minimum annual amortization charge and the minimum annual return.

"(p) 'Outstanding investment' for any op-erating year shall mean the established investment, less an amount equal to (1) the aggregate of the minimum annual amortization charge for each preceding operating year, plus (2) the aggregate of the excess earnings, if any, during each preceding operating applied, in addition to the minimum in accordance with the provisions of section 705 hereof.'

SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I demand

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

CALL OF THE HOUSE

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER (after counting). Obviously, no quorum is present.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 121]

Andrews, N. Y.	Keefe	Robertson
Brown, Ohio	Kerr	Simpson, Pa.
Case, S. Dak.	Lane	Smith, Maine
Celler	Ludlow	Stigler
Clippinger	Macy	Taber

Engel, Mich.	O'Toole	West
Hartley	Peden	Wigglesworth
Havenner	Powell	Wilson, Ind.
Johnson, Ind.	Preston	Wood
Johnson, Okla.	Regan
Johnson, Tex.	Rivers

The SPEAKER. On this roll call, 394 Members have answered to their names,

By unanimous consent, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Wolcott] is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I yield minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. COLE].

Mr. COLE of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, we have before us today a highly controversial measure. The interesting thing about this particular legislation which is presented to the House, is that the controversy concerning the measure is not what is in the bill but that which is not included in the bill. The bill which is presented to the House today is a housing measure, supported and passed by the Committee on Banking and Currency of the House, and establishes procedure to alleviate the critical housing shortage which exists in America today.

Those portions of the bill which have been eliminated are the controversial sections of the so-called Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill. So the bill is presented today on the issue whether or not the bill shall be passed by the House, or whether or not it shall be defeated because the so-called controversial issues in the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill are not included therein.

In order that we may understand the issue more clearly, the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill contained three main segments. The first segment was in general provisions which are in this bill today. Those had to do with the expansion of credit and the establishment of devices to assist the construction of homes for veterans and others in the country who are in need of housing.

The second provision is the slumclearance provision, which is controver-sial. But the most highly controversial provision of the legislation, of course, is the public-housing feature.

The issue which has been presented by the proponents of the public housing feature of this bill is this: They say, first, there is a critical housing shortage in the country today, and, secondly, that We need housing for the poor of the country.

Mr. Speaker, it is my point that this bill, so far as the public housing feature is concerned, does neither. It neither takes care of the critical housing feature nor does it house the poor. Of course, as the gentleman from Louisiana said yesterday, the bill does have the support of a great many organizations.

I sat upon the committe day after day and week after week, listening to the testimony of people representing these organizations. They came before our committee and said, "There is a critical housing shortage in America today. There are people living in conditions which are not safe or sanitary. Therefore, we should alleviate that condition."

So what? So we should pass the public housing measure.

I want, in my brief time, to analyze that particular position. The real issue, as I see it, is not whether there are poor people in the country who require hous-The real issue is not whether there are slums in the country which should be cleared and rebuilt. The real issue is the method by which these things may be done. That, Mr. Speaker, is the issue which I challenge the proponents of the public housing bill to talk about today. Not talk about the fact that we have poor people in the country who should be helped; not talk about the critical housing shortage, but talk about the method by which they say we should approach this particular problem.

What is that method? There are a large number of families whose average income is $150 per month. The question is, Shall the Government build homes for a select few of those people, and then pay a portion of their rent? That is the real issue in connection with the public housing feature of this program.

I oppose the public housing program because I believe it is discriminatory. I believe it grants a privilege to a select people in the country.

The program suggested by the public housing proponents provides a discrimination as to areas within the United States. How does it provide for discrimination as to areas? Let us look at the record and see what has happened under the program as it has been conducted in the past. As you know, there are a number of housing programs in existence. Four States, for instance, in the United States, have the most housing units in the country. It is rather interesting to note of two out of the four States one is Texas and the other is Florida

The State of Missouri, with two great industrial cities, has no housing units. Fifteen States have no public housing units. Miami, the playground of the rich, stands high in the number of housing units in any city. Peoria has almost twice as many as has Chicago.

Thus, we see the helter-skelter discriminatory distribution of public hous-Why is it that the people of St. Louis who are in exactly the same circumstances as the people of Miami, are not treated with the same consideration? It is because of the administration and method of distribution provided for in the public-housing law.

The law permits discrimination between persons. It gives to a select few a privilege not afforded a great number of similarly situated persons. Pete Smith is permitted to live in a nice apartment at low cost, but his neighbors, John Jones, Joe Doakes, and many others are not afforded this privilege. These other folks have low incomes, but they will pay taxes to contribute to Pete Smith's rent.

Pete Smith has been selected by an administrator, not because he is the poorest, but because he is able to pay the amount of rent required and is just one of the needy among all of the applicants.

The occupants of slums are not, by the public-housing legislation, automatically placed into the new homes. Their dwellings may be demolished and, in many instances, the record shows that they are moved to further and worse slums and other more fortunate people are granted admission to the public-housing units.

Discrimination and privilege, and even political expediency is permitted by the public housing law which our committee considered.

The Government grants assistance to the needy. It aids in education and the building of roads. In all of these programs, however, the money available is distributed to all of the States so that all persons similarly situated may receive at least some benefit. Here, for the first time, it is proposed to ignore the needs of a great majority and grant benefits to a select and privileged few.

The motives of those great organizations and well-meaning people who want to solve the critical housing shortage and who want to provide decent housing for low-income people cannot be questioned. I do, without fear of contradiction, however, state that these people have not carefully analyzed the operation of the public housing law proposed by the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill.

There are others, however, who have no interest in maintaining private enterprise, initiative, and the American approach to problems such as these. These people would regiment our citizens, control them by a bureaucracy in Washington, all under the guise of humane activity. It is with this latter group that I part company. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I am opposing the public-housing feature of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill and am supporting the present measure which will provide homes for veterans, homes for the young people of our Nation, and maintain our Republic.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Kansas has expired.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 3 minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky is recognized for 3 minutes.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, we recently fought a war that cost us not less than $350,000,000,000, and the best blood of the youth of our country. We achieved a victory, but we have not yet achieved the peace we fought for. Probably the greatest domestic issue that now presents itself to the American people is housing, to house the men who fought our battles and who came home and had no place to live. That is a question that deserves the greatest consideration.

In our committee we have always had friendliness, kindliness, and sportsmanship. I have an admiration and affection for our chairman, but this bill seemed to do something to him that I have not seen heretofore. We prepared a bill and voted it out and we went before the Rules Committee. The Rules Committee made a proposition that I have never heard made to a legislative committee in all the long years I have been here. They told us that if there were some members of the committee would stultify themselves and change their vote we might get a rule. I am glad to say no Democratic Member accepted that invitation and the rule was tabled. Then in the evening we got a notice to appear at 9 o'clock the next morning in the Banking and Currency Committee, and at that meeting the bill which you are now considering was read rapidly. When the reading was completed, although Members were asking for recognition, no one was recognized to offer a substitute, no one was recognized to offer an amendment, no one was recognized to make a point of order that the House was then in session and the bill could not be reported according to the rules of the House; but the bill was arbitrarily reported out. The rules of the House and the democratic processes were thrown out of the window.

You have heard a good deal of talk about socialism in the housing bill. The exercise of arbitrary power anywhere in a republic by the elected officials is more dangerous than socialism; and that is the bill you have here today, all of the provisions in which the people of America had expressed the greatest interest were taken out of the bill: Low rent housing for the veterans, which we greatly need, and many other desirable provisions are out of the bill; and they bring back here a bill that will have no effect, it seems to me, upon the housing problem of the American people except give special and unconscionable privileges to a favored few.

I have done everything I could to assist in passage of legislation that would result in more housing for our veterans and other citizens, but I am confident this bill will not accomplish that purpose. S. 866, which has been passed by the Senate, is now on the Speaker's table and after the passage of this bill it could be taken from the table, everything stricken out after the enacting clause, and the provisions of the House bill inserted; and the Senate bill as so amended, passed by the House. bill would immediately go to conference and would expedite the final passage of a bill. As the Chairman says, he will not adopt this procedure I feel confident we will have no housing bill at this Congress that will in the least degree solve the problem that is presented.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Kentucky has expired.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Bakewell].

Mr. BAKEWELL. Mr. Speaker, it is with misgivings and uncertainty that I approach the necessity of making a decision as to how to vote on this housing bill. In my opinion, this bill in its present form is incomplete without the public housing provisions. The very group most in need of assistance in order to obtain adequate and decent housing, namely the lowest income group, will not participate in the benefits of this bill. As the report of the Joint Congressional Committees on Housing has said: "The committee does not see how, as a matter of simple justice, it can recommend a housing program which would aid all groups of our citizenry except the very one which is most in need of aid."

Many of my colleagues have raised the contention that for the Government to undertake to assist in providing public housing for the lowest income group is socialism. It seems that whenever anyone suggests the utilization of Government resources for those most in need. he is branded a Socialist. It certainly is not socialism for the Government to plan a mere 500,000 living units over a period of 10 years when the need is so great and the shortage so acute. When we needed guns, tanks, planes, and ships during the war, the Government provided them and provided them hurriedly. We need decent, habitable living quarters for the lowest income group of our population today, and the Govern-ment should assist. Private enterprise is not interested, and venture capital is unwilling to provide houses for those most in need. It therefore seems indispensable for Government to implement and augment the inadequacies and deficiencies of private enterprise. This is not socialism. It is democracy in action-not a static democracy heedless of the less fortunate, but a live democracy that concerns itself with the welfare of its people. Socialism, communism, and delinquency are nourished in poverty and nurtured in squalor. Their seeds do not find root in wholesome, clean, and habitable living conditions.

In what way is it socialism to provide housing assistance to the lowest income group, but not socialism to assist others who are better able financially to provide themselves a home? In what way is it more socialistic to seek to assist those most in need of assistance than it is for the Government to guarantee repayment of loans to those who lend money with real estate as security?

The bill as passed by the Senate with the public housing provisions contained therein has been years in the making. It has been discussed and debated in the Houses of Congress, in the press, in periodicals, on the air, and in public forums. Extensive committee hearings have been held in all sections of the country. I sincerely regret that the Members of this House will not have the opportunity to vote on public housing as embraced in the Senate bill.

Senator Taft, who perhaps knows as much about this subject as anyone, has said that there are 6,000,000 homes which are slum dwellings, in which children should not be reared. It is abundantly clear, both on the record of performance and from the testimony of witnesses before congressional committees, that private housing for our lowest income group cannot be provided by private industry with building costs, labor costs and material costs as high as they are at the present time, because they cannot earn a reasonable return on their investment and at the same time charge rentals which members of the lowest income group can afford to pay. Why is it proper for the United States Government to guarantee a mortgage loan on a private house, and fail to guarantee a reasonable return on private investment made to build low-cost housing?

In my own city of St. Louis, a recommendation which has the support of representative citizens of all groups and of all parties and of all classes has been made by the antislum commission of the city of St. Louis, that a bond issue be authorized in the amount of $16,000,000 which sum will be used to acquire slum property to raze it, and to turn over the land to private individuals for the con-The austruction of low-cost housing. thorization of this bond issue will appear on the ballot at the next general election. Without congressional authorization for public housing, such projects as this cannot possibly succeed.

The members of the antislum commission of St. Louis in their report stated, with reference to the need for Federal

It does seem likely that the necessities of the case and the needs of the cities cry aloud for relief.

The individuals who prepared this report are not socialists, but industrialists, businessmen and labor leaders in my community. Their report virtually has the support of all enterprising civic groups in St. Louis. In my sincere belief it is indeed unfortunate that the courageous citizens who have undertaken such a project cannot obtain the support of Congress to overcome what is rapidly becoming our number one national problem—adequate housing for all groups and classes of the American people.

In the area of the city covered by this report of the antislum commission, it was found that 58 percent of the present structures have no baths, 25 percent have outside toilets, and 10 percent are without any running water.

Another gloomy picture appears in the St. Louis Veterans' Service Center. Since January 1, 1946, a total of 14.297 applications for homes for World War II veterans have been received. During that period only 8,847 units have been registered with that office. Typical listings of residential units appeared last month. Of 126 listings received last month, only 35 would accept children. One hundred nineteen of the 126 units were merely furnished rooms. Not a single listing in more than 5 months contained a private bath. The record shows that the housing director of the veterans' service center in St. Louis has been unable to provide one apartment or flat during 1948.

Mr. Speaker, the foregoing figures impress me with the dire need of adequate legislation in the housing field. The only complete answer and solution to the problem would be the enactment of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill as passed by the Senate. Since the Members of the House will not have an opportunity to vote on the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill, it is with reluctance that I cast my vote in favor of the pending legislation before us. Since there is no alternative, I shall vote for this bill rather than nothing at

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Patman].

HOUSING

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, this bill should be defeated for the reason the House has already passed a bill to extend title VI, which is in the Senate now and has been there for months; the House has already passed what is known as the Fanny May bill or the Federal National Mortgage Association. It is in the Senate right now. Any other part of this bill that is desirable could be put on by the Senate.

Mr. Speaker, this bill has some very undesirable parts in it. Members who understand this bill will not vote for it unless they vote for something that I believe is against their convictions. refer to the fact that in title IV of this bill the tax incentive for production of additional rental housing accommodations provides a tax bonus-I repeat, a tax bonus-to people to build rental houses, including hotels, penthouses, apartment hotels, any kind of a rentalhousing unit. For that they will get a tax bonus. That will cause certain people to have an advantage. They can pay higher prices and get a tax bonus. It will increase the price of building materials. Do you want to increase the price of building materials? It will increase the price of housing in this

In addition to this skyrocketing of prices it has another great disadvantage. There is a petition on the Clerk's desk now with 167 names on it to bring out a certain bill-the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill. Up until a few years ago 145 names were sufficient on the theory that that when one-third of the Members of the House want a bill considered they should be given an opportunity to consider that bill. Notwithstanding that the Rules Committee tabled an application for a rule that was pending before it to consider that bill, notwithstanding the fact that the Congress appropriated $100,000 and set up a joint housing committee of the House and Senate, which committee went all over the country conducting hearings and spending that $100,000, the Committee on Banking and Currency heard testimony on housing since December 5, 1945, and presented a bill to the Rules Committee which it turned down flatly because we would not agree to take out certain things that we want in that bill which the testimony proved to us conclusively should be in the bill.

Now, we are asked to consider a bill here under a gag rule. It is not brought up in a way that you can get legislation. A few minutes ago we had the Commodity Credit Corporation Act up for consideration and the chairman of our committee, the distinguished gentleman from Michigan, moved to take up the Senate bill, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the House Commodity Credit Corporation bill, all because he wanted action, he wanted to expedite it. Why does he not do that now? Why does he not take up the Senate bill S. 866, strike out all after the enacting clause and send this bill to conference where it can be ironed out? The absence of any action in that direction and the failure to do that is an indication to me that an effort is not being made to expedite this legislation. So, if you pass it like it is it will be an excuse as to why housing legislation cannot pass. So, the thing to do, Members of the House, is to kill this bill. It is not needed; it is objectionable. It is a millionaire's bonus bill, that is what it is. I repeat, it is a millionaire's bonus bill. It is a tax bonus to the rich to skyrocket prices. I hope you will vote against this bill.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Javits].

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Speaker, as a proponent of the T-E-W bill, I would like to serve notice that we will continue unremittingly in our efforts to enact into law the so-called hotly disputed issues which, nevertheless, found favor with the majority of the House Committee on Banking and Currency. These are the titles on governmentally aided housing research, slum clearance, and urban redevelopment, federally assisted low-rent housing, and rural housing.

Veterans and other citizens regard the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill passed by the Senate, S. 866, as the key to whether or not Congress will authorize a comprehensive attack on the drastic housing shortage. The country will take our action on the bill before us now as being a refusal to make such a comprehensive This may be unjustified, but it is the fact. The confidence of the people concerned with the need for housing would have been immediately established by passage of S. 866 in the House. This confidence would itself have done much to stimulate the broadest housing program for all classes of the population. The real difficulty is one of costs. though there are likely to be over 900,000 home units built this year, both for rental and for sale, they are generally way out of reach in price of the veteran of modest income and of the ordinary citizen whom the housing shortage hurts the most. In fact, the gravest danger of this construction is that it will flood the market with high-priced housing and bring on a housing-market debacle interfering with all construction. The passage of S. 866 would have given us a balanced housing program and preserved an active and prosperous housing market for years, as indeed the economic conditions require that it should be preserved. There is little question that the House will pass the bill before us, but to those who have worked so long and so hard for the T-E-W bill I say that they are right, and the work must continue, as before long the whole Congress will see that what it has done is not enough and that a general housing program by the enactment of the omitted titles of the T-E-W bill is essential if we are to lick the housing

Mr. Speaker, I shall vote "present" on this bill because I cannot and will not abandon the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill. Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. ELLSWORTH].

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to the final section of this bill. It would remove the present tariff on plywood for a period of 1 year. This section suddenly appeared on this housing legislation without notice or warning, without hearings, and from a committee which has no right to submit legislation on the subject of tariffs. Before any such legis-lation is reported to the House or enacted, the American plywood industry should have the right to state its case. It should have the right to show, as it easily can, that our plywood production increased 25 percent in 1948 and that 65 percent increase in production above the 1947 figure is anticipated in the year 1949; that there are 41 plywood plants in Oregon, Washington, and northern California, which number will be increased to 50 by the end of this year and will total 60 by the end of 1949. There will be ample American-produced plywood for American building needs. It would be a crime against a great American industry which employs thousands upon thousands of people, to break its financial back in this way without allowing fair and ordinary consideration of the facts involved. If this section is en-acted into law such action in the haste of the closing hours of this session will be in direct violation of the fundamental principles of our legislative system.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. Mack].

Mr. MACK. Mr. Speaker, like the gentleman from Oregon who preceded me, I am opposed to the concluding section of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, this housing bill (H. R. 6955) contains in its last provision—section 803—a proposal for the removal of all tariffs on plywood for 1 year.

The present tariff on fir plywood is 40 percent ad valorem. Section 803 of this bill proposes to remove this tariff entirely for the next year.

Not a minute of hearing has been given to the plywood industry upon how this proposal would affect this industry or its tens of thousands of employees.

To rush this tariff-removal proposal through without an opportunity for any member of a great industry to be heard is not right, not just, and not fair.

What will the effect of this removal of the tariff on Canadian and Mexican plywood be? Some of the makers of plywood in my district tell me the result well may be that they will have to close their plants. They cannot compete, without a tariff, against the cheaper wages and cheaper costs of Canadian and Mexican plywood manufacturers.

In Canada the average wage in the plywood industry is 92½ cents an hour. In our plywood mills of Oregon and Washington the average wage is $1.62 an hour, or 65 percent higher than in

The cost of logs in Canada also is about 65 percent cheaper than in the United States.

How can an American manufacturer of plywood paying a 65-percent higher wage than a Canadian manufacturer compete with him unless a tariff compensates for the differences of wages in this country and abroad? He cannot.

The American plywood manufacturer has been doing a good job in increasing production to meet increased building needs. No industry has done a better one.

In 1947 the weekly production of plywood in the two States of Oregon and Washington was 29,000,000 square feet a week.

At the present time the weekly production is averaging 36,000,000 square feet weekly or an increase of almost 25 percent above last year.

It is now estimated that by the end of this year the output will be 40,000,000 square feet weekly and by 1949 will be 44,000,000 square feet weekly.

At the present time nine new plywood plants are under construction in the two States of Oregon and Washington. Five of them are expected to be finished and in operation by the end of this year and the four others are scheduled to go into operation next year.

If we remove this plywood tariff will the men who are pouring new capital into building new plants go ahead with these new projects? I doubt it. If we enact here a law that says to American plywood manufacturers that the Congress is going to compel Americans who pay wages of $1.62 an hour, wages to compete with Canadian producers where the wages are only 92½ cents an hour, and with Mexican producers where wages are much less than in Canada, we are going to put a brake on the risk capital going into plywood factories. In the long run that will do more harm to housing than it will do good

Section 803 of this bill proposes to open our doors to the free import of Canadian plywood. But Canada at the same time has an embargo on logs. Our plywood manufacturers cannot get a single log out of Canada, even if they want to. They cannot ship those logs out of Canada even if they own timber in Canada. Canada will not permit them to ship these logs over the border into the United States. If Americans who own timber in Canada want to cut that timber into plywood, they have to go up to Canada and build their plywood mills in Canada.

The great unfairness in this whole proposal is that the plywood industry, which would be disastrously affected by this free-trade policy, has not been given a single minute of time before any committee of Congress to tell its side of the story. We are denying this industry its traditional right to its day in court.

Sometime ago, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Grant] introduced a bill into Congress proposing to do just what section 803 of this housing bill proposes to do. It was very properly referred to the Ways and Means Committee, which handles tariff-making matters. I talked to five or six members of the Ways and Means Committee. They all assured me that before any action was taken on the Grant bill that the plywood industry would be given an opportunity for a hearing.

That was fair.

But, now a new committee, a committee which never heretofore has handled tariff matters, the Banking and Currency Committee, steps into the picture. This committee, without giving Members of Congress or members of the affected industry a chance to be heard or to tell its side of the story, presents this section 803 which may wreak great damage to an industry that employs tens of thousands of workers. That is not fair to this industry. It is not in keeping with the American tradition of fair play.

Before any great and far-reaching reform to our tariff system is made, the industry or industries affected ought to have a chance to be heard. They ought to get their day in court.

Furthermore, if Canadian plywood is to be admitted duty free into the United States we at least ought to insist that Canada remove the embargo against Canadian logs being permitted to cross the border into the United States.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. NORBLAD].

Mr. NORBLAD. Mr. Speaker, I am likewise opposed to this provision of the bill which would remove all import re-strictions on plywood. There is no person in this House more anxious than I am to see the housing situation alleviated but certainly by taking the restrictions off of only one of the hundreds of items which go into building a house, we are not going to accomplish that purpose. If this House were considering removal of restrictions on all building materials in short supply, that would be, indeed, a totally different story, but here we are acting on only one small segment of the building material industry. As such it is objectionable to me. I realize that under the status of this bill that it cannot be here amended but I earnestly request the conferees to consider these objections during the conference meetings and to there remove this particular clause.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from California [Mr. Johnson].

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. Speaker, I am going to vote for this bill as it is the only vehicle which we have to do anything about housing in this Congress I am one of those that had hoped we would have had a chance to consider some of the provisions of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill that provide for slum clearance, subsidized housing, and so forth. I do not know whether these provisions are sound or not, as I have not had the opportunity to study them. But I would have welcomed the opportunity of listening to a debate on these provisions by the members of the committee who listened to the evidence.

However, this bill and others do provide some very substantial benefits that will aid veterans and will, I believe, stimulate the building of houses. It is very significant that in 1946 when the Government was building houses we only had 437,800 houses built. But in 1947 when private enterprise got into full swing we completed 835,100 houses and the trend for the first 5 months of 1948 indicates that we will exceed that total.

Of course, the most sound system is one where each person needing a house is able to buy it and not rely on the Government to furnish him a house. Those of us who have gotten our homes in that way realize the satisfaction of buying and owning our own home, no matter how small it may be. We are hoping that especially those who served us during the war and who made us secure through their sacrifices may be able to get help from the provisions of this act and obtain a start on a home of their own.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may be permitted to extend their remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Speaker, I would like to protest the high-handed action of the leadership of this House in bringing about the defeat of the comprehensive Taft-Ellender-Wagner housing bill.

The sell-out to the real-estate and building lobbies that have swarmed over this Hill for the past 2 years, is complete—public housing for the benefit of veterans and civilians in the low-income groups is gone—slum clearance to rid this country of the slums that are a stench in the nostrils of every American, has been put aside.

I am voting against this so-called housing bill as a protest against the betrayal of the veterans of this country who have waited in vain for 3 years for Congress to act on housing. They will have to go on waiting due to the action of the House this day.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, as one of those who favored the T-E-W bill, I shall vote for the passage of the Wolcott bill with the hope that it may go to the Senate and that through that method it may reach a conference committee. There are numerous features in the bill which do not meet with my approval, but unless it is passed by the House there will be no opportunity for action at this session.

THE SUPPORT FOR THE BILL

Mr. HUBER. Mr. Speaker, the House had reason to believe that it would have an opportunity to vote on the comprehensive Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill. Instead we are confronted by the Republican leadership with a bill which makes a mockery of our efforts to enact a housing program.

The Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill has behind it the united support of hundreds of national and local public interest groups, veterans' organizations, and labor unions whose combined memberships total tens of millions of American citizens. Let us start with the veterans of World War II, who perhaps more than any other segment of our population have felt the pinch of insufficient housing. We in Congress have made all sorts of extravagant promises to these veterans. But have we enacted any legislation to aid the veteran who does not earn enough to buy the $12,000 and $13,000 houses that private enterprise is building today, or the veteran whose income is too small for the pitifully small amount of rental housing on today's market?

Every major veterans' organization in the country sees in the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill the promise of decent homes. The Veterans of Foreign Wars, the American Veterans Committee, the Jewish War Veterans, American Veterans of World War II, Catholic War Veterans, and Disabled American Veterans endorse and vigorously support this measure. The American Legion approves the public housing provisions of the bill. Just last March more than 1,300 delegates representing these and several other national organizations met in this city. Many of you were visited by veteran delegates whose only objective was to secure passage of the bill that would mean decent homes at prices they could afford. This is surely an objective no Member of Congress can afford to ignore.

The National Conference of Catholic Charities has been in the vanguard of the fight for better housing. The Right Reverend Monsignor John O'Grady, secretary of the conference, has consistently taken issue with those who brand all advocates of public housing as Communists or Socialists. He points out that—

Those of us who are committed to private enterprise would like to see private capital provide housing for all the people, but so far as I am aware, private capital has never presented a feasible plan for reaching this objective.

People from all over the country have gone on record in support of public housing. Leading professional and occupational organizations have taken a positive stand in favor of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill. Among these are the United States Conference of Mayors, the National Institute of Law Officers, the American Institute of Architects, and the American Municipal Association. Mayor George W. Welsh, Grand Rapids, Mich., president of the Conference of Mayors, made this splendid endorsement of the federally aided public-housing program:

The improvement in health, happiness, and good citizenship of the families rehoused has been dramatic. Public housing has served families of low income and has not competed with private homebuilding. But much remains to be done and all of us must dedicate ourselves to the task of seeing to it that this great program is continued.

Time will not permit me to list the hundreds of organizations which have gone on record in favor of public housing. However, you all recognize these groups: The National League of Women Voters, the National Council of Catholic Women, the National Council of Jewish Women, and the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America. Such organizations as the American Federation of Labor, the Congress of Industrial Organizations, the National Federation of Postal Clerks, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers America, the American Association of Social Workers, the American Public Health Association, and the Family Service Association of America, all support the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill.

What other segments of America endorse the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill? Last month the National Conference of Family Life met here in Washington, Nine hundred delegates from 125 national organizations, whose membership totals more than 40,000,000 people, heard President Truman say that the housing shortage is the most pressing problem for American families. Calling for passage of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill, the President said that the problem was a vital one that prevented millions of veterans from finding homes for themselves, their wives, and children.

At this same conference, Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, said:

In my opinion one of the great disruptive factors in American family life is our lack of decent housing. Slums are the curse of our society. No one of our big cities is without them, but they are not confined to metropolitan areas. * * * They are the national disgrace of the most gifted, richest, and most powerful nation on earth. They are iestering sores in our social structure.

Certainly none of us can deny that Eric Johnston is representative of private enterprise. However, he recognizes that on the issue of decent homes, private and public enterprise must join forces. He advocated a course of action that is implemented by the T-E-W bill, when he further said:

I would like to see industry move in on the housing front in a forceful, determined way. There is no doubt in my mind that if the industrial leaders of this country wished to do so they could bring about, in cooperation with the widely used organizing power of the state, a housing program which would meet our needs and stimulate private construction at one and the same time.

The housing committee of the National Conference on Family Life concluded its sessions with a ringing endorsement of the T-E-W bill.

Less than a month later, in a letter to my distinguished colleague from New York, Representative Jacob Javits, Mr. Eric Johnston again took the occasion to urge passage of the T-E-W bill which has been called socialistic and the forerunner of communism by these myopic leaders of the opposition forces. Mr. Johnston said:

If there ever was a "must" bill, this is it. It has been a "must" bill for a long time. It is a "must" bill today. It should be taken up and passed by the House with all possible expedition. It would be a tragedy, in my judgment, if this bill were to be sidetracked or defeated at this session. This bill fills a need which must be met in the interest of all the people of America.

There are other open-minded supporters of a free-enterprise system who stoutly defend federally aided public housing.

Last year, Jerome M. Ney, chairman of the board of the American Retail Federation, testified before the Joint Committee on the Economic Report. I have the honor of membership on this important committee. Mr. Ney himself operates several retail stores, the principal one being the Boston Store Dry Goods Co., of Fort Smith, Ark. No one could be more typical of private enterprise than this merchant. This is what Mr. Ney said about the T-E-W bill:

Let's put good sense ahead of emotion. A substantial portion of the Nation's families at the bottom of the income pyramid simply cannot afford adequate housing. We agree with Senator TAFT that subsidized public housing, at least for a time, is the only sensible answer to this problem.

Mr. Ney is another one of those enlightened American businessmen who scoff at the socialism label tied to public housing by those who rant the loudest and say the least. He declared that:

We cannot agree that this type of public housing contains the threat of socialism in the housing industry. On the contrary, we believe that the greatest threat to private enterprise in housing is the fallure to meet the housing problem head-on.

This intelligent American went on to say:

I can think of no other sphere in which there is a greater need for the advocates of private enterprise to display enlightened self-interest and the qualities of initiative, imagination, daring, and energy which have made our Nation great. I can think of no other area where blind emotion and unenlightened selfishness can cause private enterprise to fail more miserably and more quickly than in housing.

Permit me to pursue this vein a bit further. I am proud that among the realtors of America there are some wise men who regard the T-E-W bill as the answer to the Nation's housing shortage. Mr. William Reinhart, of Philadelphia, berates the lobbyists who would condemn our low-income citizens to shack homes. Mr. Reinhart boasts of the fact that he has been a Philadelphia realtor for more than 40 years. He has been a director of one of the largest Federal savings and loan associations in Philadelphia and is chairman of that city's housing authority.

Perhaps there are some fellow realtors who regard Mr. Reinhart as a traitor to their business. What does Mr. Reinhart think of the T-E-W bill? In writing to Members of Congress last week, he said:

I wish to say to you that I believe that the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill provides the best method of meeting our present housing shortage.

To illustrate just how absurd are the lobby's charges that public housing lacks the support of private enterprise, let me tell you what an executive of one of the Nation's largest insurance companies said last year. George S. Van Schaik, executive vice president and head of the mortgage loan department, New York Life Insurance Co., declared:

If and when certain segments of the population are in an income group where they cannot pay an economic rent for safe and decent shelter, then there should be provided adequate standard housing so subsidized as to bring it within the grasp of those who qualify for it.

Substantial public support for the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill comes from community leaders throughout the country. These are the people who have an intimate knowledge of and a sympathetic understanding of the human problems caused by poor housing. These are the priests, the pastors, the rabbis, the social workers, the doctors, the lawyers, and other local and national figures who have waged an unceasing fight for better housing.

Last year more than 100 New York organizations joined forces in behalf of the T-E-W bill. For these people, decent housing for low-income families is not socialism or communism or an infringement of the rights of private enterprise. Three vice presidents of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner Committee of New York were Rt. Rev. Charles E. Gilbert, bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of New York; the Very Reverend Msgr. E. Roberts Moore, archdiocesan representative of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York, and the Reverend Dr. David De Sola Pool, representative of the Synagogue Council and the New York Board of Rabbis.

It seems obvious to me that even the most obstinate of my colleagues must realize by now that support for public housing comes from so large a segment of our population that we can no longer afford to ignore its opinions.

In contrast to this overwhelming support, the opposition to public housing comes principally from four or five national organizations representing the real-estate interests, the property own-ers, the home and apartment house builders, and their various affiliates throughout the country. These are the people who say to the Government, "Leave us alone, and we'll build all the houses the country needs." But, alas, they cannot build for the great mass of veterans, or for the store clerk or the factory worker and still show a profit. The so-called spokesmen for the opposition maintain that they have the best interests of the Nation at heart. Yet one well known lobbyist for the real-estate interests, Herbert U. Nelson, executive vice president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, had the brazen effrontery to write the following in his official journal, Headlines, for June 9. 1947:

Today the great threat to democratic institutions, to the republican form of government, and ultimately to freedom itself lies in our big cities. They are populated for the most part with the mass-man, devoid of intelligence, devoid of civic responsibility.

Does Mr. Nelson believe that those Members of Congress who conscientiously represent millions of Americans in urban areas will applaud the following conclusion:

Our one hope of survival as a free country is that rural and semirural areas still dominate most of the State legislatures through their representatives and still dominate the House of Representatives in Washington. Our best hope for the future is to keep it that way.

As a corollary to these devious arguments, these opponents of public housing have seized upon a convenient shibboleth. Anybody who believes that the Federal Government should be concerned with decent housing for low-income families is immediately labeled a Communist and/or a Socialist. Mr. Nelson himself last year tagged Senator Robert Taft, one of the bill's three sponsors, as a follower of the Communist Party line. He later apologized publicly to the Senator, but still continued to smear other supporters of decent housing who openly fight for their beliefs.

Public housing has recently been labeled, "The key to socialism." But public housing is not the key to socialism or communism or any other alien ism. The Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill, with its various aids to private enterprise, will open the door to a new and better life for the thousands of our fellow citizens now living in slums and broken-down tenements. The T-E-W bill means decent homes for our veterans who are getting tired of empty promises and who find little comfort in the advertisements featuring twelve- and thirteen-thousanddollar homes for "GI's only." We cannot continue to shut our ears to the pleas for decent homes for America's low-income families. The Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill is the answer to these pleas. After all, do we represent only the real-estate interests, the property owners, the home and apartment builders, or do we represent all of America, including the illhoused?

THE REPUBLICANS HAVE FAILED TO SOLVE THE HOUSING PROBLEM

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Mr. Speaker, the Republican-dominated Eightieth Congress has failed to solve the Nation's No. 1 social problem—the need of 15,000,000 families for 15,000,000 houses in which to live. Among these 15,000,000 families are many veterans who fought to preserve our Nation in World War II. During the war, we promised them a new and shining world, awaiting their return. We promised them jobs, cars, homes, furnishings, and all the comforts of a high standard of living.

That was when Hitler, Tojo, and Mussolini threatened the national life of our Democracy. The veterans did the job we asked them to do. They defeated the dictators. Our American way of life was saved. The veterans sacrificed years of their lives, suffered a million casualties and over 300,000 lost their lives.

They have been home 3 years. What have we done to make good on our promises? The record is shameful. We have welched on our promises. We as a Nation have lied to them and let them down. Congress protected the people from inflation during the war by price control and rationing. It was not pleasant, but it was fairly successful. Its success can be measured now, by the inflation disaster which has occurred since OPA was killed.

Since June 1946, the last month of OPA, the cost of food has increased 42.8 percent. The over-all cost of living has increased more than 27 percent.

The cost of building supplies has sky-rocketed and the new homes we promised the veterans have become so expensive they cannot buy them. A six-room house that sold in 1940 for five or six thousand dollars is now priced at twelve to fourteen thousand dollars. The ordinary wage-earning veteran cannot buy and pay for a home on today's inflated price level.

Why has this situation developed? First, because Congress killed price control in June 1946 and took the brakes off of inflation. Congress listened to the propaganda of the profit hogs, the National Association of Manufacturers, the United States Chamber of Commerce, and the real-estate lobby.

Second, Congress has consistently failed to pass housing legislation to solve the housing problem. While Congress has placed the credit of the Government behind the real-estate and builders' lobby to build high-priced homes, they have failed to encourage slum clearance, public housing for the lowest income group, and the building of medium-priced homes on a basis which the average wage earner could buy and pay for. This great class of veterans and nonveterans are completely priced out of the market.

It is common knowledge that over 40,-000,000 taxpayers earn less than $3,000 per year. I submit to you a fact which is acknowledged by any intelligent person, these people cannot buy and pay for $12,000 to $15,000 homes out of this modest yearly wage. After income-tax deductions and the expense of today's inflated food, clothing and other commodity prices, people in the $3,000 per year or less income bracket cannot make the large monthly payments necessary to carry such a debt burden.

We are faced then with a situation which forces millions of fine American citizens to "double up" in crowded, substandard dwellings. The social impact of this housing deficiency contributes to divorce, sickness, crime, and juvenile delinquency.

Society has to pay the cost either way. Why not then try the preventative way?

Federal assistance in slum clearance, and low-income bracket rentals of decent modern homes in clean and healthy surroundings, will in my opinion, pay for itself in the reduction of our present crime and charity costs. Although the cry of "socialism" has been raised by the real-estate and builders' lobby, whose only thought is the perpetuation of their present guaranteed profit set-up under title 6 of the FHA, we are not deceived by this ancient "red herring."

The Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill, against which they protest so loudly and bitterly, a bill which calls for slum clearance and Federal aid in low-income rental construction, is no more socialistic than title VI. The Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill has been endorsed by the American Bar Association, the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the AMVETS, the Catholic and Protestant church groups, and all the great American labor unions. It bears the name of the most conservative Republican candidate for the Presidency, Senator ROBERT A. TAFT.

The real-estate and builders' lobby are strong for a $2,000,000,000 guaranty of mortgages under title VI, FHA. Let us analyze this extension of Federal credit for the benefit of a private business group. What does it do?

First, the Government guarantees the builder 90 percent insurance on his mortgages. In other words, the builder is guaranteed that he will receive 90 percent of his capital back from any house he builds. It removes the risk from his business by protecting his capital investment, with taxpayers' funds. It also guarantees him a profit and interest on his profit equity, by protecting the banks in the discount of mortgage paper.

And yet, there are the people—the realestate and builders' groups—who yell "socialism" when the Government proposes aid for the low-income people.

They are perfectly willing for the Government to use tax funds to fill their pockets with inflated building profits, but they scream "socialism" when people who cannot afford their high-priced houses have an opportunity for release from the shacks and tenement slums.

As far as I am concerned, my position is clear. I intend to do all in my power to provide decent homes for the people of my district and the Nation. Charity begins at home, and the need of an American family for a decent home in which to rear their family transcends the selfish desires of hypocrites who benefit by Federal mortgage guaranties in their private business. These people remind me of the dog in the manger while they are enjoying the profits guaranteed by Federal credit, they wish to deny the unfortunate people who cannot afford to pay their inflated profit prices the right to live in decent homes erected by the Federal credit aid.

I shall support the efforts of free enterprise to fill the need for additional houses, but when free enterprise refuses of cannot profitably meet society's need, then and then only, I shall discharge what I conceive to be Federal responsibillity for the welfare of the common people, who do the work and fight the wars of our Nation.

Mr. KARSTEN of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I am disgusted with the action of this Congress on many things, but I am particularly disgusted with the manner in which it is proceeding to consider the housing bill. The tactics leading up to the consideration of the bill before us are not the tactics of a representative form of government. They are the tactics of special privilege. They are clearly the tactics of the real-estate lobby.

During the final days of the first session of the Eightieth Congress an appropriation of $100,000 was made for the Joint Housing Committee to study the problem of housing. This committee toured the country from one end to the other and submitted a report recommending legislation to meet this critical problem. The other body a few weeks ago passed legislation known as the Taft-Ellender-Wagner housing bill, which embodied most of the recommendations of the committee that investi-The measure then went gated housing. to the Committee on Banking and Currency of the House. Extensive hearings were held, but no new testimony was developed. Finally the committee was forced to report a bill to the House similar to the Taft-Ellender-Wagner housing bill, and many of us hoped we would see the enactment of a comprehensive program. Our hopes housing short-lived, because the Committee on Rules declined to permit the matter to come before the House. Instead of a comprehensive program of housing, we are today offered a weak substitutesomething the real-estate lobby will permit the House to consider. Housing legislation in this Congress must first be cleared through the real-estate lobby before the elected representatives of the people have a chance to vote on it. bill has the approval of the real-estate lobby. That is the only reason it was permitted to come before the House. It is good for the lobby. It will make the lobby stronger. It will make the lobby richer, but it is not going to provide the thousands of homes and rental units we need so badly at prices people can afford to pay. It is not going to help metropolitan centers like St. Louis wrestling with the problem of slums. The cities of America are eager and willing to assume their share of the obligation in clearing blighted areas, but they cannot do it alone. In my own city a large bond issue has recently been suggested as a means for eliminating some of the blighted areas. This will give St. Louis an excellent start, but still desperately needed is a program of low-cost public housing to provide houses for those whose homes in the present tenements will give way for this new development. Private industry can and perhaps will meet the bulk of our housing needs, but it is not interested in trying to help the millions whose incomes are so low they are unable to afford standard new housing or standard rental units.

Also desperately needed is a program of housing that will provide for the thousands of veterans and others with homes and rental units at prices they can afford to pay. Practically every house of rental units being built today is in the high-price brackets. We need low-cost housing—and when I say "low cost" I mean just that—not 10- and 15-thousand-dollar homes.

The Republican housing bill before us is going to be just about as effective in solving our housing problems as the Republican anti-inflation bill was in solving the problem of inflation. As many of you will remember, 6 months ago we passed a law against inflation. It is Public Law 395, which many call the "HTGB" law. That stands for "hope things get better." We have all been hoping very vigorously for the past 6 months, but we have not been able to hope down the cost of living one cent. Instead of improving, inflation is worse and prices are higher.

The housing bill before us today is in theory similar to the anti-inflation law. It is little more than a hope that the housing problem will be solved. We are going to "hope up" houses and "hope down" the cost of living. It is important that we hope the right way on the right thing and do not become confused. It would be a sorry day if we should start to "hope down" houses and "hope up" prices. The anti-inflation law and the housing bill we are considering today are the tweedledum and tweedledee of the Eightieth Congress. They are both fakes.

Mr. SARBACHER. Mr. Speaker, I shall support H. R. 6959, a bill to amend the National Housing Act, because I sincerely believe some housing legislation is better than none at all.

Although H. R. 6959 does not include the public housing provisions which I favor at this time, it does possess many meritorious features for the veterans, who are in need of rental housing.

I shall, of course, continue to favor and press for the enactment of the public-housing section embodied in the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill. The public-housing section of the T-E-W which has been urged by Pennsylvania's able Governor James Duff, the mayor of the city of Philadelphia, Bernard Samuels, and practically every veteran and civic organization in the country. Again, Mr. Speaker, I will support this legislation and hope that we may be able to take positive action toward the T-E-W before this Congress adjourns.

NEED FOR PUBLIC HOUSING

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, I believe that the democratic free enterprise system is the greatest political and economic institution ever devised by man. It has given us under justice the highest standard of living in the world. Through an unparalleled productive process the cost of goods has been brought within the means of an ever greater number of people. No one would contend, however, that ours is a perfect economy. Housing is one part in which there has been a conspicuous lack of success. Instead of bringing good housing to a greater number of families we find today that the gap between the cost of decent housing and the ability of families to pay is greater than ever. Senator Flanders of Vermont in his report for the Joint Committee on Housing said:

We, the American people, have long been unable to supply our own housing needs. For half a century the housing industry has barely provided enough new homes to accommodate our population increase. It has falled to replace depreciation and protect our capital investment in housing.

Today, our economy is operating at a high level. Admittedly, as a Nation we are in prosperous times, despite the fact that much of the gain has been wiped out by sharp price increases. The average family income in urban places is in cases of $3,000—and yet, according to the Census Bureau, there are more than 5,000,000 urban families with incomes below $2,000 and 3,000,000 with incomes less than $1,500.

What does an income of $1,500 or even $2,000 mean today? In a study by the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics, it was shown that in June 1947 it took an average 4-person urban family $3,240 per year to maintain itself at a minimum adequate standard of living. This ranged from a high of $3,458 in Washington, D. C., to a low of $3,000 in New Orleans. These figures will be even higher in view of the price increases which have occurred since last June.
